Large and high-class Hotel. Upwards of 200 rooms. Finest position in Buxton. Surrounded by own grounds of six acres. Ground-floor sitting-rooms and bed-rooms. Magnificent public rooms. American elevator. Table d'hôte at separate tables. Tariff, with plan of rooms and sketch map of Buxton, on application. A. CROSS, Manager.

PITLOCHRY.

THE ATHOLL HYDROPATHIC (MACDONALD'S).

The ORIGINAL and very much the LARGEST. Every window commands a view of the MOST MAGNIFICENT SCENERY in SCOTLAND. 500 feet above sea level. Pure, dry, bracing air. Extensive Pleasure Grounds.
TENNIS—CROQUET—GOLF—ARCHERY—FISHING.
To prevent disappointment, address all communications—
"THE ATHOLL, PITLOCHRY." Telegraphic Address, "ATHOLL."

HOSPITALS & APPEALS.

CANCER WARDS of the MIDDLESEX HOSPITAL.—35 beds devoted to Hopeless Incurable Cases.

A FUND of £12,000 is being raised for the purpose of erecting a separate BUILDING for the accommodation of the FEMALE CANCER PATIENTS hitherto located in the hospital, an improvement which is urgently demanded on the ground of the health, comfort, and convenience of the patients. Towards the cost of the new building the sum of £9,000 has been paid or promised, and an URGENT APPEAL is now made for the balance of £3,000 still required. Patients are admitted without letters or any recommendation, save that of necessity, and are permitted to remain until "relieved by art or released by death."—F. CLARE MELHADO, Secretary-Superintendent.

GREAT NORTHERN CENTRAL HOSPITAL.
VERY POOR, FREE, and UNENDOWED.
The only Hospital available for a population of one million.
An urgent APPEAL is made for FUNDS to support the work of relieving 1,200 In-patients and 30,000 Out-patients annually.
Holloway, N. L. H. GLENTON KERR, Secretary.

LONDON FEVER HOSPITAL, Liverpool-road, Islington, N.
ADDITIONAL HELP is urgently needed.
Searlet fever and diphtheria are very prevalent. Subscriptions and donations will be thankfully received by the Secretary at the Hospital.
MAJOR W. CHRISTIE.
Bankers—Prescott & Co., 50, Cornhill, E.C.

THE COLONIAL COLLEGE, HOLLESLEY BAY, SUFFOLK.

Training for Colonial Life, &c.
Fine Sea Air. Dry Soil.
1,800 Acres of Land.
Farming in all its Branches.
Dairy School. Veterinary Science.
Land Surveying. Horticulture.
Laboratory. Workshops, &c., &c.
Full information from the Director at
The Colonial College, or from
The London Secretary at
6, Victoria Street, Westminster Abbey.

THE EDINBURGH SCHOOL OF COOKERY AND DOMESTIC ECONOMY, LTD., TWENTY-SECOND SESSION OPENS SEPTEMBER 9th.—Cookery, Laundry Work, Needlework, Dressmaking, Millinery, &c. Lectures on Hygiene, on Elementary Chemistry and Physiology, on Home Sick Nursing, on Housekeeping, and on Method. Special Curriculum for young Ladies for Housewife's Diploma. Teachers trained. A limited number of Boarders received. See Prospectus.—3, Atholl-crescent.

PUREST IN ENGLAND.

BOURNE TABLE WATERS

SODA, SELTZER, LITHIA, POTASH, LEMONADE, GINGER ALE, ETC.

Supplied in 6 Dozen Cases Carriage Paid by

Analysis, &c., on Application.

R. M. MILLS & CO., BOURNE, LINCOLNSHIRE

West-End Agents, WHEATLEY & SONS, 24, South Audley-street, W.
City Agents, RAE & CO., 6, Railway-place, E.C.;
And of all CHEMISTS, WINE MERCHANTS, &c.

FARADAY & SON's

Electric Light Fittings

NEW DESIGNS for SEASON '96

2 & 3 BERNERS ST. LONDON W

MAPLE & CO

THE LARGEST & MOST CONVENIENT
Furnishing Establishment IN THE World

EASY CHAIRS EASY CHAIRS

500 TO CHOOSE FROM.

THE FAMOUS "CHANCELLOR" CHAIR
Large, roomy, well proportioned, exceedingly comfortable, upholstered in Dormouse cloth of any shade.
50/-

TOTTENHAM COURT ROAD LONDON

SPECIAL SHIPMENTS OF

ORIENTAL CARPETS

TO BE SOLD AT GREATLY REDUCED PRICES.

TRELOAR & SONS,

LUDGATE HILL.

PRICES ARE MUCH REDUCED, as not only is the Raw Material lower, but cheap freights and a low rate of exchange are at present in favour of buyers.

TURKEY AND INDIAN CARPETS

Are delivered to the warehouse two or three times a week in all sizes, both in the old and new colourings.

ANY CARPET WILL BE SENT ON APPROBATION TO APPROVED CUSTOMERS.

A CATALOGUE OF FLOOR COVERINGS POST FREE ON APPLICATION.

TRELOAR & SONS, LUDGATE HILL, LONDON, E.C.

Alfred Webb Miles & Co.

12, 10, & 8, Brook-street, Hanover Square, London, W.

SPECIAL SHOW OF

Loch, Moor & Mountain Suits

For SHOOTING, FISHING, YACHTING, and DEER STALKING.

A. W. MILES & CO.'S	Celebrated Hebrides Tweed Shooting Suits, specially adapted for hard wear...	£3 3 0
A. W. MILES & CO.'S	Donegal, Mayo, Kenmare, and Kilmacthomas Homespun Suits	£3 3 0
A. W. MILES & CO.'S	Bannockburn, Gairloch, and Glencoe Cheviots, in New Lovat and Heather Shades...	£3 3 0
A. W. MILES & CO.'S	Real Shetland and St. Kilda Homespun Suits in Natural Undyed Hand-made and Hand-spun Pure Wools, from ...	£3 3 0
A. W. MILES & CO.'S	R.Y.S. Imperial Indigo Blue Cheviot and Serge Suits from	£3 3 0
A. W. MILES & CO.'S	White, Blue, Lovat, and Fancy Flannels, thoroughly shrunk, for Golf and Cycling Suits	£3 3 0
A. W. MILES & CO.'S	Real Isle of Harris Homespuns in Great Variety (Hand-made and Hand-spun)...	£3 15 0
A. W. MILES & CO.'S	Fine Angolas and Cashmeres in the Newest Designs for Suits, from... ...	£3 15 0
A. W. MILES & CO.'S	Patterns sent on application to only address as above.

Alfred Webb Miles & Co.'s Show Rooms contain a Select Assortment of the Newest Styles in Overcoats, Travelling Wraps, Inverness Capes, Racing Paletots, Covert Coats, Golf and Shooting Capes, Cycling Flannels, &c.; also, Young Gentlemen's Attire, comprising Eton and Scotch Tweed Suits, Overcoats, &c., cut and made by their own Experienced Cutters and Workmen. All sizes ready for immediate use.

STORAGE BATTERIES

of the most durable and satisfactory type are manufactured by

THE CHLORIDE ELECTRICAL STORAGE SYNDICATE, LIMITED,

16, VICTORIA ST., WESTMINSTER, S.W., AND CLIFTON JUNCTION, near MANCHESTER.

Batteries of any other type can be refilled with plates of our manufacture at a small cost, and the power of old batteries greatly increased, and the frequency of charging now necessary reduced by one half.

Goddard's Plate Powder

SIX GOLD MEDALS.

Non-Mercurial.

THE BEST and SAFEST article for CLEANING SILVER and ELECTRO PLATE. Sold in Boxes, 1s., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d. each, by Grocers, Oilmen, Chemists, &c., everywhere.

"FOR THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE."

CLARKE'S

WORLD-FAMED

BLOOD MIXTURE

Warranted to cleanse the blood from all impurities from whatever cause arising. For Scrofula, Scurvy, Eczema, Bad Legs, Skin and Blood Diseases, Pimples and Sores of all kinds, its effects are marvellous. It is the only real specific for Gout and Rheumatic Pains, for it removes the cause from the blood and bones. Thousands of Wonderful Cures have been effected by it. In bottles, 2s. 9d. and 11s. each, of Chemists everywhere.

BEWARE OF WORTHLESS IMITATIONS.

A Bad Complexion

4d

is often due to a bad soap.

BLOTCHES ARE REPULSIVE, AND WILL MAR THE APPEARANCE OF ANY FACE. YOU CAN'T GET RID OF THEM WITH BAD SOAP.

PREMIER VINOLIA SOAP

Is made specially for delicate, sensitive, irritable skins, and is scented with the most charming and innocent Perfumes.

PREMIER VINOLIA SOAP

yields a profuse, cleansing, demulcent, lather, and tends to keep the skin soft and velvety, and the complexion beautiful and clear. Its use doesn't cost a farthing a day.

4d

Vinolia is a Complexion Soap.

VINOLIA CREAM.—For Itching, Sunburn, Insect Bites, &c., 1/1½ and 1/9.
VINOLIA POWDER.—For Roughness, Chafes, &c., 1/1 and 1/9.

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER

Prevents the Hair from falling off.
Restores Grey or White Hair to its ORIGINAL COLOUR.
Being delicately perfumed it leaves no unpleasant odour.
IS NOT a dye, and therefore does not stain the skin or even white linen.
Should be in every house where a HAIR RENEWER is needed.
Ask your Chemist or Hairdresser for

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

Price 3s. 6d. per large Bottle.

Prepared only by the

ANGLO-AMERICAN DRUG COMPANY, Ltd.,
33, FARRINGDON ROAD, LONDON, E.C.

FLORILINE

FOR THE TEETH AND BREATH.

IS THE BEST LIQUID DENTIFRICE IN THE WORLD.

Prevents the Decay of Teeth.
Renders the Teeth Pearly White.
Is perfectly Harmless and Delicious to the Taste.

Of all Chemists and Perfumers throughout the World.
2s. 6d. per Bottle.

FLORILINE TOOTH POWDER.
Put up in Glass Jars, price 1s.

Best is Cheapest & Lasts Longest
Fixed, moderate prices.
Permanent Protection from Chill.

JAEGER

PURE WOOL UNDERWEAR, HOSE, PYJAMAS, RUGS, BLANKETS, CASHMERE SHEETS, DRESSING GOWNS, SHAWLS, CORSETS, CYCLING OUTFITS, BOOTS AND SHOES, etc. etc.

"Health Culture" & Jaeger Coy.'s Price List sent free.

JAEGER DEPOTS:—
3 and 4, PRINCES ST., CAVENDISH SQ. (near Regent circus)
126, REGENT STREET (near the Quadrant).
30, SLOANE STREET (adjoining McPherson's Gymnasium).
456, STRAND (near Trafalgar square).
85 and 86, CHEAPSIDE (near King street).

TAILORING (only):—
42, CONDUIT STREET, NEW BOND STREET, W.
The "Jaeger" goods are sold in many Towns. Address sent from Jaeger Co.'s Head Office, 95, Milton Street, E.C.

TRADE MARK ON EACH GARMENT.

The "Jaeger" goods are tested for purity and durability.

CARTER 6A, NEW CAVENDISH ST. PORTLAND PLACE, LONDON.

ONLY ADDRESS OF ORIGINAL CARTER

LITERARY MACHINE.

For holding book, lamp, meals, &c., in any position over an easychair, bed, or sofa.
Deliciously luxurious. A most useful gift. Prices from 17/6

INVALID FURNITURE.
ADJUSTABLE COUCHES and BEDS from £1. 10/-

Bed Lift £3. 10/-
Reclining Boards, 25/-
Walking Machines
Portable W.C.'s.
Electric Bells, Urinals, &c.
Air & Water Beds.

Bed Rests 7/6
Leg Rests 10/-
Crutches 10/6
Bed Baths 12 6
Commodes, £1. 5/-

Carrying Chairs from £1.

Self-Propelling Chairs from £2

Breakfast in Bed Tables from 30/-

BATH CHAIRS FROM £1. 5/-

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUES POST FREE.

JOHN CARTER, 6a, NEW CAVENDISH ST. Portland-pl. London, W.

Soft Water in Every Home.

MAIGNEN'S

Patent Apparatus for Softening

HARD WATER.

MADGE, in her letter to AMY, published in "Truth" of May 7th, says:—

"Every one who lives in chalk districts ought to use Maignen's Process."

"Some friends of ours at Brighton—where as you know the water is decidedly hard—have one of their filters fitted to their cisterns, and are delighted with it."

"I quite sympathise with you, for there is nothing more detestable than hard water."

Full and Illustrated Particulars from Maignen's Filtre Rapide and Anti-Calcaire Co., Ltd., 255, Regent-street, London, W., where the Process can be seen at work.

CHIVERS'

DELICIOUS. WHOLESOME. REFRESHING.

Prepared in silver-lined pans. Highly prized by all. Flavoured with Ripe Fruit Juices.

Dr. GORDON STABLES, R.N. says:—'Jellies that really add to our health and luxury.'

GOLD MEDAL.

½-PINTS, 2½d.
PINTS, 4½d.
QUARTS, 8d.

S. CHIVERS & SONS, Proprietors of the First English Fruit Farm Jam Factory, Histon, Cambridge.

CHIVERS' PATENT CUSTARDS and BLANC MANGES —2d. and 3d. packets and 6d. boxes — two more delicious and digestible additions to the dinner and supper table. Made by simply adding milk and boiling.

CHIVERS' 1st PRIZE JAMS.
The Royal Commission on Agriculture, in its report (1895), says: "Messrs. Chivers' Factory at Histon . . is now well-known throughout the country for the excellence of its manufactures."

JELLIES.

LIQUEUR of the GRANDE CHARTREUSE.

This most excellent Liqueur, the great preventive of Indigestion, and almost certain remedy for sea-sickness, can now be had of all Wine Merchants, and at prices much lower than formerly.
Sole Consignee, W. DOYLE, 35, Crutched Friars, London, E.C.

PRUDENTIAL ASSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED.—Holborn Bars, London.

EVERY DESCRIPTION OF LIFE ASSURANCE AND ANNUITY BUSINESS TRANSACTED.
REVERSIONS PURCHASED.

Invested Funds, £25,000,000.

The last Annual Report can be obtained on application to the Secretary.

SUN INSURANCE OFFICE
63, Threadneedle-street, London, E.C.
FOUNDED 1710.
THE OLDEST PURELY FIRE OFFICE IN THE WORLD.
SUM INSURED IN 1895,
£390,775,000.

SPECIAL ADVANTAGES TO PRIVATE INSURERS.
THE IMPERIAL INSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED. FIRE. Est. 1803, 1, Old Broad-st., E.C., & 22, Pall Mall, S.W. Subd Capital, £1,200,000. Paid-up, £300,000. Total funds, over £1,500,000.—E. COZENS SMITH, Gen. Man.

GLENLUCE GOLD MINING COMPANY, LIMITED.

NOTICE is HEREBY GIVEN that this Company having been amalgamated with the Glencairn Main Reef Gold Mining Company, shareholders in the Glenluce Gold Mining Company are advised that their certificates can be presented at the office of the London Agents of the Glencairn Main Reef Gold Mining Company, No. 7, Lothbury, London, E.C., in order that they may be exchanged (share for share) for certificates in the Glencairn Main Reef Company.

Circulars, giving details of the amalgamation, can be obtained of the London Agents of the Glencairn Main Reef Gold Mining Company, No. 7, Lothbury.

THE JOHANNESBURG CONSOLIDATED INVESTMENT COMPANY, LIMITED, London Agents.

THOS. HONEY, Secretary.

7, Lothbury, E.C.; August 17th, 1896.

GLENCAIRN MAIN REEF GOLD MINING COMPANY, LIMITED.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the Glenluce Gold Mining Company having been amalgamated with this Company, the capital has been increased to £550,000, composed as follows:—

To holders in the Glencairn Main Reef Gold Mining Company, share for share	225,000 shares.
To holders in the Glenluce Gold Mining Company, share for share	225,000 ,,
Working Capital, £150,000, obtained from issue of 50,000 shares at £3	50,000 ,,
Reserve Shares	50,000 ,,
	550,000 shares.

Shareholders have the right of applying up to October 6th for the new issue of 50,000 shares at £3 per share, at the rate of 1 new share for every 9 old shares standing in their names on September 21st next.

Holders of SHARE WARRANTS TO BEARER must exhibit same at the Company's office in order to claim their rights in respect of same.

Application forms and full particulars can be obtained of the London Agents.

The Transfer Books will be closed from September 21st to October 5th inclusive.

The JOHANNESBURG CONSOLIDATED INVESTMENT COMPANY, LIMITED, London Agents.

THOS. HONEY, Secretary.

7, Lothbury, E.C.: August 17th, 1896.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

NOTICE.

No Member of the Stock Exchange is allowed to advertise for business purposes, or to issue circulars to persons other than his own principals.

Persons who advertise as Brokers or Share Dealers are not Members of the Stock Exchange, or under the control of the Committee.

A List of Members of the Stock Exchange who are Stock and Share Brokers may be seen at the Bartholomew-lane Entrance to the Bank of England, or obtained on application to

FRANCIS LEVIEN
Secretary to the Committee of the Stock Exchange.
Committee Room, The Stock Exchange, London, E.C.

REVERSIONS and LIFE INTERESTS in LANDED or FUNDED PROPERTY or other Securities and Annuities PURCHASED, or Loans or Annuities thereon granted, by the EQUITABLE REVERSIONARY INTEREST SOCIETY, LIMITED, 10, Lancaster-place, Waterloo Bridge, Strand, Established 1835. Capital £500,000. Interest on Loans may be capitalised.

ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT

PURELY VEGETABLE, Perfectly Harmless. Will reduce from two to five pounds per week; acts on the food in the stomach, preventing its conversion into Fat. Sold by Chemists. Send stamp for pamphlet.
Botanic Medicine Co., 3, New Oxford-street, London, W.C.

THE LATE EARL OF BEACONSFIELD,
SIR MORELL MACKENZIE,
OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES,
MISS EMILY FAITHFUL,
THE LATE GEN. W. T. SHERMAN, and many other persons of distinction, have testified to the remarkable efficacy of Himrod's Cure for Asthma.

Established nearly a Quarter of a Century.

Prescribed by the Medical Faculty throughout the world. It is used as an Inhalation and without any after bad effects. A free Sample and detailed testimonials free by post. In tins, 4s. 3d. British Depôt—46, Holborn Viaduct, London; also of NEWBERY & SONS, BARCLAY & SONS, LYNCH & CO., J. SANGER & SONS, W. EDWARDS & SON, MAY, ROBERTS & CO., JOHN THOMPSON, Liverpool, and all wholesale Houses

JOHN SHAW, STOCK & SHARE DEALER.

HEAD OFFICE:—
WARDROBE CHAMBERS, DOCTORS' COMMONS, LONDON, E.C.

BANKERS:—
CAPITAL AND COUNTIES, Ludgate-hill, Long Acre, Piccadilly, and Brighton Branches.
LONDON AND MIDLAND, Newgate-street and Tooley-street Branches.

DIRECT PRIVATE TELEGRAPH WIRE between LONDON and BRIGHTON Offices.

FULL PARTICULARS of SPECIAL ARRANGEMENTS for DEALING sent post free on application.

COVER SYSTEM.—The loss is limited, the profits are unlimited, and there is such an independence in acting that the principle must and does recommend itself to business men—indeed, it is the only method on which they deal—for speculative accounts.

£5 COMMANDS £500 STOCK.
£10 COMMANDS £1,000 STOCK.
£50 COMMANDS £5,000 STOCK.
£500 COMMANDS £50,000 STOCK, and so on in proportion.

NO OTHER LIABILITY WHATEVER.

JOHN SHAW, STOCK AND SHARE DEALER, LONDON, BRIGHTON, MANCHESTER, AND DUBLIN.

George Gregory & Co.

STOCK & SHARE DEALERS,
LONDON, MANCHESTER, LIVERPOOL, BRIGHTON, HASTINGS.

ABSOLUTELY THE LARGEST "UP-TO-DATE" STOCK AND SHARE DEALERS ON THE LONDON MARKET.
PAY AWAY HEAVIER DIFFERENCES THAN ALL THE OUTSIDE BROKERS AND DEALERS COMBINED.
SPECIAL BUSINESS AND DEALINGS IN GREAT EASTERNS AND JAGERSFONTEIN DIAMONDS.

BUY GREAT EASTERNS FOR 110, AND THEN FOR 120.
BUY JAGERSFONTEIN DIAMONDS FOR 15, AND THEN FOR 20.

HEAD OFFICES:—
3 & 4, TOKENHOUSE BUILDINGS, LOTHBURY, BANK OF ENGLAND, LONDON, E.C.

Telegrams: "GRAMMARIAN, LONDON."

W. B. COCHRANE & CO.,
STOCK AND SHARE DEALERS.
13 and 14, CORNHILL, LONDON, E.C.
Telegrams: "Reinvest, London."
Bankers: London and Westminster, Lothbury, E.C.
Accounts opened for the Stock Exchange Fortnightly Settlements, and also upon the usual Cover System.
Prospectus, Monthly Investment Book, Mining List, and Market Reports, with the latest advices, forwarded gratis upon application.
W. B. COCHRANE & CO., 13 and 14, Cornhill, E.C.

BIRKBECK BANK (Estab. 1851), Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane, London. Two and a-half per cent. interest allowed on deposits, repayable on demand. Two per cent. on current accounts, on the minimum monthly balances when not below £100.
The BIRKBECK ALMANACK with particulars, post free.
FRANCIS RAVENSCROFT, Manager.

THE PROSPECTUS

—OF—

THE GOLDEN RIDGE

(WEST AUSTRALIA)

Proprietary Company, Limited,

Will be obtainable on THURSDAY, AUGUST 27th inst.

CAPITAL = = £150,000,

IN 150,000 SHARES OF £1 EACH,

5s. payable on Application, 5s. on Allotment, 5s. December 1st, 5s. February 1st, 1897

WORKING CAPITAL - - - - £40,000.

DIRECTORS.

H E. SHERWIN HOLT (Chairman of Swinburne & Co., Limited), Chairman.
Major DOUGLAS DEAN-PITT, late R.A. (Director of Burbanks North G. M. Co.)
Captain C. C. LONGRIDGE, late R.A., M.I.M.E.
WM. ABDY BEAUCLERK (Plater, Beauclerk), 5, Austin Friars, E.C.
*G. J. du CLAUN (Stange & Co.), 9, St. Mildred's Court, E.C.

* Will join after completion of purchase.

Bankers.

THE UNION BANK OF LONDON, 2, Princes Street, Mansion House, E.C.
THE BANK OF ADELAIDE, Leadenhall Street, E.C., and Adelaide, S.A.
THE WESTERN AUSTRALIAN BANK, Kalgoorlie.

Broker.

W. de NEUFVILLE, 11, Copthall Court, E.C.

Solicitors.

Messrs. CLARKE, RAWLINS, & CO., 66, Gresham House, Old Broad Street, E.C.

Auditors.

Messrs. BLAKEMORE, CHANTREY, & CO., Chartered Accountants, 27, Moorgate Street, London, E.C.

Secretary and Offices.

Mr. EDWIN HABBEN, Finsbury House, Blomfield Street, E.C

The Subscription List will Open on Monday, the 24th day of August, 1896, and Close on or before Wednesday, the 26th day of August, 1896, for town, and Thursday, the 27th day of August, for the country.

The "Old Bushmills" Distillery Co.

Incorporated under the Companies Acts, 1862 to 1890. LIMITED.

SHARE CAPITAL - £110,000.

70,000 Five per Cent. Preference Shares of £1 each	£70,000
40,000 Ordinary Shares of £1 each	40,000
	£110,000

Preference Shares—Issue of £70,000 Five per Cent. Preference Shares of £1 each. The Preference Shares are entitled to a preference dividend of 5 per cent. per annum, and rank as regards capital in priority to the Ordinary Shares.

Ordinary Shares.—Issue of £40,000 Ordinary Shares of £1 each.

Debentures.—Issue of £70,000 Four and One Quarter per Cent. First Mortgage Debentures of £100 each.

The Debentures are now offered for subscription at the price of 102 per cent.

The banks mentioned are authorised to receive subscriptions at the price of 102 per cent. for £70,000 Four and One Quarter per Cent. First Mortgage Debentures, and at par for the above £70,000 Five per Cent. Preference Shares, and £40,000 Ordinary Shares.

Payable.—

Preference.

2s. 6d. per Share on Application.
7s. 6d. per Share on Allotment.
10s. 0d. per Share one month after Allotment.

£1

Ordinary.

2s. 6d. per Share on Application.
7s. 6d. per Share on Allotment.
10s. 0d. per Share one month after Allotment.

£1

Debentures.

£5 per cent. on Application.
£47 per cent. (including premium) on Allotment.
£50 per cent. one month after Allotment.

£102

Payment in full may be made on Allotment, and as regards the Debenture Stock under a discount of 2 per cent. per annum.

Trustees for Debenture Holders.

JAMES DUFF, Barum House, Halifax, Chartered Accountant.
HUNTER MOORE, Solicitor, Newry.

Directors.

Hon. HERBERT T. ALLSOPP, Walton Bury, near Stafford.
Lord TRIMLESTOWN, Kew.
SAMUEL DUNCAN (Duncan, Alderdice, & Company, Limited), "Old Distillery," Newry.
Sir EDWARD LEE, 14, Waterloo-place, London, S.W.
JOSEPH HETHERINGTON, Wine and Spirit Broker, Liverpool.
The Vendor reserves the right to nominate two other Directors.

Brokers.

Dublin: D. D. BULGER, College Green and Stock Exchange.
Manchester: PIXTON & COPPOCK, 12, Half-Moon-street and Stock Exchange.
Liverpool: HOOK & BRADSHAW, York-buildings, Sweeting-street, and Stock Exchange.

Bankers.

In England: The UNION BANK OF MANCHESTER, Limited, Manchester, or their London agents; GLYN MILLS, CURRIE, & CO., Lombard-street, E.C.
In Ireland: The BELFAST BANKING COMPANY, Ltd., Belfast.
} or any of their branches.

Solicitors.

WALKER & ROWE, 8, Bucklersbury, London, E.C.

Auditors.

JOHN M'CULLOUGH & CO., Chartered Accountants, Royal-avenue, Belfast.

Registered Offices.

22 and 23, Great Tower-street, London, E.C.

Secretary (pro tem.)
MARTIN E. LYNAS.

ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.

This Company has been formed to acquire the old-established distillery business known as The "Old Bushmills" Distillery Company, Limited, situate at Bushmills, near the Giant's Causeway, in the county of Antrim, Ireland.

The Company takes over a large and valuable stock of whisky, the greater portion of which is fully matured, dating back to the year 1885, and this asset is rapidly increasing in value owing to the scarcity of very old whisky of fine quality.

The distillery proper occupies a freehold site of about 6 acres, in addition to which there are about 16 acres of accommodation land and a farm of 19 acres held on lease. There is also an office and stores in Hill-street, Belfast; stores in Market-place, Bushmills; bonded stores in Short-street and Albert-square, Belfast.

The assets to be acquired by the Company consist of:—

The distillery and property at Bushmills, which have been valued by Mr. Edmund Murphy, Government Arbitrator and Chief Receiver in the Court of Chancery, Dublin ...	£20,003	6	1
Stores and premises, Hill-street, Belfast, valued by Mr. T. A. Fisher, property broker, Belfast	1,000	0	0
Plant, machinery, casks, and implements, vehicles, live stock, chattels valued by Messrs. Hume & Gray, valuators, Belfast	16,258	12	6
Stock of whisky, valued by Mr. W. W. Brydon, spirit broker, Trinity-square, London	71,458	6	8
	£108,720	5	3
Book debts (guaranteed by vendor)	12,500	0	0
Duty paid on whisky in warehouse	2,200	0	0
Cash, being proceeds of the present issue (in excess of the amount of purchase money) remaining available for additional working capital	25,000	0	0
Premium on debenture stock	1,400	0	0
	£149,820	5	3

In the above-named assets no credit has been taken for goodwill.

The Company commences business free from all liabilities, and the working capital will be £112,558 6s. 8d., consisting of:—

(A) Stock of whisky	71,458	6	8
(B) Book debts (guaranteed)	12,500	0	0
(C) Duty paid on whisky	2,200	0	0
(D) Additional working capital acquired by present issue ...	25,000	0	0
	£111,158	6	8
(E) Premium on debenture stock	1,400	0	0
	£112,558	6	8

The books of the company for a period of two years and nine months prior to going into liquidation have been examined by Messrs. John M'Cullough & Co., chartered accountants, Belfast, and they certify as follows:—

Queen's Buildings, Royal-avenue, Belfast, July 30th, 1896.

Gentlemen,—We have examined the books of the "Old Bushmills" Distillery Company, Limited, for the years ending 31st July, 1892, and 31st July, 1893, and for nine months ending 30th April, 1894, at which dates balances were struck.

The books show a profit for the two years and nine months of	£19,057	0	11
But this is after charging to the trading, interest, preliminary expenses, and income tax, amounting to	25,595	19	9
	£44,653	0	8
This includes outlay for advertising for the year ending 31st July, 1892 (£3,318. 11s. 3d.), but does not include similar outlay for the year and nine months following amounting to	11,133	2	4
Which, if deducted from £44,653. 0s. 8d. shows, for two years and nine months	£33,519	18	4

There was a large increase in the quantity of whisky manufactured during the time referred to, and in stock at the end of each period, and the company was in the habit of valuing it at a stock price plus an addition per gallon, per year, for increased value by reason of age In our opinion the starting price was too high, and we have made fresh calculations of the stock at each term, upon the basis of a figure which we estimate as cost price, plus a fixed sum per gallon, per year, for improvement by age, but against this allowance has been made for ullage, or loss by evaporation, &c. and we find on this basis that the profit for the two years and nine months amounts to £26,536 13s. 5d. as against £33,519 18s. 4d. above mentioned.

The sales for nine months ending 30th April, 1894, were proportionately largely in excess of the sales for either of the two years preceding.

Your obedient servants,
JOHN M'CULLOUGH & CO., Chartered Accountants.

To the Directors of The "Old Bushmills" Distillery Company, Limited.

The assets of the Company more than cover the Debenture and Preference issues.

Applications for shares should be made on the form accompanying the prospectus (or upon that given below), and forwarded to the Company's bankers accompanied by a remittance for the amount of the deposit.

Full prospectuses and forms of application for shares may be obtained at the offices of the company or from the bankers, solicitors, and brokers.

London, 21st August, 1896.

No.....

THE "OLD BUSHMILLS" DISTILLERY COMPANY, LIMITED.

Incorporated under the Companies Acts, 1862 to 1890.

APPLICATION FORM.

(Which may be used.)

To the Directors of the "Old Bushmills" Distillery Company, Limited.

Gentlemen,—Having paid to your Bankers, the Union Bank of Manchester, Limited, or their London Agents, Messrs. Glyn, Mills, Currie & Co., or the Belfast Banking Company, Limited, Belfast, or one of their Branches, the sum of £....., being a deposit on application for Shares or Stock as follows:—

2s. 6d. per Share on ... ... } £
Five per cent. Preference Shares of £1 each ... ...

2s. 6d. per Share on ... ... } £
Ordinary Shares of £1 each ... ...

£5 per cent. on £ ... ... } £
4¼ per cent. First Mortgage Debenture Stock ... ...

I request you to allot me the number of Shares or amount of Debentures named, and I agree accept the same or any smaller number or amount that may be allotted to me, subject to the Memorandum and Articles of Association, and upon the terms of the Prospectus issued by you dated the 21st August, 1896; and I authorise you to place my name on the register of members in respect of the Shares or Debentures so allotted to me, and I agree to pay the further instalments upon such allotted Shares or Debentures as the same shall become due; and I agree with the Company as Trustee for the Directors and other persons liable, to waive any claims I may have against them for not more fully complying in the said Prospectus with the requirements of Sec. 38 of the Companies Act, 1867.

Name (in full) .....
Address .....
.....
Description .....
Date.....1896.
Signature .....

All cheques to be made payable to the Bankers.

BUY FROM THE GROWER.

TEA MERCHANT
BY SPECIAL APPOINTMENT

TO HER MAJESTY
THE QUEEN.

LIPTON'S DELICIOUS TEAS

HAVE THE LARGEST SALE IN THE WORLD.

APPRECIATED EVERYWHERE FOR THEIR DELICATE FLAVOUR AND EXQUISITE AROMA.

NO HIGHER PRICE. PER 1/7 LB. NO HIGHER PRICE.

THIS IS THE FINEST TEA THE WORLD PRODUCES.

PER 1/4 LB. RICH, PURE, AND FRAGRANT. PER 1/- LB.

LIPTON, Tea Planter, Ceylon.

Chief Offices, CITY ROAD, LONDON. Branches Everywhere. Agencies Throughout the World.

THERE IS ONLY ONE
Pill to a dose of

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

AND THERE IS ONLY ONE GENUINE PACKAGE.
It is EXACTLY like this, only the wrapper is printed in blue on white.

The vial contains forty pills, and costs 1s. 1½d. at the Chemist's. This is cheaper than pennyworths of doubtfully compounded pills. It is but a trifle over a farthing a dose, for ONE PILL IS A DOSE, though they are so small that FORTY-NINE of them only measure one inch square.

Cure TORPID LIVER WITHOUT FAIL, SICK HEADACHE, MALAISE, DISTRESS FROM EATING, and SALLOW COMPLEXION promptly done away with.

BRITISH DEPOT FOR
CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS
46, HOLBORN VIADUCT, LONDON, E.C.

"BUT BE SURE THEY ARE CARTER'S."

OUR PUZZLES.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 913.—HUNTING SONGS OF THE FUTURE.

Godfather (real name and address will be published in due course)	£1 1 0
Almaviva " " " "	£1 1 0

CONDENSED RULES.

All answers to the current Puzzle must be sent in on or before the morning of the Monday week following the date of that Puzzle's publication, to the Puzzle Editor, Truth Buildings, Carteret-street, Queen Anne's-gate, London, S.W. The answers must be signed by a nom de plume of not more than twelve letters, and must not be sent on post-cards, nor by telegraph, nor by hand; whilst in the case of new competitors the real name and address must be forwarded with the first reply sent.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 914.

The Prize in this Competition has been awarded to Eve for the following suggestion:—

The Queen to give to her people Buckingham Palace-gardens, "with necessary reservations." Her people all to contribute towards the re-arrangement of the grounds, making them beautiful, and a storehouse of everything that can go towards the commemoration of her sixty years' reign. So that the grounds would be a grand historical memorial, and contain all that is best to remember of her reign symbolised in every possible way. A store garden of delight to future generations.—Eve.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 918.

Special Services for Cyclists are now being held in various parts of the country. As such gatherings are likely to increase in number, it may be interesting to suggest suitable texts for the sermons which are preached at them, and the usual prize of Two Guineas is therefore offered this week to the competitor who Selects from Some Part of the Bible the most Suitable Passage or Verse on which a Sermon to Cyclists can be Founded.

Competitors may suggest more than one text, and all answers must reach me by the morning of Monday, September 7, at the latest.

Answers to Correspondents.

 The real name, with the address, of Asher, winner of a half of Prize No. 912, is C. F. Garstin, Esq., Hill View, Sherborne, Dorset.

A. E. L.—I have duly received your post-card.

Meerschaum.—Your capital "Hunting Song" did not arrive until too late for the competition.

G. D. and Heurteloup.—Your "Novel Suggestions" were received too late for publication.

L. Gill.—Yes; you can make what use you please of the stanzas.

Justice.—Thanks for your note.

Edina and Cholo.—Your answers to Puzzle No. 914 were too late.

Salisbury.—Thanks.

E. G.—I am much obliged to you for your suggestion.

Desmatrophy.—I have made a note of your ingenious suggestion.

Hibernian.—Many thanks.

Master Gunner.—I am unable to trace the arrival of your "Hunting Song."

THE PUZZLE EDITOR.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 915.—ASSORTED SPECIMENS—GOOD AND OTHERWISE.

RENDERING INTO ENGLISH OF TWO FRENCH STANZAS.

 The two French stanzas are printed below. I may add that so numerous are the translations which have been received, that it is impossible to publish even a tithe of them—at any rate for the present.—The Puzzle Editor.

"La vie est vaine:
Un peu d'amour,
Un peu de haine,
Et puis—bonjour!

"La vie est brève:
Un peu d'espoir,
Un peu de rêve,
Et puis—bonsoir!"

Life is vain:
Of love a ray,
Of hate a grain,
And then—good-day!

Life is brief:
Of hope a mite,
Of dreams a sheaf,
And then—good-night!
Tea Lamb.

How vain is life:
A lover's sigh,
A little strife,
And then—good-bye!

How brief its gleam,
Its hope how slight;
A little dream,
And then—good-night!
Maison Blanc.

Our life is vain,
Love's little ray,
Hate's petty pain
And then—good-day!

Our life is brief—
Dream's drifting light,
Hope's short relief,
And then—good-night!
Amy.

Too brief is life!
One passing ray
Of love and strife,
And then—good-day!

One transient gleam
Of hope's delight,
One fleeting dream,
And then—good-night!
Kittifonia.

Vain is our life,
'Tis but a play
Of love and strife,
And then—good-day!

Our life is brief,
A hope too bright,
A dream of grief,
And then—good-night!
Else.

Our life is vain:
Of love a lay,
Of hate a strain,
And then—good day!

Our life is short:
Of hope a flight,
Of dreams a sport,
And then—good-night!
C. M. P.

Life is but vain:
Love for a spell;
Hatred and pain,
And then—farewell!

Life is a gleam
Of Hope's delight,
A little dream,
And then—good.night!
Berrie.

Like fitful fate
Is life—a cry
For love, for hate,
And then—good-bye!

Like morning dew
Is life; hope bright,
With dreams a few,
And then—good-night!
North Pole.

Oh, futile life!
A tender sigh,
A flash of strife,
And then—good-bye!

Brief is life's gleam,
Hope sparkles bright,
A fleeting dream,
And then—good-night!
Ollamh.

Life is but vain;
Love sends a ray,
Hate adds a grain,
And soon—good-day!

Life is a dream;
Brief is its flight,
Hope but a gleam,
And soon—good-night!
Anybers.

How vain is life:
Some love has way,
Some little strife,
And then—good-day!

How brief life seems:
Some hopes see light,
A few short dreams,
And then—good-night!
St. Elm.

Oh, vain is life!
Of love a spell,
A little strife
And then—farewell?

Oh, life fades fast!
Of hope, a mite,
A dream soon past,
And then—good-night!
Wandering Jew.

Life is in vain!
Love flits away,
And hate, and pain,
And so—good-day!

And life is brief:
Hope fades from sight,
Short dreams, short grief,
And then—good-night!
Corvette.

Our life is vain:
Love's short, sweet spell,
Hate's short, sharp pain,
And then—farewell!

Our life is short:
Hope's little light,
A dream's brief sport,
And then—good-night!
J. McGrigor Allan.

Life is but vain!
Love for a spell,
Then hate again,
And then—farewell!

Life soon is o'er!
A hope so bright,
A dream once more,
And then—good-night!
Malleyshag.

What is life worth?
A lover's sigh,
A quarrel's birth,
And then—good-bye!

Life is so brief.
Our dreams take flight;
Hope turns to grief,
And then—good-night!
Peu d'espoir.

Our life 'tis vain,
Love does not stay;
Hate gives us pain,
And then—good-day!

Our life 'tis short,
Hope gives us light
With dreams we sport,
And then—good-night!
A Novice.

Oh! vain is life,
With love we play,
Soon follows strife,
And then—good-day!

For one brief space,
Hope's vision bright
In dreams we trace,
And then—good-night!
Pussy.

How vain is life!
Of love a ray,
A little strife,
And then—good-day!

How brief life seems!
Of hope a mite,
A few short dreams,
And then—good-night!
Persimmon.

This life is vain:
Of love a spell,
Of hate a strain,
And then—farewell!

This life is brief:
Some dreaming bright,
Hope's make-belief,
And then—good-night!
Sir P. Felis.

Our mortal state
Is vain—a play
Of love and hate,
And then—good-day!

Our state is brief:
Some hopes, some light
Day dreams, some griefs,
And then—good-night!
Apemantus.

Life is but vain:
Of love one ray,
Of hate one grain,
And then—good-day!

Life is soon o'er:
Of hope one sight,
One dream—no more—
And then—good-night!
Skriker.

Our life is nought:
A lover's sigh,
An angry thought,
And then—good-bye!

Our life is brief,
Hope's fancied light,
Sleep's make-belief,
And then—good-night!
M. A. L.

How vain is life!
A short love-lay,
Hatred and strife,
And then—good-day!

How short life seems!
Some hope but slight,
Some vanished dreams,
And then—good-night!
Martlet.

Oh, empty life!
A vow, a sigh,
A sound of strife;
'Tis hushed—good-bye!

Ah, life! one gleam
Of glad'ning light
To gild a dream;
'Tis dark—good-night!
Woking.

Life's but a bubble:
Love born to die,
Brief strife and trouble,
And then—good-bye!

Life is but fleeting:
Dreams brief as bright,
Hopes that are cheating,
And then—good-night!
Corydon.

Ah! vain is life!
It flutters by:
Short love, short strife,
And then—good-bye!

Ah! life is brief!
One stol'n delight,
One dream of grief,
And then—good-night!
Peltast.

Ah! vain is life!
A lover's lay,
A breath of strife,
And then—good-day!

Life's quickly sped:
A hope in flight,
A day-dream fled,
And then—good-night!
Twins.

How vain life's fate!
A short love-lay,
A little hate,
And then—good-day!

How brief life's tale!
A few hopes dight
With dreams that fail,
And then—good-night!
Albericus.

How vain is life!
A dawn that's gay,
A morn of strife,
And then—good-day!

How brief life seems!
A noon that's bright,
An eve of dreams,
And then—good-night!
Ephemeris.

How vain is life!
Love's little play;
Hate's little strife,
And then—good-day!

How short life's theme!
Hope's little light,
Joy's little dream,
And then—good-night!
Quirk.

How vain our life!
Love's little play,
Hate's little strife,
And then—good-day!

How brief life's gleam!
Hope's little light,
Joy's little dream,
And then—good-night!
Peggotty.

How vain is life!
Of love a ray,
A cloud of strife,
And lo—the day!

How short it seems!
Our hopes once bright
Prove idle dreams,
And so—the night!
Dummyweek.

The world is vain:
A short love-lay,
Hate causing pain,
And then—good-day!

Our life is brief:
Of hope a sight,
Dream's book a leaf,
And then—good-night!
Screw.

Life is but vain;
Love leads the way,
Hate follows pain
And then—good-day!

Life is but brief:
Hope all too bright,
Dreams end in grief,
And then—good-night!
Swimmer.

One hates and loves
A few short hours;
How vain it proves,
This life of ours.

One hopes and dreams,
A little spell;
How brief it seems,
And then—farewell!
Harold.

This life is vain:
A lover's lay,
An angry pain,
And then—good-day!

This life glides through
A hope-winged flight;
A dream or too,
And then—good-night!
Forsan.

This life how vain!
A little sun,
A little rain,
And then—'tis done!

This life how brief!
Hopes born to die,
Dreams full of grief,
And then—good-bye!
D.N.R.

Poor life—how vain!
"Love me," we say;
We hate again.
And so—good-day!

Poor life—how fleet!
Our hopes are bright,
Our dreams are sweet;
And so—good-night!
Maevius.

Vain is our life:
Love's little play,
A little strife,
And then—good-day!

Our life is short:
Hope's little flight,
Dreams' little sport,
And then—good-night!
H. M. Acton.

Vain, vain is life:
Love for a day,
A day of strife—
Good-bye for aye!

Brief too life's gleam:
Of hope a sight,
A broken dream—
And then—good-night!
Greville.

How vain life's state!
How short love's stay!
A little hate,
And then—good-day!

How soon life's o'er:
Hope—brief delight—
A dream, no more,
And then—good-night!
Hippo.

Our life's a bubble:
Some love, some play,
Some hate, so no trouble,
And then—good-day!

Our life is fleeting:
Some hope in sight,
Some vision cheating,
And then—good-night!
Pladda.

Bill Buggins (of London), having been to Boulogne and back in a day, thinks he ought to be able to traduce this little lot:—

Life's no great catch:
A mash or two,
A scrapping-match,
And then—Adoo!

Life's short (so's boose),
Of hope a pep—
Percorn, a snooze,
Then—Mind the step!
Chelsea.

How vain is life!
Love's fleeting stay,
Hate's empty strife,
And then—good-day!

How brief it seems!
Hope's transient flight,
A spell of dreams,
And then—good-night!
Random Shot.

Man's life is vain:
An ounce of strife,
Of love, a grain,
Good day, vain life!

Man's life is short:
Hope sheds dim light,
Dreams float athwart,
Short life, good night!
Prak.

Our life is vain:
Of love a ray,
Of hate a grain,
And then—good-day!

Our life is brief:
Of hope a mite,
From dreams relief,
And then—good-night!
Pictor.

How vain our fate!
To love a spell,
A spell to hate,
And then—farewell!

How brief our day!
For hope must die,
Dreams pass away,
And then—good-bye!
Vervex.

Yea! Life is hollow:
Our swift loves fly,
Our brief hates follow;
The end—good-bye!

Yea! Life is little:
Our dreams take flight,
Our hopes prove brittle:
The end—good-night!
E. L. T.

How vain life's race!
Love holds short sway,
Hate flames a space,
And then—good-day!

How brief life's gleam!
Fair hope we sight,
Awhile we dream,
And then—good-night!
Melrose.

What's life?—a bore:
Some kisses few,
Some quarrels sore,
And so—adieu!

Life's a brief play:
Hopes of renown;
A dream by day—
The curtain's down!
Blencathra.

Our life is vain:
A little play
Of love and pain,
And then—good-day!

Our life is brief:
A moment's flight
Of hope and grief,
And then—good-night!
Pretoria.

How vain our fate!
Love born to die,
And passing hate,
And then—good-bye!

Short life is this:
Some hope's brief light
And dreams of bliss,
And then—good-night!
Oceanica.

Vain is life's fate:
Of love a ray,
A little hate,
And then—good-day!

Life's but a gleame:
Now hope's delight,
A little dream,
And then—good-night!
Ellart.

What's life? A fate
Which lets us say,
"I love," "I hate,"
And then—good-day!

What's life? A spark
Of fancy bright,
A dream ere dark,
And then—good-night!
Bowzer.

Life is but vain:
Love holds its sway,
Hate its short reign,
And then—good-day!

Brief is life's race:
Hope wings its flight,
We dream a space,
And then—good-night!
Le Roi.

Thou'rt vain, oh, life!
A little love,
A little strife,
And then—above!

Oh life! thou'rt brief:
A little hope,
A dream of grief,
And then—we slope!
A Skit.

How vain is life!
Love for a spell,
A time of strife,
And then—farewell!

How brief life's dream!
Joy's fleeting sigh,
Hope's transient gleam,
And then—good-bye!
Orpheus.

Vain is our life:
Love's little play,
Hate's little strife,
And then—good-day!

Our life is brief:
Hope brings delight,
Dreams end its grief,
And then—good-night!
Platelayer.

Our lives are vain:
Love's fickle sway,
Then hate's short reign,
And so—good-day!

Brief lives they seem:
Hope's fading light,
A passing dream,
And so—good night!
Crustacean.

This little life:
One tiny spell
Of love, of strife,
And then—farewell!

Ah! life's short gleam:
Hopes flash and die,
Fast fades our dream,
And then—good-bye!
Impérieuse.

This life is vain:
Of love some ray,
Some hate and pain,
And then—good-day!

This life is brief:
Some hope and light,
A dream's relief,
And then—good-night!
Idem II.

Ah, life is vain:
Sweet love must die,
Hatred is pain,
So then—good-bye!

False life! a gleam
Of brief delight,
A hope, a dream,
And then—good-night!
Biddy.

Vain is our day:
Love for a spell,
Hate cannot stay,
And so—farewell!

Short is our day:
Hope gives no light,
Dreams fleet away,
And so—good-night!
May.

Answers have been received from:—Red Rowan, Peltast, Plopps, Esperance, Cornubea, Marsin, Scorpio, Ivy Leaves, Twins, C. F. Reed, Chica, Mountain Ash, Gingerbernooster, Dlek Mnisch, Abericus, Ephemens, Quirk, Grateful, Kernwood, Puritan, Alpha, Beddenham, Oom Paul, Peggotty, Little Eelda, Maevius, Gervase, Lan Nicola, Bathyllus, Bruin, Culpepper, Gazpacho, H. M. Acton, Greville, J. G. Parton, Echo, Kettleness, Novice, Ajax, Hippo, Anglo, Pladda, Chelsea, Quaruois, Random Shot, Prak, Shamrock, Pictor, Verve, Durnmont, Pretoria, Oceanica, Ellart, Darby, Castlecorner, Argonaut, Rlwop, Bowzer, M.C.C., Alectum, Topsy, Sophronia, J. McGregor Allan, Le Roi, A Skit, Corn Cob, Sea Waves, Arachne, Frana, Jessica, Orpheus, Ashbattle, Platelayer, Fortunatus, Coridd, Neophyte, Hopper, Crustacean, J. F. Close, Hadh, Hopeful, Impérieuse, Leadbeater, Idem II., Biddy, M. W., May, Iota, Rex, Risk, Old Peter, Eard, Burglar, B. P. M., Fuse, Carlo, Amoricco, Wilts, Nitram, Marpiot, Myrah, D. A. R., Bim, Dunfallandy, S'pup, Loyal au Mort, Penelope, Pentland, Langstone, Tibicen, Roseland, Young Sam, Boblims, Houghton-le-Spring, Contest, Comtesse Olga, Shriker, Cholo, Claymore, Char, Martlet, Curse, Hebe, Laris, Gabion, Cousin, Alice, Mauriston, F. J. F., Pipistrella, Sina, Hugo, Cartoon, Miriam, Bertha, Rosamond, Anon, Heather, Tea Cake, W.W., Achilles, E.A.T., Torfreda, Forsan, Mickey, Woodle, Vixen, Gobbo, Gold Finch, Penguin, Dunettie, Gallio, Irmabee, Dromedes, Neptune, Senex, Zeit Geist, Effie, Melrose, Mariquita, Daisy, Emperor, Bien, Aimé, Blencathra, Nicola, Miss Le Nesurms, Forget-me-not, Nurse, D.N.R., Bablio, W.E.B., Betsindia, St. Elm, Burgh le Marsh, Moses, Seaton, Janet, Thomas Earp, Bus, Lyneus, Kittifonia, Esplication, Beaumont, Elsie, C.M.P., W.P., Armiger, Litteralite, Berrie, Mr. James, Quid Nunc, Spin, Blarney, Mesmer, Allan L. Kurvenal, Edina, Verax, Butter, Nabo, Honey, Auybers, Colosse, Bantam, Geme, Muff, Failure, Earnest, Selim, Vivien, Vivia, Jack, R., Amalasantha, Eboracum, Heurteloup, Noel, Bloes, Vichleen Prapshot, Wandering Jew, Reggue, A.E.L., Esperanza, Corvetta, Zil, Excelsior, Adjud, Springer, S.W.F., M C.M., Are., Etak, Buckland, Austeli, Malieyse, Lag, Balaclava, Zou Zou, Xotox, Pax Est mitir, R.S.B., Espoir, Carlos, Lilian Holt, Possun, Benevolus, Almaviva, Orlando, Peu d'Espoir, A Novice, Flaccus, Pussy, Quye, Union Jack, Persimmon, Sir P. Felis, Quien Sabe, Hounsnitch, Apemantus, Moschus, M. V. B., Mab, A. W. C., Leladox, Experience, Beppo, Demon, Qu'Appelle, Pigtail, S. L., Woking, Kathleen, Buckles, Corydon, Silverpen, Fonteman, Harold, Forsam, Dirk, Nicolo, Enigma, Nurse, Babbo, W. E. B., Betsinda, Forget-me-not, Translator, Ars, Darby, Ufferton, Li Hung Chang, Mercurius, W. G. B., Surgeon, H. E. G., Niblick, Screw, Agatha Link, Vero, Arch Gibbs, Twig, Sauvageonne, Corunna, Asher, Nitram, J. P., Salisbury, H. S., Haro, Doodles, Desmostrophy, Cochran Field, Autumn Crocus, N. N. N., Buddhi, Nora, Ye Hermit, Reuper, Francesca, C. W. H., Dry Monopole's, Swimmer, Dummy-week, Poppœa, Pereander, Flesmo, Ladybird, Sphinx, Jess, Tea Lamb, Amy, Malignant, Astrœa, Maison Blanc, Bus, Kithfonia, Eise, C. M. P.

ALL HEADACHES INSTANTLY CURED OR MONEY REFUNDED.

LEGAL GUARANTEE.

7½D. EMERSON'S BROMO-SELTZER, the most successful American remedy, is an effervescent powder, taken in water. If three doses do not cure any head-ache, no matter how caused, send the bottle to us, saying where obtained, AND WE WILL AT ONCE REFUND THE PRICE.

Trial Bottle, post free, 7½d. Larger Sizes, 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 3d. Sold by many Chemists or obtained to order by almost all.

EMERSON DRUG CO., Ltd.
46, Holborn Viaduct,
LONDON, E.C.
INSIST ON FULL NAME—

EMERSON'S BROMO-SELTZER

£20 TOBACCONISTS COMMENCING. Illd. guide (259 pages), 3d., "How to open respectably £20 to £2,000." Tobacconists' Outfitting Co., 186, Euston-rd., London. Mngr. H. MYERS, Est. 1866.

LONDON AND COUNTY ADVANCE AND DISCOUNT COMPANY, Limited.—Cash advanced from £10 to £500, without preliminary fees or deductions for interest, for short or long periods, repayable by easy instalments, at moderate rates, upon approved security. Bills Discounted. Forms free. Offices, 57 and 58, Chancery-lane, W.C.—JOHN STONE, Secretary.

PRO BONO PUBLICO.—IMPORTANT!—A married Gentleman greatly needs any work, to produce his very important Books, whereby any chosen Language wheresoever, is MOST rapidly, scientifically, and inexpensively ACQUIRED BY ANY FOREIGNER, ergo, vice-versa! Foreign papers please copy. Inquiries solicited.—T. L. C., 24, Somerford-grove, Lower Tottenham. (Vide TRUTH Advt., Aug. 13.)

TO INVALIDS.—A LIST of MEDICAL MEN, in all parts, willing to RECEIVE RESIDENT PATIENTS, giving full particulars and terms, sent Gratis. The List includes Private Asylums, &c. Schools also recommended—Address, Mr. G. B. STOCKER, 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C.

EPPS'S COCOAINE.

COCOA-NIB EXTRACT.

(TEA-LIKE.)

The choicest roasted nibs (broken-up beans) of the natural Cocoa on being subjected to powerful hydraulic pressure, give forth their excess of oil, leaving for use a finely-flavoured powder—"Cocoaine," a product which, when prepared with boiling water, has the consistence of tea, of which it is now, with many, beneficially taking the place. Its active principle being a gentle nerve stimulant, supplies the needed energy without unduly exciting the system.

The Singer Manufacturing Company,

Management for Great Britain and Ireland:—42 & 43, ST. PAUL'S CHURCHYARD, LONDON, E.C.

BRANCH OFFICES EVERYWHERE.

W. & F. THORN'S CARRIAGES

AND

ELSWICK CYCLES.

Acknowledged by all the World to be the BEST.

LONDON ADDRESSES—

19 and 19a, Great Portland Street, and 16 and 17, Little Portland Street, W.
Ranelagh House, Lower Grosvenor Place, S.W. London (only).

10/6 THE "PELICAN" SELF-FEEDING PEN 10/6

(PATENTED)

WRITES INSTANTLY AND CONTINUOUSLY.

Has Extra Large Reservoir of Ink. Secure against Leakage in any position. Flow of Ink regulated with the Greatest Nicety.

POLISHED VULCANITE, HANDSOMELY ENCHASED, FITTED WITH SPECIAL BARREL PEN in 14-ct. GOLD, IRIDIUM-POINTED. Also

THE "NOTA BENE" STYLOGRAPH OR FLUID PENCIL

(PATENTED)

5/- 5/-

IS READY FOR INSTANT USE, WITHOUT ANY ADJUSTMENT. MAY BE CARRIED IN ANY POSITION, WITHOUT FEAR OF LEAKAGE.

POLISHED VULCANITE, HANDSOMELY ENCHASED, WITH NEEDLE, SPRING, & NOZZLE, MADE OF THE PRECIOUS METALS.

Sold by all Stationers. Wholesale only by the Sole Manufacturers, THOS. DE LA RUE & CO. Ltd., Bunhill Row, London, E.C.

The Mutual Life Insurance Co. Of New York

Assets . . . exceed . . . 45 Millions Sterling.

INSURES AN INCOME

During Lifetime of Insured.

Life Policies - - - - - - - at 3½ per cent.
Life Option Endowments - at 4 „
Consols - - - - - - - - at 6 „

After Death of Insured.

Continuous Instalment - -
Debenture - - - - - - -
20 Year Bond - - - - - } at 5 per cent.

Apply for Particulars to any of the Branch Offices, or to Head Office for the United Kingdom—

D. C. HALDEMAN,
GENERAL MANAGER,
17 & 18, CORNHILL, LONDON, E.C.

FOR YOUTHFUL APPEARANCE. BEAUTIFUL HAIR.

IMPERIAL HAIR DYES & C.

ONE LIQUID.

No. 1.—Black.
No. 2.—Dark Brown.
No. 3.—Light Brown.
No. 4.—Golden Brown or Auburn.
No. 5.—Pure Golden.
No. 6.—IMPERIAL HAIR GROWER.

Harmless, Perfect, Permanent, and Odourless.
A Medical Certificate with each bottle.

2/6, 3/6, 5/- & 10/6 (Secretly Packed).

J. BRODIE, 41, Museum-st. London.
ESTABLISHED 1868. ONCE TRIED, ALWAYS USED.

STRAINED VISION.

DISTRESSING HEADACHES, indigestion, simulated neuralgia, and nervous depression, are frequently caused by some peculiarity of the Vision, which can at once be overcome by the use of proper glasses. See "OUR EYES" (Now in its Sixteenth Edition), price 1s.; by
JOHN BROWNING, F.R.A.S., F.R.M.S., President of the British Optical Association, &c.
Or consult, free of charge—
MR. JOHN BROWNING,
OPHTHALMIC OPTICIAN,
63, STRAND, LONDON, W.C.

ROYAL EXCHANGE
ASSURANCE.

SETTLEMENT POLICIES
Guaranteeing FIVE PER CENT. on the sum assured. No Trustees Required.

DEATH DUTIES
Provided for by a small annual payment through life.

ANNUITIES
Special Terms for Impaired Lives.

For Rates, apply to the Secretary,
Chief Office—ROYAL EXCHANGE, LONDON.

GREAT SOUTHERN AND WESTERN RAILWAY.

LAKES AND FJORDS OF KERRY.

"The south-western part of Kerry is well known as the most beautiful portion of the British Isles."—LORD MACAULAY.

Opening of the New Railways—New Tourist Resorts—Good Hotels—Magnificent Scenery—Good Fishing—Coaching Tours.

Cheap Tourist Tickets issued to Lakes of Killarney, Glengariff, Caragh Lake for Glencar, Valencia, Waterville, Parknasilla, and Kenmare.
THE GRAND ATLANTIC COAST TOUR affords magnificent views of River, Ocean, and Mountain Scenery by Railway and Coach for ONE HUNDRED MILES around the South Kerry Peninsula.
Tickets are also issued to Kilkee, Lahinch, Lisdoonvarna, and places on the County Clare Coast.
For full particulars apply to Messrs. Cook & Son, Messrs. Gaze & Son, the principal stations on the L. & N. W., Midland, or G. W. Railways, or to the Great Southern and Western Railway, Dublin.—Illustrated Guide sent gratis and post-free on Application to Kingsbridge, Dublin. R. G. COLHOUN, Traffic Manager.

RUBINAT.

BEST

RUBINAT.

APERIENT.

Source Dr. Llorach.—SPANISH APERIENT MINERAL WATER. Dr. WEX, Official Chemist to the town of Hamburg, places Rubinat before the most vaunted of the German purgative waters. Is invaluable in all gout and intestinal complaints.

—Has none of the drastic and ofttimes irritating effects of other waters, which chiefly depend for their action upon magnesian salts of which they are largely composed.

E. GALLAIS & CO.,
90, Piccadilly London, W.

A WONDERFUL MEDICINE

BEECHAM'S PILLS

Have been before the Public for more than fifty years, and have now the greatest sale of any Proprietary article. This has been achieved without the publication of testimonials, the convincing fact is, that BEECHAM'S PILLS RECOMMEND THEMSELVES.

WORTH A GUINEA A BOX

FOR ALL
Bilious & Nervous Disorders
SUCH AS
Sick Headache, Constipation, Weak Stomach, Impaired Digestion, Disordered Liver and Female Ailments.

Annual Sale, SIX MILLION BOXES.

Sold everywhere in boxes 9½d., 13½d. and 2/9 each.

Printed for the Proprietor by WYMAN & SONS, Limited, Great Queen-st. W.C. and published at 10, Bolt-ct. Fleet-st. E.C. in the Parish of St. Dunstan's-in-the-West, in the City of London. Cheques and Post Office Orders should be made payable to REGINALD E. BOOKER. "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-st. Queen Anne's-gate, S.W.

· TRUTH ·

"Cultores Veritatis Fraudis Inimici."—Cicero.

No. 1027. Vol. XL. Thursday, September 3, 1896. Price Sixpence.

NOTICE.

In response to various communications which reach me on the subject, I beg to notify that the terms of Subscription to Truth, which are payable in advance, are as follows:—To any address in the United Kingdom, for 3 months, 7s.; 6 months, 14s.; and for 12 months, 28s. The Thin Paper Edition is forwarded to countries within the Postal Union for 3 months for 7s. 8d.; 6 months, 15s. 4d.; and 12 months, 30s. 8d. Cheques and Post Office Orders should be made payable to the Manager, Truth, "Truth Building," Carteret-street, S.W.

A reprint of the Truth report on the Kilburn Sisterhood can be obtained at the Publishing Offices, Bolt-court, Fleet-street, price 2d.; by post, 2½d.

ENTRE NOUS.

I HAVE to make an announcement which has for many years past been found in Truth about this time of the year. The Dolls have arrived, large and small, and some thousands of them are now available for distribution. Will those ladies who intend to assist in dressing these Dolls for the Christmas Toy and Doll Show be kind enough, therefore, to make early application for parcels of the same? I reserve until a later date particulars of the Prizes which will be given in connection with the Doll-dressing. The important fact for the present is that between this and the middle of December upwards of 4,000 Dolls have to be dressed. Clearly this cannot be done without the help of many willing fingers. Who, then, is ready to lend a hand?

Her Majesty will stay at Balmoral until Friday, November 13, and is then to remove to Windsor Castle until December 18 or 22, when the Court will proceed to Osborne until the middle of February. The Queen has again engaged the hotel at Cimiez, near Nice, for the months of March and April.

The St. James's Gazette announces, truly enough, that a great deal of nonsense has been written lately about the "Queen's health." The St. James's, however, proceeds to add something on its own account to this stock of "nonsense," by stating that, although partially crippled by rheumatism, the Queen "can remain standing for a length of time which would utterly fatigue many a younger woman." This is crazy rubbish, indeed! As a matter of fact, the Queen never now stands on her feet for two minutes together. Her Majesty is wheeled even from room to room, and at all Court and other functions she sits on a low chair. It is quite untrue that the Queen always feels "great oppression" in her head when the weather is close. It seems to me that the St. James's Gazette would do better to reform its own ignorant inaccuracy than to denounce the errors of its contemporaries.

The Emperor and Empress of Russia are to land at Leith when they arrive from Copenhagen in the Imperial yacht, and they will travel by special train to Ballater, passing over the Forth and Tay bridges. The Duke of Connaught and the Duke of York are to receive the Emperor and Empress at Leith, and the Prince of Wales will meet them at Ballater Station.

When the Emperor and Empress are at Balmoral the Queen will personally invest his Majesty with the Grand Cross of the Royal Victorian Order, while the Empress is to receive from her Majesty the first-class of the Royal Order of Victoria and Albert.

The Emperor will return this compliment by conferring the St. Andrew (the first Russian Order) on the Duke of York, while the Duchess is to receive the Order of St. Catherine. The insignia of the St. Andrew include a star, which the Emperor will present in brilliants.

I stated last week that the Queen had granted Bushey Park to the Duke and Duchess of York. A carping and ill-informed contemporary states that "nothing has been decided," but that the Queen "will resume possession of the house and grounds." This is purely imaginative. The Queen "resumed possession" of Bushey on the day that the Duc de Nemours died, and her Majesty has already signed a warrant granting the place to the Duke and Duchess of York for their lives, with benefit of survivorship.

The Queen has lent Birkhall House, her place in Glen Muick, near Ballater, to Lord and Lady Clanwilliam until the end of October. Birkhall, which stands in well-wooded grounds, was built in 1715, and it was a seat of the Gordons of Abergeldie until the Prince Consort purchased the estate (7,000 acres) for the Prince of Wales, who sold it to the Queen in 1885.

I hear there is a possibility of Prince Max of Baden becoming more closely allied with our Royal Family. Prince Max, who was born in July, 1867, is the only son of Prince William of Baden, by his marriage with the Princess Marie of Leuchtenberg, a granddaughter of the Emperor Nicholas I. Prince Max is a nephew of the Dowager Duchess of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, and of the late Grand Duchess Michael of Russia. The Grand Duke of Baden has one surviving son, the Hereditary Prince Frederick William, who was married in 1885 to Princess Hilda of Nassau, who brought him a large fortune, but they have no children. The Grand Duke's only daughter is the Crown Princess of Sweden and Norway.

The Princess of Wales and the Empress-Dowager of Russia are staying with the King and Queen of Denmark at Bernstorff Castle, a pretty old place about seven miles from Copenhagen, which is near the sea, and with an extensive forest of beeches and oaks on one side. Bernstorff is within a short distance of Charlottenburg, the country residence of the Crown Prince and Crown Princess of Denmark, where Prince Charles and Princess Maud are to arrive next week.

Next week the Prince of Wales will be the guest of Lord Crewe, at Fryston Hall, Yorkshire, and during the following week he is to visit Mr. Arthur Sassoon, at Tulchan Lodge, Morayshire (where the Duke of York has been staying for a few days), after which H.R.H. goes (on the 19th) to Balmoral. The Prince will stay on Deeside (at Balmoral and Mar Lodge) until October 8, when he comes to town until the 12th, and then goes to Newmarket for the race week, during which he is to have a day's shooting with the Duke of Cambridge at Six-Mile Bottom. On Monday, October 19, the Prince and Princess and Princess Victoria are going to stay with Lord and Lady Londonderry at Wynyard Park, until Friday, 23rd, when they will return to town. The Prince goes to Newmarket on October 26 for the Houghton Meeting, and thence, on the 30th, to Sandringham, where the Princess will previously have arrived from London.

The Duke of Connaught will go to Germany next month to represent the Queen at the unveiling (by the Emperor William) of the monument which has been erected at Coblenz to the Empress Augusta. The Empress Frederick is to be present at the ceremony, and also the Grand Duke and Grand Duchess of Baden, and the Duke of Coburg.

I learn that the Duke and Duchess of York are to pay a visit in December to the Duke and Duchess of Portland at Welbeck Abbey.

The Emperor William pointedly omitted his usual visit to the Empress Frederick at Kronburg when he was staying at Wilhelmshöhe, and it is understood that his Majesty kept away from Friedrichshof because he did not wish to meet the Duke and Duchess of Sparta, whom he treated very rudely when they went to Potsdam two years ago. The Emperor has bitterly resented the conversion of the Duchess (who was formerly his favourite sister) from the Lutheran to the Greek Church. His Majesty cannot well object to the mere fact of the Duchess changing her religion, as he viewed with complacency the "conversion" to the Orthodox Church of the Empress of Russia and her sister the Grand Duchess Elizabeth. What really enraged him was the fact that the Duchess of Sparta did not ask his permission to change her religion, but contented herself with consulting the Queen and the Empress Frederick.

Dublin was never more crowded for a Horse Show week than this year, and rarely have so many social attractions been provided in addition to the great Exhibition at Ball's Bridge. Lord and Lady Cadogan had a busy time. A large house party for the week tested the accommodation of the Viceregal Lodge to its fullest extent. Amongst the guests were Lord and Lady Coventry, Lord and Lady Craven, Lady Dorothy Coventry, Elizabeth Lady Wilton, Lord and Lady Enniskillen, Lady F. Cole, Lord Headfort, Lord Dunraven, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bourke, Sir H. Edwards, Mr. Van de Weyer, and others. Besides their visits to the Horse Show, Lord and Lady Cadogan and a large Viceregal party were present on Thursday afternoon at the match between the 10th Hussars and Freebooters in the All Ireland Polo Tournament, the "10th" on that occasion proving that polo is not amongst the things "the 10th don't do." On Friday afternoon the Viceregal party visited the Royal Horticultural Society's Flower Show in Merrion-square, Lord and Lady Cadogan afterwards giving a garden party at the Viceregal Lodge. Several dinner parties were also given during the week, and on Wednesday night there was a large dance at the Viceregal Lodge, which the younger members of the Viceregal party kept up with great spirit to a late hour.

Lady Cadogan left the Viceregal Lodge on Saturday to open the Foxford Industrial Exhibition. During her visit to the West she was the guest of Lord and Lady Arran at the family residence in Sligo. On Monday she returned to Dublin to accompany Lord Cadogan on his visit to the South of Ireland, where the Viceregal party stay in Cork with Mr. Smith-Barry, and at Lismore with the Duke and Duchess of Devonshire.

The Royal Hospital, Kilmainham, was also given over to hospitality during the Horse Show week. Lord and Lady Roberts entertained a party of visitors. On Tuesday a ball was given in the large banqueting hall, than which, since it was decorated in Lord Wolseley's time, there is no handsomer ball-room in Ireland. On Friday evening a concert for the Soldiers and Sailors' Aid Society was given at the Royal Hospital, Lord and Lady Cadogan and a large Viceregal party being present.

The Duke and Duchess of Marlborough, who are residing at Blenheim, where a variety of alterations and improvements are being carried out, will receive a visit there from the Prince of Wales during the last week in November.

For the Truth Hotel List, see page 620 in the present issue.
For Hospitals and Appeals, see page 624.
For Amusements, see page 621.
For Our Puzzles, see page 629.

The Duke and Duchess of Devonshire are to leave Bolton Abbey next Monday on a visit to Lord Crewe, at Fryston Hall, near Pontefract, and on Friday, 11th, they are going to Ireland to spend a month at Lismore Castle, county Waterford, returning to England in time for the Newmarket Second October Meeting. The Prince of Wales is to be a guest at Chatsworth in November, during Derby race week.

Last week the Waterford Standard published the following announcement:—

In answer to many enquiries, Lady Waterford begs that gentlemen attending her Garden Party, Tuesday, September 1, will not think it necessary to wear tall hats unless they care to do so.

Much praise is due to her ladyship for the intimation, and it is to be hoped that the public way in which it has been made will have a good effect upon other hostesses.

The Liberals of the Ripon district, Yorkshire, have sustained a great loss by the death of Mr. Henry Bickersteth, who was a son of the late Bishop of Ripon. Mr. Bickersteth, who was a partner in a large manufactory at Ripon, had served the office of Mayor, and he was very popular in the city and county. Mr. Bickersteth was the local leader of the Liberal party, and he took an active part in the last five Parliamentary elections. He was an excellent public speaker, and a man of great ability.

An inventory of the property of the late Lord Moray has been lodged in the Commissary Office at Edinburgh, from which it appears that the personal estate amounts to £855,347, and the duty payable to the Government is £64,025. The contents of Darnaway Castle, the family place in Morayshire, are valued at £9,867, and £5,269 worth of plate is deposited in the vaults of the Commercial Bank of Scotland at Edinburgh.

Whatever may be the danger to children from "paddling" on the sands recently pointed out by the British Medical Journal, there is a very much more real and serious danger, which parents would do well to be on their guard against. This arises from the carelessness of excursionists and others in leaving broken bottles about on the beach. The danger of this practice was painfully illustrated the other day at Birchington, where a little boy of six, while running about barefooted on the sands, trod upon a broken bottle and inflicted a terrible wound on the sole of his foot. The main artery in the foot was severed, and the bleeding was so profuse that had not the child's father been close at hand, and applied a tourniquet to the leg immediately, the consequences might easily have been fatal. There are very few seaside places, unfortunately, where broken glass is not to be seen lying about on the beach, and it strikes me that in all frequented spots parents would do well to insist on their children wearing shoes of some kind while paddling. I would also suggest that the local authorities might find a job for some of their unemployed, by setting them to pick up empty bottles and all other refuse matter, in the same way as is done in the London parks and open spaces.

Another matter requiring the consideration of the authorities at seaside towns is the provision of boats when bathing is going on. I referred to this matter the other day in connection with the fatal drowning accident at Felixstowe, where bathing ought never to be allowed unless a boat is in attendance. At most of the larger towns this is invariably the rule, but a lady recently gave me a list of nearly half-a-dozen places where bathers are left to look after themselves as best they may. I suppose that at most places a licence is required to place bathing-machines on the beach, and it ought to be made a condition of such a licence that a boatman is always in attendance upon the bathers.

A gentleman living near the Thames Embankment makes a forcible complaint about the screeching of a siren on board a steam launch belonging to the river authorities in the early hours of the morning. The noise is said to be such as to disturb the slumbers of all within reach of it, which means a pretty wide radius. There can be no necessity, unless in very foggy weather, for using a siren at all on the river above London Bridge; and, so far from themselves creating a nuisance of this kind, the river authorities ought to make regulations to prevent all such noises. I do not know whether the Thames Conservancy are the proprietors of the offending launch; but, in any case, the matter is one which deserves their attention.

The Zeeland Steamship Company have taken up with commendable promptitude the statement published in TRUTH of July 30 respecting the delivery of a note from a gentleman passenger to some young girls in a ladies' cabin by one of the ship's stewards, during the voyage from Flushing to Queenborough. The result of the inquiry that has been made practically establishes the accuracy of the allegations, although the steward concerned pleads that he supposed the lady to whom he took the note to be a relative of the gentleman who sent it. The Company now write to me:—

The steward acted imprudently, as he should have refused to bring the note to a ladies' cabin. The rule on our vessels is that only stewardesses are to communicate with the ladies' cabins, and we can assure you that this is a very single case, and the first complaint we ever had of this nature.

I need only add that I hope it will be the last.

What is the reason for the extraordinary variations in the prices charged for the same drug by different druggists? I have recently been compelled, for my sins, to have a prescription made up at three different chemists. The first was the Army and Navy Stores, where the price was 10d. The second was at the seaside, where the price was 1s. 3d. The third was in another country town, where the price was 1s. 9d. There is, therefore, a difference of 50 per cent. between the Stores' price and the seaside price, and a difference of 110 per cent. between the former and the country chemist's price. I doubt whether a similar discrepancy could be found in any other branch of retail trade, and why should it be so in the chemists'?

A BEAUTIFUL HOTEL AT BOURNEMOUTH.—The "ROYAL BATH." "Hôtel de Luxe of the South." Sea frontage, 1,000 ft.; grounds, 5 acres. Due south. Only Hotel on East Cliff. Moderate fixed tariff.

I rejoice to see that Sir George Wombwell spoke out strongly the other day at a horticultural show in Wynyard Park on the cruelty of docking foals. As the utterances of a well-known sportsman like Sir George on a subject of this kind may have more weight than those of a humble London journalist, I quote a local Press report of what he said:—

> Having congratulated the gathering upon the all-round improvement in the show, Sir George Wombwell alluded to the docking of foals, a practice which he characterised as a mistaken and cruel one. He had been told that they did not feel the pain so much as they would do if done when they had grown older, but they must remember, at the same time, that when the animals were turned out to grass they suffered greatly from the loss of their tails, which nature had given them to keep off the flies and insects.

The best authorities now condemn quite as strongly the cropping of dogs' ears, and I hope to see the time when all practices of this kind will be looked upon as relics of a barbarous past.

Apropos of the recent references in TRUTH to the necessity of a railway from Braemar to the south, a correspondent suggests that the Light Railways Act now makes such a scheme easy of accomplishment. I am rather inclined to doubt this, however, in view of the story he goes on to tell of the fate of a movement which was started some ten years ago for the construction of a narrow-gauge railway from Alyth in Perthshire to Braemar. It was a most promising project, and it received the support of many influential people. But the scheme was not approved by an exalted personage, and in deference to the representations which were made to the promoters from that quarter, it was quietly dropped. It is only too probable that any fresh attempt to make a railway to Braemar will encounter the same powerful opposition.

There is no accounting for taste. Last week I made some remarks in deprecation of a custom, said to prevail at Harrogate, of making a collection at the table d'hôte in aid of some local charity. Two or three esteemed readers now express disapproval of my views. One thinks that the majority of people will cheerfully give a shilling in charity on Sunday, and would rather be asked for it than not. Another thinks that the principal Harrogate hospital is such an admirable institution that anybody ought to be glad of a chance of giving something to it, at any time and anywhere. A third thinks that the majority of people are so stingy that the little they give will not hurt them. For myself, I have no desire to obtrude my views upon the public, still less to force them upon others. Speaking solely for myself, I dislike nothing more than the apparition of subscription lists or plates at unexpected moments. If I go to church, I expect a collection. If I go to dine at an hotel, I don't. When I spoke on the subject last week, I was under the impression that the majority of the public would be entirely of my way of thinking. But if the majority of the public like to find the hat or the plate sent round at meal times in the hotel they are staying at, far be it from me to stand in the way of their enjoyment. I confess, however, that were I an hotel-keeper, I should be very careful how much of this form of pleasure I offered to my guests.

A selection of the admirable articles (mostly on literary subjects) which Dean Church contributed to the Guardian and to the Saturday Review, will be published shortly in two volumes by Messrs. Macmillan. The work is to be edited by Mrs. Church, who will have the benefit of the advice of her brother-in-law, Dean Paget.

I said in my haste the other day that it was impossible to believe that there are any unpublished poems of Wordsworth now in existence. From this opinion, however, I have been converted. It will interest all admirers of the poet to learn that the Rev. A. J. G. Curwen, Rector of Kirkby-Thore, Westmoreland, has in his possession a sonnet by Wordsworth, which apparently never has been published. The poem in question was written on the death of Wordsworth's grandson at Rome, the grandson in question being the child of the poet's son and a cousin of Mr. Curwen, the present possessor of the manuscript, whose father's sister married young Wordsworth.

A clergyman at Cradock, Cape Colony, advertises in the local paper that he is prepared to undertake the tuning of pianofortes and to give pianoforte lessons. One of my readers in that part of the world thinks it is somewhat "infra dig." for a parson to do this; but it seems to me that the reverend gentleman is rather to be commended for his departure from the beaten clerical track. He has no cure of souls, and so he gets his living by tuning pianos. Why not? To my mind, it is a pity many of the unemployed clergy at home do not take a leaf out of this colonial cleric's book, and turn their hands to some sort of useful work.

The necessity for the Archbishop of Canterbury's recent circular, warning incumbents of the grave scandal which may be created by the employment in the services of the Church of "unauthorised, irregular, and even criminous ministers," is incidentally enforced by a document which a clergyman left at my office last week. It is not necessary to give the reverend gentleman's name, but I may explain that the document in question purports to set forth the "grievous wrongs" he has suffered at the hands of a certain Welsh Bishop. As a matter of fact, this cleric was deprived of his living some three years ago—the case being one of the first under the Clergy Discipline Act—after he had been repeatedly convicted on charges of drunkenness and disorderly and violent conduct. He now states that for the past two years he has done duty in the dioceses of Exeter and Southwell, and that he has "kept his address unknown to the Bishop of ——," as he has been "upset in four or five instances where he had secured engagements." It is quite certain that nobody acquainted with this reverend gentleman's past record would employ him in the celebration of the offices of the Church, and the fact that he has been so employed for the last two years is a striking proof of the "want of precaution" in engaging ministers to which the Archbishop alludes in his circular.

"HÔTEL BURLINGTON," AT SUNNY BOSCOMBE. (200 rooms.) Every luxury. Delightful grounds. Magnificent golf links. Sea-water baths. Moderate charges.—Bournemouth East Station.

I drew attention last week to the fact that the Bishop of Exeter has permitted the incumbent of the large and important parish of St. Barnabas, Dartmouth, to undertake the charge of the Anglican Church at San Remo, an arrangement which will cause him to be an absentee from his duties in Devonshire for about eight months of the year. The reasonable dissatisfaction of the parishioners has been greatly increased by an intimation that, while the Vicar is away, the parish will be in charge of a Curate who is to be practically an absentee. This ecclesiastic lives at Paignton, and he is to take the Sunday duty at Dartmouth, and will pay occasional visits to the parish which has been confided to his care. It is scandalous in the greatest degree that such a parish should not have a resident clergyman, and Bishop Bickersteth is the only prelate now on the Bench who would permit such slip-slop arrangements in his diocese.

It is full time for the Bishop of Exeter to resign the see and make way for a more energetic prelate, as it has been for some months painfully evident that he has got past his work. Some years ago Bishop Bickersteth expressed his opinion that a parish clergyman should be relieved of his charge at the age of seventy. He could not do better than apply this principle to himself, being now in his seventy-second year. There is no excuse for bishops who persist in clinging pertinaciously to their palaces, stipends, and patronage, as the Act provides every retiring prelate with a most generous pension. The Bishop of Exeter, for example, can resign on £1,400 a year. If the Benefices Bill is again introduced, it will be necessary to add a clause to enforce the resignation of aged and incapable bishops, deans, and residentiary canons.

As the selection of Canon Diggle for the vacant stall in Carlisle Cathedral and the Archdeaconry of Westmoreland was severely criticised in TRUTH the other day, it is only fair to mention that I have received from one of the clergy of the Diocese a warm defence of the appointment—which is entitled to the more weight as the writer is a Radical, and disclaims all personal obligations to the Bishop. The letter is supplemented by another, in which Canon Diggle's merits are very eloquently extolled. That Canon Diggle is a man of great ability and attractive character I do not question, but it has still to be proved that no one could have been found in the Diocese equally qualified for the vacant post. When a patron pitchforks a personal friend or relative into an appointment at the expense of others who have the first claim to consideration, it is always difficult to accept the defence that the favoured candidate has been selected solely upon his merits.

The Rev. Alfred Pontifex, who has resigned the valuable living of Yate, Gloucestershire, in consequence of ill health, was for many years a familiar figure in the cricket-field, and he was one of the best batsmen of his day. Mr. Pontifex has been Vicar of Yate for twenty-seven years, and his resignation is very much regretted by his parishioners.

The important living of Spitalfields, which has become vacant by the resignation of Prebendary Scott, has been offered by Mr. Fowell Buxton to the Rev. V. H. Davies, Curate of St. Jude's, Whitechapel, an able and energetic clergyman of Evangelical views. It is highly satisfactory to find the patron of a living of this importance offering it to a Curate, and other patrons might advantageously follow Mr. Fowell Buxton's good example, notably the various Bishops, who usually reserve their "lean and ill-fed" preferments for the unbeneficed clergy.

Apropos of Curates' grievances, the following story is worthy of notice. Three years ago a Curate took up his duties in a parish in a cathedral town, of which the Vicar was a Canon of the cathedral. In a general way he discharged his duties in a manner which elicited warm expressions of approval from the Vicar, but he found a great lack of organisation in the parish, and some things going on which were nothing short of a scandal, and he set himself to earnestly reform these abuses. He then gradually found that the Vicar took up an antagonistic position, and before long a complaint against him was lodged with the Bishop. The Bishop seems to have taken no notice whatever of this complaint, never even mentioning the subject to the Curate, but he sent for that gentleman, and deliberately forced him into a resignation, as an alternative to the termination of his services at six months' notice, on the sole ground that he did not get on well with his Vicar.

The incident affords a striking illustration of the attitude of Bishops in all differences between Curates and their Vicars. There is no attempt to get at the merits of the case, no indication of sympathy with the Curate in a difficult position, no regard for the loss he suffers in purse and prospects by being compelled to give up his residence and join the ranks of the unemployed. The only consideration which seems to commend itself to the episcopal mind is to make things comfortable for the Vicar and prevent unpleasantness in the parish. The Bishop of Oxford had the effrontery the other day to remark that Curates "show much want of acquaintance with their rights and their position." But it would be far more true to say that the Bishops themselves "show much want of acquaintance" with the rights and position of Curates, and a lamentable lack of proper appreciation of their own duty to support the Curate's rights and improve his position.

St. George's Chapel, Windsor, has been entirely closed for more than a fortnight "for the annual cleaning." Last year this church was shut up for about five weeks. The "annual cleaning" is merely a specious pretext for a holiday for the clergy and officials. Cathedrals are subjected to periodical "cleaning" without the services being suspended in this scandalous manner. If the choir is not available for a few days, let the services be held in the nave, and vice versâ. It is positively monstrous that the clergy of so rich a foundation as St. George's should eagerly seize every chance of shirking their work, which is purely nominal at all times, consisting of only "cathedral duty"—the nearest possible approach to doing nothing at all. The "free chapel" of Windsor rejoices in a Dean, four Canons, and four Minor Canons, whose united stipends exceed £7,000 a year, and the value of their official residences is at least £2,600 a year besides. In addition there is a generously paid organist, and a large and well-remunerated staff of choristers. The fact is that, under the present skimble-skamble régime at Windsor, everything has come to be done in a very slovenly fashion, there being a grievous degeneracy from the days of Dean Wellesley and Sir George Elvey. On Sunday, the 16th, for example, organist and choir were all away, and the services had to be read.

WATER SUPPLY FOR MANSIONS, &c.—Artesian Bored and Driven Tube Wells, Wind Engines for pumping, &c.—State your requirements to ALFRED WILLIAMS & Co., 39, Gt. Eastern-st., London, E.C.

At Sir John Millais' funeral the well-known hymn was sung beginning "The saints of God, their conflict past." This moves some pedantic and sacerdotally-minded nincompoop to write to the Guardian questioning the title of the late Sir J. Millais to be numbered among the saints, and asking whether the late P.R.A. was canonised by the Archdeacon of London, Canon Scott-Holland, the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, or the Royal Academy. This tasteful witticism is accompanied by the remark that while the late Sir John Millais is thus canonised, it is deemed "not quite loyal to Anglicanism to observe August 15 in honour of the Assumption of the Mother of God." The Editor of the Guardian may possibly have published this letter as an awful example of the fantastic puerilities to which Ritualistic logic-chopping leads; but I confess I do not understand how any editor can allow such offensive twaddle to appear in his paper without at the same time indicating his own opinion about it.

Could Father McAuliffe, of Leeds, see some of the remarks made about his begging appeals by those who are not of his religious persuasion, he might entertain a doubt whether the harm done by them is worth the number of pennies they bring in. The worthy Father's literature is of a kind that can only appeal to Roman Catholics—and not to all of them, I should imagine; but it is delivered indiscriminately to Anglicans, Nonconformists, and all other religious denominations, and to these it certainly does not appeal—quite the contrary. After all, the Roman Catholics are still a nominally small sect in this country, and their policy is rather to ingratiate themselves with the Protestant denominations than to give offence. For this reason I wonder that the authorities of the Roman Church do not exercise some restraint upon priests who go a-touting with so little discretion as Father McAuliffe.

I have received the following amounts towards Lady Jeune's Poor London Children's Holiday Fund:—Norah, £1; Pretoria, £5; Corney, Muriel, and Dorrie, £1; H. N., 7s.; L. M. B., £2.

Every requirement for Furnishing tastefully at least expense is amply illustrated in the Galleries and Catalogues of HAMPTON & SONS, Furnishers & Decorators, Pall Mall East, S.W.

The Ashanti "stars," which were given last week by the Duke of Connaught to those soldiers at Aldershot who are entitled to receive them, have been paid for by the Queen, who insisted on thus rewarding those who participated in the bloodless campaign, in order to please Princess Beatrice. The star which Prince Henry of Battenberg would have received was sent by Lord Lansdowne to Osborne, and the Queen has given it to Princess Beatrice, who intends to have it placed in a conspicuous position on the monument which is being erected in Whippingham Church. It is the first time that a decoration has been given after a campaign during which there was no fighting whatever.

The issue of this decoration has raised a fresh crop of growls from India, over the failure of the authorities to grant a medal for service in the expedition to the North Kachin and Kachin Hills in 1893. This is a grievance to which frequent reference has been made in TRUTH, but it is certainly aggravated by the issue of the Ashanti decoration. By comparison with the recent march to Coomassie, the Kachin Expedition was a great war. The operations lasted from October, 1892, to May, 1893, and they were of a most difficult nature, and involved heavy loss of life. Out of the small number of officers engaged, four were killed and one very seriously wounded, while all ranks suffered severely from the unhealthiness of the country, and endured privations of an exceptional kind, quite apart from the heavy losses in the fighting which took place. It is true that several decorations and rewards have been given to officers, but there never was a case in which the services of all ranks more thoroughly deserved recognition, and a medal is the proper way to bestow such recognition.

In connection with this matter, I have been asked by an Indian General whether it is intended to allow the new Royal Victorian Order to be worn by officers in uniform. I cannot answer the question myself, but I should hope that the answer will be in the negative. If it is intended to allow decorations for services in the battle-fields in the Crimea and the Indian Mutiny, or other such military operations, to rank side by side with a medal granted for service in a quasi-menial capacity about the Royal Palaces, the degradation of decorations will be complete. Seeing that soldiers have been forbidden to wear medals awarded for their gallant services in connection with the plague at Hong Kong, consistency certainly requires that no soldier should be allowed to display the insignia of the Royal Victorian Order.

Moreover, the omission to confer any rewards upon the subordinates of the Departmental Corps engaged in the Chitral campaign, to which brief reference was made in last week's TRUTH, appears to be a very ill-advised and unjust proceeding. From all sides I hear testimony to the invaluable services which these men performed, more especially those connected with the Transport service. The Indian Transport has never been put to a more severe strain than in the Chitral Expedition, and by universal confession it stood the test admirably. In point of fact, the chief difficulties of the campaign were difficulties of transport, and by the success with which they were surmounted the Department contributed, perhaps more than any other, to the success of the operations. This was only done by unremitting work and devotion to duty, and to ignore the recommendations for special rewards made by the officer in command is both unjust to individuals and calculated to disgust the whole Department, which would have gained both in spirit and in popularity by a proper recognition of its services. One young N.C.O., who particularly distinguished himself, was specially recommended for a commission, and had the recommendation been acted upon, an excellent effect would have been created.

It is not to be wondered at, however, that the subordinates have been overlooked, when one sees how the officer who actually commanded the Transport service in this campaign has been treated. Major Fitzgerald was mentioned in despatches, specially complimented on the work of his Department, and recommended for a reward, but up to the present moment not a recognition of any kind has he received. Considering that Major Fitzgerald commanded on this occasion fifty officers, eighty warrant and non-commissioned officers, and 40,000 transport animals, and that his force undoubtedly discharged the most important duty with exceptional ability and success; considering, too, the prodigality with which decorations were showered upon every influential individual who managed to secure a trip over the frontier while the operations were in progress, this treatment of an able and successful officer is probably without precedent. Major Fitzgerald has been through five campaigns, in three of which he has been in charge of his Department, and he has been four times mentioned in despatches; but in the whole of his twenty-four years' Indian service, beyond the four medals he has gained, he has never received a reward or recognition in any practical shape. Such is the way the Indian Government treats its trusty servants when they do not possess the backstairs influence by which official favours are controlled.

An officer in a Line regiment has undertaken the somewhat ungracious task of pooh-poohing the claims of the Staff Corps for an acceleration of the present rate of promotion. His strongest argument is that in the Staff Corps promotion can at least be looked for with certainty at a given time, whereas in the British Army the prospects of an officer when he first joins are simply incalculable; he even reckons that the chances against a subaltern, when he joins, ever obtaining the command of his regiment are about three to one. As pointed out in TRUTH last week, the prospects, both in the Indian and British Services, as regards lieutenant-colonelcies, are, in point of time, as nearly as possible the same, and the grievance of the Staff Corps applies to the periods at which the earlier steps of promotion are obtained. It is certain, at any rate, from the figures I gave, that the British officers at present serving in India have on the average obtained these steps much more quickly than their comrades of the Staff Corps, and the only way in which it is possible to look at the merits of the case is by calculating the averages. A man here and there in the British Service may be worse off than any one in the Staff Corps, but the majority are clearly in a better position.

The same critic asks whether, if matters were the other way about, the Staff Corps men would accept the argument that their periods of promotion ought to be lengthened, in order to place them on the same footing as the Home Service. It seems to me sufficient to discuss what is, without considering what might be in some imaginary state of things. But if I were really compelled to answer the question, I should say that, looking at the disadvantages of the Indian, as compared with the British Service, if the Staff Corps had the advantage in rate of promotion, no one ought to grudge it them.

I have also been asked whether the calculation of the average periods of service for each step in the British Army took into account cavalry as well as infantry battalions. The figures, as I stated, were originally given by the Civil and Military Gazette of Lahore. Those for the Home Army were there stated to be taken from the records of "fifty-two British battalions" serving in India at the time. This I should understand to mean infantry. If cavalry were taken into account, the figures would undoubtedly be misleading, promotion in the cavalry being notoriously quicker. But until the contrary is shown, I think the presumption must be that infantry only were taken into account.

When I heard a few months ago of the formation of the Army Ordnance Department, I shuddered. Only too well I knew that it would not be long before I should begin to hear of the injustices done and the anomalies created by the Warrant establishing the new Department. These anticipations have been more than realised during the last week or two, by communications respecting the extraordinary position in which the senior officers of the old Ordnance Store Department are placed by the latest reorganisation. Under the pre-existing state of things, which was created by the warrant of 1880, it was a serious grievance that old officers were serving at lower rates of pay than their juniors in rank who had come in later on, e.g.—a Major might be drawing 18s. a day with a captain under him drawing £1 a day. Instead of correcting this anomaly, the new warrant has aggravated the evil, and we now have a state of things in which a subaltern of only four years' standing may be drawing £1. 2s. 6d. a day, and serving under a Major of twenty years' service who only draws 18s.

There are at present in the Department seven Lieut.-Colonels receiving 24s per diem, seven Majors receiving 18s. a day; while, on the other hand, there are eight regimental Majors drawing 25s. a day, with a prospect of rising to 30s. on promotion to the rank of Lieut.-Colonel.

SAVOY HOTEL, Savoy Restaurant, London. Large reception-rooms for fashionable réunions. Orchestra plays daily during dinner and opera supper.

Again, there are four R.A. Lieutenants, with only two years' service as such, receiving 4s. 6d. per diem more than the old Majors, and only 1s. 6d. per diem less than Lieut.-Colonels who have served a quarter of a century. I am not unmindful of the parable of the labourers in the vineyard, who each agreed for his penny, whether at the first hour or the eleventh. But the labourers in the parable were all of the same rank, and I question whether their case has any direct analogy with that of officers in the British Army. There is a strong feeling among the old officers that this state of things has been created in the hope that they will resign, and this seems a plausible explanation of it. But if it is seriously desired to get rid of the older men, they ought to have been offered an opportunity of resigning on the same terms as if they had completed their service, or to have received "compensation for disturbance" in some form. To try and get rid of a man for your own convenience by goading him into "voluntary" retirement is neither decent nor honest.

When Surgeon-Major-General Taylor was promoted to that rank from that of Surgeon-Colonel, an official notification was subsequently issued that he would remain supernumerary until the time when his promotion from Surgeon-Colonel would have come in the usual course. Considerable anxiety is being felt in the Army Medical Staff as to whether the same course is to be taken in the case of Surgeon-Lieutenant-Colonel Wolseley, who was lately promoted to that rank over the heads of no less than ninety brother officers. Of course, the proper arrangement, as one of my Army medical friends points out, is that all such promotions should be designated as "brevet," and distinguished in the Army List as such. But it may be considered at headquarters that rules of this kind must not be insisted upon too rigidly in the case of an officer whose name is Wolseley.

In reference to the case of the quartermaster-sergeant at Hamilton who keeps, or helps to keep, a stationer's shop, one of my military readers call my attention to Sect. vii. para. 203 of the Queen's Regulations. I looked at this paragraph in my original search for information on the subject, and came to the conclusion that it has no application to the case. It merely provides that private work may be executed by men who know trades, provided (1) that they have the approval of their Commanding Officers, and (2) that the work is done in barracks. The second condition clearly is not fulfilled in the Hamilton case. But apart from this, I imagine that a lawyer would say that the paragraph has no bearing on the facts. It occurs among a group of regulations dealing with "regimental workshops and the employment of soldiers in trades," all of which clearly have reference to the subject of teaching soldiers useful handicrafts, or enabling them to practise any which they happen to possess when they join. This is a very different matter from an N.C.O. keeping a shop in the garrison town where he is stationed.

PRINCE OF WALES HOTEL, HARROGATE.—Finest position, facing the Stray. Redecorated and sumptuously refurnished. New management. Excellent stabling. Electric light throughout.

There is another very similar case to the Hamilton one at Birr, reference to which was made in TRUTH some months ago. In this instance a stationer's shop is run, or partly run, by a warrant officer. I trust that both of these cases will now be looked into by the officers commanding these two districts. If any one is to blame in the matter, a share of the blame certainly falls upon the C.O.'s at the two depots, who, if they have not actually known what has been going on, ought to have done so long ago.

A monstrously severe sentence has just been passed by a court-martial at York upon Colour-Sergeant Young of the 4th Battalion West Yorkshire Regiment, he having been reduced to sergeant for an error to the extent of 2s. 6d. in the pay and mess book. The prisoner had really been tried on five charges, including one of fraud, and one of making a false statement in a return. On four of the charges he was acquitted, and it would really seem that the court, not seeing its way to convict him on any other count, resolved to compress the punishment for the whole series into the sentence for the one little trumpery offence established. Even this offence, if one may trust the local reports, was not really proved.

In answer to the question in TRUTH about the practice of keeping prisoners standing during courts-martial, one of my military readers calls my attention to the following paragraph in the "Manual of Military Law" (chap. 5, par. 43:—

> A prisoner is allowed a seat as a matter of course if he is an officer, and in any other case where the court think proper.

"It is not usual," writes my informant, "to supply a seat for the prisoner; I suppose because the trials as a rule only occupy a very short time." The cases, however, which have been referred to in TRUTH were trials lasting over two or three days, and where this happens it certainly seems desirable that prisoners should be allowed to sit down. Probably, if he knew of the above rule on the subject, the prisoner would ask for a seat, and would be allowed it without question.

The unsatisfactory wording of the Regulations in regard to the marriage of soldiers is conspicuously shown by the present state of things in the Army Service Corps. According to an official list recently issued, some fifty-five sergeants and rank-and-file of the Corps are at present awaiting permission to marry, the two senior men having been on the list since 1893. Of these men, nominally awaiting permission, a large number have, of course, already taken French leave, and married without waiting. A very serious grievance is thus created, because any man who desires to comply with the spirit of the Regulations by obtaining permission before he marries, is placed at the bottom of the list, and must wait for the completion of his matrimonial bliss until every man before him is placed on the married strength. Surely "TRUTH" will be sent weekly to any address in the United Kingdom for 7s. for 3 months; 14s. for 6 months; or 28s. for 12 months. The subscription for all Countries included in the Postal Union is, 3 months, 7s. 8d.; 6 months, 15s. 4d.; 12 months, £1 10s. 8d. All subscriptions are payable in advance, and cheques and P.O.O.'s should be made payable to the MANAGER, "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-street, S.W.

this is utterly wrong. If a man is told that he must obtain his C.O.'s leave before getting married, applies for leave accordingly, and loyally waits until he gets it, he certainly ought to be considered before a man who has taken leave first and asked for it afterwards.

As I have said more than once before, it seems to me that marriage in the Army ought to be either allowed or forbidden. As I understand the present arrangement, every Commanding Officer is expected to use what moral persuasion he can to prevent men marrying improvidently; but it ends at moral persuasion. If the C.O. is either lacking in persuasiveness, or does not care whether his men are improvident or not, they may all marry at their own sweet wills. The only difference between marrying with leave and marrying without leave, is that in the former case Mrs. Atkins is officially recognised by the War Office, and some sort of provision is made for her comfort and for that of her children, while in the latter case, the military authorities do not know her, though they will allow her husband to occasionally pass a night in her society if he behaves himself properly.

I suppose that this arrangement works all right from the War Office point of view, but it seems to me that if the desirability of discouraging matrimony in the Army is recognised, as it is, it would be far better to absolutely forbid marriage without leave, and only grant leave to men of proved good character, who have decided to extend their Army engagements and make the Service more or less a permanent profession. There can be no question that a young man under five-and-twenty, earning only about eightpence a day net, serving on a limited engagement, and with no certain prospect in life before him, ought to be discouraged from getting married by every means available.

Below I give a further instalment of my Military Pillory. The little matter from Devonport at the head of the list seems to call specially for attention, as it is not only contrary to the principles of good government that horses belonging to the State should be driven by officers in dog-carts and ridden by their lady friends, but such proceedings are highly calculated to demoralise the lower ranks of the force. The item from Fort William is only one out of a large budget of growls from the same battalion, the explanation of which will very probably be found in the fact that the Colonel has been away on leave, and that his understudy has not filled the gap by any means to the satisfaction of the critics:—

Army Service Corps, Devonport.—A boy trumpeter belonging to a Company A.S.C. at this station was the other day punished with twenty-one days' C.B. for neglecting to clean a horse. The horse, it is stated, had been used in a dog-cart by an officer for his private purposes, and it is also stated that the same officer has been for some time in the habit of so driving it. Another horse belonging to the company is also said to have been used by a lady friend of the same officer. If these allegations are correct, they seem to call for much more severe notice than the failure of a boy to clean a horse after an officer had improperly used it.

Upper Chatham Barracks. — The men of a detachment of Royal Artillery quartered here complain that the officer commanding them refuses to sanction the supply of vegetables and other provisions through a canteen, they having requested to be allowed to do so owing to the dearness and inferiority of the supplies they are at present obtaining. If they cannot get their provisions through a canteen, the men would wish to change tradesmen; but this also is refused. Surely it is better in a case like this to let the men deal where they please. To have a canteen is, of course, the best arrangement where practicable.

1st Shropshire Light Infantry, Fort William.—The men of this battalion have lately been exercised regularly for two days a week on the Maidan from 6.30 to 8 a.m. without having previously had any food. Many of the men have suffered considerably in consequence, and a good many of them have got into trouble for not comporting themselves in proper military style, when the truth of the matter was that they were half faint from hunger and exhaustion. Unless I am mistaken, there are definite regulations in India respecting the drilling of troops before breakfast, and some inquiry seems to be desirable as to why the regulations are not complied with in this case.

2nd Royal Irish Rifles, Poonah.—This battalion is at present quartered in bungalows which were condemned many years ago, and seem only to be fit for habitation in dry weather. During the heavy rains a few weeks ago, water was dripping incessantly through the roofs, wetting the men's bedding, and keeping their arms and accoutrements in continual need of cleaning. Matters are made worse by the men coming in wet and hanging their clothes up to dry, and by the charcoal supply being insufficient to keep the fires going. The place has been in a condition during the bad weather which must be injurious to health as well as destructive to all comfort.

2nd Middlesex Regiment, Purandhar.—A complaint is made by the men of this battalion that, although the European mail usually arrives on Monday morning, the newspapers coming by it are not placed in the library until Wednesday, or more often Thursday. When they do arrive, they bear traces of having been already read by somebody. In a recent case a man who was reading a paper on a Thursday morning received a message to the effect that the sergeant-major wanted it, and the messenger went off with the paper accordingly. I would suggest that some definite rule should be made requiring the papers to be placed in the library immediately on their arrival, and it might be well if the rule contained a clause forbidding their removal when once placed there, whether for the convenience of the sergeant-major or anybody else.

4th Battalion Durham Light Infantry, Newcastle-on-Tyne.—A Garrison Order, recently issued, notifies that "Quartermaster-Sergeant J. H. Holloway, D.L.I., having been promoted sergeant-major of the 4th Durham Light Infantry, will be addressed as a warrant officer by all N.C.O.s and men in the garrison." The Queen's Regulations clearly lay down that a militia sergeant-major ranks as a non-commissioned officer, and it would be interesting to know what authority there is for conferring upon such an N.C.O. the status of a warrant officer in regard to his brother N.C.O.s in the garrison. At Newcastle there are quartermaster-sergeants of the Northumberland Fusiliers, the Royal Engineers, the Army Service Corps, and the Army Pay Corps, as well as of the Durham Light Infantry, and to compel all these men to pay homage to one who is virtually of their own rank is naturally productive of considerable dissatisfaction.

Alexandria.—A few weeks back the spectacle was witnessed here of two sergeants of the Royal Engineers being hauled out of an inn in the Grand Square and marched through the streets by a lance-corporal of the Military Foot Police, preparatory to being confined in the guard-room for the night. These two men were on leave at the time, and had just returned from a picnic in the Khedivial Gardens, which had been held in consequence of the G.O.C. having given all the troops a holiday, it being the day of the August Bank Holiday in England. The men were perfectly sober, and the only offence they seem to have committed is that the part of the town where they had gone to get a glass of beer had been placed out of bounds, on sanitary grounds, to the extent that the men are not to enter houses there, although at liberty to pass through the streets. The incident seems to have created some indignation among the Royal Engineers at Alexandria, and it certainly does not seem calculated to increase the dignity of the British Army in the eyes of foreigners when two sergeants are marched through the streets in this way for such a trumpery irregularity.

Royal Fusiliers, Belfast.—A few nights ago the orderly-room windows at Victoria Barracks were broken during the night, and two men of the company quartered nearest to the building were made prisoners for the offence. Notwithstanding this, the whole of the same company was confined to barracks on the following Sunday, and this was followed by ordering them to form a night guard, by way of punishment. This is another flagrant instance of the practice of dealing out indiscriminate punishment both to innocent and guilty, which never had any good effect upon the discipline of a regiment yet, and never will.

Ferozipore.—In the fort at this place there are stationed about 100 artillery and 200 infantry. Although they are five miles from the nearest hospital, there is only one apothecary to look after the medical requirements of the garrison. This apothecary is occasionally absent, as he has a perfect right to be, and in his absence it may easily happen that a serious emergency may arise. In one instance the emergency took the shape of a man dying from sunstroke without medical aid. The apothecary is not to blame for this, but the higher military authorities certainly are.

It is only within the last few days that I have found an opportunity of reading the full report of the Select Committee on the Royal Patriotic Fund. Now that I have done so, the result has been to more than confirm the unfavourable impression of the document that I derived from the newspaper summaries. Anything more feeble, unsatisfactory, and disappointing than this Report could hardly have been produced. It is true the Committee recommend a few changes, such as that the Commissioners shall bring themselves into closer touch with the administrators of the Greenwich, War Office, and outside funds; that a Consultation Council shall be formed among the representatives of these funds; that local Committees shall be established in military centres and naval ports, to advise the Council as to the best manner in which relief may be advantageously given, and that the appointment of Commissioners shall be in future for a term of five years, "with power of renewal." But the Committee seem to have entirely failed to appreciate the most important points of all—namely, that there should be such radical reforms in the constitution and methods of the Commissioners as will make it certain that, for the future, the vast funds in their hands shall be administered with less hide-bound red-tapeism and more human sympathy; and, above all, that sums raised by the bounty of the public for a specific purpose shall be promptly, generously, and in the end exhaustively devoted to the benefit of the persons for whom the money is subscribed. The inexcusable delay which took place before the Commissioners began the distribution of the Victoria Fund, and then the shameful stinginess with which they doled out relief, are apparent even in the Committee's softened version of the facts; but nothing is said in condemnation of the course pursued on that occasion, and nothing is proposed which is at all likely to prevent a repetition of the same scandal at the first opportunity.

Hitherto the main object of the Commissioners has appeared to be to hoard up money and show handsome surpluses. For instance, since the administration of the Soldiers' Effects Fund was entrusted to the Commissioners the fund has grown from £44,000 to £135,000, and it is being continuously augmented by further sums arising from soldiers' unclaimed effects; but nevertheless not a fourth of the annual income is expended. The object of this fund was the relief of widows, children, or other dependent relatives of soldiers dying on service or within six months of discharge, and the Royal Warrant mentions three classes of cases to which preferential consideration should be given. The Commissioners affirm that it would be impossible to relieve "all cases" coming under two of these classes, and so they have relieved none at all, but allowed the fund to accumulate—a state of things which they seem to consider "highly satisfactory." In the draft report which Mr. Kearley prepared, he dealt with this and similar cases, and as to the general policy of the Commissioners he very truly remarked that nothing could discourage public benevolence more than the knowledge that existing funds are held back on the pretence of providing for "some remote and indefinite contingency which has not arisen, and which, when it does arise, the nation will assuredly be ready to meet." But the majority of the Select Committee were bent upon whitewashing the Commissioners, so far as that operation was possible, and accordingly Mr. Kearley's admirable report and all the most valuable reforms that he proposed were rejected. However, the thing is done now, and while regretting the line the Committee have taken, one can only hope that the Commissioners will nevertheless profit by the criticisms to which they have been subjected, and dispense their charities more in accordance with the wishes of the donors. One thing is certain. If the errors of the past are repeated, the public will insist that in future small funds as that, which was raised at the time of the Victoria disaster, shall not be handed over to the Patriotic Commissioners.

The Westminster Gazette has been investigating the statements in last week's TRUTH respecting the treatment of soldiers at the Chandos Buffet, and has given its readers the other side of the case. The other side of the case seems to me very washy. The manager of the Chandos says, in effect, that he does not want soldiers on his premises, owing to their frequently objectionable conduct. Many are perfectly quiet and orderly, but others "swagger in as if the place belongs to them, put their feet on the tables, and spend their time chaffing the barmaids, and sometimes they have to be forcibly ejected altogether." So the proprietor (if I understand the argument aright) subjects them to a tariff which he hopes will be prohibitive. He told the Westminster that he restricts them "to the saloon bar, where higher prices are charged;" but there must be some mistake here, for in the case to which I alluded the soldiers and the civilians were in the same bar—whether the saloon bar or not, does not matter—and a special charge was levied on the soldiers at this bar.

The weak point of all this is that if a soldier misbehaves himself in a public-house, the publican has a far simpler and more effectual means of dealing with him than he has with any civilian. By making a complaint to the officer commanding the regiment, he may be pretty sure of preventing any repetition of the conduct objected to. As to the chaffing of the barmaids, if soldiers are specially addicted to that amusement, the proprietor of the Chandos would do well to consider whether his barmaids may not have, on their side, a special weakness for chaffing soldiers. He will not say, I hope, that he possesses no influence over his barmaids. I have had a good many communications on this subject from people who know this establishment—civilians, all of them—and one of them remarks that, instead of keeping out soldiers for the benefit of the rest of his customers, the proprietor would do better to put some check on "the empty-headed young fools in evening dress who swagger in and make themselves objectionable to every one by their idiotic behaviour." This class of customers, of course, never chaff the barmaids.

Boot and Shoe Makers.—Major Howe & Co., 16, Coventry-street, W.; 60, Strand, W.; 13, Queen Victoria-street, City; 81, Gracechurch-street, City. (Klenrusha Polish.)

By the last Indian mail I have been overwhelmed with correspondence provoked by a recent answer in the House of Commons, in which it was officially stated that there is no desire in India for the speed of the mail boats to be accelerated. One Anglo-Indian, who writes very strongly on the present state of things, has been working out the speed of four mail boats between Bombay and Perim during July. In the first case the speed averaged ten knots an hour; in the second, nine knots; in the third, under nine knots; while in the fourth it was close upon thirteen knots. In the last case the vessel was the fastest in the P. & O. fleet, and, as compared with the slowest, there is a difference of about two and a half days between Bombay and Perim. For anybody, even a wise and eminent Front Bench personage, to get up and state that passengers between England and India are indifferent to such a saving of time as this is an insult to the common sense of the House of Commons.

An anonymous correspondent writes to suggest to me that in my comments upon the case of the boy Kavanagh, of H.M.S. Blenheim, my "kind heart has rather bolted with me," and that a year's hard labour may give the boy a chance of reformation. Kind heart, my dear sir! It is not kindness of heart that makes me angry when I have to do with fools. Much more to the point is a communication from another reader of TRUTH, who asks what effect sentences of this kind are likely to have upon the supply of recruits for the Navy—none too numerous already, by all accounts.

In connection with the same matter I have been reminded of a "rule of mercy" which prevailed in the old days of flogging in the Army. By virtue of this, any mutinous or abusive words used by a soldier while expiating his offence on the triangle were overlooked. The victim was allowed to have his swear, I take it, as a sort of comfort to him in his sufferings. It is suggested that this principle ought to have been extended to young Kavanagh. It would be rather straining the "rule of mercy," I fear, to contend that a boy sentenced to a whipping ought to be allowed to relieve his feelings by punching his commanding officer's head. Without, however, going so far as that, it is a legitimate view of the case that Kavanagh's offence was committed in a moment of exasperation, and that this should have been taken into account on the side of mercy. But there is no trace of reason, sense, or discretion in his punishment, let alone mercy. It is a mere exhibition of blind and vindictive ferocity.

Since referring to the matter in last week's TRUTH, I have heard from Mr. W. R. Smith, the Assistant Secretary, that the National Lifeboat Institution have inquired fully into the allegations respecting the conduct of some of the Castletown lifeboat crew, on the occasion of their recently rescuing a man from drowning. The result is very much what I had stated last week, before the receipt of Mr. Smith's letter, and it does not seem necessary, therefore, to go over the facts again. I gather, however, from Mr. Smith's letter, that the only man of the Castletown lifeboat crew concerned in the affair at all was the coxswain, who used his own boat, so that the local scribes who spoke as if the whole lifeboat crew had gone to the rescue were singularly ill-informed.

I have often pointed out the hardship wantonly inflicted upon the officers and men of the Channel Squadron by keeping them at a foreign port during the Christmas holidays, and I am therefore pleased to hear that the Admiralty authorities have decided that the Squadron is to return from a cruise along the coast of Spain in ample time to give Christmas leave. It may be hoped that the inconvenient practice of granting leave from Portland will be altered this year, and that each ship will be allowed to return to her own port.

Nearly two months back (July 9) I noticed in TRUTH a curious communication received from Signor A. Radice, of Naples, who, without knowing anything of the facts, took upon himself to question the accuracy of certain information previously published in TRUTH respecting the doings of his son, the British Political Agent in Tipperah. In that letter Signor Radice informed me that he had written to his son to get his version of the facts. I have not yet heard the result of Signor Radice's communication with his son, but I see from a local Indian paper that young Mr. Radice has been warned by the Government to desist from the practice of which complaint was made; while my original informant, whose position entitles him to every credit, has written to say that all his statements are true. As there seems to be no doubt as to the official intimation to Mr. Radice, I take it that there can be no doubt whatever that the matter is as I originally stated.

There seems to be much the same difficulty in getting money out of the Post Office for prepaid telegraph replies which have not been used as there is in getting overpaid income-tax out of the Inland Revenue Department. I hear of two recent cases in which applications for a refund of 6d. have been ineffectual. In one the applicant has been waiting for his money some months, in the other since July 20, although in both cases the receipt of the application has been formally acknowledged. It would be interesting to know in the event of the applicant getting disgusted at the delay and letting the matter drop, who pockets the money.

If a man were to write to me on a matter of business and enclose postage stamps for a reply, and I were to send him a reply without stamping the envelope, what would he, or any one else, think of this proceeding? In point of law, I should imagine that the correspondent would have a right to sue me for a return of the postage stamps which I had not used, if not for damages in respect of the amount which he had been surcharged on the unpaid letter. Though few private individuals would treat a correspondent in this way, such a course has been actually adopted by the War Department of the United States Government in answering a London firm who wrote to them on a matter of business. It is impossible, of course, to forward postage stamps for reply in writing to a foreign country, but the London firm did the next best thing, by enclosing English postage stamps for an equivalent amount; and if the United States Government were not disposed to pay the cost of their answer, they ought at least to have returned these postage stamps with the letter. This they have actually failed to do on two occasions, the firm having to pay 10d. each time for their communications from the United States Government. The firm in question state that they are in constant communication with Governments of different countries, and that they have never before found one which treated them in this manner. The Italian Government was so polite as to return the stamps forwarded, while stamping its reply with its own stamps.

An interesting correspondence on the subject of the duty of the Post Office in respect to lottery circulars recently passed between the Duke of Norfolk and the Protestant Alliance. It may be remembered that when Mr. Arnold Morley was Postmaster-General, he stated in the House of Commons that he had given instructions that all such circulars, when received from foreign countries in open envelopes, should be returned—an instruction, by the way, from which I have noticed no practical result, unless it is to be seen in the fact that so many circulars of foreign lottery agents are now posted in London. The Protestant Alliance called the attention of the Duke of Norfolk to the advertisements of Irish lotteries, and suggested that the instructions of the last Postmaster-General with respect to foreign circulars should be extended to all documents of a like nature. Other letters elicited that the Postmaster-General was in communication with the Home Secretary and the Chief Secretary for Ireland on the subject, and after three or four months' correspondence, an answer was sent to the effect that the regulations laid down by the last Postmaster-General "continue to be enforced, and that his Grace does not propose to take any further steps in the matter."

The Protestant Alliance then pointed out that, while the distribution by the Post Office of the advertisements of foreign lotteries involved nothing contrary to the laws of the country, in distributing those connected with lotteries promoted at home the Post Office were assisting in the perpetration of a gross breach of the law. This poser the Postmaster-General seems to have thought it best not to attempt to answer; and, though the Alliance returned to the charge several times, they only received curt official acknowledgments of their letters, ending with an expression of regret that the Postmaster-General was unable to add anything to his previous answer.

This correspondence shows very strongly the utterly illogical and indefensible position in which the Post Office has placed itself. The truth is clear, as has been repeatedly pointed out in these columns, that while the Government will prosecute anybody who promotes a lottery in England, the same Government has not the slightest objection to taking money, through the Post Office, for assisting the working of lotteries in Ireland. Is this what they call the "Legislative Union"?

Enniscorthy appears to be peculiarly unfortunate in its local governing bodies. I have more than once had occasion to refer to the eccentricities of the Board of Guardians and the Town Commissioners, and now there comes an account of some curious proceedings on the part of the Select Vestry of St. Mary's. This Vestry has the care of the Cemetery at Moyne, and until recently the fees for interments were £1 for each grave space, with 10s. for the gravedigger. The Vestry is also entrusted with the administration of a Poor Relief Fund in connection with the Church, out of which fifteen recipients have been receiving until recently the small monthly dole of 4s. each. The cemetery accounts show a substantial balance in hand; the poor fund is unable to pay its way. In these circumstances the Vestry has taken the singular course of increasing the cemetery burial fee by 10s., on the ground that this will be required for keeping the graves in order in years to come; and, at the same time, the monthly dole to the poor has been reduced to 3s. each. It might have been expected that the first object of the Vestry would be to put the poor fund in a better position; but apparently they are less concerned about keeping people from starvation while they live than about keeping their graves in order when they are dead.

I am glad to hear from the Town Clerk of Totnes that there is no foundation for the allegations respecting the condition of that town which have been appearing in a local paper, and which were noticed in last week's TRUTH. The Town Clerk writes:—

> The drainage, instead of being scandalously defective and officially condemned by the Local Government Board, has been carried out in accordance with the plans of the Local Government Board.
>
> There are no open drains whatever in the streets, and the houses are connected with the main drainage system.
>
> The only works required to be carried out are the outfall works, and the delay with respect to them does not rest with the Town Council, as the plans have been before the Local Government Board for some time, and have been inquired into by three Inspectors, and the Council are waiting the approval of them, when they are quite ready to carry out that work as well . . . .

This ought to be sufficient for visitors to and residents in Totnes; but if, as I assume to be the case, the last sentence refers to the outfall into the Dart, it is to be hoped that the Local Government Board will apply a little oil to its official machinery, and get these plans passed without further delay. I note that the Town Clerk of Totnes does not traverse the allegation as to the pollution of the river, and that is a serious matter for all the dwellers between Totnes and Dartmouth, if not for Totnes itself. The great feature of the Dart at low water is its magnificent stretches of mud-bank, and a mud-bank partially composed of deposits from sewers is one of the most pestilential abominations under the sun.

With reference to a paragraph in last week's TRUTH commenting on the fact that according to the report of the Lunacy Commissioners the increase in lunacy appears to be confined to the pauper class, my attention has been called to the explanation of this increase which is given in a memorandum on the subject by Sir Robert Edgcumbe. He points out that the county asylums have been filled up to a large degree with imbeciles and idiots as distinguished from lunatics or mad persons, in consequence of a grant of 4s. per week having been allowed since 1874 to Boards of Guardians for each pauper sent to an asylum. The suggestions in Sir Robert Edgcumbe's memorandum that harmless idiots and imbeciles should not be admitted to the asylums, but be otherwise provided for, and that the 4s. grant should be payable to the Unions for all such paupers, whether they are maintained in the workhouse or not, seem to be well worthy of consideration.

It is not absolutely correct, I find, to say that Sir Robert Edgcumbe has refused to pay the fine due from him in consequence of his having resigned the office of Alderman of Dorchester, and I am glad to have an opportunity of making the exact facts known. It seems that in some recent cases where councillors have left the borough and vacated their seats by non-residence, and incurred the fine of £25, the Town Council has made no attempt to enforce payment. The amount of the fine is only fixed by a local by-law, which the Town Council have power to amend at any time; and, partly with a view to getting this absurd anomaly reformed, Sir Robert Edgcumbe offered to resign, on condition that the Town Council would reduce the fine to some reasonable amount. The Town Council have declined to do this, and Sir Robert has, accordingly, not resigned. In this I think there can be no question that he is perfectly right, or that the Town Council are perfectly wrong, seeing that they have allowed their by-law to become a dead letter in other cases. No doubt there is some personal feeling at the bottom of the matter, and that is why the Town Council refuse to meet Sir Robert Edgcumbe's perfectly reasonable suggestion.

The Bournemouth Justices refused the other day to sanction the sale of alcoholic refreshment in the local theatre; but in consequence of the storm they drew down on themselves in the local and London Press, they reconsidered their decision, and granted a full licence. All's well that ends well; but the incident is interesting as illustrating the narrow-minded and cranky views which prevail among the rulers of Bournemouth, and are the curse of the place. Under ordinary circumstances the holder of a theatre licence has a right to sell intoxicants, but it seems that at Bournemouth the Licensing Justices have only licensed the theatre on the personal undertaking of the lessee that no intoxicants should be sold. This was the arrangement which the Justices attempted to renew the other day, but which they have now abandoned in deference to public opinion. It is obviously an attempt to get round the general provisions of the law, and to substitute for it a special arrangement which seems good to the little local jacks-in-office. And for what purpose? Simply to satisfy the most irrational prejudices. No one goes to a theatre for the purpose of getting drunk, and there is far less objection to the sale of intoxicants there than at an ordinary drinking-bar. At the same time, to stop the sale in the theatre does not prevent the audience drinking, but merely drives those who are not satisfied with temperance beverages to take refuge between the acts in the neighbouring public-houses.

Licensing business always gives the amateur magistracy a grand opportunity of displaying their ignorance, incompetence, and general unfitness for their duties, and it was utilised to the fullest extent at Caerphilly Brewster Sessions last week. There were two applications for new licences, and each was strongly opposed, or, rather, would have been opposed, if the Caerphilly Bench had condescended to go through the usual form of listening to both sides of a case. What actually happened was that their worships, after impatiently cutting short the evidence for the applicants, absolutely refused to hear a word from the counsel, solicitors, and witnesses for the opposition, and amid a chorus of protests insisted upon retiring to their private room. On their return into Court the chairman announced that they had decided to grant one new licence, adding that they were sorry they could not grant the two. This decision, it afterwards transpired, was carried by the casting vote of the chairman.

The Justices were guilty of two flagrant irregularities, either of which would be in itself sufficient to invalidate the proceedings. In the first place, they had no right to refuse to hear the evidence tendered for the opposition, and in the second place the Chairman's action in giving a double or casting vote was contrary to the law, which on this point is as plain as a pikestaff; the proper course, where the magistrates are equally divided, being to adjourn the application. It will not be necessary, however, to carry the matter before a Divisional Court of the Queen's Bench. For some unexplained reason the Clerk to the Justices was not present, it seems, when they arrived at their decision, but after the Sessions were over he learned what had taken place, and immediately issued a circular informing the magistrates that the Chairman possessed no casting vote, and that in consequence the licence would not be issued. The Clerk says nothing as to the refusal to hear the parties opposing the licence, but two of the magistrates have unburdened their minds on this aspect of the case in the South Wales Daily News, and they take up the high judicial position that it would have been "a waste of time" to listen to arguments and evidence, as they knew all the facts! I fear advice or criticism would be thrown away on the Caerphilly Justices; what is wanted is that the Lord Chancellor should remove the whole lot of these woodenheads from the Commission of the Peace.

Apart from the gross blunders mentioned above, another point calls for notice. The Chairman of the Caerphilly Bench, on the occasion of the Brewster Sessions, was Dr. Franklen G. Evans, a gentleman who is said to very rarely attend the Court. The junior counsel for one of the two applicants for new licences was Dr. Evans' son, and it was in favour of granting the particular licence, in support of which his son appeared, that Dr. Evans gave the illegal casting vote. Of course the

W. & F. Thorn's Speciality.—Job Carriages.—This is by far the best and cheapest way to keep an establishment, saving all trouble, annoyance, and expense. Carriages kept like new for small annual payments.—19, Gt. Portland-street, W. Ranelagh House, Lower Grosvenor-place, S.W. London only.

Chairman was not in any way influenced by the fact that his son was briefed on behalf of the applicant for whom he voted; it was a mere coincidence. But unfortunately such incidents produce a most undesirable impression on the minds of a suspicious and censorious public, and it is a great pity that judges and magistrates ever allow their sons to practise before them. In South Wales this seems to be an especially frequent source of scandal.

Another illustration of the spirit in which magistrates approach the consideration of licensing questions was given at Wakefield Brewster Sessions, where it was discovered that in two instances memorials in favour of applications for licences had actually been signed by gentlemen sitting upon the bench and adjudicating upon those applications. A solicitor subsequently protested against such "a parody of justice," and the chairman admitted that the conduct of the magistrates concerned was "very irregular," and said he hoped such a thing would not occur again. But of course it will so long as the administration of the law is entrusted, as it is now, to men who are often destitute of the most elementary qualifications for the proper performance of judicial duties.

In this connection I may mention a complaint I have received from another town, where the Chairman of the Licensing Bench is a corn merchant who does a big business with the local brewers in the sale of barley. I agree with my correspondent that it is difficult to regard this individual as an impartial and disinterested judge in matters where the interests of "the trade" are at stake; but then, on the other hand, it is not uncommon to hear complaints from other places that magistrates who are total abstainers are equally apt to import their prejudices against "the trade" into the discharge of their judicial functions. The only remedy for all this is the disestablishment of the Great Unpaid.

There is undoubtedly great weight in the transatlantic admonition to "keep on pegging away." The Rev. Mr. Jenkins, who has recently been monopolising the services of the London magistrates in his crusade against the omnibus and the tram-car, scores heavily at last. After numerous drawn battles on the question of producing tickets during transit, the reverend gentleman conceived the happy idea of disputing the right of the proprietors to intercept the light by letting out the windows of their vehicles for advertising purposes. The result of this inspiration was a complete triumph for the cleric at the expense of the companies, and an order has been promulgated prohibiting the exhibition of advertisements in public conveyances, unless the sanction of the Chief Commissioner of Police has been previously obtained. All will agree that the windows of a public conveyance should not be obscured; but otherwise the modern advertisement is frequently more amusing than the blank countenances of one's opposite fellow travellers.

At Glasgow on Friday, Sheriff Guthrie passed a sentence of six months' imprisonment on a drunken woman who had assaulted her husband by hurling a glass tumbler at his head, and so permanently injuring the sight of one eye. I call attention to the case, not because I take exception to the punishment, but because it stands out in such marked contrast to the treatment generally accorded to husbands who maltreat their wives. A glance at my Legal Pillory almost any week will show that a man is allowed to thrash and kick and pretty well half kill his wife for an expenditure of a sovereign or so in a fine and costs. But what is sauce for the goose ought to be sauce for the gander, and I, therefore, commend Sheriff Guthrie's exemplary sentence on this drunken wife to the notice of the Justices who deal so inadequately with outrages by drunken husbands.

Alderman Alliston has written to me in reference to a sentence of his at the Mansion House, on a domestic servant named Taylor, which was noted in my Legal Pillory last week. It will be remembered that Taylor was committed to gaol for six weeks for stealing sixpennyworth of coppers from a till in her employer's shop, though the prosecutor himself recommended her to mercy, because it was her first offence, and she had previously borne an excellent character. Mr. Alliston begins his letter by emphasising the fact that the prisoner was a woman of 42, but I fail to see how this affects the matter, the benefits of the First Offenders Act not being restricted to the young, although it was chiefly for their advantage that it was passed. He then goes on to say that the woman had been in the prosecutor's service two or three months, that she obtained the situation through a written character from a person the prosecutor did not know, that her place was in the kitchen, but that she surreptitiously entered the shop in semi-darkness, was caught in the act of stealing money from the patent till, and admitted that she had done this before. The Alderman considers that "there were no grounds for the prosecutor's recommendation to leniency," and it is evident from his further observations that he came to an unfavourable conclusion from the prisoner's refusal, in answer to his questions, to give any information as to her antecedents. But he ought not to have acted on mere impressions in such a matter, more especially in the face of the opinion expressed by the prosecutor, who was assuredly in a far better position to judge of the woman's character and claims to merciful consideration. The sentence which was passed struck me as being harsh and vindictive, and with all respect to the Alderman I see no reason to modify my opinion.

Carpet Beating Season.—The Queen says: "A good place to send carpets to is the Compressed Air Carpet and Tapestry Cleaning Company, Brook Green, Hammersmith, W. Dust blown out. No beaters used." To prevent deception carpets cleaned by this process bear the Trade Mark on the back.

Sufferers from all liver and gouty complaints, unable to visit the Spa, reap great benefit from taking the Carlsbad Waters or Sprüdel Salts (Löbel Schottländer, Carlsbad, on wrapper). Of all Chemists, and Ingram & Royle, Ltd., 52, Farringdon-street.

It will be seen from the following instalment of my Legal Pillory, that the excessive indulgence which magistrates so generally show to the husband who thrashes his wife is now extended at Airdrie to the father who makes a football of his five-year-old child. If the ruffian M'Donald, with his long list of previous convictions, had netted a few rabbits or stolen a few apples, he would assuredly have gone to gaol; but as he had merely kicked and otherwise ill-used a poor little baby, the humane and intelligent J.P.s of Airdrie let him off with a fine of 15s., less than half the amount they exacted from a working man for cycling without a light. There are also examples from Irvine, Steyning, Harwich, Blackburn, and elsewhere, of the lenity with which offences against the person are treated, while the sentences on the other side of the list illustrate the severity with which the Great Unpaid punish petty thefts, poaching, and such really atrocious crimes as sleeping out under a hedge, or even sitting down on a pavement (see the report from Derby) without having "visible means of subsistence." In regard to the charge of cruelty at Gosport, I recognise that the Bench imposed a very heavy pecuniary penalty, but I have, nevertheless, pilloried the case, because it seems to me that a man in the position of the defendant, who deliberately starves a horse to death, ought not to be given the option of paying a fine :—

Airdrie J.P. Court. Before Messrs John Watt and William Ferguson. John M'Donald pleaded guilty to assaulting his daughter, aged five years, by kicking her and otherwise abusing her. He said he was "the worse of drink" at the time. There was a long list of previous convictions against him. Fined 15s. or ten days.

Walsall Police-court. Before Messrs. J. Noake (Mayor), G. Gill, and J. Moseley. Frank Hart, charged with assaulting Maud Thompson, domestic servant, and with threatening Emmanuel Marsh. Defendant showed the girl an indecent picture and afterwards knocked her down, giving her a black eye, and threatened to strangle her. On the girl's employer, Marsh, remonstrating, he threatened to murder him and became exceedingly violent. Fined 20s. and bound over.

Harwich Petty Sessions. Before the Mayor (Councillor W. J. Nalborough) and other magistrates. Edward Coppin, charged with assaulting his wife. He kicked her on the body, causing her to have a miscarriage. A separation order was granted, and for the aggravated assault defendant was ordered to pay 13s. costs.

Steyning Petty Sessions. Before Messrs. H. Wyatt, W. P. Beach, H. T. West, and other justices. George Sayers, charged with assaulting his wife. The woman, who appeared to be an invalid, was struck on the head and knocked down three times. Fined 10s. and costs, and bound over.

Airdrie J.P. Court. Before the same magistrates. Alexander Taylor, carter, charged with riding a bicycle at night without a light. Fined £1 and 19s. costs.

Louth Borough Police-court. Before the Mayor. Joseph Dunnington, charged with sleeping out. Seven days.

Trowbridge Police-court. Before Mr. J. P. Stencomb and Major T. Clark. Ann Barnes, a married woman, charged with hawking without a licence. Seven days.

Bournemouth Police-court. Before Captain Elwes and other magistrates. Susan Peterill and Jane Best, charged with sleeping out. Seven days each.

Derby Borough Police-court. Before Sir John Smith, Messrs. T. H. Harrison, S. Whitaker, T. L. Riley, W. Hall, and G. B. Unsworth. Edwin Booth, charged with wandering abroad, and being without visible means of subsistence. Late at night he was found sitting on the pavement. Fourteen days.

Gainsborough Petty Sessions. Before Messrs. E. Pearson, F. Mercer, and S. Hawksworth. John Hartley, charged with trespassing in pursuit of game. Fined £1 and 14s. 6d. costs.

Doncaster West Riding Police-court. Arthur Padley and Thomas Hoey, charged with trespassing in search of game. They caught a rabbit. Fined £1. 10s. each.

Scott Adie, 115, Regent-st., London, for Shooting Suits, Golf Suits, Travelling Coats, Inverness Capes, Carriage Rugs, Shawls, Mauds, hand-knit Hose, Scotch Cheviots, and Harris Homespuns.

Blackburn Police-court. Before Messrs. E. Cooper, H. Higson, and R. Leeming, William M'Kinnings, charged with being drunk and assaulting his wife. A policeman saw the prisoner knock the woman down, and kick her on the mouth and about the body. Fined 20s. and costs.

Sheffield Police-court. Before Messrs. J. Milner and W. W. Harrison. John Albert Baley, charged with cruelty to a pony. He thrashed the animal unmercifully with a whip-stock, continuing the ill-treatment for some time. Fined 12s. 6d., including costs.

Falkirk Police-court. Anthony Sweency and Tague M'Ginlay pleaded guilty to assaulting a man named Wright. The prosecutor was an entire stranger to the accused, who, without the least provocation, went up to him in the street and committed what the Fiscal characterised as a cowardly and brutal assault. Fined 21s. each.

Gosport Police-court. Before Admiral Field, M.P., Colonel L. G. Rodney, and Mr. F. S. Stanley. Henry Hayward, baker and corn merchant, convicted of cruelty to a horse by neglecting to supply it with sufficient food. The animal was penned in a field where there was no grass, and was only fed once in eight days. If it had not been shot, it would have died of starvation, and a veterinary surgeon said it had apparently been gradually starved for two or three months previously. The Bench said it was the worst case of its kind that they had ever had before them. Fined £5 and £3. 4s. costs.

Irvine Police-court. Joseph Lawrie, found guilty of a serious assault on a married woman. A medical certificate was produced, stating that the woman was quite unfit to appear owing to her injuries. Fined £2.

Hastings County Bench. Before Sir A. Ashburnham, Dr. F. M. Wallis, and Messrs. T. Parkin and H. E. Cruttenden. George Clifton, an old man, convicted of sleeping in an unfinished house at Bexhill, and not having visible means of subsistence. One month.

Pembroke Borough Police-court. Before the Mayor (Mr. W. Simon), and other magistrates. Jeremiah Mara and John Tunster, charged under the Poaching Prevention Act with coming from land with rabbits in their possession. Fined £5 each and costs, and committed for two months in default of payment.

Maidenhead County Police-court. Before General A. R. Thompson, Lord George Pratt, Earl Russell, Messrs. J. Whitehead, A. Ricardo, and F. D. Lambert. William Neale, aged 69, pleaded guilty to stealing two bavins, value 5d., from a stack of wood. Fourteen days.

Leigh Police-court. Before Messrs. G. H. Evans and F. W. D. Bouth. William Pennington, charged with poaching. He pleaded that he had a wife and seven children dependent on him, and very small wages. Six weeks.

Yeovil County Police-court. Before Messrs. H. P. Batten and W. T. Bradford. Thomas Hambridge, charged with sleeping out in the fair field. Six weeks.

Chelmsford County Police-court. Before Mr. T. Kemble, and other Justices. Stephen Simmons, charged with lodging in the open air and being without visible means of subsistence. He was found under a hedge in a field. Seven days.

People round about Bromley should be careful not to walk abroad with fruit in their possession, or some active and intelligent constable may "suppose" that they have stolen it, and on the strength of his supposition they may be convicted and fined by the equally intelligent local magistrates. This was the fate which last week befell a lad from Bermondsey named Hatherton, who was charged "on suspicion with having a quantity of apples and plums in his possession supposed to have been stolen." It seemed that a policeman met him "carrying something in a bag," and asked what he had got there. The lad would have been perfectly justified in refusing to reply, but after some hesitation he stated that he bought the contents of the bag from a man at Swanley, and the policeman thereupon took him to the police-station and searched him. Although nothing had since been ascertained about the ownership of the fruit and the prisoner repeated his statement that he bought it, the Bench fined him 2s. 6d. and costs. The policeman, of course, had no right whatever to question or search this prisoner, nor could the magistrates have convicted him without a most unwarrantable straining of the law.

To the disgrace of the inspectors of the Local Government Board and the Board of Trade, who had a chance of putting an end to the system two years ago, the imprisonment of refractory fishing apprentices still goes on merrily at Grimsby. The thoroughly vindictive spirit which characterises the sentences of the magistrates—nearly all of them directly or indirectly interested as smack-owners—is effectively illustrated by a case heard a few days ago. The usual charge of disobedience by neglecting to go to sea in his employer's smack was preferred against a young fellow named Ernest French. It appeared that the offence took place so far back as May 14, and that French attained the age of 21 in July, so that when he was brought before the court he was no longer an apprentice, and it must have been obvious that the only result of sending him to gaol would be to damage his prospects now that he is free to earn his living as he pleases; but, nevertheless, he was committed for fourteen days. The magistrates cannot even put forward the feeble excuse that it was desirable to make an example of him in the interests of "discipline," for at the same court another youth was sentenced to a month's hard labour; and almost every week similar sentences are passed. Nowhere else, and in no other industry, is it found necessary to deal with apprentices in the ferocious fashion adopted at Grimsby, and the fact that so many lads prefer a term of hard labour in gaol to their life in the smacks is a pretty good proof that their treatment at the hands of the smack-owners and their crews is not what it should be. It is only because they are drawn, almost without exception, from workhouses, and are without parents or friends to look after their interests, that the scandal has been allowed to go on so long.

After the proceedings at the St. Albans County Petty Sessions the other day, nobody need be surprised if drivers of vehicles in that district come to look upon cyclists as intruders without any real claim to have their convenience and safety respected by the observance of the rules of the road. A summons was heard against a farmer for obstructing the passage of the highway, and two cyclists, a gentleman and his sister, proved that the defendant was driving a trap on the wrong side of the road, that he persisted in doing this when they remonstrated with him, and that when they ultimately attempted to pass he deliberately pulled his horse round so as to close the remaining portion of the road and compel the cyclists to ride into the ditch. This was regarded by the magistrates as so trivial a matter that they only fined the defendant half-a-crown. It seems necessary to remind their worships that a person on a bicycle has as much right to traverse the highway as a farmer in his trap, and if the latter defiantly drives on the wrong side and wantonly blocks the road, something more than a nominal penalty ought to be imposed. Not only in country districts, but in town as well (as anybody may see who watches the little manœuvres of the sportive cabby) many Jehus appear to think it is a legitimate amusement to worry, incommode, and obstruct cyclists, and such a decision as that at St. Albans is calculated to encourage this idea. I know that the conduct of many cyclists, on the other hand, is by no means irreproachable; but when they are convicted of any offence, magistrates are never backward in meting out an adequate punishment.

I do not remember hearing before of Messrs. Noble & Rock, jewellers, of Imperial-buildings, Ludgate-hill, but, from the statements made at the Mansion House Police-court on Friday, it would seem that they are entitled to a distinguished place among the firms who make a business of cajoling servants into the purchase of cheap jewellery at exorbitant prices. One of Noble & Rock's canvassers was charged with stealing two watches, which he had pawned, and another with attempting to obtain money from the firm by false pretences. Both these men were employed to sell jewellery to servants on the weekly payment system, and, under their agreements with the prosecutors, they were bound to devote the whole of their time to the service of the firm for a salary of 2s. 6d. each per week, this to be increased to 5s., if a certain number of orders were obtained, and after that a commission to be paid. The canvassers had to pay their own travelling expenses.

One of the watches which was pawned was valued by the prosecutors at £4. 10s.—that being, presumably, their selling price to servant-girls—whereas the pawnbroker affirmed that its fair market value was £1. 10s. The charge of false pretences was dismissed, and in the other case Sir Joseph Renals refused to convict the defendant of larceny, but fined him for illegal pawning. I am glad to notice that Sir Joseph called attention to the terms on which these canvassers were employed, asking how a man could be honest on half-a-crown a week? Instances enough and to spare have been given in Truth of the unscrupulous tricks to which canvassers in this kind of business resort in order to unload their goods on ignorant servant-girls; but considering the monstrous way in which they are sweated by their employers, their efforts to increase their incomes by such means can hardly be wondered at.

The "Spanish prisoner," like the rest of us, seems to feel the necessity of keeping himself close up to date. For this reason, presumably, in his latest communications he connects his cock-and-bull story of the buried treasure with the insurrection in Cuba. This result, however, seems to have been gained at some sacrifice of what little probability there was in the original narrative. The prisoner's latest account of himself is that he is an ex-officer in the Spanish Army, who had the misfortune to kill his Colonel in a duel on January 19, 1895 (please note the carefulness of the prisoner about his dates). Having killed the Colonel, the prisoner fled, first to the United States, and then to Cuba, where he entered into relations with the leaders of the insurrection. In the space of a few weeks, apparently, he so won the confidence of the insurgent leaders, that they sent him off to New York to buy arms and ammunition, with a trifle of two millions six hundred thousand francs in his pocket.

The Hernia Institute, 489, Oxford-st., London, W., absolutely cures rupture in from three to six weeks. Highest testimonials. Pamphlets and consultations free.

This confidence, however, was sadly misplaced. Having got out of Cuba with the money in his pocket, the prisoner's conscience suddenly pricked him, and he bethought him of the baseness of co-operating in a treasonable enterprise against his own country. So what did he determine to do? For love of Spain this conscientious adventurer resolved to stick to the cash himself. He communicated with his wife, who was lying ill at Malaga, and made arrangements to return to Spain in disguise and fetch her, preparatory to a flight to that blessed refuge of the distressed, the Argentine Republic. In the meantime, of course, it was necessary to dispose temporarily of the two million six hundred thousand francs. A simple method of doing this suggested itself to the prisoner. He would go to Brighton (he was in the United States at this time), dig a hole in the suburbs of that attractive town, and bury the cash there in a little zinc box. This plan he proceeded to carry out, first converting the money into French and English banknotes, and having dug his little hole at Brighton—somewhere on the beach, I expect—and deposited the money therein, he made "un plan topographique du terrain avec toutes les mesures exactes et détaillés," and went off in search of his better half.

Alas! then it is the old story over again. By the treachery of "un ami très infâme," in whom he had confided, he no sooner arrived in his native land than he was handed over to the Spanish police, and there he was on July 26 last, languishing in the "Prison Militaire de Madrid," with his two million six hundred thousand francs down the hole at Brighton. This is a situation calculated to excite despair in most people; but the Spanish prisoner, as my readers are aware, is a man of infinite resource. In his prison cell he evolved yet another little plan, which was to tell the whole story to a respectable tradesman at Brighton, and promise him half the two million six hundred thousand francs on condition that he would assist in recovering the buried treasure. The only thing he asked in return was that his trusty friend at Brighton should first forward a little matter of ten thousand francs either in gold or French notes, in order to release the prisoner's baggage, containing the precious "plan topographique," which had been seized to cover the unpaid costs of his trial. It might have been thought that the Brighton tradesman would have jumped at this chance, but such is the spirit of distrust now abroad that he simply sent the whole correspondence to the Editor of Truth. The prisoner consequently is still languishing in the dungeon at Madrid, as he has been any time these ten years past. The stolen treasure is still down the hole at Brighton, which is only one out of ten thousand places where it has already been secreted. Finally, all that is now wanted is a big fool to pay the prisoner's preliminary fees for this clue to the hiding-place, as only too many fools have done already.

Hewetsons, Tottenham Court-road, London, send their Illustrated Catalogue post free, and it is acknowledged to be the best Furnishing Guide extant.

Reuben May's latest appeal is in the form of a post card, on the back of which is a picture of a small child, who is supposed to make a pathetic appeal to the reader to furnish Mr. May with the means of sending her to his seaside home. The appeal states that May wants to send a thousand denizens of the slums for a day in the country, and that he has thousands more to attend to every week. I wonder why May does not publish a financial statement of his work during the last few years, or even a balance-sheet of his current receipts and expenditure, for this would remove his mission from the stigma which at present rests upon it, and would doubtless bring in a greatly increased revenue for the benefit of the children and others in whom he professes such an interest. As it is, no sensible person ever sends Reuben a halfpenny, and is never likely to do so.

It is not to be wondered at that swindling advertisements so frequently find their way into the cheaper class of weekly newspapers, when one sees how some of these journals deal with their own contributors. There is, I understand, a paper called Sketchy Bits. That journal has been offering every week prizes of 10s., 7s. 6d., and 2s. 6d. for the three best original jokes sent in. A gentleman was recently gratified to find that his contributions were awarded a place in this column on two occasions, with prizes of 10s. and 2s. 6d. respectively. On each occasion the column was headed with a note to the effect that postal orders for the value of the three prizes "had been forwarded to the authors." Not having received his postal orders, the successful candidate called at the office, but, although he paid several visits, he was unable to see the editor. He wrote to another contributor, to whom a prize had been awarded as far back as July 6, when a postal order was stated to have been forwarded to him, and he found that this gentleman, like himself, was still waiting for his prize. The only explanation vouchsafed up to the present time, is a statement by a clerk at the office that the prizes were not forwarded at once, in case it should turn out that the prize jokes were not original. This plea does not go for much, especially in view of the explicit statement published every week, that postal orders for the amount of the prizes have been forwarded.

A house-master in one of the public schools forwards me a racing circular addressed to one of the boys in his house by one "Robert Francis," of High-street, Kingswinford, and in forwarding it to me the master states that he had previously noticed numbers of letters addressed to other boys in his house in the same handwriting. The circular is of the usual type, giving selections for the next week's races (mostly what are technically known as "wrong 'uns"), and inviting the boys to back them. This "Francis" is evidently an unscrupulous rascal, and house-masters in other schools would do well to look out for his communications, as well as for all others of the same class. When a number of letters arrive in the same handwriting, addressed to different boys, it is not a difficult matter to spot them.

It is simply sickening to find provincial papers engaged in the fulsome puffing of various swindles run for the purpose of selling bogus degrees and academic honours. An instance of this sort of thing has just occurred in Bedfordshire, where the Bedfordshire Advertiser and other local newspapers have announced with a great flourish of trumpets that the head-master of a Board school at Luton has been granted the degree of Doctor of Philosophy by the National University of Illinois, Chicago—our old friend the "Universitas Nationalis Illinoiensis." Instead of condoling with the unfortunate schoolmaster who has paid his money to a commission agent in London for this bogus distinction, one journal sagely remarks that "the conditions on which the diploma was awarded are exceptionally high, being the presentation of a thesis, embodying results of original research or thought, expressed in scholarly language;" and adds that "the Commissioner" has reported that the schoolmaster's thesis, which was on the subject of "Personality," was "the most scholarly that he had ever had to do with." The "Commissioner," I suppose, is my old friend Sayer, alias James, also alias "G. Elliott," and the "Rev. J. Rogers," of West Kensington and other addresses; and a pretty flat anybody must be who takes this individual's opinion on the scholarly character of a thesis to be worth anything more than the paper on which it is written.

Another infatuated journalist has the following observations upon the honour granted to the schoolmaster:—

> English folk have often just reason for lightly esteeming "American degrees," but though there are certain "sham Universities" across the Atlantic, by virtue of which some English Nonconformist ministers are enabled to awe their congregations with a more or less valuable "D.D.," we may assure Luton people that there is nothing suspicious about the great institution at Chicago, which is so lavishly endowed by surrounding millionaires, and has attained a leading position in the United States. It is modelled on the University of London, and extremely few doctorates are granted by the Council of Graduation, the Chicago University being strictly limited in such matters by the terms of their charter. The diploma is only granted for original research and high scholarly qualification.

It is scarcely necessary to tell any reader of TRUTH that the whole of this passage is simply a farrago of imaginative balderdash, obviously founded upon the trade circulars distributed by the man James in his character of agent in London for the productions of the Porkopolis degree factory. The only true remark in the passage is that "the English folk often have just reason for lightly esteeming American degrees;" and so far from there being any reason for esteeming the Chicago degrees any less lightly than the rest, they are the most outrageous swindles of the lot. As for the "surrounding millionaires" who have "so lavishly endowed the great institution at Chicago," so far as I have had an opportunity of judging, the great institution is chiefly kept on its legs by the humble contributions of misguided Britons, who are either duped by an advertising agent into purchasing its trumpery distinctions or deliberately invest in them as a means of imposing upon others. As it is only three weeks since I published my last article on the Universitas Nationalis, it is not necessary to go into the matter at any length again now; but it seems a useless sort of work for one journalist to be doing his best to put the public on their guard against these frauds while a dozen others are doing their best to keep the swindle going.

An anonymous correspondent has written to me in reference to the sale of drink at the recent church bazaar at Fonmon. He seems to disagree with the remarks I made last week respecting the remarkable development of the alliance between the Church and the liquor trade which was witnessed at Fonmon. It is a rule of mine, however, not to reply to anonymous correspondents, and so I do not answer the questions he has asked me; but I dare say he will get all the information he desires if he applies to the Star of Barry Lodge of Good Templars. This body has also had under consideration the proceedings at Fonmon, with the result that it has passed a resolution expressing "deep regret, combined with righteous indignation," at the action of the Bishop of Llandaff in defending "the union of beer and such-like poisons with the work of the Church of England," repudiating "all such attempts to lower the prestige of the National Church by dragging its dignity into the mire of the soul-destroying traffic in intoxicating liquors," and asserting "that all such combinations and unholy alliances are God-destroying and God-dishonouring, and a sure method to swell the ranks of the lost." Let me add that, though I have myself at times used strong language on this subject, I am by no means prepared to endorse the views of the Barry Good Templars.

Apropos of the recent complaints about gas bills, a resident in the north of London writes to me in praise of one particular type of governor, and he seems to think that when gas bills are incorrect, it is generally the fault of the consumer for not having his meter tested regularly, or not having a governor. I can hardly believe, however, that half the meters in London last spring suddenly took, from their inherent viciousness, to registering twenty or thirty per cent. more than the amount consumed; and, as for governors, from my own experience I should be sorry to undertake the responsibility of recommending any one of them.

Oh, no. I am not going to enter into a discussion with all the bi-maniacs of the world. Last week I pointed out the utter absurdity of Mr. Bryan's doctrines respecting the currency. Dishonesty I can understand, but dishonesty which must result in loss rather than in gain passes my understanding. What is really needed in the United States is a rousing and progressive death duty on all accumulations, and some law to hinder rich men confederating together in the form of a trust to raise the price of an article against the community. Take, for instance, the Standard Oil Trust. Here we have a gang of plutocrats able to fix the price of every can of oil sold at a figure which secures to them, in addition to the fair commercial cost of the product, a huge monopoly profit. A law ought at once to be passed in America to render such a proceeding criminal; indeed, were Mr. Bryan's ticket the hanging of Mr. Rockafeller, I am by no means certain that I—had I been an American—should not have voted for it.

If you want to entirely Furnish your House or select any article of Furniture or Carpet, &c., send for HEWETSONS' Illustrated Priced Catalogue.—HEWETSONS, Tottenham Court-road, London

By the way, a Manchester correspondent sends me two printed papers which have reached him by post under the same cover, one being a leaflet of the Bimetallic League and the other a catalogue of "fine art photographs," in which "studies from nature" are a leading feature. It would be interesting to know whether other people have been similarly favoured, and, if so, how these two documents came to be enclosed in the same packet. It seems preposterous to suppose that the League distributes the catalogue with the leaflet as a kind of sugar for the bimetallic pill; and yet it is difficult to understand what object the dealer in "art photographs" can have in embedding his price-list in the pages of a dry dissertation on bimetallism.

We are all filled with horror and indignation by the reports of the atrocities that have been perpetrated during the past few days at Constantinople. It is only natural that we should be. But what do my readers think of the following extract from a letter that the East Anglian Daily Times has published from a Suffolk man at Buluwayo? Such accounts of the barbarity with which the war against the Matabele has been conducted—and this is but an example of many similar stories that have been sent home—make one doubt whether after all we have much right to censure the Turk for his inhuman butcheries:—

> For instance, when out with patrol a week or so back, we suddenly surprised five Kaffirs sitting down watching some goats; they simply jumped up, threw down their shields and assegais, and covered their faces with their hands. One short command was given and the five men were shot dead, and we rode on again as if nothing had happened. In another case, a young, green, and very humane doctor, sent fresh from home by the Red Cross Society, was tying up a wounded Matabele when a non-com. officer came by. "Hullo, doctor," says he, "what are you up to?" "Attending to this wounded native," replies the juvenile medico. "Nonsense," says the N.C.O.; "leave the nigger and come and look after some of my men." "No," says the doctor, "I must attend to this native first." "Oh, you must," says the other; "all right, doctor, bandage away," and he drew his revolver and blew half the Kaffir's head off! That young surgeon will not hear the last of that for many a long day.

Mr. Chamberlain has shown considerable wisdom in sending as our representative to the Transvaal a trained diplomatist and a gentleman entirely unconnected with South African troubles. If he would only go one step further, and separate the High Commissionership in South Africa from the Governorship of the Cape Colony, vesting the former in some independent man of approved experience, and provisionally suspending the administrative powers in Rhodesia of the Chartered Company, the tension in South Africa would disappear. This is the course that I have always advocated, and it becomes all the more desirable as Mr. Rhodes himself now admits that the maladministration of the Company led to the Matabele outbreak.

Will no one advise Mr. Rhodes not to have his exploits and his words telegraphed over from South Africa by his henchmen? In the interests of their financial divinity, I would, moreover, advise his Press friends in England to abate their laudations of everything done by him. The Matabele, having had their wives, their children, and their cattle seized, and finding that they would all be massacred were they to continue to engage in battles in which they were slaughtered, and unable to do more than to wound occasionally a horse or a man of their foes, declared that they wished to come to terms, and suggested a meeting with Mr. Colenbrander, in whom they seem to have some confidence. Mr. Rhodes was good enough to accompany him. Not a word is said in respect to the action of Mr. Colenbrander, but Mr. Rhodes is represented in the telegrams as a hero of surpassing courage in having trusted himself to the Matabele, and I make no doubt that we shall soon be informed that it is due to his abilities that the war has come to an end. A chief, we are told, addressed him as "Father and greatest of chieftains," and on his return he himself said, "This is one of the scenes which make life worth living for." A little while ago this "greatest of chieftains" announced that he intended "to fight the Matabele to-morrow." Others fought, and, so far as I see, when the result of the fighting ended, as was to be expected, in favour of those with cannon and rifles, others negotiated.

The position appears to be this. The speculators who have been selling holes to credulous English investors as gold mines, are desirous that Mr. Rhodes should remain in Rhodesia, for the excellent reason that they hope that he will himself contribute, with his financial gang, to the costs of the war, and that his name will still exercise sufficient spell over investors at home to induce them to send good money after bad. They are therefore wise in doing their best to retain him in Rhodesia as a material guarantee. But they know nothing of public opinion at home, and this absurd endeavour to palm him off as a hero only renders them and him ridiculous. Mr. Rhodes has had his day. Fortunately for him, he has made a great deal of money during that day. Any attempt to replace him on the pedestal on which he was raised by a section of the Press will fail.

By the way, as we are to have a Committee to inquire —inter alia—respecting the administration in Rhodesia, it might be well that the Matabele should be invited to send over witnesses to testify to their views in regard to this matter. But it will be necessary that these native witnesses should not be selected by those who spoiled them of their country, and who "administered" them. Some of the Matabele chiefs seem not wanting in intelligence. I should like to see before the Committee the chief who observed of one of the "administrators" of the Company that he was "only fit to serve rum in a canteen in Pretoria."

SCRUTATOR.

REPUDIATION BY THE SILVER TRICK.

WHETHER Mr. Bryan or Mr. McKinley will become President of the United States, I have not the remotest notion; for all that we have to go on upon this side of the Atlantic is that the supporters of each are of opinion that their candidate will win, coupled with the fact that both these opinions are biassed. With us, Liberals and Conservatives are always certain to win a General Election according to both. So far as I can make it out, the contest in America does not turn upon bimetallism, but rather upon replacing for the existing coin a coin of less intrinsic value, but which is to be called a dollar, and which would be worth about two-thirds of the present dollar. This is brought about by making the ratio between gold and silver one to sixteen, and the aim is to enable debtors to free themselves of about one-third of their indebtedness. Bimetallism means that a State engages to exchange gold against silver and silver against gold at a fixed ratio. Thus, were the United States to adopt bimetallism, it is obvious that, if silver were to be exchanged for gold and gold for silver by the United States Treasury at any ratio assumed for the moment to be the real one, the objection would be that this ratio would soon cease to be the real one, for this would depend on the amount of each metal produced, and the metal which would be depreciated in real value as against the other would drive out that other. This is the main objection to bimetallism.

But the Silverites do not, so far as I understand their position, pretend that they are bimetallists. They say that gold has appreciated in value, i.e., that its purchasing power has become greater than it was in past years. Therefore, a man who has incurred a debt estimated by a gold standard, really pays more than he bargained for when he repays the debt. They would, therefore, allow him to repay his debt in silver of a less value than that of gold—which is tantamount to his repaying it in less gold than he borrowed.

There would be some point in this, had the appreciation of gold been of such an extent as to seriously increase any debt in practice, for this would be equivalent to the creditor securing, in addition to the agreed interest for his loan, an unearned increment both on capital and interest. This, however, is not the case. It cannot be too clearly realised that the coined money of a country is merely a standard of value, as a barometer is a standard of weather. The purchasing power of a pound sterling, or of a five dollar gold coin, may have increased; but this is due either to increase of production, leading to competition in selling, or to the saving of labour in production. Take cereals —they are cheaper than they were. But why? Because the area of production has increased, and the cost of carrying them to market has decreased. Take clothes: there are many labour-saving machines employed in their manufacture, and consequently the cost of making them is smaller, although the wage paid to each individual concerned in their making is higher than it was. The purchasing power of a sovereign or of a five-dollar gold coin has not appreciated, but the amount paid for goods which are bought with gold has depreciated, owing to causes which have nothing to do with the supply of gold. The volume of dealings between man and man, and between nation and nation, is in almost all cases balanced by means of bills, bonds, cheques, &c., &c., without any interchange of coin. This latter is only used to strike the balance; and in reality even the margin of loss or gain is met without coin, except where a country produces less than the equivalent of the interest that it has to pay for loans from another country. Against this payment of interest, the borrowing country has the advantage of all that has been brought into existence by the borrowed capital, assuming that this borrowed capital has been properly spent.

When kings clipped coin and obliged their creditors to accept the clipped coin in full payment, they simply paid their creditors less than their due. So if the United States allow debtors to pay their creditors on a reduced standard of value, this practically amounts to repudiation by the amount of the reduction. The debtors get an immediate advantage, but this is at the cost of the permanent advantage of the community, because more than what is gained by this new way of paying old debts is lost by permanent depreciation of credit. At present there is an unexampled amount in the world of monetary accumulations. For a country to be prosperous, it must have capital and labour. What capital requires is security. The interest that it exacts for loans is dependent upon the security offered. The less the interest charged the greater is the share that goes to labour. Interest on loans, whether to individuals or to States, has fallen to one-half of what it was thirty years ago, where the security is deemed ample. This is an enormous advantage to labour. But if the United States or any other country, by means of some hocus-pocus in regard to its coinage, reduces all capital lent, and all interest on capital lent, to two-thirds of existing value, it will on all future loans be mulcted in far more than it possibly gains by this procedure. It is, in fact, killing the goose for its golden eggs.

There is a good deal of distress just now in the United States. Speaking broadly, the Southern and the Western States are creditors to the Eastern States and to Europe. If it be asserted that this indebtedness is so great that the inhabitants of the debtor States cannot live and thrive, then there might be some ground for their going into qualified liquidation. Assuming this to be so, a reduction in indebtedness ought to be decreed, much as the State with us has insisted on a reduction in rents in Ireland. But is this the case? I doubt it. I do not see that it is claimed that the interest on capital loaned is excessive. Much that has made the Western and Southern States industrial communities, instead of mere rocks and prairies, has been due to Eastern and European capital lent at fair current interest. Western and Southern farmers have borrowed. With this borrowed money they have been able to engage in agricultural enterprise. The price of their produce has fallen owing to competition both at home and abroad. As I have said, if it can be shown that they cannot live and pay, and if this state of things is universal, then there may be some plea for a partial liquidation decreed by the Government. But to effect this partial liquidation by tampering with the coin, and to pretend that there has been no partial liquidation, is mere hypocrisy, and it is to do away with an existing evil by creating a far greater one.

Let us suppose that the dollar is reduced to two-thirds of its present value, and that this depreciated dollar must by law be accepted by all creditors as the equivalent of the existing dollar. What would follow? Debts would be reduced by one-third, but in future loans would be charged double the present interest, because capitalists would dread that what has been once done may be done again, and yet again. Apart from the immediate advantage to the debtors, workers in the United States would not be the richer, any more than the weather would be bettered by marking on the barometer "changeable" for what is now "storm," and "fair" for what is now "changeable." If a man bought land he would have to pay more dollars for it. If a man sold produce he would, it is true, get more dollars, but against this he would have to pay more for all that he might buy. An artisan would demand more dollars for his labour, in order to secure to himself the payment which secures to him his present purchasing power as a return for his labour. From an economic standpoint, the whole thing is as absurd as if we were to fancy that we should all become rich in England by decreeing that henceforward what is now called half-a-sovereign is to be called a sovereign. All that would happen, were Mr. Bryan's theories to be reduced to practice, would be that the West and the South which want capital would have to pay more for it, and in everything else things would remain as they are, except that three dollars would represent the present purchasing power of two dollars.

I suspect that the owners of silver mines in the United States are at the bottom of the silver movement. Obviously, if these worthies could insist on all the silver that they may produce being converted by the Treasury into current coin, they would be very great gainers. There is practically no limit to the production of silver in the Western States, provided that a market be secured at a fixed and remunerative rate for all produced. The United States would be soon flooded with these silver dollars; and it is by dangling before the more ignorant of their fellow-countrymen this unlimited extension of coined money that they have deluded them into the idea that the entire community would be benefited by it. As well might the owners of copper mines ask, as a panacea for all want and misery, that the ratio of copper to silver should be three to one, and that the United States should be obliged to coin all copper offered to it into coins three times the size of a silver dollar, and that these copper dollars should be legally the equivalent of the silver dollars.

I do not see how the United States would benefit, as against other countries to whom they export goods, by this alteration in the value of the dollar. Inside the United States, corn now selling at two dollars would sell for three dollars; the cost of transport to the coast would be increased at the same ratio, and so would the cost of transport across the Atlantic. But when the European State that buys the corn paid for it, the fact that three dollars only mean two dollars of present value would be taken into consideration by the purchaser, and the corn would have to be sold at precisely the same price as now, estimated at the standard of value of the purchasing State. So it would be with all imports into the United States from Europe. Where the United States purchaser now pays two dollars, he would have to pay three dollars. The sole and only result of Mr. Bryan's experiment in coinage, apart from the immediate advantage of existing debts being paid in a clipped coinage, and, consequently, reduced by the amount of the clipping, would be that silver-mine owners would benefit at the cost of the community, and that the percentage of interest on loans would go up, whilst each unit that it went up would be so much out of the pocket of labour. If in America the interest on money were far higher than in England, cost of bringing produce or manufactured articles into the market would be higher in America than in England by the amount of the excess of interest. The modern problem is to attract capital to a country, and to pay for it the lowest rate of interest. This is specially the case with the United States, where development, which involves capital, is more needed than in the older European States. Mr. Bryan's plan does precisely the reverse; nor can it be said that the existing capital in America would be used instead of European capital, for the Eastern lender would want security for his money, and although he might get a promise of higher interest in his own country than from European States, he would prefer low interest with security for his money, to high interest with no certainty of ever seeing either interest or capital. Apart from all morality, honesty in this matter is the best policy, because credit is dependent on honesty, and credit is wealth.

I am one of the warmest admirers of the United States in Europe. I am a democrat of the democrats in the true sense of the word. I believe that one of the greatest dangers to democracy in America is that huge accumulations of capital are in the hands of the few, and that these few are too apt to combine together against the well-being of the many. Where it can be proved that the many would permanently benefit by a reform in regard to the laws that regulate property, I am an advocate for such reforms. Morality and accumulations are not with me the same thing. So far as law could do it, I would have all possessed of a good living income, and none possessed of more. But as a democrat, and one desirous that the cause of democracy should everywhere prevail, and as an admirer of the sterling common-sense of the American people, I sincerely trust that Mr. Bryan will be defeated. When a man talks about a nation being crucified on a cross of gold as a ground for altering the value of the coinage of a country, and when he announces as a great discovery that his country is to be converted into an Elysium by reducing the purchasing power of its coin, he is, to my mind, either a fool or, not being one himself, he wishes to float into power by fooling others. I see it stated that Mr. Bryan has, for the last year or two, received money from the owners of silver mines to go about lecturing on the free coinage of silver. Probably this is not true, but if it be not, then he has not received what is due to him. His panacea for all the woes that afflict humanity in America will alone benefit the owners of silver mines, whilst it will, by destroying the collective credit of the entire community, cost his country far more than ever these men will gain by it.

It may be, and it very probably will be, that communities will in the future more fully recognise their collective duty to all than they hitherto have done, and that those who have acquired an excess of this world's goods will be called upon to contribute far more towards the general prosperity of all than they do at present. Far from regretting this, I rejoice to think that it will be so. But for men to suppose that any such result will be effected by asking all to trample under foot one standard of values and to substitute for it another—to curse gold and to worship silver—is as silly as is the savage who beats his god and fashions another out of stick or stone. Crucify humanity, indeed, on a cross of gold! As well might humanity be said to be crucified on a cross of silver where silver is the measure of values, or on a cross of copper where copper is the measure. Coin, whether it be of gold, or of silver, or of copper, is merely a means to facilitate and to simplify that barter which has existed since the first primeval savage exchanged an egg with his neighbour for an ear of corn. Mr. Bryan mistakes shadow for substance, a measure for what is measured. I am against him, because I am against any quack who puts forward some elixir, which destroys health, as a certain cure for disease. I am for hard money, because without hard money, fixed and immovable, the United States will enter on the downward grade, and this I should regard not only as a calamity to its inhabitants, but to all mankind.

USE AND ABUSE OF THE LIBEL LAWS.

It is a popular idea that we have in this country a Free Press. Like a great many other popular ideas, however, this one is to a great extent a delusion. In saying this I do not refer to the fact that a newspaper is not free in this country to say what it likes. No one in a civilised community can be free to say or do what he likes. It is a fundamental principle of social order that no man has a right to injure a fellow citizen; and to this extent the liberty of journalists has to be restrained in common with the liberty of every other member of the community. What I mean when I say that we have not a Free Press is that the law as it stands does not leave every newspaper free to speak the truth without fear of the consequences. The law is such that it is in the power of any man, who can get a solicitor to act for him, to prevent newspapers, or at least a very large number of them, from speaking the truth, or even to force them into withdrawing and apologising for the truth when they have spoken it. It is only the very wealthy or the very reckless newspaper proprietor who can afford to defy such attempts at intimidation; and, as a newspaper is a commercial speculation, the first object of which is to make money for the proprietor, and not to perform public services at the proprietor's expense, even the wealthiest newspapers are careful to avoid placing themselves in the position of having to choose between withdrawing statements which they know to be true, or defending their statements at a cost which can never be recovered in full. The smaller newspapers are intimidated to an extent of which the public at large has no conception whatever. To the proprietor of a small provincial paper, or of a trade or professional journal, whether in London or the provinces, the law of libel is a perpetual terror, and those who have been behind the scenes could testify that in the offices of many journals, both in London and the provinces, which are popularly credited with being fearless and outspoken, the managers are ready to do almost anything, short of a public and ignominious surrender such as would itself be financially damaging to the paper, to avoid the certain loss and the incalculable risks of defending an action at law. While this state of things exists, the freedom of the British Press is simply one of our great national myths.

I have been moved to make these remarks by several letters which have reached me during the last fortnight or so. I had occasion to mention in Truth a short time ago that within about six months three different firms of solicitors had called upon me either to withdraw or apologise for something I had said, or to refrain from saying something which I proposed to say, under threat that legal proceedings, or "further steps," would be taken if I failed to comply, which threats are shown to have been mere empty attempts at intimidation by the simple fact that I have in each case failed to comply, and that no further action of any kind has been taken. Upon this I remarked that to attempt to intimidate a newspaper with threats of legal proceedings, when there is no intention to carry these threats into execution, is an abuse of the law, and an abuse to which respectable solicitors ought not to lend themselves. Sundry editors have written to me in support of these remarks in Truth, and all have experiences to offer, which show the helplessness of small newspapers in the presence of any demand, however outrageous, backed by threats of litigation, and the extent to which this helplessness is traded upon by individuals whose conduct exposes them to remark in the Press, and by solicitors who take up the cudgels on behalf of such individuals. One of my correspondents is the editor of a trade journal in the North of England, and he speaks with special bitterness of the effect of the libel laws as they stand at present upon journals of this class, the circulation of which is necessarily limited, and the capital embarked limited in proportion. The law, says this gentleman, "is the despair of every journalist who possesses in the slightest degree the instinct of serving the public interest as well as his own."

Gout and Rheumatism permanently cured by Post's C.B.Q. Certificate of Analysis proves it absolutely free from Colchicum, Calomel, or Mercury, or ingredients equally injurious.—Full particulars and testimonials free on application to A. M. Post, 98, Leadenhall-street, London, E.C.

What strikes me most in this matter is the part played in it by solicitors—members, as we are reminded on all occasions, of an honourable profession. It is bad enough that solicitors should lend themselves to such proceedings as above described, but I am sorry to say that there is a worse view of their conduct in many cases of this kind, and that is that they take advantage on their own account of the timidity of journalists in order to put money into their own pockets under the name of costs. The editor who inadvertently exposes himself to a demand for an apology and withdrawal is also, as a general rule, informed that he must pay a certain number of guineas, "our costs in this matter," and the letter is always worded in such a way that the threat of proceedings covers the demand for costs equally with the demand for an apology. What is the right name for this? I call it blackmail, and I do not know any other term which accurately expresses it. The costs incurred in such a case can rarely exceed the fee for one interview with the client and the charge for writing one letter—a matter of something under a sovereign in nine cases out of ten. Yet it is a common thing in journalistic experience for a letter of this kind to be accompanied by a demand on the solicitor's part for payment of a sum of two or three, or, it may be, four or five guineas.

This is a matter which concerns newspaper proprietors first and foremost, and one of my contemporaries suggests that what is required is an organisation of newspapers for their own defence, so that any small editor threatened on insufficient grounds may have behind him the snpport of a powerful organisation. This is all very well, but as it is only the small men who feel the need of such support, I fear that it is only small men who will be induced to combine. There is also the obvious difficulty that, if they felt that they had behind them the strength of a trade organisation, small and struggling journals would become reckless, cultivate libel actions for the purpose of advertisement, and keep the Association in perpetual hot water. For the latter reason it would, in my opinion, be impossible, as well as undesirable in the public interest, to form an association for the purpose of defending all libel actions out of a common fund; and I do not see myself how any trade organisation of this kind is to discriminate between cases in which its members have got themselves into trouble by their own fault and those in which they are not in any way to blame. Two practical considerations, however, suggest themselves to me. One is that the legal profession might discountenance more strongly than it does at present blackmailing operations against newspapers by the lower class of solicitors. I think that it ought to be laid down that a solicitor is not justified in writing to demand an apology, and the payment of his own costs, under threat of legal proceedings, unless he has received definite and final instructions from his client to issue a writ in the event of the demand not being complied with. It is not consistent with the traditions of an honourable profession that recourse to the law should be threatened for the mere purpose of intimidation, and without any intention of carrying out the threat; and where such a thing is done, it ought to be in the power of the party against whom such threats are uttered to bring the conduct of the solicitor before the Incorporated Law Society, with a certainty that that tribunal will call upon him for an explanation, and take adequate notice of his conduct if the explanation is not satisfactory. This step alone would do much to reduce the amount of intimidation and blackmailing now practised upon the smaller class of newspaper proprietors. A man may not attempt to obtain money by threat of criminal proceedings, and I fail to see why he should be allowed to do so by threat of civil process—at any rate, where the threat is shown by the result to be a threat and nothing more.

Another reform which I have more than once advocated is that, subject to the decision of the High Court, a newspaper proprietor should, under certain circumstances, have the right to demand security for costs before an action is taken into Court. Here, I admit, I am ventilating a personal grievance. The question of intimidation and blackmail does not trouble me personally, nor any newspaper proprietor who is in a position to snap his fingers at attempts in that direction. But every newspaper proprietor, big or little, is absolutely at the mercy of any impecunious individual who, without any legitimate cause for action, chooses to subject him to the trouble and expense of a libel action. In my own person I have exemplified this scandal to the extent of upwards of £40,000 in less than twenty years, that amount being at the present moment due to me from various disreputable persons who have brought actions against Truth without success, and often on such flimsy pretexts that the cases have never been even taken into Court. It may happen that a newspaper proprietor has to bear the whole cost of defending himself, even where the plaintiff is not wholly impecunious. For instance, in the case which cost me the heaviest bill I have ever paid, the plaintiffs were people of considerable means when they started their action, but their own solicitor took care to protect himself by getting the whole of their property under his control before a verdict in my favour was given. It seems to me that this ought not to be allowed, for it is a direct encouragement to solicitors to bring speculative actions; and even where an action is brought justifiably and in good faith, and proves unsuccessful, it seems to me that the party unjustly sued has a claim to consideration before the solicitor of the unsuccessful party. That is not the law at present.

All these considerations combine to place newspapers at a very great disadvantage in publishing what they know, and can prove, to be the truth, and while this disadvantage exists, I say that it is absurd to talk of there being any real freedom for the Press. As long as to publish facts imputing discredit to individuals may entail an expenditure of many hundreds and perhaps thousands of pounds, only the wealthiest of men or corporations can afford to publish such facts; and only a few of these will care to take the risk of publishing them. The small men are not free to publish the truth, and the majority of them refrain from publishing it whenever they see a possibility of getting into trouble thereby. The reader will, I think, see for himself that this is not simply a personal or a trade grievance. The legitimate freedom of the Press is a matter of the highest public importance, for it is directly to the interest of the public that the real truth should be known upon every matter of public concern. That will never be possible until there has been some material change in the procedure and law relating to actions for libel.

THE CONVERSION OF ST. TERRISS.

That manly and excellent actor, William Terriss, deservedly popular, in that after a long and faithful service at the Adelphi, he has kept his forcible melodramatic style clear of all rant and bombast, has, however, suffered severely at the hands of his stage enemies in nearly every play in which he has been recently engaged. He has been flung over precipices, and has been the hero of many a mutiny at the Nore; he has been sent off on a forlorn hope by his lady love in the American War; he has been paralysed as a fencing master; and degraded to the ranks as a Young Lochinvar in the barrack square; but I do not believe that in his whole melodramatic career, this luckless but handsome Terriss has ever been so cruelly and despitefully used as he is in the new Adelphi play by that arch scoundrel, Abingdon the Bad! Mr. Haddon Chambers and Mr. Comyns Carr have certainly "taken the cake" in the art of creating a dramatic monster to arouse the execrations of an Adelphi audience. Mr. J. D. Beveridge, now promoted to the ranks of a genial old Irish gentleman, was a pretty good Adelphi villain in his time. But the experiences of O. Smith, Arthur Stirling, J. D. Beveridge, James Fernandez, & Co., all pale before the misdeeds of the white-livered scoundrel of a newspaper correspondent created by Mr. Abingdon, and due to the fertile brains of Haddon Chambers and Comyns Carr.

William Terriss and W. L. Abingdon were at Eton together, and, presumably, both of gentle blood. Eton is proud of her alumni, but she has no cause to be proud of the Etonian Abingdon. Nor for the matter of that has the Army or the newspaper press, to which the wretched creature attaches himself, when he has been kicked out of every other profession. At Eton, Terriss and Abingdon fought until "their eyes were sable," and I must give Terriss the credit even in his schooldays of considering his companion Abingdon a very bad lot altogether. Eventually the world goes so well with Terriss that he is sent out by the War Office—though only of the rank of Major—in command of an expedition to the Soudan. I suppose the authorities were hard up for Colonels and had to fall back on Majors. Abingdon, who has changed his name and become a war correspondent, asks Terriss to take him out. Terriss never liked the fellow, and, like the deceased Mr. Manning, the murderer, would doubtless have desired to "finish him off with a ripping chisel," but so brimming over is he with the milk of human kindness and love that without any consultation with Pall Mall, Major Terriss consents to yield to Abingdon's request. What such distinguished gentlemen as Archibald Forbes, Bennett Burleigh, and Melton Prior would say to such a companion is not hinted; but, be that as it may, Abingdon is empowered by some newspaper unnamed to describe the Soudanese campaign at the time of the captivity of General Gordon at Khartoum. Before the somewhat gloomy Terriss—gloom not created at all by his nature or temperament, but simply because the comic ladies and gentlemen on the stage will cut in and spoil his business—well, before the gloomy Terriss starts for Egypt, he vainly imagines that he is desperately in love with "a charming young widow he met in the train." But the lovely and confiding Jessie Millward is not a widow at all. She is the cast-off wife of this rascally war correspondent. Husband and wife meet before Terriss embarks, and happily put an end to the vapid talk of the "subs." finishing their dinner at a Southampton hotel. Sillier "subs." never yet wasted time in any Adelphi drama. It was a positive relief when Jessie Millward came in and met her journalistic husband, thereby compelling the comic ladies and gentlemen to go back to their dressing-rooms and play poker until they are wanted on the stage to spoil more scenes and interfere with the main current of the story.

When, therefore, Jessie and the penman meet, why does she not tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, to the innocent Terriss? Jessie is, no doubt, half inclined so to do, but she remembers the Etonian's basilisk eye, and has no doubt encountered his fists as well as Terriss has done on the Eton playing fields. So Terriss and Abingdon go off to the war with those dreadful "subs." as merry as sandboys, leaving poor miserable Jessie at home to be protected by the comic relief.

When the war correspondent arrives in Egypt he "chums up" with a mealy-mouthed German in knickerbockers and old boots, who looks like the gentleman who used to sing, "Oh, vere, oh, vere, is my leetle dog gone" in the play; but this maudlin German only wails of his missing "moo cows." The Teutonic Mackintosh is almost as great a villain as the journalist, and they put their heads together to ruin poor Terriss, who, being virtually a prisoner, looks more melancholy than he did in Act 1, though he ought to cheer up, since a merciful providence has removed the vapid "subs." from the scene.

The twin villains, German and English, if, unlike their master the Devil, they cannot quote the Scriptures, clearly show that they understand the text. They adopt the biblical incident of putting some stolen money into the mouth of Terriss' sack, and the forlorn Adelphi hope is tied up by one of the disciples of the Mahdi, to be starved to death like Constantine Brancomir in "For the Crown." When crucified and helpless, the as yet unconverted Terriss is exposed to the extra torture of being insulted by his old Eton pal, who not only refuses to release him or to give him a cup of cold water or even "pison," but wags his head at him according to historical precedent, and says "Vah! Vah!" But as in the case of Coppée's fine play, a veiled Egyptian Melitza dashes out of the desert, falls upon Terriss's manly and exposed breast, into which happily she does not plunge her dagger, which might be dangerous, but forthwith she cuts the hanging man's cords and presents him with the dagger in order that he may be revenged on the treacherous Abingdon, and dispatch him straight away. But Terriss prefers to dispatch him very slowly indeed, and it takes him two long acts to mutter "vengeance is mine," and to be ultimately converted to Christianity by Jessie Millward, after the fashion of Marcus Superbus and Mercia in Shaftesbury-avenue. There is evidently some little peculiarity about this dagger presented by the Soudanese Melitza to the released Lion Terriss. Abingdon is presumably either, like a cat, possessed of nine lives, or his brutal body is proof against any weapon but a Soudanese dagger I should have thought that a revolver or a handy sword might have done the trick; but no, if Abingdon is to die, it must be done by the dagger, or not at all. At least this is insisted on with iteration, and contrary to all dramatic precedent. The Eton villain, as it happens, does not die by the dagger after all. The drama is full of these unconventional surprises. When Abingdon is caught by Terriss—who has turned himself, after the Soudanese campaign, from a soldier into an Oxford Doctor of Divinity at Commemoration, in a red and black gown, a costume of penance worn by the soldier presumably to warn the audience of his coming conversion to Christianity—Terriss, who, I must own, is a little bit spiteful, prods Abingdon in the hand with the dagger, just to give him a taste of the Soudanese steel. But the abject confession, rung so "pointedly" from Abingdon with the dagger that pins his palm on to the table, is eventually consigned to the limbo of dramatic but forgotten things. Nothing comes of the dagger or the confession either.

The Sanitary Engineering Co. (Carter Bros.), 65, Victoria-st., Westminster, for making Sanitary Surveys in London or country.

It is time now to convert Terriss, who still wears his blood-red cloak of repentance. The erstwhile Atheist, who has said some really very naughty things about the Powers that be, is to be added to the Army of Martyrs headed by Headley Vicars, Havelock, and General Gordon. Henceforth he will go out to battle with a Bible in his sack. The Adelphi Mercia is, of course, Jessie Millward. She does not lead her convert into the arena, but up the Alps, which are so strangely constructed that the couple do not even meet Abingdon, whom they have preceded along the narrow path hardly wide enough for a couple of goats to pass each other, and who arrives at the top ages before the hero and heroine. The audience prays earnestly for the conversion of St. William Terriss, for it has been bored to distraction by the scoundrelly German thief and liar, who has also been converted to Christianity when he should be "doing time" on the treadmill. This oily scoundrel babbles about his "coos" so often that to the majority the very odour of milk will be distasteful henceforth, and he is allowed by the unconventional authors to go unpunished for his crimes and canting imposture. If Abingdon and the "cooing" German had been put into a sack and flung over the precipice, no one would have experienced so much as a flutter. But instead of that, Abingdon and Terriss do an acrobatic fall, Terriss is saved by a convenient bramble, and the convert and the grass widow try to save the ghastly grinning Abingdon by a "pully-hauly" feat with a rope. This, however, Providence will not allow. Abingdon is not to be admitted to Paradise at any price. Down he must go. So the rope breaks, and exit the Etonian journalist into the glacier. Serve him well right. I believe, if the wretch had been saved, that the Adelphi pit and gallery would have revolted. The cry for unconventionality may have some plausible reason in it. But we cannot allow the Biblical drama to save Adelphi scoundrels; it would be positively immoral so to do. They must die, and the clear note of dramatic vengeance must be sounded.

With such an accomplished literary man as Mr. Comyns Carr at the figurehead, it is needless to say that the play is well written, or at least as well written as an Adelphi play has need to be. Were Mr. Carr to give to this theatre the kind of work that he gives to the Lyceum, he would not be the artist he unquestionably is. The acting all round is quite up to the Adelphi standard. Both Mr. Terriss and Miss Millward are at their very best, the one manly, vigorous, energetic, and convincing; the other tender, forcible, and human. The stage has few better actresses of the English Mrs. Kendal school than Miss Jessie Millward, and she has no affectations to disfigure her style. I should, I own, have been puzzled in casting the play whether to award the villain to Mr. Abingdon or Mr. C. N. Somerset—the first has the jaunty ease, the last has the power. And the horrible villain of this play really requires the kind of melodramatic power that Henry Irving shows in the "Lyons Mail." The Eton ruffian is a kind of Duboscq, Robert Macaire, and Bill Sikes rolled into one. It is a Frederic Lemaître part; but where is the Frederic Lemaître of the English stage? The heads of authors may teem with schemes, but where are the artists to interpret them? Mr. Abingdon has never done anything better. He is an artist, and a subtle one into the bargain. He thinks out all his work. If he could quite have succeeded as the blackguard journalist he would have demanded recognition as the best melodramatic actor on the boards. He missed the prize, but he was a very good proxime accessit. The comic relief was, to tell the truth, a little tedious. Harry Nicholls and his companions did their best, but the comic interest did not spring naturally out of the story; and have we not had quite enough of Harry Nicholls and the pyjamas? The joke is getting as wearisome as the old one of the low comedian and the squashed bandbox. The fun was slabbed in, and was desperately heavy on hand the first night. Doubtless it has now all been cut to order, and the critics are being blamed for the defects that they pointed out, and by this time have been remedied. An error corrected on the stage is an error that never existed. Authors will always point to their play and say "How beautiful it is!" never "How indifferent it was!" I have very little doubt that by this time the comic scenes have been reasonably adjusted, and that Mr.

Mackintosh no longer makes those incessant and mournful allusions to his Alpine "coos," which are about as unnecessary to the play as their depressing master with his "skim-milk" virtue. But, joking apart, the audience seemed to be intensely interested in "Boys Together," and swallowed it whole, as schoolboys do in the case of a big peppermint bull's eye.

NOTES FROM PARIS.

THE FRENCH SIR FRANCIS JEUNE.

PARIS learned the other day from the papers that a charming actress, reputed for her mignonnes grâces and swan-like neck, the daughter of a venerated historian, and her husband had been divorced for torts réciproques. What "mutual wrongs" may be in such a case every one is left to guess—or try to guess. In England there would have been no glossing or veiling over. You would have had several columns a day for a week for your enlightenment. Divorces afford the one chance for respectable papers and respectable readers to indulge in views of human nature from the "naturalist" standpoint. But French papers need no Divorce-court revelations, as the journalists on their staffs can write much better tales out of their own heads. They can give them a literary touch which barristers rarely attain to. By general consent, and from regard to innocent members of respondents' and co-respondents' families, divorces are carried through without that scandal, which is, as it seems here to us, the delight of English men and English ladies, even though they be of the Grundy kindred. There is none of that public washing of soiled linen—and family linen, too—which sometimes shows the world and his wife that Peers and Peeresses are just like ordinary mortals. However, the ferocious attacks and cross attacks of which Sir Francis Jeune is often the witness lend to French readers of English journals an interest they would otherwise not have. A Frenchman's present notion, as taken from Divorce-court trials, is that "Pairesse d'Angleterre" and "femme perdue" are nearly synonymous.

Sir Francis Jeune does not, I suppose, receive visits from fair clients of Sir George Lewis before they come into Court. A French Judge may be properly called upon at home to receive explanations from a fair respondent or suitor on delicate matters which she fears her counsel cannot quite understand. The suing or responding husband can only do so if quite sure the wife has been trying the eloquence of tears and the subtle effects of sentimental reasons. Thus the Judge becomes the sympathising confidant of couples seeking to be disunited. He may, should they prove desirable persons to know, become a fast and faithful friend. Their suits are expedited in camerâ. Notice is not given of the impending trial, which is over in a trice. Newspaper sympathy takes the discreet form of non-intervention. If the case is mentioned at all, three or four lines are thought enough.

A divorce for mutual wrongs is granted when man and wife have been unfaithful to each other, and the judge thinks there is little to choose between them. Legally it means this: that judgment is given for the husband against the wife and for the wife against the husband. Each party wins his or her suit, but is worsted in the cross suit of the other party. When there are children—as in the case of the delightful actress and her cross-grained husband—the Bench decides, after judging there have been torts réciproques, to have them brought up by a third party. But there are the costs of the suits and the expense of education to be settled. Infidelity is looked upon as an absolute sin by an English judge and jury. Not so in France. A Judge (there are no divorce juries) can here pare down breaches of the seventh commandment when he views them in the light of surrounding circumstances. Of course, if the husband or the wife be poor, he or she escapes all costs. But should man and woman be equally wealthy—the common case in France—what happens? A curious appraising of the liability of both parties. There is, I think, no parallel to it in England. This is how it is done:—

Suppose the first offence were committed by the husband, whom we will call the Comte du Vieux-Château: there will be a very bad mark against him, even though, sin for sin, that of the husband is held to be somewhat lighter than that of the wife, because she is a woman. But if he is a man of wealth, liable to temptation, and was travelling by himself, but having offered his wife to take her abroad, this will be an important circumstance. It will entitle him to, say, a discount of 25 if not 50, or, perhaps, 75 per cent. on his black marks. The Comtesse, in his absence, also fell. There would be three degrees of guilt, according as she sent her husband abroad alone, in the expectation of his sinning (to get up a case against him); if she had no evil designs, but, hearing of his conduct, sinned to be quits; or was ignorant of it at the time of her fall. In the latter case, because a woman, she would be more guilty. If an actress, the erring wife is considered not more bound by a moral law than a man. French judges do not believe in the stage as a possible school for virtue. Their notion is that, short of a miracle, an actress must fall. A liaison on either side, if entered into in the home, is a serious affair. It is like the old English law that made a distinction between stealing damp and dry linen in a field.

The judge, after totting up the bad marks he has mentally tallied against either party, and taking into account all circumstances of sex (sometimes age), profession, provocation, iteration, scandal, condoning, and so on, will perhaps order the Comte du Vieux-Chateau to pay two-fifths, and the Comtesse three-fifths for the education of the children. Supposing the Comte was "imprudent" in the choice of male friends he asked to his house, then he might have to pay four-fifths, and the Comtesse only one-fifth. A suit for separation before Naquet's law was passed was refused to a husband who had invited the Prince of Orange (Prince Citron) to pay visits of several days to his country house. He ought to have known better. The costs of a fair sinner trapped in a restaurant supping en parti fine with another Royal wanderer were also reduced because of her husband's "imprudence" in encouraging the visits of the illustrious personage. This Royal jouisseur escaped being taken before a commissary of police by giving Prince Citron's visiting card as his own to the detective who made the arrest. The lady was allowed to go into a back room to put on her bonnet. There she quickly changed her clothes for those of a pastry-cook's boy, and with a basket of plates on her head got away before the eyes of the detectives. This scandal was thought very bad by the judge, but marital "imprudence" was set down as nearly tantamount to a letter of licence. Should the Comte be a cross-grained, sour husband, who keeps his best manners for the boudoirs of pretty women, then his share of the costs, no matter what the Comtesse did, might be brought up to nine-tenths. In this case the lady might be congratulated by her friends on "a moral victory."

These nice adjustments of the scales of justice do not affect the theoretical question as to the guilt of the couple —for we supposed both parties to be guilty. Rather the idea is that each party must pay in proportion to the damage his or her conduct has done to the "partnership" (association), which is the legal definition of marriage in the French Code.

All Paris will be able to see the coming Imperial visitors. The general holiday to mark their arrival will enable all the schoolboys and schoolgirls to enjoy the spectacle. It is now decided that they are to follow, so far as the Palais Bourbon, nearly the route taken by the Shah the first time he came here. He stayed at the Petit Bourbon — then vacant, because the National Assembly sat at Versailles. The difference will lie in the Rue de la Faisanderie, which is taken in preference to the Bois de Boulogne, to enable the families of M. de Freycinet and other Deputies living in that street to see the Czar and Czarina proceeding from Passy-green to the Russian Embassy. From the Esplanade des Invalides they are to take an unnecessarily devious route. Instead of turning into the Rue de Grenelle St. Germain—in which their future temporary residence stands—they are to turn into the Rue de l'Université, drive then down the Rue de Iéna, pass by the south entrance of the Chamber of Deputies into the Rue de Bourgogne, and then into the Boulevard de St. Germain, to enable the War Minister to let his staff and endless ladies salute them as they pass. The Rues de Lille and Solferino are also to be driven through, thus enabling the families of a number of Deputies residing there to witness the sight of the day. Any one desirous of seeing how well things are managed, so as to afford an historical spectacle to the greatest possible number, should study a map of Paris. Would as much care be taken in London, if an Imperial ally visited the Queen, to put him through his paces for such a length of way? The visit to Versailles will also be turned into a gratis spectacle. Their Imperial Majesties are to lunch in the Palace, and to see the grandes eaux—which cannot be what they were thirty years ago. The conduits are greatly out of repair, and most of the basins in a ruinous state. Rats swarm in the Trianon gardens. They have lost all sense of fear, and gather round picnic parties. Time's effacing fingers are visibly at work on the Swiss village and the trees sent by Joseph II. from Vienna for Marie Antoinette to plant. The famous silver poplar, that shaded the steward's or bailie's house, was snapped in two a short time ago by a storm. The small square palace, however, is as it is "believed" she left it. The whole place looks like a faded beauty, who wants to war against the effects of Time with cheap cosmetics and adornments that suit not her age.

LETTER FROM THE LINKMAN.

SEVERAL striking phrases, Dear Lady Betty, have recently obtained currency, and it is important, in the interest of historic truth, that the origin of these should be established at once.

. . . . .

A well-known lady, referring to divorce, is supposed to have said, "C'est le commencement de la femme." This is an obvious alteration of the celebrated phrase which Talleyrand adopted, though it was not he who created it.

. . . . .

Dr. Jameson at Krugersdorp did not call to his troopers "Follow my white flag." The correct sentence was the memorable rallying cry of Henry IV.: "Follow my white plume."

. . . .

When the Duke of Devonshire—who was then Lord Hartington—withdrew from the Liberal Party, and joined the Unionists, he did not look round to the Irish Home Rule members, and murmur, "Et il faut quitter tout cela!" It was Cardinal Mazarin who said that upon his death-bed, referring to his favourite art treasures.

. . . . .

A recently-created Peer did not have the message conveyed to Lord Salisbury before a critical division, "If you wish to bribe me you must send me a coronet." It was Demetrius who said to the Emperor Caligula, "If you wish to bribe me you must send me your crown."

. . . . .

It is not true that a prominent Conservative recently declared that "Speech was given to Mr. Balfour to disguise the thoughts of Lord Salisbury." It was Talleyrand who created the phrase, "Speech was given to man to disguise his thoughts."

. . . . .

"All the other sciences have rules and principles: patriotic stock-jobbing has none," is a sentence which has been erroneously attributed to Mr. Cecil Rhodes. It was Marshal Saxe who said, "All the other sciences have rules and principles: war has none."

. . . . .

The phrase "The Tory alliance with Mr. Chamberlain is a Liberal education," was never uttered by a Conservative Cabinet Minister. It is a manifest parody of the celebrated saying of Sir Richard Steele concerning Lady Elizabeth Hastings, that "To love her was a liberal education."

. . . . .

To avoid serious errors being made in the future, it is necessary to trace at once the origin of these memorable phrases, and to give them in their accurate form.

* * * * *

It was telegraphed from New York on Friday, that on landing, when Li Hung Chang was received by General

Cycling Suits are a speciality at Ulster House, Conduit-street, London, W., where Ulsters, Overcoats, and Capes are kept ready for immediate use.

M'Cook, he asked the latter, "Where did you all become Generals?" There is a companion story to this which Sir Walter Scott told. A Persian ambassador of that day was being conducted over Holyrood Palace. When shown the series of portraits of the kings of Scotland, he asked the housekeeper:—

"You paint them yourself?"

This, in all humility, she at once said was not the case.

"You no able? You try, and you paint better."

These Easterns do not use flowery compliments in their conversations with Christians.

* * * * *

Li Hung Chang, who was present at the Coronation of the Czar, is said to have considered the appalling catastrophe which occurred during the festivities at Moscow as a very serious evil omen. It may be interesting, therefore—as no writer has yet drawn attention to the fact—to recall that a similar catastrophe occurred in Paris during the festivities organised in honour of the marriage of that ill-mated and ill-fated pair, Marie Antoinette and the Dauphin. The following quotation from an article which was published in the Edinburgh Review in July, 1859, graphically describes the occurrence:—

"The marriage was solemnised in the Chapel of Versailles on the forenoon of May 16. . . . The ceremony was hardly ended when the sky was darkened by clouds and the rain fell in torrents. . . . Through the mismanagement of the municipal authorities, who insisted on superseding the regular police for the occasion, the crowd got jammed in the Place Louis Quinze (now Place de la Concorde), and a furious conflict had already commenced between those who wished to come in and those who were struggling to get out, when the scaffolding round the statue on which the ornamented lamps were hung caught fire. The alarm spread; the efforts to escape grew frenzied; the strong trampled down the weak; the firemen dashed to the spot with their engines over every obstacle, and when the confusion ceased the outlets and much of the open space were found heaped with the dying and the dead."

It is curious that attention has not been called to the strange similarity there is in the two terrible occurrences. History has yet to unfold what it has in store for the Czar and Czarina.

* * * * *

The appointment of Mr. William Conyngham Greene to replace Sir Jacobus de Wet as British Agent to the Transvaal Republic is in every way admirable. Though Mr. Conyngham Greene is clever and has experience; he has not until now had a substantial opportunity of distinguishing himself; for to be Chargé d'Affaires at Stuttgart and Darmstadt in these days is, from the Diplomatic point of view, almost equivalent to being buried alive. "Let Tippoo Sahib do his best," said Hyder; "he has his reputation to make."

It is officially announced that whilst he is employed in the Transvaal, Mr. Greene is to hold the personal rank of Chargé d'Affaires. Has Mr. Chamberlain, then, promoted the capital of the Transvaal Republic into a Diplomatic post? If President Kruger has succeeded in making Mr. Chamberlain change the form of representation, he may be congratulated upon having gained another Diplomatic victory.

* * * * *

The death of Miss Mildred Beresford Hope, which occurred last week, will be regretted by all her contemporaries who knew her. The late Miss Hope was a niece of Lord and Lady Salisbury, who were both much attached to her. A very amiable, agreeable, intelligent, and accomplished lady, having much experience of society, Miss Hope had many friends who will deplore her death, and will sympathise with her popular family.—Believe me to be, very truly yours,

MARMADUKE.

To Overcome Weakness.—Pepper's Quinine and Iron Tonic gives New Life, Appetite, Health, Strength, Energy. Cures Neuralgia, Indigestion, Pepper's Nerve Tonic. Debility. Kept everywhere.

SPORTING NOTES.

St. Frusquin has been in regular work at Newmarket during the last few days, and it seems a pity that the colt was struck out of the Leger with such reckless impetuosity, as he would have been perfectly fit to run at Doncaster. Whatever may have been the nature of the injury which St. Frusquin sustained, it was evidently of a very slight character, and its importance appears to have been preposterously exaggerated. St. Frusquin will, of course, start for the Jockey Club Stakes of £10,000 on October 1, and this race must be a good thing for him if he goes on all right, as he meets Persimmon on the same terms as when he beat the Prince of Wales's colt at Newmarket in July—i.e., with 3 lb. the best of the weights. There is nothing in the entry that is likely to trouble St. Frusquin and Persimmon, as they hold Sir Visto, Kirkconnel, Regret, Troon, and Laveno all quite safe. Labrador will have 3 lb. the best of the weights with St. Frusquin, who has to give a stone to Knight of the Thistle, supposing that Mr. McCalmont's steed is in a fit condition to run. Mr. L. de Rothschild's colt has two previous engagements in the Newmarket Triennial and in the Great Foal Stakes, but he will, no doubt, be reserved for the Jockey Club Stakes. I see nothing to beat St. Frusquin in the entry for the Champion Stakes of £1,000 at the Newmarket Second October Meeting, and there are neither penalties nor allowances in that event. Then a week later St. Frusquin has another nice engagement in the Sandown Foal Stakes of £2,000, which appears to be as complete a certainty for him as the Champion Stakes.

The weights for the Cesarewitch and Cambridgeshire are to be published to-morrow, but I do most earnestly advise my speculative readers to leave this event alone for several weeks to come. There will be a long list of quotations on both handicaps, but these early transactions represent merely the harum-scarum fancies of eager, greedy, fatheads, who know nothing whatever respecting the intentions of the owners of the horses which they are so infatuated and so audacious as to "rush" to prominent positions in the betting.

The Prince of Wales has sold his horse Serpa Pinto (1890), by Galliard out of Pinbasket, who has won several Queen's premiums, to Lord Arthur Cecil, who has purchased the animal for the Government of Trinidad.

Writing a fortnight ago about the Ebor Handicap, I gave a plumper for Dingle Bay, whose victory was received with much satisfaction, as Lord Derby's colours are very popular. The stable were exceedingly confident, and Lord Stanley and Lady Alice Stanley came all the way from Bolton Abbey with the Duchess of Devonshire to see the horse run. Of course, with a field of four, the Ebor was the ghost of the shadow of the race which it used to be in days when there was heavy betting for three weeks, and the event was one of the most important of the summer handicaps, ranking with the Northumberland Plate and the Goodwood Stakes, both of which have shared its fate. However, there was a most exciting finish between Dingle Bay and Posterity (who carried the bulk of the Yorkshire money), and it was only in the very last stride that Lord Derby's horse got up and made a dead heat, but in the decider he won very easily indeed. Son o' Mine again disappointed his friends, of whom there were legions, for Lord Durham's beast was plunged upon with frantic zeal, being backed, I believe, for no less a sum than £8,000 in one hand. This handicap would certainly have fallen to Drip if she had been kept for it, but her penalty for winning at Stockton destroyed her chance.

I was also fortunate in giving plumpers for Helm for the Oaks and for Canonbury for the Convivial Stakes; and, with 5 to 2 laid against her, Mr. Pilkington's filly was far and away the best thing of the week. This was an excellent performance, as the filly was giving 13 lb. to Lord Zetland's Puff Ball, who was thought to be a real good thing. Fortalice won the Prince of Wales'

Plate for Lord Ellesmere, giving more than a stone to Restored, a colt belonging to Sir B. Maple that was very much fancied, and behind was The Wake, who was a great tip of the sharps. Fortalice had been well galloped at Newmarket, and this is by far her best performance, but she has no pretensions to first-class form. Monterey ran well for the Gimcrack Stakes, being beaten by only a head by Silver Fox. Intense ought to have won this race, but she was shut in and could not get through.

Labrador won the Great Yorkshire Stakes in a canter, Nouveau Riche, who was very much fancied indeed, having no chance with him, and the race was run at a good pace throughout. Labrador can clearly stay well, and he is the only animal in the Leger entry (except the French colt Arreau) that has won over the Doncaster distance. It is simply idiotic to judge Labrador by his running in the Two Thousand, as he was then backward, and he has probably improved 21 lb. during the last four months. As to all the delirious cackling about the inferiority of Labrador to Regret in their trials, I do not suppose that any sane creature would back Regret to beat his stable companion over the Leger course. Regret may be a good horse over a mile, but it is quite certain he lacks stamina; and Labrador will be the Duke of Westminster's best candidate at Doncaster. Regret is stated to have been seized with influenza, but this news must be incorrect, seeing that the colt was sent a good mile gallop on Friday. I fancy that Regret will not be seen at Doncaster, but that he is to be reserved for his autumn engagements at Newmarket, and he is entered for the Liverpool St. Leger of £500, which is run on November 11. The Duke of Westminster, who is now at Lichmore, in Sutherlandshire, a place which is about thirty miles from the nearest station, will not come south for the Doncaster meeting.

There has been no betting on the St. Leger, and, although Persimmon continues to give great satisfaction at Newmarket, yet there is no disposition to bet the odds on him. Persimmon's stamina has to be entirely taken upon trust, but he has certainly gone as well as possible in his gallops over the Leger distance. Santa Maura will run for the Leger, and she ought to win some good races for Mr. Baird during the autumn, as she now appears to be in excellent form, and moves well and freely. It is said that neither Arreau nor Trébons will be sent over for the Leger, a decision which is to be regretted, and their withdrawal is a piece of fatuity, all things considered, as the Grand Prix winner must have been a formidable opponent to Persimmon, and some people assert that Trébons is better than Arreau. M. E. Blanc ran second at Doncaster to Common with Révérend, and it is quite on the cards that next Wednesday his candidate might have obtained the first place. There has been a prodigious trumpeting about the superlative merits of Persimmon, and the Leger seems to be generally regarded as being practically over, but there was just the same fanfaronade two years ago about Ladas. It will not surprise me to see Labrador outstay Persimmon and win the St. Leger, if there is a fast-run race, and Conroy or Rampion can be started to insure a good speed.

If ever there was a real certainty on paper it was Tokio II. for the Grand Prize of Baden, and how he came to be merely backed against the field (six started) when it was in reality any odds on him, I cannot understand. Last year Tokio started first favourite for the Cambridgeshire, with the respectable weight of 8 st. 3 lb. on his back, and it was quite understood afterwards that his bad running was to be attributed to the fact that he would not do his best in a large field. Lord Drummond was a doleful representative of England, but Gulistan would not have been able to beat the Hungarian horse. The value of this stake is to be raised in 1898 from £4,500 to £5,000, and no doubt a number of English horses will be entered. It is the richest race in Europe for five-year-olds and upwards.

The hearts of breeders must sink within them when they contemplate Messrs. Tattersall's catalogue of the Doncaster sales, which fills twenty-three columns of the Calendar. It only needs a hurried glance through the list to convince one that two-thirds of the animals to be offered will either be sent back or sold at a considerable loss. It is marvellous that many breeders do not yet appear to apprehend the certain fact that it is sheer waste of time, trouble, and money to send up to Doncaster or Newmarket animals which are not sired by "fashionable" horses, and even the persuasive ingenuity of Messrs. Tattersall will not obtain bids for such creatures. Some sporting writers make it their business to puff zealously with intrepid plausibility all stock which is commended to their notice by judiciously placed advertisements, and they are ready to eulogise anything and everything with wearisome iteration. If any breeders still cherish in their credulous bosoms the chimerical idea that these puffs are of the very slightest benefit to their stock, they had better dismiss at once and for ever any such fantastical illusion. The ardour of bidders at next week's sales will not be stimulated by the recollection of any brilliant successes on the part of the animals for which such extravagant prices were paid at Doncaster twelve months ago, for up to the present time they have achieved nothing, nor are any of them talked of as being likely to distinguish themselves. There are about a hundred lots to be offered on Tuesday, but I can see nothing worth notice, except a colt by Quartus out of Polpetti (dam of Xury), and a filly by Janissary out of Wifey (dam of Satiety), in the Manor House, Middleham, lot; and colts by St. Serf out of Bide-a-Wee (dam of Althorp), and by Martagon out of Exning Lass (dam of Stewarton), which belong to Mr. Lawrence. On Wednesday Mr. J. B. Wood sends up a filly by Orme out of Cassimere in his lot; and the Bruntwood Stud team includes colts by St. Simon out of Clapper, by Kendal out of Romance, by Kendal out of Lucy Ashton, and by Kendal out of Lady of the Lea, an own brother to Lesterlin, and fillies by St. Simon out of Link Girl, by Kendal out of Maid Marian, and by St. Simon out of La Cloche. These animals are sure to realise very high prices if they are liked. One of Mr. Marshall's is a filly by Orme out of Ierne. Lord Scarbrough sends up twelve, eight of which are sired by Prism. The Westerham Hill lot includes the first yearlings by Orion, and I hope this lot will sell well, as it is announced that there will be no reserve, and no lots will be privately disposed of. Many breeders have ruined their sales by idiotic reserves and friendly biddings, which lead invariably to mortifying miscarriages of all kinds, while buyers soon become perplexed and disgusted, with the result that they betake themselves elsewhere when they contemplate a speculation in yearlings. I will deal next week with Thursday's sales, which are always the most important of the week at Doncaster. Sir Tatton Sykes sends up nine, and he has nothing this year out of Plaisanterie or Marchioness, whose two yearlings fetched 5,000 gs. last September. The Sledmere lot includes a colt by Galopin out of Heresy by Hermit. Last year a filly by St. Simon out of Heresy realised 3,800 gs., and 2,200 gs. was paid for an own sister to Buckingham, of whom an own brother will be offered next week.

There will be some interesting sport at Doncaster next week, no doubt, but the prospects of the meeting are not particularly bright. The Doncaster programme ought to be revised and strengthened, and the value of the two-year-old stakes should be increased, while another £1,000 nursery ought to be established. There is no excuse for the parsimony of the management, as the revenue of the meeting is very large indeed. Not one farthing is even nominally added to the Leger, which is simply a stake of £25 each, and of the £500 which is ostensibly given to the Champagne Stakes, a considerable proportion is got back through the reprehensibly mean device of making the minor profit go to the fund. Let the Champagne Stakes be made a subscription stake of £3,000 on the Kempton Park lines, with adequate penalties for winners.

It would be a flagrant waste of space to discuss at any length the large entry for the Champagne Stakes, as the race is simply a certainty for Velasquez, and if Lord Rosebery cares to reserve the colt for his autumn engagements, his stable companion, Chelandry, would be able to beat Lowly, The Wake, Monterey, Cyrenian, Brooch, Sauce Tartare, and Puff Ball, which are the best of the "public" lot. I omit Goletta, because, as I have already stated in TRUTH, Mr. de Rothschild's filly will not run again until the Newmarket First October Meeting. The Tattersall Sale Stakes may be won by Falkland. There are actually eighty entries for the Rous Plate of £500, and with an entrance of £5 on each nomination, the owners have the satisfaction of subscribing £400, leaving only £100 to be provided from the fund! This race may fall to Galtee More, the entry also including Eager, High Chancellor, Sagittarius, and Merle. The Prince of Wales' Nursery of £1,000, which is run on Friday, may be left alone until next week.

As to the minor three-year-old races, the Scarborough Stakes may be left to Shaddock, or the Duke of Westminster can win with Conroy. The Zetland Stakes will fall to Merchiston in the probable absence of Roquebrune. The Park Hill Stakes, which will be worth nearly £1,100, will be a most interesting race if it brings out Santa Maura, Canterbury Pilgrim, Drip, Miss Fraser, Serfdom, Roquebrune, La Toison d'Or, Jolly Boat, and Helm. The conditions of the race are ridiculous, for, while winners of the One Thousand, Oaks, and other specified events have to carry penalties of 12 lb. or 7 lb. as the case may be, the winner (if entered) of the various £10,000 stakes and of the rich Coronation Stakes at Ascot escapes with 3 lb. only; Canterbury Pilgrim will, therefore, have to give 4 lb. to Helm, and on the Ascot running it will be a close race between the pair. I rather prefer the Oaks winner.

The Doncaster Stakes will be won by Labrador, as he can beat Santa Maura, Coylton, His Reverence, South Australian, and Red Ray. The Bradgate Park Stakes looks well for Devoué or Macbriar. Safety Pin is very well in for the Great Yorkshire Handicap, and it would not surprise me if the Prince of Wales's colt carried off the Cup, as he will have a considerable advantage in the weights with Sir Visto and Love Wisely. Mr. Bass's colt would never have won the Ascot Cup if Omnium II. had been ridden by a clever jockey.

Mr. Asquith, with his natural modesty, has announced that he has for the most part been vainly endeavouring to cut a decent figure at the game of golf. Being a singularly unambitious man, it is absurd to suppose that he considers golfing an essential qualification for the leadership of the House. However, it is just as well that he should follow Mr. Balfour's example and stir the passions of his followers for the ancient game. It is ridiculous to say that the game is dying out, or that its popularity is evanescent. But the fact remains that new recruits are not coming in rapidly this year, and that many clubs round the coast will find their gross fees much less than in former years. The fact is the visitor has just learned to bicycle, and he is exploring the neighbouring country instead of cutting up the local links.

No doubt a good many visitors to the seaside have discovered how soon the handle-bars of the bicycle and other bright parts get rusty with the sea air. Goodness only knows why the handle-bars are not turned out black like the other parts of the machine. It is said it looks so ugly. Well, let any colours you please be used. But the less polishing surface there is the more convenient is the machine. At Wood Green a professional meeting was successful so far as the number of spectators was concerned, but when Barden was given second in the final of the five miles scratch race and Drury first, the mob invaded the enclosure and hooted the referee, just as they had hooted the riders when they crawled in the second heat of that race. If judges are to be intimidated, there will soon be an end of professional cycling. Platt Betts' attempts at the mile and five-mile record were both failures. Pearce, aided by some good pacing, easily won the Polytechnic hundred miles championship. Considering the weather, Edge's times in his long-distance ride have been marvellous.

The Priory ground, Chichester, looked lovely for the annual lawn-tennis tournament, and the meeting was well attended. The grass had stood the dry summer very well, and the courts were in good order. The weather, unfortunately, when it was not wet was windy. There were few really well-known players competing, but the class of play was decidedly good. The twin brothers Allen were in good form, and had quite a good haul of "pots," although one of them in the handicap was beaten by H. Plaskitt, a boy of 16, who should make a first-class player. Of the lady players, Miss Scrimgeour and Miss Stonham were the best. Neither of them seemed over fond of volleying. The Bognor tournament was dated to commence on Tuesday. It is a minor affair, but that is no reason why there should be no netting, and why the balls should therefore wander all over the ground, which compares unfavourably with that at Littlehampton.

The Australians are to be congratulated on the brilliancy of their tour. They have not lost a match against a single county, and they wound up by disposing of Lancashire in very much the same way as they had done Gloucester. It is perhaps just as well that they had dry wickets for the greater part of the tour, otherwise McKibbin would have had a great time. His later performances clearly shows that he is a most dangerous man on anything like a bowler's wicket. It was perhaps lucky that the rain stopped play against Somerset. The western county had a very nice lead, and Robson had been very lucky with the ball. However, Somerset followed this up by beating Surrey in the most unexpected manner. In fact, one of the leading sporting papers at the end of the first day's play had a line, "Surrey in a safe position." They seemed to be, for they were a hundred runs on and Somerset had only two wickets to fall. But Hill and Tyler passed the Surrey score, and then Hayes was the only man to play Hedley's bowling. The result was the visitors to Taunton lost by nine wickets. There was some good forcing play in the match between Middlesex and Kent. Stoddart played one of the finest innings he has done this season, while Douglas, Warner, and Bromley-Davenport, all made useful scores. Sussex, or rather Ranjitsinhji and Fry, were unable to beat Notts, for Jones and Attewell were bowling well, and Shrewsbury, Wright, and Flowers were scoring as in days of old. Hampshire finished off the season in most satisfactory style, beating both Essex and Leicestershire with good margins in hand. These results were chiefly due to the exceptionally fine batting of Barton in each match, while Ward scored a century, and Barrett, a public school boy, also showed great promise; and Captain Bradford's bowling was most useful. Yorkshire came out champions, and easily beat Kent, despite a plucky effort by Burnup, who could get no one to stay with him.

As Lord Hawke is not going to take a cricket team to India this winter he will go with one to the West Indies. H. G. Leveson-Gower is also likely to go as well. The team will be much stronger, especially in bowling, than that which R. Slade Lucas took out. Some of the natives are very good fast round-arm bowlers. By the way, Mr. B. Cave, the Consul at Zanzibar, used to play cricket for Richmond. He was a good wicket-keeper and left-hand bat. As a footballer he played chiefly for the Old Merchant Taylors, and he was a deadly tackler at three-quarters.

MAMMON.

From MOSES MOSS to BENJAMIN BOSS.

Sunday.

MY DEAR BEN,—Although the unexpected happened again last week, and a fresh crop of untoward political incidents occurred, the effect upon the markets has been only temporary, and one of the developments—viz., the further shipments of large amounts of gold to New York—while producing stiffer rates in the money market, and depressing Consols and Home Rails, had, on the other hand, a very favourable effect upon American Rails.

Holiday Influences Passing Away.

A satisfactory feature was also the larger amount of business transacted in several departments, thus indicating that holiday influences were passing away. A good many operators have returned from their various trips, and in the course of this week quite a number of familiar faces will again be seen in the City and in the "House." I know, for instance, of half a dozen leading West Australian financiers who are expected back within the next few days. The most important movements have taken place in South African shares, and at one time street dealings became so active that it looked almost like old times. Then came the general set-back caused by the trouble in Zanzibar and the riots in Constantinople. The former was disposed of with admirable promptness, and although the latter again illustrated my remarks that as soon as the Cretan difficulty was settled some untoward event would be sure to come about in another portion of the tottering Ottoman Empire, the worst seems to be over again for a time, and the fighting so close at home has had the good effect of frightening the Sultan into accepting the proposals of the Ambassadors with reference to Crete. The Continental Bourses would perhaps have shown more nervousness were it not for the journey of the Czar, whose visit to Vienna has created a favourable impression, and, upon the whole, we shall therefore have plain sailing in foreign politics for some time to come. The sudden death of Prince Lobanoff, although quite unexpected, is not likely to prove a disturbing feature. The connection between the riots in Constantinople and the Kaffir Circus is as remote as could be, yet the latter suffered temporarily, and Paris, more especially, again shot the holdings of some of the stale "Bulls" upon our market. But the pause in the upward movement should really prove healthy, as a too rapid advance would become a danger to the stability of the market. That there will be a further important rise cannot now be doubted, and from what I can gather the big South African financiers are preparing to give it their strong support. The West Australian department is also bracing up again, and the fact that neglected shares are being picked up in all directions seems to point to the resumption of active operations by some of the leaders. Foreigners have been remarkably steady, and even Turks have not so far suffered to any marked extent. The greatest change, however, has come about in American Railway stocks, some of the big firms in Wall-street and on this side having put their shoulders to the wheel in order to squeeze the "Bears." In this they have been supported by the large gold shipments to New York, and by the temporary improvement in the political outlook. Almost the only department which marked declines all round is that of Home Rails. Dearer money, and continued adverse reports with reference to the dispute with the engineers in the Clyde shipbuilding trade, were the adverse influences.

Home Rails.

In my opinion far too much importance has been attributed to the efflux of gold to America. As I said some time ago, five millions sterling could easily be spared for this purpose, and so far not quite four millions have gone, while some amounts have been shipped direct from Australia to California. The dispute on the Clyde is so paltry that it is difficult to believe that it will lead to a general lock-out, especially as the London Executive of the Amalgamated Engineers is not supporting the men. As long as high-class investments remain at the present level, moreover, it cannot be said that values of Home Railway stocks are too high, and so far even Consols have given way but slightly. At the settlement stock proved scarce, and rates were light; and it is not surprising that at one time such favourite stocks as Dover "A" advanced to 103⅝, although they subsequently dropped again on the money and political scare to 103. In view of the excellent traffics of the South-Eastern, I cannot see any more promising stock for moderate speculation than Dover "A." Brighton "A" have reacted to 183¼. This stock is always more sensitive than other Home Rails, as it is held to some amount in France. The Heavy division has been depressed all round, the declines, however, not exceeding 1 to 2; and while traffics remain as satisfactory as they did during the past week, when the receipts again showed an increase of £62,000 in the case of fifty-six Companies, the position cannot be considered unsatisfactory, especially as the increase over 1894 is as much as £156,000. With reference to the Scotch stocks a great deal will depend upon the settlement of the dispute on the Clyde before September 12, when the notices will expire. In other respects the outlook is satisfactory. Advices from Glasgow are to the effect that the Glasgow and South Western dividend, which shows an increase at the rate of 1 per cent. against last year, must not be considered as a guide for the Caledonian and North British dividends, as the fact that no larger distribution is made was chiefly due to the disinclination of the Ayrshire Directors to allow the Deferred shareholders to receive any dividend in view of the intention which exists on the part of the Board to eventually buy out the Deferred interest. Favourable dividend announcements, and a settlement of the dispute in the shipyards, would bring about a very strong upward movement in both Caledonian Deferred and North British Deferred; and this seems to be quite worth playing for.

Yankees on the Up Grade.

For the first time for months the American market has shown distinct strength, and there appears to be a prospect of a more settled market in the immediate future. It is too much to hope for a lasting recovery, as political influences are too strong, and the Presidential election cannot be decided for two months yet. There is, however, a disposition to take a more hopeful view of the issue, partly owing to Mr. McKinley's letter of acceptance, in which he expressed the view that until an international agreement was reached with reference to silver the plain duty of the United States was to maintain the gold standard, and partly on the opening of the campaign of the Republican party by ex-President Harrison, who was received with great enthusiasm at a meeting in New York, at which 5,000 people were present, and at which he delivered a speech in favour of sound money. The view is also taken in some quarters that the silver trouble has been pretty well discounted by the heavy fall in quotations; but what has chiefly induced fresh courage into the "Bulls" in New York is the shipment of large supplies of gold from this side, the amount reaching £3,500,000 sterling, £800,000 of which was sent by the Campania on Saturday, while £718,000 in eagles are to be shipped on Wednesday. Powerful hands have been at work to bring about these gold shipments, and to give the market strong support; and it is an open secret that certain leading Anglo-American firms have combined with big Wall-street men to punish the "Bears." This will not apparently be difficult to do for the time being, especially in the case of Louisville and Milwaukee, which are very heavily oversold. But when the "Bears" have done their climbing-in, a fresh reaction would not be surprising, although perhaps not to as low a level as has lately been established. There are distinct signs that large English capitalists are picking up low-priced shares, taking their chance of the Presidential election, and locking up the stock in their safes. I met one of these men a day or two ago, who told me that he had bought 10,000 shares of the various stocks standing at rubbish prices, such as Readings, Union Pacifics, Missouri, Kansas and Texas, Erie, North Pacific Prefs., Denvers, &c.; and he maintained that anyone holding such an assortment long enough would make a lot of money. Perhaps he is right, and the risk for a rich man is not very great, although it must depend very much upon what view he takes of the ultimate outcome of the Presidental elections. As regards the present movement undertaken by the big firms to punish the "Bears," it was perhaps to some extent necessity which brought about this strong combination. A couple of months ago, as one of my Wall-street contemporaries puts it, large interests which had for years held the market in a close grip, that enabled them to control prices in spite of events, began to get out of their holdings owing to the unfavourable conditions. The stocks that came on the market broke prices, and the general course was a downward drift, one lot buying and holding for a few points, and then turning the load over to a new set of buyers, who were in turn exhausted or scared out. Now, with prices down twenty points or more, it has become necessary for large interests to take the market in hand for a time in order to steady it, as their extensive holdings forbid any further, or, at least, a considerable decline, which might get the market beyond control. Amongst the men who are actively engaged in the present campaign against the "Bears" is the well-known Wash. Connor, connected with the Gould interest, who has more particularly taken Western Union and Manhattan under his wing. It should not, however, be forgotten that exports from the United States have largely increased. In July already the exports of the four principal American staple articles showed a total increase of 6,000,000 dols., and now there is a strong movement in grain, the greater scarcity of money stimulating shipments. Thus it is reported from Chicago that the farmers along the lines of the Atchison and other western roads are finding it as difficult to get the banks to advance them enough money to carry their crops as are the representatives of other industries. The banks at present do not care to let their money out on any account, and want to have their resources well in hand next November, so as to be prepared to meet any contingency that may arise when election returns are received. This action of the banks will compel the farmers to realise at once, and will start the grain traffic on the roads sooner than if things were left to take the usual course. Officials of the roads expect a much greater movement of grain than they have known for many months to set in considerably earlier than usual, and there is no doubt that most of the present gold shipments are already being made against large consignments of grain and cotton to Europe. With reference to the Atchison, by the way, it is satisfactory to note that the earnings for the first six months of the current year have been sufficient to cover all fixed charges and leave a surplus, as will be seen from the following figures:—

	Dols.
Earnings, including income from investments ...	13,785,552
Expenses, including taxes and rentals	10,892,681
Profit	2,802,871
Present fixed charges for same six months	2,325,295
Surplus over fixed charges for the six months	477,576

This is, perhaps, nothing to boast of, but the bad times have to be reckoned with. It is not for me to predict the outcome of the Presidential elections, but I am inclined to think that our Yankee cousins will have enough good sense not to elect such a firebrand as the "boy" Bryan. Every effort is being made to educate the people towards sound money, and one of my Wall-street contemporaries actually bursts into poetry on the coinage question:—

If a dollar be a dollar—honest coin—without deceit—one may melt it, one may smelt it, but it's value won't retreat.
Melt ten dollars—silver dollars—in unbiased melting pot, and the silver "slug" resulting, only sells for "five the lot."
Melt gold dollars—melt an eagle in aforesaid melting pot—and the golden slug resulting quickly sells for "ten the lot"
Will you tell me—kindly tell me—how these dollars equal are—if a little glowing furnace put on only one a scar?
There was never yet equation that demanded legislation to establish right to be—an equation is equation—else it is a fallacy!
And I'm thinking—quietly thinking—that a poor man has poor sense—if he vote to have a dollar—that will melt to fifty cents.

Senator Sherman's speech on the silver question also appears to have made a good impression. This Statesman has not always been consistent, but he does not hesitate to reverse his ideas when he finds them wrong; and he pronounces now strongly against free coinage. In sympathy with American Railroad stocks, Canadian Pacifics and Grand Trunks have hardened again, and they will no doubt continue to fluctuate to some extent with the Yankee Market.

Champagne.—Périnet & Fils' Cuvée Réservée. Vintages 1884, 1887, and 1889, are of unrivalled quality and highly recommended for present consumption. Of all Wine Merchants.

Foreigners and South Americans.

The optimistic tone of the Continental Bourses continued last week, until, on Thursday morning, like a bolt from the blue, the tidings burst upon them of renewed Armenian riots in Constantinople, and of the actual capture of the Ottoman Bank premises by the conspirators. Curiously enough these rioters did not quite succeed in putting their hands into the tills of the institution; but considering the very grave position, it is surprising that Ottoman Bank shares did not drop below 11⅝, from which they have recovered to a moderate extent. There could hardly be any stronger proof of the rottenness of the Ottoman Empire than this outbreak, and it illustrates my contention that Turkish stocks had better be left alone. Sooner or later the inevitable must happen, and then we shall for some time see chaos in Turkey. Fortunately for the nerves of the Bourses the Tsar was being feasted at Vienna at the same time, so that there was no reason for assuming that Russia has been hatching the trouble, which has, at all events, had the effect of settling the Cretan question, provided the Sultan's adhesion to the programme of the Ambassadors does not come too late. Spanish and Italians have kept up very fairly, considering that Spain has now also an insurrection in the Philippine Islands, and Italy the difficulty with Brazil to contend with. As to the latter Republic, it will certainly not benefit by expelling the thrif Italians, who are contributing so largely towards the prosperity of other countries, such, for instance, as the Argentine Republic by the tilling of endless tracts of land. Argentine Government stocks have been in a state of suspended animation. Notwithstanding the further fall in the gold premium in Buenos Ayres, which has now dropped to below 170, there seems to be a general disposition to await the carrying out of the unification scheme. Uruguay bonds have been firm, the Old Loan at 49¾, the New Loan at 70, and I shall not be surprised to see a sharp upward movement whenever business becomes active again. In the various Central and South American rubbish stocks no fresh development has occurred, with the exception of a move on the part of an American Company which has made a contract with the Government of Honduras. This Company is to complete the Inter-oceanic Railway, and to receive from the Government a certain sum per annum towards the service of the External Debt. This amount is, however, not to exceed £20,000 per annum, and when it is considered that Honduras has a loan of £5,398,570 outstanding, and £11,000,000 sterling arrears of interest, it will readily be seen that there is not much hope for the bondholders from this little arrangement.

The Kaffir Circus Waiting.

Various circumstances have contributed to cause a temporary reaction in the Kaffir Circus. To begin with, Paris greatly disappointed the operators on this side by availing itself of the recent advance to pour stale holdings upon this market. Many French operators had been locked up ever since the Jameson raid with their stocks, and seized the first opportunity to get out. But such is the inconsistency of our volatile French neighbours, that I should not be one whit surprised if they were to buy back the shares, which they are now selling, at much higher prices in a few months' time. At all events the French taps appear now to be drying up, and the Paris market has readily followed the latest recovery from the spasms caused by the trouble in the East and the gold shipments. The position in the Transvaal is undoubtedly becoming more satisfactory; and Mr. Greene, who has of late acted for the British Government in Teheran, will find a very promising field for his activity in Pretoria. His choice appears to be another satisfactory move on the part of Mr. Chamberlain, as he is an able member of the Diplomatic Service, and has a considerable German and Dutch experience, and, what is most important, a complete knowledge of the Dutch language. His first duty should be to promote the more amicable understanding which is now existing between the Boers and the Uitlanders. That the Boers are prepared to make reasonable concessions was shown by the passing of the Liquor Bill, and in this connection it is quite refreshing to find from mail advices that a number of the members of the Volksraad with their wives paid a visit to the goldfields, and there gathered conviction as regards the baneful effects of the unrestricted sale of liquor in the compounds, from personal experience. The representative of Mr. J. B. Robinson, Mr. J. W. S. Langerman entertained the deputation at luncheon at the Langlaagte Estate Mines; and this first measure of reform will doubtless prove the forerunner of others. There is a very general impression that the Witwatersrand August crushings will again mark a record, and, if the increase in the output should be important, we may look for a fresh all-round rise. Already the market is fast recovering from the last set-back, and there is a total absence of rumours of further trouble in the Transvaal, the manufacturers of these reports realising the fact that no one would believe them any more. As regards the insurrection in Rhodesia, it does not appear to have altogether come to an end in consequence of Mr. Cecil Rhodes's interview with the native chiefs, but I suppose matters are drifting that way; and in the meantime Chartered shares, after reacting, have recovered to $3\frac{7}{16}$, and efforts are being made to create a market for the shares in the various Rhodesian Companies. The changes in prices for the week have again been mostly in the upward direction, after the early decline had been recovered; and advances of from $\frac{1}{4}$ to 1 are shown in Consolidated Goldfields, South African Gold Trust, Simmer and Jack, Balmoral, Nourse Deep, Wemmer, and dozens of others. The only important reaction has been in Ferreira, smaller declines also being marked in Heriot, Worcester, Rooderand, Violets, and Stanhopes. In the Robinson group, Randfonteins reacted to 3, and recovered to $3\frac{1}{8}$. The temporary decline was apparently due to French sales, which, however, have now come to an end, and I quite look for an important advance, the more so as the various sub-Companies in which the Randfontein is interested are all on the up-grade. Porges Randfontein, for instance, have advanced to $1\frac{15}{16}$, North Randfontein to $2\frac{1}{2}$, Robinson Randfontein to $1\frac{1}{2}$, Block "A" to $1\frac{1}{16}$; these movements having occurred on my statement that all these three mines will commence crushing in the near future, the Porges Randfontein, in fact, already commencing to crush on September 1. Langlaagte Estate have maintained a firm front at $5\frac{1}{2}$; Block "B" have advanced to $1\frac{15}{16}$, and Langlaagte Star are quoted $1\frac{5}{8}$. An improvement may be expected in all these shares. Knights, after a temporary decline, have recovered again to $7\frac{7}{8}$, and look like going much better. Modderfontein also receded at first, but are now firmer at $8\frac{1}{16}$ ex rights. Modderfontein Extensions are firm at $2\frac{1}{8}$, and purchasers of these at higher prices should take the opportunity of averaging. In the Barnato group some sensation has been caused by the circular issued to the shareholders in the Langlaagte Royal by Mr. F. J. Dormer; but the shareholders in that Company are evidently by no means scared by the statements made in that document, as is shown by the fact that the shares remain at $2\frac{1}{8}$; and I doubt if they have any particular wish to be presided over by Mr. Dormer, who seems to be so anxious to become a Director. Mr. B. I. Barnato has returned from his brief holiday, and is completing his great amalgamation scheme. So far the details have not yet been fixed, however, and the various reports which have appeared are mere or less efforts of imagination. It is to be hoped that the matter will be promptly settled, and that Mr. Barnato will take the shareholders of all the three Companies concerned into his confidence. Johannesburg Consolidated Investment have improved to 4; but Barnato Banks are unaltered at $2\frac{3}{8}$, and Barnato Consols stand at $2\frac{15}{16}$. Most of the Barnato gold mining shares have improved, although not maintaining top prices. New Primrose stand at 6, Glencairn at $3\frac{5}{8}$, New Rietfontein at $3\frac{3}{4}$, Buffelsdoorn, at $3\frac{1}{16}$, New Crœsus at $1\frac{11}{16}$. As I anticipated, Woodstock (Transvaal) have made a further step in advance, rising to $1\frac{3}{4}$, but this is only the commencement of an upward movement which should make much further progress. Waterfall Estates have risen to $\frac{3}{4}$, and look like going better. The shares in the Transvaal Exploring Company are also firmer at $1\frac{1}{16}$, and Rand Reefs have improved to 10s., as I thought they would. Mozambique at $1\frac{3}{4}$, and Henderson's Estates at $2\frac{3}{4}$, are the turn firmer; and Oceana remain at about $1\frac{3}{4}$; but in all these shares a further upward movement may confidently be expected. I learn that the accounts of the African Gold Properties are now being prepared, and will be submitted to the shareholders within the next week or two. If, as is being foreshadowed, these should show well, there will probably be a marked advance on the present price of $1\frac{5}{8}$. At one time last year they were quoted in the neighbourhood of $4\frac{1}{2}$. I have received several inquiries with reference to the Troye Exploration Company, and it seems to be quite time that the Directors of the Company should give an account of what has so far been done. The Balkis Eesterling has held a meeting at which the reconstruction of the Company was authorised; but there is no doubt that the management in the past has left very much to be desired, and care should be taken to improve this. From the Buffelsdoorn Mine advices have been received to the effect that the erection of the new sixty stamps is being pushed forward. This will make 170 stamps altogether, and as a large cyanide plant is also being completed, a very considerable output may be looked for. According to the consulting engineer's report, rich ore has been struck in the bottom of the main shaft at a depth of 1,000 ft. As the shaft struck against the much talked-of dyke at 800 ft., the latter must either have been cut through, or the reef found underneath it. Another amalgamation is contemplated in connection with the Jumpers Deep. The other day it purchased the Heriot and Jumpers Deep level and Donian Syndicate blocks, and now it is proposed to sell twenty claims to the Jupiter Gold Mining Company. I suppose that these little deals generally redound to the benefit of the financiers chiefly interested. Everybody is wondering what M. Jacques Lebaudy will do with the United Langlaagte Company, now that he has put it in liquidation. A reconstruction of the Gray's Mynpacht Developing Syndicate must take place sooner or later, although the Bothás series is stated to run through the property. The Company has a loan from Adler's Consolidated Land and Mining Corporation, which will doubtless have the control of the reconstruction. A few weeks ago I mentioned the formation of a new South African coal company under influential auspices—viz., the Penshaw Collieries Limited. I now learn that the venture has been taken up by some of the leading men in London as well as in South Africa, and that it is expected that the result will be a material development of the resources of the Stormberg and Molteno coalfields. There is a siding from the railway into the mine, which is appointed with all the necessary appliances, and Molteno coal has already been used in Kimberley for the last two or three years. Of late the demand has been steadily increasing, and it is now amongst the best known in use on the diamond fields, the New Bulfontein and several other mine using the same. The colliery has been very largely extended, and it is expected that the coal on the new part will be equal to that found in the old. The capital of £75,000 has been privately subscribed, so that no public subscription will be made. As dividends at the rate of 20 per cent. per annum are being foreshadowed, the shares at present quoted $1\frac{3}{4}$ are likely to attain a higher level. I have received a further number of communications from shareholders in the Abercorn Reefs, Limited, and the Umtoli Gold Reefs Company, Limited, who wish to join the movement for obtaining a thorough investigation of the affairs of these Companies; and in the meantime for resisting the call and forfeiture of the shares which has been attempted by the Directors. It is still necessary for two or three shareholders to take the trouble of forming a committee for directing the operations, which I obviously cannot undertake to do. I am doing my best for the shareholders; but they must put their own shoulders to the wheel if they wish to save their money. I hope, therefore, that two or three of the shareholders, residing in London and having the necessary energy and time at their disposal will form themselves into a committee; and I shall then be pleased to place them in communication with the other shareholders who have applied to me. Since writing the above, I have received a communication from Mr. Ernest C. Holland, 27, Walbrook, E.C., solicitor, who is a holder of shares in the Abercorn Reefs, Limited. He states that he has made up his mind to thoroughly investigate the Company and the conduct of the Directors. I shall therefore be glad if the other shareholders, who have written to me on the subject, will communicate with Mr. Holland at once, with the view of forming a Committee of Investigation. From one of the shareholders I learn that it is intended to acquire a new property with the money realised by certain calls; but it is obvious that the Directors have absolutely no power to do so, without calling a general meeting of shareholders. I have also just received the following communication from Mr. A. L. Fyfe, one of the Directors:—

August 29, 1896.

Sir,—I note you have in this week's TRUTH mentioned my name as a Director of the Abercorn and Umtoli Reefs, Limited. It is only right for me to state that the Directors wrote me on June 11, through their then Secretary, Mr. Thompson, that my resignation was accepted. I replied, urging the desirability of their calling forthwith a meeting of the shareholders.—Yours, &c., A. L. FYFE.

The acceptance of the resignation of Mr. Fyfe was news to me. This leaves only Messrs. J. Dennis, J. W. Blackstone, and J. Coward as Directors; and it is simply astounding that they should dare to assume the responsibility of their recent action. Diamond shares have also been fairly firm, De Beers being quoted 30, New Jagersfontein, 10⅞. A fair business has been passing in New Bulfontein at 1⅞, and Consolidated Leicester stand at 1⅞; Kamfersdam at ⅛ premium. With reference to the latter Company, the Diamond Fields Advertiser states that the two large elevators which have been constructed are visible from the Barkly West Road, but they convey no idea of the amount of machinery to be erected, the area to be covered by the gear alone being 384 ft. by 120 ft. The mine is said to be about 400 claims in extent, and three tunnels are being driven throughout the whole length of the property. From the Leicester Diamond Mine a cablegram has been received stating that 355 loads had been washed, producing 60 carats, including one stone of 37 carats of common quality. The New Gordon reconstruction proposed by the Directors has not been agreed to by the debenture-holders, at which I am not at all surprised.

GOLDEN WEST AUSTRALIA.

"Great is the prosperity of Western Australia." This was the burden of Sir John Forrest's speech on introducing the Budget in the Western Australian Legislative Assembly last Thursday. The population has, according to the Premier, increased from 89,550 on June 30, 1895, to 122,420 on June 30, 1896. The revenue for the year was £1,858,695, being an increase of £732,754 over the preceding year, and as much as £540,000 in excess of the estimates. Sir John Forrest also explained how the Banks had increased their gold by £1,176,365, and their indebtedness to the public by £2,074,746. The estimated revenue for the current year is £2,425,000, and the estimated expenditure £2,720,420, this large increase being doubtless due to proposed public works, railways, &c. Western Australia is outstripping some of the sister colonies, its revenue being, for instance, three times greater than that of Tasmania, while the public debt is only half the size, and in the matter of revenue the Cinderella of Australia has actually caught up South Australia. It is gold that has done it all, and the figures produced by the Premier show that there is something very substantial about the goldfields of Western Australia. The crushings, too, from the various mines are commencing to show very substantial totals, and with many hundreds of stamps being shipped and erected, the output will eventually go up by leaps and bounds. Rich strikes are reported from older properties and in new districts. Thus rich gold has been struck in the Ivanhoe, Great Boulder, Perseverance, Cassidy Hill, Lake View Extended, &c. From the Menzies Golden Age a sample crushing of 55 tons is reported as yielding 6 oz. 8 dwt. per ton, and assays of samples from the Hannan's Oroya are cabled as running from 2 oz. 4 dwt. to 11 oz. 15 dwt. There have been distinct indications of returning activity in the West Australian market, and with the return of several of the leading spirits this week I look for a good deal of animation in the near future. One of the groups which will show the way under the lead of Lake View Consols is undoubtedly the Whitaker Wright group. Lake View Consols, after reacting to 8⅜, are firmer again at 8½, and I hear that very favourable advices are to hand which should cause a fresh advance. West Australian Exploring and Finance are firm at 4 1/16, which is also the price for London and Globe. Hannan's Golden Treasure and Golden Group at 1½ are amongst the most promising in this group. West Australian Goldfields have advanced to 9⅜, and on the return of Mr. Allen P. Stoneham, of this group, Hampton Plains, which have recovered to 4⅝, should further advance. West Australian Joint-Stock Trust shares are quiet at 3 9/16 premium for the Ordinary and at 60-65 for the Founders' shares. Burbank's Birthday Gift are quoted at 1⅞-2, Burbank's North at ⅛-¼ premium. Hannan's Brownhill appear to have steadied down at 6¼, but the next crushing is looked forward to with much interest. King of the West have been firm at 2⅜. Great Boulder Proprietary have shown strength at an advance to 7¾, but the various Menzies properties receive little attention. The shares of the West Australian Mining Company are neglected at 8s. to 8s. 6d. These shares used to command a good market, and the Company is in a strong position. It has interests in over twenty different Westralian properties, not all in one district, but distributed over the various goldfields, and chiefly in the Hannan's, Niagara, and Mount Margaret districts. I am considerably puzzled why so little has been heard of Webster's Find, an offshoot of the Coolgardie Gold Syndicate. The Company owns two leases in the favourite Niagara district. A few samples from the dump gave 5½ oz. The concern is moderately capitalised at £75,000, of which £25,000 is for working capital. It appears that Webster's Find will commence crushing before any other property in the same locality, and that water is plentiful. The par price of these shares is 10s. A good demand has been experienced for Gladiators up to 1⅛, and in view of the promising position of this mine, which is under the management of Professor Nicholas, the shares are likely to go considerably higher. It is announced that the registration of the transfer of the property of the Rome Consolidated Mines, Limited, has been completed, and that rich gold has been obtained from the 120 ft. and 50 ft. levels. A communication has been sent to me with reference to the crushing of the Desirable Mine, which it appears was not 305 oz. of gold from 217 tons as stated by one authority, but 503 oz. from this quantity of ore, the tailings assaying 6½ dwt. per ton, and there was in addition 7 tons of blanketings estimated to yield 5 oz. per ton. The Mayflower Gold Mine, Limited, Mount Magnet, Western Australia, has been developed to a greater extent than a good many other mines in that Colony, the amount of driving and sinking done being 300 ft., and according to Mr. John M. Muir there are three reefs in the property which will average 5 oz. to the ton. This information is confirmed by another mining expert at Mount Magnet, Mr. Joseph Bryant, who was favourably impressed by the numerous outcrops of lodes to be seen on the surface, and described the lode in shaft A as very solid and well defined, and at the bottom of the shafts as 5 ft. 6 in. thick. Out of the capital of £100,000 in £1 shares, £20,000 will be available as working capital. Hannan's King

BRANDAUER'S CIRCULAR-POINTED PENS. Neither scratch nor spurt. Glide over the roughest paper with the ease of a soft lead pencil. Assorted sample box, 7 stamps, from the Works, Birmingham.

(Brownhill) have improved to $1\frac{5}{8}$ on the circular issued by the Company announcing the discovery of a rich streak of ore. To judge from the interesting report which Mr. Herbert Moir has sent out to the shareholders of the Colonial Finance Corporation, the West Australian Pioneers, the Hannan's Proprietary Development, and the Corsair Consolidated Companies, of all of which he is Managing Director, he has made excellent use of his short trip to Western Australia, and of his visit to the goldfields. The idea of embodying what he has been able to gather with reference to the various properties in a circular is a good one. West Australian Gold Concessions have been a steady market at about $1\frac{3}{4}$. At the meeting of shareholders, Mr. E. D. Oppert was able to give very satisfactory information regarding some of the properties acquired by the Company, amongst which the Princess Royal and Talisman, in Western Australia, and Preece's Point, in New Zealand, are some of the most promising. The question of the Bayley's West was also discussed. This is a sub-Company of the West Australian Gold Concessions owning a mine which has proved very disappointing, and I am glad to see that the Bayley's West shareholders have now accepted the offer of the parent Company, viz., that each original allottee of the Bayley's West Gold Mining Company, Limited, is to receive one fully-paid share of £1 each of the Meteor Black Flag for each £1 fully-paid share in Bayley's West Gold Mining Company, in exchange for the transfer of their shares. The West Australian Gold Concessions had a balance of profit for the period ended December 31, 1895, of £53,043, of which dividends to the amount of £7,177 have been paid; and there is every prospect of the shareholders receiving further substantial dividends. Hit or Miss shares have advanced to $2\frac{9}{16}$ on a cablegram stating that crushing started on August 27 with ten stamps, which are running well; and that a further head—making twenty stamps—will be started in a few days. The Great Boulder crushing for the last fortnight has just been announced at 2,634 oz. from 859 tons of ore. I should like to know whether Mr. W. Hunt, of 151, Manor-road, Brockley, London, S.E., whose letters to French readers of TRUTH I mentioned on June 18, as offering special information respecting a certain West Australian stock "which will see an advance of 50 to. 75 per cent., or more, in a few weeks, against payment of £1 at once and a furthur (sic) sum of £4 as soon as the stock shows an advance of 50 per cent.," is the same W. Hunt who now writes from 116, Earlsfield-road, Wandsworth, London, S.W., in the following strain?:—

116, Earlsfield-road, Wandsworth,
London, S.W., July 28, 1896.

DEAR SIR,—Artemus Ward (I think it was) once said "never prophesy until you're certain;" had I followed that advice I should not now be troubling you with this letter, or wanting to realise some security in order to pay calls on others. As a matter of fact, through over speculation I find myself in arrears of calls that must be paid directly, or forfeiture results, so I am compelled to sell some of my shares to get money for the time being in order to meet demands I enclose you an original prospectus of a parent Company called the Transvaal-Westralian Gold Concessions which has just brought out (as its first child) "The Southern Cross," whose shares are already at a premium, there will be a considerable dividend payable from this directly. Then this Company holds nearly one half the shares in the West Randt Development Company, another very successful concern, besides having further interests both in Africa and West Australia. I want to sell 100 of my fully paid £1 shares, a bargain, viz: 15s. a share; its a low figure I know, but I want the money just now. Will you buy them? Or a part of them? The favour of your reply will be esteemed.—I am, yours truly, W. HUNT.

The prospectus enclosed is that of the Transvaal Westralian Gold Concessions, Limited, the chairman of which is Sir William Young, Bart., but I must confess that, after reading through this prospectus, I should not like to give 15s. per share for them. It would be interesting to know whether the Directors of this concern are aware of the efforts which Mr. Hunt is making to offload these shares on the public, and whether they are in any way connected with him?

INDIAN, NEW ZEALAND, AND OTHER MINES.

I take some credit to myself for the important advance which has taken place in the Indian section in Coromandels to 3, reacting to $2\frac{3}{4}$, as I have recommended these shares from $1\frac{3}{4}$ upwards, and my readers have now the opportunity of clearing a handsome profit. Ooregum Ordinary have advanced $\frac{3}{8}$, and Mysore Gold are also higher at $8\frac{1}{8}$, Nundydroog at $3\frac{13}{16}$. Goldfields of Mysore, although firmer, are still very cheap at 25s., and should be picked up before they also take a jump. Amongst Australian Mines other than West Australian, Aladdin's Lamp have maintained themselves at $2\frac{15}{16}$, and Wentworth Proprietary stand at 1. A further advance has taken place in Mount Lyell to 9, while Mount Reid are also firm at $1\frac{7}{16}$. As the latter is a mine of a similar character as the Mount Lyell, and in the same district, the shares should soon reach a higher level. The rich strike which has been made at the 65-ft. level, south of the Highland Chieftain, and which is described as the richest as yet made in this mine, ought to help these shares. In Charters Towers shares, Brilliant and St. George United, New Queen, and Day Dawn are all firmer. Broken Hill Proprietary have been steady at 49s. x.d. In New Zealand Mines a better tendency has prevailed. Taitapu have advanced, Waihi are better at $6\frac{7}{8}$, Waihi Silverton at $2\frac{5}{8}$, but Waitekauri, Triumph Hauraki, Kathleen, Royal Oak, and Komata Reefs are all lower. The shares in the Key of Komata, Limited, which went to allotment on July 31 last, are likely to come into some notice soon in view of the valuable property of 149 acres owned by it. Another promising New Zealand Mine is the Britannia (Hauraki) Gold Mining Company, Limited, owning the Britannia property on the Coromandel Goldfields, which has been favourably reported upon by Messrs. W. H. Argall, R. A. Marshall, and George M. Steedman. According to their reports in several shafts rich ore assaying about $4\frac{1}{2}$ oz. per ton has been struck, and the mine is situate less than a mile to the west of the famous Hauraki Mine. Out of the capital of £100,000, in shares of £1 each, £25,000 is available for working capital. From the Kuranui-Caledonian a cablegram is to hand announcing that during the month the mill crushed 55 tons, yielding 186 oz. of gold. In the general Foreign market Richmond, La Yesca, De Lamar, and Montana are all lower, and Rio Tinto have also shown a dull tendency. The shares in the rich Mexican mine, the Grand Central, of which I gave particulars last week, and which are largely held by the Exploration Company, have again advanced to $2\frac{1}{4}$, and look like going higher, especially if, as is anticipated, the output at the end of August proves again very large. During the dull period Mines and Banking Corporation shares have receded to $1\text{-}1\frac{1}{8}$. At the meeting held not long since the Chairman was able to announce that the Corporation had not entered into one transaction which had brought a loss. From the Lucky Guss (Cripple Creek) a cablegram is to hand, according to which the manager has made a rich strike in the Mountain Beauty, near the Guss line. This is supposed to be, not the Orpha May vein, but quite a new one.

THE HOLLANDSCHE CREDIETBANK.

My readers will remember that I referred to the Hollandsche Credietbank in TRUTH of April 2 and 23. A number of people have been victimised by the purchase from this "bank" of certain lottery bonds at prices far above the market quotations, while other lottery bonds, which they foisted upon their unfortunate clients, were absolute rubbish. The following letter has just come under my notice:—

37, Tivisden-road, Highgate-road,
London, N.W., July 25, 1896.

SIR,—I take the liberty, on behalf of my firm, to enclose circular, setting out various advantageous combinations of Premium Bonds, and beg your careful consideration of the same. We invite your comparison of our prices with those of any other house, and say fearlessly that no other can offer anything like such value. We draw your particular attention to combinations "M" and "O," and to the very special advantages which the participation in a large number of other bonds, in addition to those he actually buys, gives to the purchaser. Experience has taught us that holders of these combinations are practically certain to draw something before their instalments have been completed. Should you feel inclined to purchase, I shall be glad to give you any further information you may require. I may say that there are three very important redemptions on August 1, which you should not miss.—I am, Sir, yours obediently, Fr. Pountney, Sole Agent Hollandsche Credietbank.

CHINA AND GLASS. — Messrs. GOODE, Artists and Designers, solicit an inspection of their collection in their recently-extended South Audley-street premises, now by far the largest and most important in Europe. Messrs. Goode guarantee the excellence of all their productions, and invite a comparison of their prices with those of any co-operative stores.

I said once before that the attention of the police authorities ought to be called to the doings of this "bank," and I say so again.

New Enterprises and Issues.

The prospectuses of the following new Companies and Issues have been placed before the public during the past week :—

The Golden Hex Rivier Mines, Limited.—This Company is formed to acquire and develop a block of 118 gold claims situated on the Farm Hex Rivier, in Heidelberg, South African Republic. The capital is £60,000 in shares of £1 each.

I do not see any one on the Board of this concern possessing sufficient practical knowledge of Transvaal gold mining. It is true that one of the Directors is Colonel G. Montagu Hicks, who states that he is a Director of the Transvaal-Westralian Gold Concessions, Limited (which is referred to by me under "Golden West Australia"), but this is by no means a Company holding a good position. The intention also stated in the prospectus, to split up and sell portions of the property, appears to be impracticable, as it is quite small enough. Neither is it possible to gather from the prospectus exactly where the farm is situated. Equally valueless is the information vouchsafed as to work done by neighbouring properties. In view, moreover, of the generally inadequate information given, I strongly advise my readers not to put their money into the concern.

The 90-Mile (Goongarrie) Consolidated Gold Mines, Limited.—With a capital of £150,000 in 300,000 shares of 10s. each, this Company has been formed to carry on the business of a gold-mining, development, and exploration Company. Certain properties on the 90-Mile (Goongarrie), North Coolgardie Goldfield, are at once acquired.

Although it is asserted that a large amount of development work had been done on the properties, it does not appear at all that the various leases have been proved valuable mines, and I see nothing to tempt investment in this Company.

The First Hand Syndicate, Limited.—This Company proposes to carry out the usual objects of an Exploring and Finance Corporation. The capital is only £10,000, divided into 9,995 Ordinary shares of £1 each and 100 Deferred shares of 1s. each.

It is difficult to see how the promoters of this concern can justify the name "First Hand." The idea, on the contrary, appears to be altogether second-hand and second-rate; and the fact that the hundred Deferred shares are to receive a very large proportion of the profits, embodies an old and objectionable idea.

My Letter Box.

The following are replies to inquiries from various correspondents :—

Government, &c., Bonds.

New Club.—So far, the Costa Rica Government has not made any adequate proposal for a settlement of the debt. The last offer was very properly refused; but I should say that sooner or later the Costa Rica Government must come to terms. J. E. W.—No particular reason for making the exchange, although I prefer the new Uruguayan Loan. I do not know any lady stockbroker. R. R. M.—1. Messrs. N. Keizer & Co., 1, Cowper's-court, Cornhill, E.C., are foreign bankers who supply foreign lottery bonds at market prices. 2. I really do not care to take the responsibility of advising on the bonds in question; you had better be guided by the bankers.

Banks, Trusts, and Financial.

W. B., Margate.—You must have mistaken the contents of the article; but a liberal Company in the matter of annuities is the Royal Exchange Assurance. Another Victim of the Hollandsche Credietbank.—I do not know whether the person, whose letter you have sent to me, is the same as the one who previously acted as agent for this concern; but it is certainly advisable that people in this country should have nothing to do with the "combinations" of these persons. Syntax.—You will have seen the answer to your question in last week's issue. Please understand that letters which are not received by the first post on Friday morning cannot be dealt with in the current issue. Business, Poole.—I do not like the Mutual Reserve Fund Life Assurance Company. Rue.—As you are taking the Debentures up, the broker is quite correct in charging you stamp and fee. H. T. T.—A wealthy American office. Personally, I should prefer insuring in an English office. Honest Dick.—One of the best outside brokers; but personally I should prefer dealing through a member of the Stock Exchange, Ashford.—The position of gilt-edged stocks is such that, according to my opinion, prices may give way at no distant date; and for this reason I do not wish to recommend any to you. You had better be patient, and avail yourself of an opportunity of making the investment.

Home Rails.

P. O. S.—Certainly hold Dover "A" for a rise. There is no reason why they should have declined, and both traffics and working statements are most satisfactory. Liverpool.—I see no reason for selling the Scotch deferred stocks now.

American and Foreign Rails.

W. A., Harrogate.—One of the competing lines is in existence, and another is to be constructed; but you are quite correct in assuming that so far the whole of the capital has not yet been secured. P. L. C.—As regards American Rails, I must refer you to my letter. It seems to be too early to undertake purchases. F. W. W.—There will be no difficulty in dealing with the fractional certificate in question when the time comes. South-West.—Yes, it seems to me advisable to join the movement for bringing pressure to bear re the Leopoldina, Macahé, and Campos Railway Loan. C. A.—Yes, you should certainly hold your stocks Nos. 1 to 4 for a recovery. Nodrog.—I see no objection to your investing in the Indian stock in question. The Indian Government have the option referred to. Gilberta.—There is every prospect of the gold platform triumphing in the United States. What will happen in case the silver "plank" were to be successful it would be impossible to tell. As regards the Railroad bonds, both capital and interest would still be payable in gold. W. E. H.—1. I should advise you to hold after the heavy decline. 2. A speculative investment; you cannot call it a safe investment in the present position of affairs in the United States. V. B. G.—I can see no other course than to hold your bonds Nos. 1 and 2. Certainly hold Grand Trunk Four per Cent. debentures (3). No. 4 is more speculative; but I see no reason for selling. I have never recommended Canadian Pacific Prefs. (5); but under present circumstances I should advise you to hold. 6. This is an American concern of which I have always disapproved, and against which I have repeatedly warned my readers; so that you have yourself to blame for being involved in it. Pete.—I do not think that matters are as bad as has been represented. 1. No. 2. Hold after the heavy fall. Regret.—I cannot possibly advise sale of these shares after the heavy fall; hold.

Mining Shares.

Miss E. M. G.—I have added your name to the list of shareholders who wish to combine with reference to the Abercorn Reefs adn Umtoli Gold Reefs. J. L., Belfast.—African Gold Properties are likely to go much higher; hold, and average if you can afford to do so. W. A. P.—No reason to sell Great Boulder Main Reef; they are likely to further improve. E. L.—I do not see how you can resist the call. Halifax.—1. Yes, it will be advisable to join the reconstruction. 2. Yes. 3. One of these days I suppose these shares will improve. West.—1. I have never recommended Hannan's Reward, and thought that the former price was too high; but it might be advisable to hold after the recent fall. 2. Yes, Modder "B" are a good purchase, and should be bought for an improvement. F.—1. I think West Australian Trading Corporation shares have been rigged quite high enough. 2. I do not advise selling any Lagunas shares now. 3. You should hold Barnato Banks for a further important improvement. 4. No. Rev. E. R.—I have noted that you are a shareholder in the Abercorn Reefs, and have placed you on the list; I cannot reply by letter. 1. It is difficult to say how this mine will turn out; so far it has had a chequered career. 2. The Bendigo Mine may come all right. 3. Wealth of Nations should be held. 4. The office of the Oceana Company is at 13, Austin Friars, E.C., and the London agents of the Croydon Consols are Elmslie, Limited, Blomfield House, London-wall, E.C., where you will be able to obtain further information. 5. I do not like either the Rhodesian Minerals or the Rhodesian Gold Trust. Maid- stone.—1. I still have a favourable opinion of the shares in question; held, but do not average yet. 2. Why not take the splendid profit which you are now able to realise on my advice? As regards further purchases, amongst the shares mentioned by you I place first Nos. 3, 7, and 8. The others I do not care for much; but Lake View Consols are likely to go much higher, and you can do better than in the other shares mentioned in those recommended in my letter under "Golden West Australia." Glyn.—The Mainland Consols Mine is doing excellently, and you should hold your shares for a rise; why not average, if you can afford to do so? But you have disregarded my advice only to buy such shares if you can take them up and pay for them. 1. Probably, when the weak "Bulls" are cleared out. 2. No. Ross-shire.—Yes, I think they are worth applying for; and I confirm my remarks in last week's issue under "The Preliminary Canter in Kaffirs." A. B. C.—You should hold your Hampton Plains and buy more to average. Prospects are favourable, and a recovery has already come about. Doubtful, Southport.—What is the use of your buying West Australian shares first and asking my advice afterwards? I do not like the British Colonial Mining Corporation, neither do I approve of the Coolgardie Central. You could have done far better in the shares mentioned in my letter under "Golden West Australia." H. M., Gainsborough.—The issue of TRUTH in which the various groups were mentioned is May 21; and you must communicate with the publishing office with regard to this. If you are a regular reader of TRUTH, you must know that I am favourable to the mine specially mentioned by you. Why do you not file TRUTH for financial purposes? Gashry.—So far there is no prospect of a rise in these shares, which will probably, however, follow in the wake of the South African market. Otto K.—I do not think that this is a case of throwing away your shares. On the contrary, you had better hold, and avail yourself of an improvement. R. S. W.—1. A fair mining risk, but no catch. 2. The Companies are quite different, and for that reason you cannot say that one is better than the other; they are both promising. 3. A fair mining risk, but no catch, although if you are a holder there is no reason to sell. P. E. H.—I have expressed my opinion of the Glencairn-Glenluce amalgamation in last week's issue under "The Preliminary Canter in Kaffirs." R. M. K.—1. A further rise is probable; but be careful to take your profit whenever the opportunity occurs. 2. There is a fair prospect of these shares improving. 3. I do not advise purchase after the recent important advance. 4. Yes. 5. Why not take so splendid a profit? 6. No particular temptation just now. 7. Yes. Arual.—1. Not particularly, and there will doubtless be a better opportunity of getting out on the further improvement in the Kaffir Circus. 2. Yes. 3. The prospects of Knights are excellent. 4. Yes. 5 and 6. Possibly. 7. Both shares are a good purchase; why not divide the amount between the two? W. W., Southend.—Yes, you should hold Waterfall Estates. Colonial Finance Corporation, West Australian Pioneers, and Continental and West Australian Trust shares are all quite high enough, considering the present position. W. G. G.—No option but to hold; these shares will recover again. Hold also the other West Australian shares. I expressed my view with regard to Mainland Consols in last week's issue. Hamish.—Hold; but do not buy more to average yet. G. W., Ton-y-Pandy.—If you are a regular reader of TRUTH you must know that I advise purchase of both Randfontein and Barnato Banks. Reader, Harlesden.—Your letter came too late at the time; but it was answered in last week's issue. Adventurer.—I have already expressed my opinion concerning the extraordinary fluctuations in Golden Arrow. Apparently the insiders are always playing with these shares, and I cannot therefore offer an opinion. You should certainly hold your Coras, and buy more to average. South African Estates should be held. Cornubian.—1. I do not like the Transvaal-Westralian Gold Concessions or its surroundings, and am specially referring to this elsewhere. 2. Hold these shares. 3. Royal Sovereigns are promising. 4. Why not take your profit on Hannan's King (Brownhill). 5. Hold Wealth of Nations. 6. Sell on an improvement. Aaron.—Nearly all your shares Nos. 1 to 6 are well selected, and should be held for a rise. You should certainly average Nos. 1, 2, and 6, and hold the others. Subscriber, Sheffield.—Hold Mysore Goldfields, and buy more to average; they are very promising. Vanna.—Write to the Secretary of the Austin Friars Syndicate, at 15, Austin Friars, E.C. As far as I know the Syndicate has an interest in the Lake View flotation. Sycorax.—1. This Company must have made a good many profitable deals, but some of the men connected with it are not sufficiently capable; hold. There is no option but to hold Nos. 2, 4, 5, and 6. I have no special information on Hampton Gold Hill (3), and do not like it. Tasma.—1. You can easily make your selection from my remarks under "The Kaffir Circus." 2. These deep-level shares already stand at a very high price; I think you can do better in the outcrop mines. 3. Certainly hold Oceana, and buy more to average. Viking.—Yes, Barnato Banks are a good purchase. St. Lawrence.—Your list of shares Nos. 1 to 29 is a very promising one, and in the present revival in the Mining Markets you will doubtless be able to obtain higher prices. If you have to dispose of any, you should sell Nos. 3, 24, 26, 27, and 28, and reinvest, as you propose, in Woodstock (Transvaal) and Transvaal Exploring, both of which are very promising. J. J. C.—The Hit or Miss is doing exceedingly well, and the price has advanced to 2⅜. You should, under these circumstances, be able to realise a good profit. True Green.—I am not responsible for all your purchases Nos. 1 to 4; but there is a chance of their improving. Hannan's Golden Treasure (5) are exceedingly promising, and should be held for a very important advance. Both the other shares mentioned are promising; but I need hardly tell you that nothing is certain in the Mining Market. Mining shares are not Consols. Sorry Yankee.—I quite expect an important improvement in Barnato Banks and Johnnies. You had better write to the London Agents about Pleiades; I have no recent knowledge about these. Enaf.—1. Certainly. 2. Explorers' Finance. 3. The £1 shares 10s. paid stand at $\frac{3}{16}$ premium. W. D. B.—1. I do not like Sheba Queens; Sheba Hills are far more promising. 2. No; leave them alone. Stupid, Streatham Hill.—No option but to join the reconstruction. In such cases it is always best to do so, and sell after. Clio.—1. Barnato Banks will further improve; hold for an advance. 2. Randfontein, Mainland Consols, and Hannan's Golden Treasure are some of the best selections possible, and you should hold them for an important rise. 3. No option but to hold them for the present. 4. The British Aluminium Company is promising. F. T.—Hold for an improvement. Ebbw Val.—1. A respectable stockbroker. I think he has dealt fairly by you; sometimes such prices are only nominal. 2 and 3. Yes. Toby N.—I advise you to hold all your mining shares Nos. 1 to 6 for an advance, which is pretty sure to come about. You might buy Woodstock (Transvaal) and Transvaal Exploring; and amongst the better-class shares Knights and Buffelsdoorn. You should also make up a little private trust of West Australian shares from those recommended in my letter under "Golden West Australia." F. M. B.—1. I do not like Monastery Diamonds; why do you not take your profit? 2. No. Hedgehog.—I cannot give you limits at which to sell; take a good profit when you can see it. Guillaume.—Hold the South Africans, Nos. 1 and 2, for a rise. E. H., Penzance.—A fair mining risk but no catch; take a good profit. Gordon.—1. No reason as far as I can see. 2. Hold for the present. W. M., Stalybridge.—1. Hold for an improvement. 2. I do not like St. Augustine. Kaloogamma.—1. You are aware that I have always been averse to Loma Gold shares, why did you not sell out long ago? Do not throw good money after bad. 2. The Holton Land and Mining Company is a concern which has acquired land in the territories of the British South Africa Company, and you must be aware that these Companies have been under a cloud for some time owing to the insurrection in Rhodesia. This is, of course, no reason why the agents, the Rhodesia Agency, 8, Copthall-buildings, E.C., should not give any information; but I do not suppose that any favourable news was available under these circumstances. Write to them again. 3. Only if you could get a combination up amongst the other shareholders. Mercutio.—No option but to hold these West Australian shares, which are likely to recover. Highfields.—No particular temptation to buy these shares; you can do better by making your selection from those recommended under "Golden West Australia." Caution, Bristol.—No option but to hold Hampton Plains Block 50 for an improvement, which is probable. Beati Coras Mundi.—Write to the agents of the Bradbury Drill Sharpener, Finsbury House, Blomfield-street, E.C., for the necessary information. Hold the W.A. Venture Syndicate shares, and all the other West Australians; they should all improve. J. P.—With reference to Croydon Consols, I understand that a dividend has now been posted; you should make immediate inquiries if you have not yet received it. You have done quite right in purchasing Transvaal Exploring and Hannan's Golden Treasure; both are very promising. Ka.—You should hold your shares for an improvement, which is probable. The best time for the Mining Market is coming now. Sir Nic.—A. No option but to hold these shares, which are likely to improve again. B. Wealth of Nations had better be averaged now, if you can afford to do so. C. Take a good profit on Hit or Miss. Green.—I see nothing against your broker's charges. He would, of course, charge for stamp and fee, as you take up the shares. There is nothing further to pay. I return the contract-note in your envelope. A. R.—Nos. 1 and 2 are very promising, and should be held for an improvement. I do not like Lisbon-Berlyn (3); but Oceana and Sheba are likely to improve. Adelphi.—I do not like Brookman Brothers' Boulder at all; you can do far better in the shares mentioned in my letter under "Golden West Australia." Ashton.—1. Unfortunately a large block of these shares appears to have come upon the market, and there is no option but to hold. You had better keep Nos. 2 and 3 for an improvement which is already in progress; and do not sell Nos. 4 to 6 now. Nitram.—The Porges-Randfontein bonus to the Randfontein shareholders will doubtless reach you in the course of a month. F. C. S.—All your shares Nos. 1 to 11 should be held for a rise, which is probable. I agree with your views regarding the British Guiana mine in question. Lacon.—1. I am inclined to think that an exchange out of these Indian shares, which have now advanced, into South Africans would be advisable. Try, for instance, Woodstock (Transvaal), Transvaal Exploring, and Waterfall Estates. 2. Not exactly. New Comer.—Most of your shares, Nos. 1 to 6, are well selected, and should be held for an advance. If you can afford to do so you should average Nos. 4 and 5. I do not like New Seddons (7). Circle.—1. I see no reason for selling Hannan's Props. 2. No. 3. No option but to hold. Buz, Balham.—They should come right again. John.—I have placed your name on the list with reference to the proposed Abercorn Reefs combination against the Directors. New Rands are promising, and you will do well to buy more to average. No reason to sell Caratals now. Two Disgusted Shareholders.—You must be aware that I have thoroughly taken up the cause of the shareholders in the Abercorn Reefs and Umtoli; but it is necessary for some of th shareholders to head the movement which is now in progress. Will you and your friend, both living in London, join the Committee? F. P. F.—I have placed your name on the list as regards the movement now in progress against the Umtoli Directors. S. C.—See preceding reply. Maidenhead.—Having made some inquiries into the position of the Gold Lands Corporation, I agree with your favourable view of this Company and of its sub-Companies, the Mona of Kalgoorlie Proprietary, as expressed by me in recent issues.

Mortlock's China and Glass Business, Oxford-st., has entered its 150th year, being founded by John Mortlock in 1746. It is carried on by John George Mortlock, the great-great grandson of the founder, who solicits patronage and recommendation.

INDUSTRIAL INVESTMENTS.

F. O.—No; I do not advise purchase of Swan & Edgar Prefs. They have not paid any dividend for a long time. Jack Straw.—1. It is absolutely impossible for you to cancel your application, unless you did so before receiving an allotment. 2. If you do not pay the calls your shares will be forfeited, and you will be sued for the amount of the calls all the same. M. A. H.—A very fair investment, but under the present circumstances in the States, it might be advisable to wait. Spiers & Pond Ordinary shares are a fair investment. Captain G.—It is a great pity in the first instance that you applied for so large a number of shares in the Brockie-Pell Arc Lamp, Limited; and that you subsequently did not formally and absolutely cancel a portion of the same. I do not see how I can help you; although the Company ought in fairness to have considered your request. An Irish Reader.—Amongst your shares Nos. 1 to 11, I do not like Nos. 3 and 4 (Simpson's Lever Chains), or Nos. 5 to 8. Nos. 1, 2, 9, and 10 are promising; but it seems almost time to take profits on No. 1. Mackay, Aberdeen.—The Deferred shares were the ones to buy in this Company, as regards the Ordinary I cannot possibly tell you how they will go, but I should not advise you to sell unless you get a fair profit. Delft.—There seems to be no reason for selling at a loss; you should, however, take an opportunity to sell when the market improves. Western.—A good brewery Company; no reason to sell. Windermere.—No reason to sell Johannesburg Tramway shares.

MIXED INVESTMENTS.

Fernhurst.—1. The future prospects of Lake View Consols are not speculative at all; but substantial. 2. The same applies to Hannan's Golden Treasure, which is expected to become another Lake View. 3. Ditto, as regards Hannan's Golden Group. 4. I do not think much of this stock; you should sell on a further improvement. B. H. W.—1. Yes, the amalgamation of the West Australian Exploring and Finance and London and Globe Finance Companies is to come off eventually. 2. There is very little market in the shares of Barrett's Brewery Company. 3. Possibly, when better managed. Querist.—There is no fresh news about this Nitrate Company. I do not think much of Barberton Estates, and the Clyde Gold Mining Company is what my contemporary the Financial Times terms a silent mine. Chatham Ordinary are certainly worth keeping. Youth.—I do not advise purchase of Nos. 1 and 2. You can do better in the shares mentioned in my letter. T. W., Derby.—1. No. 2. I do not think much of A and B. 3. Not much market in these. 4. I cannot answer this question. R. A.—1-2. Steady going investments, without much room for a rise. 3. No reason to sell now as a further rise is quite probable. 4. Eventually these should undoubtedly be averaged; but not yet. 5. The Financial News. 6. Write to Messrs. Mathieson & Sons, 15, Copthall-avenue, London, E.C. Clarendon.—The present price of Transvaal Estate and Development shares is £1. There will be no difficulty in your making the sale as suggested. C. H. N.—1. Nitrate Rails are improving again, and you should hold for a further rise. 2. The proposed investments, A to E, appears to be satisfactory, as you are prepared to run some risk; certainly hold F and buy more. 3. No reason to sell Western of Buenos Ayres Debentures. As regards the conversion you must take your own course. F. J. O., Fife.—The Debentures, Nos. 1 to 3, are a good investment. I think Egyptian Unified (4) are quite high enough. No. 5 is a local concern about which I cannot obtain any information here. Teme.—1. Hold these shares, which should recover again. 2. I do not like the Great Horseless Carriage Company, it is a very speculative concern. 3. If you mean W. A. Exploring and Finance you should hold for a rise. 4. Consolidated Goldfields of New Zealand are quite high enough. I do not see anything to tempt a purchase of Nos. 5 to 7; you can do better in the shares mentioned under "Golden West Australia." Longton. With regard to Nos. 1 to 12, I see no reason for selling any just now, although some are badly selected. Nos. 3 to 6 are likely to improve with the rest of the market. Nos. 7 and 8 are highly speculative. With reference to Chartered shares (9) you must be fully posted if you are a regular reader of TRUTH. No reason for selling Nos. 11 and 12, and no option but to hold No. 10. Penny.—I do not like No. 1; but Great Boulder South (3) should certainly be held, and it would be advisable to keep Nos. 4 to 8 for an improvement. I do not think much of No. 2. Alpha.—I do not think much of No. 1. No news regarding No. 2 is to be obtained here. 3. New Primrose and Buffelsdoorn should be held for a rise; but I cannot tell you anything about the dividends. J. G.—None of your shares Nos. 1 to 4 were bought on my advice, and I do not think much of Nos. 1 and 4. I do not know what you paid for Nos. 2 and 3; but when you can get out without a loss you should do so. A. B. C. D.—1. It would be preferable to hold now after the decline. 2. No reason to sell Grand Trunk Debentures. 3. Prospects of the Woodstock (Transvaal) are excellent, and you should hold these for an important rise, they have already advanced to 1¾. Spes.—Hampton Plains Block 50 (1) should be held, and there is no reason to sell Hannan's Props. (2). Ruhtra.—1. Hold; the report will no doubt come along in due time. 2. The office is at 4 and 6, Throgmorton-avenue, E.C., and there is no special group connected with it. 3. 22, West Nile-street, Glasgow. 4. There is a much larger market in Paris for the shares than in London; write to the Secretary at 8, Prince's-street, London, E.C., for further information. North Riding.—1. No option but to hold, they should recover again. 2. There seems to be every prospect of a rise. 3. I have already expressed my opinion of the Dunlop-Truffault Cycle Company long ago; I dare say the solicitors are right in the advice they give you. Gallovidian.—1. The distribution of Porges-Randfontein shares will be made in a month's time. 2. Prospects are good. 3. Certainly hold for the present. Parrhesia.—Your reasoning with regard to the American market is very sound; but you must be aware that there is a considerable element of uncertainty yet, and I think you will not be wrong in waiting for the present. Upon the whole I still think that if you made up a small private trust of well-selected West Australian and South African mining shares (distributed over a dozen) you would do better. Glen Lyn.—In such cases it is generally advisable to join the reconstruction and sell after; the circular has been returned in your envelope. No reason to sell Nos. 1 to 13; hold for a recovery. Munro.—1. I do not like Grapplers, and have repeatedly said so. 2. Not now. 3. Hold. 4. I have repeatedly expressed my view of the system of Cunliffe, Russell and Co., 10, Place de la Bourse, Paris. The bonds are bona fide enough, but they generally charge much higher than the market prices. If you wish to buy such bonds, you should only do so through a respectable London firm of foreign bankers. 5. I must refer you to my letter. Salterton.—I am glad to see that out of your holdings Nos. 1 to 26, there are only a few upon which you cannot make a profit. Those upon which you can make a profit are very promising, and you should hold them. There is also no reason for selling any of the others at present. M'Limo.—1. The capital is £100,000. 2. No market for them. 3. Impossible to tell. 4. Yes. 5. They are going to do so. Paddy Ruyan.—I do not advise the purchase of the Cycle shares now; and with regard to Mining shares I must refer you to my letter. Elgin Crescent.—1. There is no option but to hold these American shares now. 2. I do not like the Forest King of Coolgardie mine particularly.

VARIOUS INVESTMENTS.

The Money Market is distinctly firmer, and rates for three months' bank bills have advanced to 1⅜, being quite ⅜ higher than a week ago. This advance was due entirely to the large gold shipments to New York, which has also in part caused sales of Consols, and a decline in the price of these to 112 9/16. Some of the selling of Consols, however, was also carried out as a hedge against other commitments in view of the political news from the East, and these will probably have to be covered again at a loss. Old-fashioned speculators do not yet appear to have realised that selling Consols as a hedge is, nowadays, a very risky business. Nitrate Rails have again advanced to 7, the firmer tone being chiefly due to the fact that the construction of the Huara-Iquique Railway has been suspended, and will probably not be resumed. This does away with one of the competitors, and as the traffics since January 1 show an increase of £8,700, and the Company is obtaining promises of traffic from some of the new oficinas, the recent fall must be considered to have been exaggerated. Nitrate-producing shares, however, have remained stagnant, and prices show little changes. San Jorge are quoted 5¼, Santa Rita 4, Lagunas Nitrate 2⅛, Lagunas Syndicate 1¾, Paccha and Jaz Pampa ⅞. At last week's meeting of the Dunlop Pneumatic Tyre Company very satisfactory statements were made by the Chairman; but a good many Stock Exchange men and others were disappointed by the statement that the special settlement had to be postponed. They will be proportionately elated at the announcement now made that it will, after all, come off on September 9. In the meantime, prices of the Deferred shares have taken a turn for the better, being quoted ⅝ premium, while the Ordinary are quoted ¼ premium. Humber Extensions are firmer at 7/16 to ½ premium, but Beestons have receded to 2⅞, and Cycle Tubes stand at 1. I have received a little pamphlet entitled "Cost-Book Advertising," by J. T. Segrue, Limited, Advertising Agents, 15-17, Gresham House, London, E.C. It shows that this firm is thoroughly au fait with reference to advertising, and certain advantages which will be gathered from the booklet are worth consideration. I gave the other day some particulars concerning a new cigarette machine, the "Baron," for the working of which a Company has been formed here. I now gather from the Journal of Finance of New York that the National Cigarette Company, which owns the patents for the United States for this machine, is now so busy filling orders that its factories are kept in operation day and night. I see that extraordinary efforts are being made by those behind the Merchants' Fire Office, Limited, to obtain subscriptions. The first attempts to induce the public to come into the concern were evidently not successful, and I have already explained that the objects for which the Company is formed are already being amply served by the other fire insurance offices, and that there is nothing in the prospectus to attract investors. It is, of course, quite absurd to print a table giving the dividends of leading and old-established Companies as indicating anything like the prospects of this new concern. I hope that my insurance contemporaries will give their attention to the British Life Office, which has lately been mysteriously formed. One of the questions which occur in connection with this prospectus is, why the name of no actuary figures on it, as naturally somebody would have to certify the tables? Then, again, it would be interesting to learn who has supplied the £20,000 deposit, as the Directors are certainly not millionaires; and more important than all is the question which my Irish contemporary, the Finance Union, asks, whether it is true, as pretty generally reported, that the Provident Association of London advanced the amount of the deposit? My contemporary states that this strikes more than one person as being the case, seeing the Company came on the public unawares, and that two of the confidential Provident men are officially connected with the British Office. If this is correct, what can this latest move of Baron Profumo mean?—Your affectionate uncle,

NOTICE TO CONNOISSEURS OF FINE DRY CHAMPAGNE.—PÉRINET & FILS' Cuvée Réservée, Extra Sec, is in magnificent condition, at Hotel Cecil, Hotel Savoy, Midland Grand Hotel, Spiers & Pond's Hotels and Buffets, and most leading Hotels & Restaurants.

MOSES.

All Rights Reserved.]

QUEER STORY.

THE PRINCE AND THE PARTRIDGE.

THERE was no man of my acquaintance whom I at once hated and despised so much as the Duc de Nullicourt. I flatter myself on being tolerably cosmopolitan; and the fact of a man's being a Frenchman would not in the least prejudice me against him if he were a good fellow. Indeed, I have the pleasure to hold several of that nationality among my most intimate friends. But the Duc de Nullicourt was a beast—there is no other word—and as such I loathed and scorned him with a deadly loathing.

I very much wished that I could induce my uncle and aunt to see him in the same light. I believe that, sponte suâ, my uncle would have done so. But his "sponte" never was "suâ"; it was always "uxoriâ." For my excellent aunt ruled the roast at Shawfordbury Towers; and my uncle had precious little voice in making up the house-parties at his fine old Somersetshire seat.

Now my excellent aunt was rather a—I was going to have said snob. Perhaps, however, as applied to a lady, the term is too severe; for nearly all the fair sex have a spice of this thing in their compositions. And if I say that she was a typical woman, it will be sufficiently descriptive. With her, therefore, it weighed considerably that the Duc de Nullicourt was prince of a royal, though no longer reigning, house. As long as she had known him—a matter of three or four years—she had taken care to ask him down to Shawfordbury every season for the shooting. And M. le Duc was never loth to accept her invitations. He knew the ropes much too well for that. In addition to being one of the most comfortable and best-appointed county-houses in England, Shawfordbury was surrounded by an estate which for partridge shooting, at any rate, had few rivals. It was on the extreme east of the county, and overlapped the Wiltshire border, where the farmers go in largely for the arable branch of the profession. Here hundreds and hundreds of acres of roots and cereals afford splendid cover for partridges; while, owing to the undulating ground and the extreme dryness of the soil, the young birds can bear even the wettest summers with comparatively little havoc.

M. le Duc was an ardent devotee of le sport. And in some branches of it he certainly excelled. Much as I hated him, I could not fail to recognise that he was a good rider, a good fisherman, and an excellent shot. Only he was so confoundedly vain of these things, and boasted so insufferably of his achievements, that most of us men regarded him as the curse of the smoking-room. And there was another quality of which he was even vainer, and boasted in still louder tones. Fur, feathers, and scales were not the only victims of his prowess. He could kill a lady with the same ease as he could a salmon. A glance of his eye was as deadly in a boudoir as a charge of his No. 5 in a covert. It sickened us all to hear him bragging of his conquests, and licking his nasty fat chops over them with oily complacency. I dare say that women had fallen victims to the Prince; though I'll swear that not even a scullery-maid could ever have sacrified herself to the man. He was one of the most revolting-looking brutes I have ever come across.

Here is a recipe for his portrait. Take a fat, yellow face, with bloodshot eyes, a fleshy nose, thick lips, and pendulous cheeks. Add a crop of oily black hair, and a chin-tuft of the same material. Set the whole upon a thick neck, and the latter upon an obese trunk, furnished with short arms and still shorter legs. When the process is complete, you will have a very fair presentiment of the Duc de Nullicourt.

The last time I met him was down at Shawfordbury two years ago. Certain circumstances have made the occasion, to me at least, memorable; and I look back on it now with some inward satisfaction. My reasons for this satisfaction I will proceed to explain.

We were a large house-party, assembled for the partridge shooting; eight or nine men—none of whom, with the exception of M. le Duc, is there any need to particularise—and quite a bevy of pretty women. None of these, however, could, in my opinion, hold a candle—for looks—to my cousin Laura, the daughter of the house, who was quite the prettiest girl I had ever met. Eh? An affair—a cousinly affair? Nothing of the sort. Laura was already engaged, or as good as engaged, to Lord Hillbrow, whose estate joins her father's, and whom she has since married. Hillbrow is a good fellow, and on the whole, perhaps, worthy of the prize he has won. But, of course, we who live much in the world can't help thinking him rather obsolete. He seldom comes up to town, you know, except now and again on business; spends all his time on his estate looking after his tenants. Quite a survival. "A good old English gentleman, all of the olden time," and that sort of game. I've stayed at Hillbrow Hall. It isn't bad, only Hillbrow's a bit strait-laced. Have to mind your P's and Q's; no loo or baccarat or anything of that kind; show up at church on Sunday morning, &c. However, I didn't find my visit otherwise than enjoyable, and I'm going there again next Christmas. But this is by the way.

I was talking about Laura—wasn't I? Well, when I went down to Shawfordbury upon that memorable occasion, I could not help noticing a great change in my cousin. Usually she was the personification of brightness and high spirits; but now she was obviously depressed and dull. I wondered what was the matter with her, and at last, having made up my mind by acute observation that she must have some sort of trouble or difficulty weighing upon her, presumed on our brotherly and sisterly terms to ask her what it was, and if it was anything in which I could help her. We were alone in the garden together at the time, and no one was near to interrupt. First of all Laura evaded my questions, said it was nothing, and so forth. But, in the end, she burst into tears, and when I had calmed and soothed her a bit, confessed to me the whole matter.

It appeared that a year previously, when Laura was only a school-girl of seventeen, that scoundrel of a Nullicourt had presumed to make clandestine love to her. She had not (Laura told me) ever cared twopence for the fellow, nor, knowing him to be married (the scoundrel, you know, has a duchess who lives apart from him, and a good thing for her!), had she taken his amatory speeches at all seriously. But, in a fit of girlish folly, being momentarily under the glamour of his royalty, and her mind being just then filled with romantic notions about an exiled Prince, robbed of his rights and all the rest of it, she was silly enough to play the game of flirtation with him; and, in the course of doing so, to write him a couple of indiscreet letters.

This was where the trouble came in; for De Nullicourt still had the letters, and, though Laura had begged him to do so, he absolutely refused to give them up. And worse than that, annoyed by the chilling disdain with which Laura now treated him, thus publicly wounding his vanity in its tenderest point, he had had the incredible meanness, the odious caddishness, to threaten Laura by means of these letters, vowing that unless she changed her demeanour towards him, he would show her letters to Lord Hillbrow.

When I heard this, my wrath with that sneaking French beast knew no bounds.

"Let him show them to Hillbrow!" I exclaimed, "and I'll thrash the scoundrel within an inch of his life. Yes; and if Hillbrow is a decent fellow, he'll do the same by him."

"But—but—don't you see, Charlie," said poor Laura, miserably, "even if you half-murdered the Duke it would do me no good. I—I—wouldn't have H-Hillbrow see those letters for anything, or father or mother either. I—I—meant no serious harm; but—but—I daresay I said some awfully foolish things, and—and—seeing they were written to a married man, and not understanding the—the—exact circumstances, Hillbrow might——"

"Hillbrow would surely believe you if you told him the exact truth," I said warmly.

"Yes—yes! I daresay, Charlie; but Hillbrow is so scrupulous, so above board, himself, that—that—O, Charlie, I'd do anything for you if only you could get those two silly letters back!"

"Has he them here with him?"

"Yes; he showed them to me; he taunted me with them, only yesterday."

"The brute!"

"Oh, Charlie" (piteously), "don't you think you could get them away from him somehow?"

And again she burst out crying.

"My dear little coz," I said, consolingly; "don't give way like this. I'll think what can be done."

"Oh Charlie! Do—do get them away from him."

"Well—well," I told her, wishing to console her, and therefore speaking confidently, "I daresay it can be managed. Leave the matter to me and don't worry about it any further."

"Oh, thank you, thank you, Charlie. Isn't that mamma coming along there? Yes, it is! She must not see that I have been crying, else she will want to know what is the matter."

And my pretty cousin jumped quickly from her seat and ran off towards the house by another way.

I thought very carefully over what Laura had told me. I was anxious to help her if I possibly could; for I saw what cause of uneasiness the existence of those letters naturally was to her; although I was sure that her fears had exaggerated the dangers of the situation. For one thing, the letters, if shown, would doubtless be found to contain nothing very seriously compromising. For another, I did not believe that, for his own sake and credit, the mean cad would venture to show them at all However, assuming that I could devise some possible means, I decided to get the letters from him; and I set myself to think what way promised the best hope of success.

All sorts of ideas occurred to me; but none seemed particularly feasible. And when we started on our shooting expedition next morning—which was the eventful "first"—I had not in the least made up my mind what line to pursue.

I am ashamed to say that in the course of the morning's shoot poor Laura's trouble was quite eliminated from my mind by an unforeseen and unfortunate accident which happened to myself. Like a stupid ass, I potted a hen-pheasant. She was a very young, small bird, and was half obscured from me when I shot her by an intervening belt of hazels. The most scrupulous sportsman in England might easily, under the circumstances, have made the same mistake. But it was devilish annoying to me all the same; and I was in a fine state of mind when I discovered what I had done. Luckily, however, I was on the outside wing (being the youngest and most active member of the party), and was more or less hidden from the others by the same hazels which had obscured my view for the shot. By that merciful interposition, my crime escaped discovery; for I at once pounced on the murdered pheasant, and doubling it up anyhow, thrust it hastily into an inner pocket in the skirt of my shooting jacket; not venturing to leave it lying where it was, for fear it should be retrieved by one of the dogs. But I meant to get rid of the evidence of my guilt on the first available opportunity.

However—much to my dismay—I found no opportunity of doing this before luncheon. And very guilty I felt as I sat down to feed among my fellow-sportsmen, and several of the ladies who had joined us at our midday repast, with that wretched pheasant bulging out my pocket. I was in mortal terror lest some one should call attention to the protrusion. But, happily, it passed unnoticed, either because, in my loose jacket, it was less obvious than I, the guilty murderer, supposed it, or perhaps because, if observed, it was simply set down as cartridges or some other paraphernalia of the sportsman. At any rate, no allusion was made to it by any members of the party.

That cad of a Frenchman was in the greatest feather, and talked in his most self-asserting tones as he discussed his luncheon. He had shot remarkably well; indeed, he had (as he took care to announce to us) killed ten brace to his own gun. All of us—except M. le Duc—were very pleased when Hillbrow, who was of the party, capped the boastful foreigner by claiming ten and a half brace.

"Ha!" said the Prince, "and I did also keell one partridge more than I have said. You remember that last shot of mine just before luncheon; I hit the bird, and I am sure that I did keell it. I saw it fall among the fern there. It is lying not far away, dead, I will swair-r-r, although the dogs could not find it."

"You only winged it, I expect, Prince. It must have run," said my uncle.

"Ah! But I did not only weeng it. I keelled it," persisted the Frenchman. "And I am sure it will be found not far from there," he added, indicating the patch of fern.

It was then that an idea struck me. Here was a grand opportunity of getting rid of my hen-pheasant. I turned to the Frenchman and said, carelessly, for I feared to betray myself by evincing too much interest in the matter,

"I agree with you, Prince. I saw the bird fall. And I'm sure that there was devilish little run in him. I have no doubt he is somewhere close there. I'll go and have a look if you like, while I'm smoking my weed."

"And I will come and asseest you, mon ami!" exclaimed the Prince, jumping up eagerly.

"You'll be wasting your labour," said my uncle. "If the bird had fallen there, the dogs must have had him."

"Ah, the dogs are often at fault when birds are falling thick," I said sagely.

And M. le Duc and I strolled away together. Now, of course, was my chance. The Duke and I had separated,

No aperient water can boast of such sure and beneficial purgative efficacy as the "Franz Josef." It was known on the Continent twenty years ago, and is now sold everywhere.

Gratis and post free, very elaborately-illustrated Price Lists, showing exact sizes of Havana Cigars issued by the Havana Trading Association, 177, Piccadilly.—C. A. Carlin, Gen. Manager.

when we reached the patch of bracken, to explore different parts of it. The fern was thick and tall. When I stooped a little, my movements were invisible. In less than a twinkling that slaughtered hen-pheasant was lying on the grass at my feet.

I gave a low whistle. The fat Frenchman ran gasping towards me through the bracken.

"Have you found it? Have you found it?"

"Yes!" I almost whispered, and then I added, very impressively, "Not so loud, Prince!"

"Why not so loud? I——"

"Look here," I interposed, kicking the pheasant gently towards him. "And then you'll see why."

The Prince started; his red face turned quite pale. He looked down at the murdered fowl with the deepest dismay.

"Sacrebleu!" he muttered. "Est-il possible?"

"Looks like it!" I said, with a grin. I was thoroughly enjoying myself.

"What is to be done?" gasped the Prince.

"Hanged if I know. If we leave him here one of the dogs is bound to find him, and then——"

I thrust my hands deep into my pockets and whistled. There is an air of desperate mystery about this process which makes it more tremendous than any articulate words.

"Ha! where shall we put it? Say, say," gasped M. le Duc, with an apprehensive look towards the other sportsmen, who were already rising from their seats and taking up their guns.

"Into your pocket, quick, quick!" I whispered.

He was too frantic and flabbergasted to think or to reason. He stooped down, doubled up the pheasant—which, though he never noticed this, was already in an awfully tumbled state from its sojourn in my pocket—and stuffed it into the loose bosom of his Norfolk jacket. I could have screamed for joy as I witnessed it. I was giving the odious beast a "doing" with a vengeance.

"There is nothing showing—no tail feathers?" he asked me, with fearful eagerness.

"No; but keep it in the middle, over your—hem—stomach," I told him. (Oh, how I did relish roasting the beggar!) "It looks more natural there. They'll only think it's your luncheon."

He was too much overcome with anxiety to resent my allusion to his huge feeding propensities. He only said, imploringly,

"And you'll say nothing about it—not a word?"

"All right. I won't split. But mind you keep it in the middle, or else you'll give yourself away! Take care! It is working round towards your ribs now!"

And before anything more could be said we were joined by the rest of the company.

"Well, you didn't find it?" asked my uncle.

"No," said the Prince.

"Not a sign of a partridge anywhere," I added, with a scarcely-suppressed grin.

Heart alive! How the beast squirmed at that. He was afraid that my emphasis on "partridge" had betrayed the secret. But no one noticed. And the head keeper proceeded to form us into line for shooting the next beat.

As we started off, Laura, who had come out with the other ladies, attached herself to my side. Not till that minute had I remembered poor Laura's trouble. My whole thoughts had been taken up with getting rid of the pheasant and roasting the Frenchman. But now I saw, with a flash of holy joy, that our enemy was delivered into our hands.

"Look here, dear little coz," I said to her, after briefly explaining matters to her. "I have to keep my place in the line. But you can walk where you please. Make it your business to walk by the side of the Prince and see that he has no opportunity of reducing his—hem—corporation on the way. If his waist gets no smaller by the time we reach home, you shall have back your two letters before dinner to-night!"

She did.

Mediterranean and Baltic Cruises for Eighteen Guineas, Conducted by Mr. Woolrych Perowne, on the s.s. "Midnight Sun" (3,188 tons).—Particulars, Secretary, 5, Endsleigh-gdns. Ldn. N.W.

MUSIC.

PROMENADES AND MUSIC.

THE Promenade Concerts at Queen's Hall of to-day are very different entertainments from those which the present generation when young used to visit on the sly. Formerly there were two distinct audiences. One consisted of genuine music lovers, who welcomed the shilling performances of Symphonies and better class works. These no doubt remain. The others were true promenaders, city clerks, men about town, and others who cared little for the music, but much for the lights and the decorations; or very young men who thought themselves rackety dogs indeed, when they bade a lady "good evening," without the ceremony of a formal introduction. These, it seems, have migrated to the music halls, which now offer more glittering and more diversified entertainments than they did thirty years ago. In Mellon's time, a girl seen in the Promenade at Covent Garden would have been considered by the dowagers of the period to have gone irretrievably to the bad. To-day a lady could go without escort to the Queen's Hall concerts, with as little fear of rudeness or annoyance as at the Monday Pops themselves.

Mr. Robert Newman, in fact, has to cater almost exclusively for the great shilling public, the musical middle-class section of the community. His programmes at Queen's Hall are practically those of mixed concerts, and there seems no earthly reason why the promenade should not be abolished altogether, or, at any rate, why the greater part of the floor of the house should not be provided with seats. For a man, however great a musical enthusiast, to have to stand throughout the performance of a Beethoven's Symphony or a Concerto, is a severe physical task. To ladies it is almost impossible. The present season is, however, more or less experimental, and if experience shows that the public demand seats, the promenade may be abbreviated, or even abolished altogether. It is certainly a capital shillingsworth that Mr. Newman provides, for, although his band may not perhaps quite justify some of the wild nonsense that has been written about it, and although the vocal programme on Saturday could easily have been bettered, yet the entertainment at the price is quite a marvel of cheapness. Certain days of the week are to be set apart for composers whose works will fill the first part, Monday being devoted to Wagner, while last Tuesday the favoured musician was Sir Arthur Sullivan; Mendelssohn holds the place of honour to-night (Wednesday), and Friday will be devoted to Beethoven. The second part of each concert is of a more miscellaneous character, although even on Saturday it included Mlle. Chaminade's "Idylle Arabe," the march written in honour of the painter Regnault by Dr. Saint-Saëns, and the principal melodies from "Cavalleria Rusticana," all a great deal better than the trashy dance pieces which formerly were considered good enough for the second half of the evening. The enterprise, which has commenced rather late in August, must be brief, as the regular musical season starts early next month. The improvement in the Promenade Concerts programmes is, however, a striking sign of the times, for it shows that the fact has been drilled into the heads of managers that the shilling public demand music of the highest class.

There is no particularly fresh operatic news, although rumours are still plentiful enough. Somebody, indeed, has even discovered the exact night when Mr. Chevalier Scovel will open an autumn season at Covent Garden. October 20 is the date given, but as that happens to be a Tuesday, people may perhaps be sceptical on the point. Nothing, at any rate, has, I believe, been signed, though Mr. Scovel is credited with the intention of singing "Lohengrin" in English, and of producing Leoncavallo's "Chatterton," and perhaps the same composer's opera "I Medici." The German papers also confidently announce a German opera season under Mr. Grau at Covent Garden this winter. But Mr. Grau is not at all likely to be so foolish.

The craze for musical comedy continues, and by the end of next month nearly half the theatres in London bid fair to be devoted to it. "Monte Carlo," which was produced at the Avenue last Thursday, is a good deal superior to "Newmarket," given at the Opéra Comique the previous week, although the second act is not a little dull, and the whole work needs complete revision. It is the weak point of this class of theatrical production that almost every singing member of the cast demands one or more ballads, so that the comedy element is overloaded with music much of which is by no means of an exhilarating character. Mr. Howard Talbot is one of the numerous British musicians who pay Sir Arthur Sullivan the sincerest form of compliment, but although Mr. Talbot possesses a pretty gift of melody the unconscious imitation is far off the original. The cleverest thing of "Monte Carlo" (apart, perhaps, from the persistency with which a real monkey tried to claw off a chorus lady's headgear) is a parody of an East End music-hall song, rendered with amusing vulgarity by Miss Lalor Shiel. Mr. Garden is an hotel waiter, subsequently, by some topsy-turveydom, discovered to be the long lost husband of a lady who keeps a yacht (it is now the ambition of every burlesque lady to keep a "yot"), and there are two genuine recruits from the Halls to show what a very refined and entertaining damsel the latter-day serio-comique can be. "Monte Carlo," however, has a good cast, including Mr. Robb Harwood, Miss Kate Cutler, Mr. Richard Green (the best singer of the troupe), Miss Lottie Venne, and graceful Miss Emmie Owen. Miss Owen, by the way, was formerly a dancer at the Savoy, but Sir Arthur Sullivan once accidentally overheard her singing to herself, and discovered her possession of a really pretty voice, which has since been properly cultivated.

The "Little Genius"—Sir Augustus Harris's last mistake, as somebody has described it—has been completely overhauled, and in the course of this week it will be presented in a second edition, Miss Florence St. John now playing the part of the twelve-year-old boy "progidy." There is to be a new second act, and almost entirely new music; so that comparatively little will be left of Sir Augustus Harris's purchase. We are also promised ahead an Armenian comedy at this house, a circus piece at the Gaiety, for which it is whimsically said Mr. Lionel Monckton is writing the music at Bayreuth, the "Rightful Heir," by Messrs. Sturgess and Glover at the Duke of York's, and a new musical piece at the Prince of Wales's.

Among my correspondents this week is a lady, impetuous like all other young ladies, who takes me severely to task for a chance word about musical clubs. I remarked that "attempts to form a Musicians' Club have, as a rule, failed, owing to the fact that the projectors imagined professors of music hankered after musical performances in their hours of ease. I expect what they really do desire is to meet possible pupils." And my fair correspondent wrathfully exclaims, "Do lawyers in joining a club aim at meeting possible clients, or painters possible purchasers of pictures?" Painters are, of course, beyond reproach, but the hint may, perhaps, not be lost upon married lawyers addicted to late hours. It would therefore be unkind to say that the Law Club is one of the dullest clubs in London.

Apropos of musical clubs, I learn, by the way, that another attempt is about to be made to form a genuine professional club. Sir Arthur Sullivan, Professor Bridge, Mr. Cowen, and other gentlemen have, it is said, promised their support, and "The Musical Arts Club" will open in Gerrard-street in a week or two. Personally, I know nothing about it, but I hear that the subscription is to be as low as half a guinea, in order to attract the concert and opera bandsmen, who will be glad to find some place to dress, and read, and eat between afternoon rehearsals and evening performances. Such a club, as a business rendezvous, ought to be a good deal more successful than the pretentious, dilettante, cock-and-hen musical clubs which during the past ten years have come so plentifully, and gone so regularly.

Another correspondent writing apropos of my allusion to the historic Temple organ (we have, by the way, many old organs in London, but most of them renovated, rejuvenated, and practically rebuilt), directs attention to another ancient organ with a "history" which has been receiving renovation during the last few months:—

This is the organ in the chapel of the Foundling Hospital, associated with memories of Handel. It was in 1740 that Handel opened the organ, built by Parker, and on it he performed at the early performances of the Messiah, given under his direction in the chapel. The present larger instrument, built about 1830, contains some of the pipes, as well as the case, of Handel's organ, with which it is often erroneously confused by writers. It was rebuilt by Messrs. Willis in 1884, and the present alterations consist mainly of some of the latest improvements of action and touch, supplied by Messrs. Hill.

According to a German paper, the German Emperor is to be greeted on his visit to Westphalia next month by a party of 500 singers and 700 trombone players. Even to be a Kaiser is consequently not all beer and skittles.

The Crystal Palace Directors have put forward a capital programme for the autumn concerts, which commence on the 3rd prox. No second-rate provincial novelties are to be tried this year, but the two concerts in which the choir will take part are to be devoted to "The Golden Legend" and Berlioz's "Faust." Also there is a strong cast of principal artists, headed by MM. D'Albert, Sarasate, and Hambourg; Mesdames Chaminade, Fanny Davies, Ella Russell, Landi, Clara Samuell, Sherwin, Brema, and others. There is an interesting list of novelties, some new work, indeed, being given in almost every programme, while many favourite standard compositions are likewise to be heard. In short, the scheme is infinitely better than that of last year, and it is hoped that the attendance will be improved. The Crystal Palace concerts have lasted forty years under the same conductor, Mr. Manns. Happily, they still seem to be in vigorous life.

GIRLS' GOSSIP.

DEAREST AMY,—Have you ever known weather so changeable? We have been caught in showers ever so often during the last few days, and but for the boon and blessing of what we call our "blankets," viz.: thick-ribbed serges, we should probably now be a cheerful party occupied in sneezing, coughing, and otherwise indulging in symptoms of a catarrhal condition.

We had a fine shower accompanied by a short but energetic thunderstorm on Friday, on our way to the Military Tournament at Hythe. The Tournament was great fun; and so was the Bazaar on the following day. I wonder how many regiments are represented by detachments at Shorncliffe. We could not even keep count of the enormous variety of uniforms we saw there. Just to enumerate a few, we noticed Highlanders, Hussars, Bucks, Berks, Middlesex, and Indians, highly picturesque in white and scarlet. There were several others, but I cannot remember them.

We took such a fancy to Sandgate, in passing through on our way to Hythe, that we put up there for a few days. It is a quaint and curious little place, consisting of one street, one-half the houses in which deliberately turn their backs on the sea, ignoring it completely, and quite hiding it from the other half. Well planned, it might be so managed that all should have a sea view, but the dwellings seem to have very contentedly nestled down at the foot of the cliff. Some of the prettiest of the houses are made of wood, and their whiteness gives them an attractive look, to say nothing of roses and honeysuckle growing up the walls, and wild clematis throwing its long, thick clustering sprays over porch and window.

You cannot imagine what a cheery place the quaint old High-street is on a Sunday morning with the soldiers marching to the different places of worship and the regimental bands playing. On Sunday last we attended

St. Paul's and heard a short, practical, and excellent sermon preached in the simplest Saxon English by the Bishop of Lincoln, and addressed chiefly to the military, who occupied the whole of one gallery.

There is a horse-tram, open at the sides, but covered at the top, which runs between Sandgate and Hythe, chiefly by the sea, and it is really a delightful drive. Or may I amend that utterance by saying that it would be a most perfect drive if only the men who occupy seats would refrain from smoking strong tobacco, and puffing it in the faces of those who sit opposite them?

As you know, I am no foe to tobacco, but I dearly like it to be good.

One can get much more good out of the sea at Sandgate than at Folkestone. There are no crowds of cheap trippers as there are at the latter, and there is a good asphalted parade, on which a glorious walk towards the sunset was our regular evening amusement, chiefly in the teeth of a lively, roaring south-west wind, laden with ozone and the delicious smell of the salt sea breeze. Three miles of this parade—or is it four?—are a liberal allowance, and Lilla should be here and compel herself to walk it once a day and back. She would soon shake off some of her too, too solid flesh.

By-the-way, she is in mourning for her sister-in-law, poor Fred's favourite sister. I wonder if Lilla feels the smallest sympathy for him in his loss? She is one of that numerous class of persons who, if they do not themselves like any individual or any thing, completely fail to grasp the idea that any one else can really do so. Lilla detested both her sisters-in-law, and in writing to tell me of the death of this one, says:—

> Fred's in an awful way. The news of Anna's death, out in India, came this morning. Write by return and tell me if you would advise me to wear crape. I am so vexed, for we were engaged to dine next week at the Manor House to meet the De Veres, and you know how I have been wishing to make their acquaintance without appearing anxious to do so.

Poor Fred! One can fancy how she will try to scold him out of his grief, as if it were a naughty temper.

Of course she must wear crape, mourning being as deep for one's husband's relations as for one's own. In fact, many of us are more particular to do all that could possibly be considered necessary in such cases than if the lost relative were really our own.

I am sending her a very useful little card lately brought out by Charles Letts & Co., on which the leading authorities are quoted on the correct periods for wearing mourning. The way in which these authorities agree in the main, while differing slightly in detail, is interesting in its line. For instance, one well-known paper gives the requisite period of wearing mourning for a sister as "crape three months, plain black two, and half-mourning for one month;" and another says: "Crape for three months, mourning for three." Practically the same, you see, but different in minutiæ.

You ask me what I mean by the word "Vizella." Your "z" is wrong. What I wrote was "Viyella," the name of the delightfully soft material which will not shrink. I believe a whole width of it—and it is very wide—could be drawn through a wedding ring with ease.

There is such a lovely young woman here. We see her on the Lees very often. She has a pretty face, an exquisite complexion, and quantities of magnificent ruddy brown hair. She looks about sixteen, but there is a baby always by her side in its dainty perambulator, with a white-clad nurse. So we conclude that this girlish, almost childish, beauty is the baby's mother.

Another extremely fascinating woman charms us by her dresses. She must have an almost endless supply, for we seldom see her wearing the same gown twice. One morning it was a blue serge with pointed lapels lined and turned back with embroidered grass lawn, a vest of the same just showing between the lapels. Another morning she wore a cream-white coat and skirt with a blouse or front of Indian pattern in blue and pink and amber. Her hat was blue straw, with chené ribbons in many mingled tints for trimming. Again, one afternoon, we saw her in a blue and white foulard, made to perfection, and trimmed very sparingly with cream-coloured guipure insertion on the sleeves and shoulders. Her belt and neck ribbon were cream-coloured satin ribbon, and her hat was blue rough straw with cornflowers and poppies for trimming.

A girl here who cycles constantly wears, on fine days, a white piqué skirt, a white muslin shirt, belt of Danish red silk, and a dark blue hat trimmed with red geraniums matching the belt. On damp days her skirt is in light tan-coloured covert coating with a short, well-fitting coat to match, buttoned across at the waist, but with lapels folded back above to show the neatest of pink and black check shirts, with white collar and black tie. Her business-like sailor hat is black straw with a pink ribbon.

I enjoy seeing a toilette that is well thought out even to the most trifling detail; don't you?

Some of the bathers swim very well. A pretty girl who wears a scarlet bathing suit is a capital swimmer, and another, in grey relieved with crimson, is almost as good. The one in the red gown does what I thought no girl or woman could ever do. She actually looks pretty when coming out of the water after her bath. But then, as Bee remarks, she never wets her hair!

The too hideous bathing cap has its votaries. I wonder that its wearers do not copy their French sisters and tie round it a becomingly tinted handkerchief, finishing it off in front with two little "dog's-ear" ends. It makes such a difference in the appearance of a bather!

And, after all, appearances have to be studied, though one need not go so far as the Narraganset girl, who bathes in black satin knickerbockers and a low-cut bodice of the same and wears her pearls. People say, by the way, that pearls are benefited by a dip in their native brine, but how about the setting, or the string that ties them together?

How irritating silk dress linings and silk petticoats are! Why does not some one invent a silk that will not cut? One no sooner gets on agreeable terms of familiarity with a new gown than the silk lining begins to show signs of fatigue, and finally, after having been mended and re-pinked out in its borders, strikes work altogether, after having first calmly disintegrated itself in the most public place into which its owner has rashly taken it. Let us invent some other material, and make our fortunes!

Clare sends me the following from Dublin:—

> Dearest Madge,—Of course we, in common with thousands upon thousands of Celts and Saxons, of strangers and pilgrims from many parts of the globe, were at the Horse Show last week. Though the grouse and the horse come into rivalry at this season, the latter has till now scored an easy triumph, and carried off from the moors even the most rabid and bloodthirsty of bird slayers, who have been content to stay their hands and spend the week in Dublin. It was a strain no doubt, a clashing of the great interests of life, with regard to which true philosophy teaches compromise. The authorities who rule these things have therefore decided—perhaps not quite finally yet—that the Horse Shows of the future are to be held at the beginning instead of at the end of August. Just after Goodwood and before grouse.
>
> Notwithstanding the strike of the wheels against the horse, and their establishment on an independent basis, the horse has not only retained his old position in Ireland, but scaled even greater heights. The horse show of last week again beat the record. What do you think of an attendance on one day of over twenty-four thousand? On the corresponding day last year it was not quite twenty-three. Of course, it is the mere humans I allude to in these thousands. What the entry of horses was I cannot say, but that they, too, were there in their thousands I can certify, my judgment being founded on the long rows of legs and tails I, circumspectly, walked between. That was in the morning hours, when human interests were suspended, and we gave all our minds and zeal to the horse, his pedigree, points, performance, and possibilities. We bought and sold him, while he looked on from his stall with a more supreme indifference to fate than the philosopher in his tub ever attained (Fred here interpolates that human interests do largely come into these sales, as in horse-coping bargains the horse is rarely the only animal that gets sold). Then there were tweeds, lace, embroideries, wood carving, basket work, and all sorts of other Irish industries to be studied, admired, and above all bought, but you have seen most of these things at the sales in London.

Now Ready.—Costumes for all kinds of Sports and Pastimes. Redfern makes a special feature of Costumes for all out-door pursuits, and is constantly introducing novelties. Everything practical, correct, up-to-date, and smart.—26, Conduit-st., London.

In the afternoon on both Wednesday and Thursday Lord and Lady Cadogan made the usual entry into the Ball's Bridge grounds, their carriages being driven to the grand stand through the enclosure. The ladies of the Viceregal party generally remain seated in the Viceregal box on the grand stand during the afternoon, whilst the Lord Lieutenant and the men go into the jumping enclosure with the judges to have a closer view of the proceedings. On Wednesday the weather moderated the display of toilets, which had a tendency more to the useful and suitable than to the brilliant. A keen north wind and heavy showers are not favourable to any draperies, frills, and flowers. They had, however, their opportunity on Thursday and profited of it amply. Headgear—one uses the word advisedly, the distinctions between hats, bonnets, and toques being too fine for the average intelligence—as usual led the way in rainbow-like brilliancy, and bodices monopolised all the frills. One had no forecast, even in the Viceregal party, of a future of restricted skirts and more reasonable shoulders. The Irish Peerage and society in general from the north, south, east, and west of the country were largely represented, besides a large contingent from across many waters. Lord Morris and Sir James Mathew were amongst the representatives of the English Bench. Lord Ashbourne was absent, but Mr. E. Carson was present. The Irish Lord Chief Justice and Lord Justice FitzGibbon were amongst the many members of the Irish Bench to be seen. The muster of the military was naturally very great, headed by Lord Roberts with his family, and a large party, including Lord and Lady Settrington, Lord and Lady Airlie, Lord and Lady Southampton, Lady Carew and her sister. Lords Arran, Belmore, Rosse, Talbot de Malahide, Longford, Langford, Willoughby de Broke, Portarlington, Clonbrock, Ashtown, Lord and Lady Bellew, Lord and Lady Clancarty, Lady Limerick, Sir T. O'Brien, and hosts of others well known in Society moved up and down the crowded enclosure. There were many charming faces and figures amongst the strangers and foreigners who come in increasing numbers each year to the Horse Show. Quite a fleet of large yachts was in Kingstown Harbour for the week, Kingstown being within twenty minutes of Ball's Bridge. There were parties on board Lord Fitzwilliam's Kathleen, Lord Morton's Cressida, Mr. Ninian Stewart's Maria, the Duchess St. Theodora's Æolia, the Capercailzie, and many others.

It was rather a clashing of interests to have the All Ireland Polo Tournament on the same days as the Horse Show, especially on Thursday, when the match between the 10th Hussars and the Freebooters drew crowds away in the afternoon to the Phœnix Park. Modernity, however, is never satisfied without a rush, and of course one felt that it gave ton to the Horse Show to have to rush away from it to something else.

You like to know the inside of things; do not believe that Lord Cadogan was received with great warmth, as the Court-inspired papers report, at the Horse Show. The Irish landlords are very sore at present about the Land Bill, and their feelings towards the Government and its Ministers are just now decidedly going through a glacial period. The contrast between the way in which Lord Cadogan was received in the Enclosure at the Horse Show this year and last was very marked. This kind of thing is the fault of the system, not of the Viceroy himself. What a pity that we have not a Viceroy as India has, who does not represent a party, but only as one of the name should, the Sovereign.—Yours ever, CLARE.

Arthur writes from Dieppe:—

Dieppe has been very full lately, this being the race week. Everyone's pleasure has been sadly marred by the broken weather. It poured in torrents last Friday afternoon, just as people had fairly settled down to the first day's racing, and has rained on each race-day since—Sunday, Tuesday, and Thursday. The French Fleet was to come on Tuesday, and great preparations were made for a ball, a banquet, and a reception at the Hôtel de Ville. Owing to the squally weather, they were a day late, but at last arrived on Wednesday morning, and everyone was in a state of great excitement, and the Hôtel de Ville was gaily decked with flags, &c. Just as the hour for the reception was near, a telegram arrived, ordering the Fleet to proceed at once to Cherbourg, as the glass was falling and a gale expected. The anchorage here is very bad, and it is not safe to lie off here in bad weather. So about 6 p.m. we sorrowfully watched the squadron file away.

And now to turn to things culinary. Try this lemon pudding; it is very refreshing, and equally good either hot or cold:—

Put the strained juice of half a small lemon into a stewpan with 4 oz. of pounded sugar, boil it on the side of the stove until it turns a golden colour, pour at once into a plain round mould, and allow it to cool. Beat four yolks and two whole eggs with 6 oz. of pounded sugar and the grated peel and juice of a lemon, pour into the prepared mould, twist a buttered paper over and steam, without allowing it to boil, for three-quarters of an hour.

I think you will like this savoury:—

Cut rounds of bread from a tin loaf about 2 in. in diameter and fry them carefully in hot butter. Pound the meat of a couple of cooked kippers with the yolk of a hard boiled egg and 1 oz. of butter, season with cayenne pepper and rub it through a wire sieve, spread the croutes rather thickly with the fish paste, then put a dessertspoonful of tomatoes, cut in dice-shaped pieces and seasoned with oil, vinegar, salt, and pepper, on the top and garnish with a little hard boiled yolk of egg passed through a wire sieve. Arrange them on a dish paper, on a bed of mustard and cress, with sprigs of chervil here and there.

Ever, dear, your loving cousin, MADGE.

With the Japanese Troops.

JAMES CREELMAN, the American War Correspondent, in his dispatch to New York, dated PORT ARTHUR, Nov. 24, 1894, writes:—

In the camp, on the march, under the trying conditions of active warfare, Mariani Wine enabled me to resist fatigue & defy exhaustion.

Mariani Wine fortifies, nourishes, and stimulates the Body and Brain. It restores Health, Strength, Energy, and Vitality: notably after INFLUENZA. Bottles, 4s.; dozen, 45s., of Chemists and Stores, or carriage paid from Wilcox & Co., 239, Oxford Street, London.

THE NEW CROWN VIOLET.

AN EXQUISITE PERFUME.

In Crown Stoppered Bottles only.

"The Delicious Essence of the Violet itself, distilled from the fragrant Violet Gardens of the sunny Riviera."

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

The Crown Perfumery Co.,
177, NEW BOND STREET, W.

WHY DRINK INFERIOR TEA?
UNITED KINGDOM TEA COMPANY'S TEAS
DIRECT FROM THE GROWERS.
1/-, 1/3, 1/4, 1/6, 1/7, 1/9, & 2/- per lb., DELIVERED CARRIAGE PAID.
Write for Samples sent free, taste them, and judge for yourselves. Amazing superiority in Quality! Great Economy in prices.
Offices: 21, MINCING LANE, LONDON, E.C.

ACCIDENTS OF TRAVEL.
ACCIDENTS RIDING, DRIVING, SHOOTING, CYCLING, FISHING, SKATING, &c.
ACCIDENTS OF ALL KINDS.
INSURED AGAINST BY THE
RAILWAY PASSENGERS' ASSURANCE CO.
64, CORNHILL, LONDON. A. VIAN, Secretary

"TRUTH"
THE GALIGNANI LIBRARY,
224, RUE DE RIVOLI, PARIS.

GAIETY RESTAURANT, STRAND.
LUNCHEONS (HOT and COLD)—At Popular Prices, in BUFFET and RESTAURANT (on 1st floor). Also Chops, Steaks, Joints, Entrées, etc., in the GRILL ROOM.
AFTERNOON TEA—Consisting of Tea or Coffee, Cut Bread and Butter, Jam, Cake, Pastry, ad lib., at 1/- per head; served from 4 till 6 in RESTAURANT (1st floor).
DINNERS IN RESTAURANT—From 5.30 till 9 at Fixed Prices (3/6 and 5/-) and à la Carte. Smoking after 7.45.
Private Dining Room for Large and Small Parties.
American Bar. The GRILL ROOM is open till 12.30.
SPIERS & POND, Ltd, Proprietors.

FOR

FASHIONABLE MOURNING.

PRIESTLEY'S

HIGH-CLASS

Dress Fabrics

TRIMMED WITH

COURTAULD'S

WATERPROOF Crape.

From the leading Drapers of the World.

MELLIN'S FOOD

For INFANTS and INVALIDS.

MELLIN'S FOOD

is similar to Breast Milk chemically and as beneficial physiologically.

Samples post free from

Mellin's Food Works, Peckham, S.E.

Established 1670. Established 1670.

GOLDSMITHS. DIAMOND MOUNTERS

Streeter & Co. Limited

JEWELLERS. LAPIDARIES.

18, NEW BOND STREET, LONDON, W.

GOLF MODELS to order from £5

POMERANIAN BROOCH. In Diamonds from £15. In Gold from £5.

COLLIE BROOCH. In Diamonds from £15. In Gold from £5.

MODELS IN DIAMONDS OF "VALKYRIE AND OTHER YACHTS from £30.

POLO PONY BROOCH. In Diamonds from £15 In Gold from £5.

PUG BROOCH, In Diamonds from £15. In Gold from £5.

POLO MODELS to order from £5.

POLO PONY BROOCH from £15.

DIAMOND JOCKEY BROOCH, from £25. (Owners Colours to order.)

DONKEY BROOCH from £15.

THE BEST NOVELS OF THE SEASON.

"EXCITING AND FASCINATING."

THE REDS OF THE MIDI. An Episode of the Revolution. By FELIX GRAS. Second Edition. Cr. 8vo, 3s. 6d.

MR. GLADSTONE.—"I have read it with great and sustained interest. As a novel, it seems to me to be written with great skill."

"THE NOVEL OF THE YEAR."

ILLUMINATION. By HAROLD FREDERIC. Sixth Edition. Crown 8vo, 6s.

THE REVIEW OF REVIEWS.—"The cleverest and most impressive work of fiction that the year has produced."

"THE SENSATION OF THE HOUR."

WITHOUT SIN. By MARTIN J. PRITCHARD. Crown 8vo, 6s.

THE WORLD.—"The undoubted fascination of the writing, and the convincing charm of the principal characters, are just what make this novel so intensely interesting."

SECOND EDITION OF Z. Z.'s NOVEL.

THE WORLD AND A MAN. By Z. Z. Cr. 8vo, 6s.

THE PALL MALL GAZETTE.—"One of the cleverest novels that we have read for some time. Thoroughly well thought out and finely told."

MISS SERGEANT'S NEW NOVEL.

The FAILURE of SIBYL FLETCHER By ADELINE SERGEANT. Cr. 8vo, 6s.

THE SCOTSMAN.—"A book which will strengthen the reputation of Miss Sergeant as a writer of stirring and elevating stories."

LONDON: WM. HEINEMANN, 21, Bedford-street, W.C.

JUST PUBLISHED. Monthly 1s., Post Free 1s. 3d.

BAILY'S MAGAZINE OF SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

No. 489.—SEPTEMBER, 1896.

CONTENTS.

Steel and other Engravings.
Portrait and Biographical Sketch of Mr. James Edward Platt.
The Noble Art of Self-Defence. By Hon. F. Lawley.
Trainers and Training. By "Borderer."
Old-Time Partridge Shooting. By P. S. (Illustrated.)
Animal Painters.—XVIII. Henry Bernard Chalon. By Sir Walter Gilbey, Bart. Illustrated.
Memories of an Old Soldier.—III. Bill Thorburn's Last Chance.
The Lament of an Old Cab Horse. (Verses.) By J. H. W.
Polo Players.—V. The Earl of Harrington. By Cuthbert Bradley. Illustrated.
Public School Cricket in 1896. By C. T. S.
Some Turf Casualties. By Edward Spencer.
Breeding and Rearing of Pheasants as a Profitable Industry.
Professional Cricketers of the Past and Present. By F. G.
The Sportsman's Library.
The Strange History of a Doncaster Cup.
"Our Van."—Goodwood in its Social Aspects—Social Characteristics at other Places—St. Frusquin—The Twelfth—Polo—Hunting Mems—The Devon and Somerset Staghounds—Puppy Shows—The Rubber Match—Rowing—Golf—Coaching—Yachting—The Fatal Accident in the Solent—A Warning to Shooting Tenants—The late Sir John Millais—Otter Hunting—Irresponsible Criticism—Vincent Square, &c., &c.
Summary of Prominent Results.

Annual Subscription, 14s., post free.

VINTON & CO., Limited, 9, New Bridge-street, Ludgate-circus, London, E.C.

THE NINETEENTH CENTURY

No. 235.—SEPTEMBER, 1896.

The High Oaks: Barking Hall, July 19, 1896. By ALGERNON CHARLES SWINBURNE.
Sisyphus in Ireland: 25 Land Acts in 26 years. By H. O. ARNOLD-FORSTER, M.P.
The Influence of Bayreuth. By J. A. FULLER MAITLAND.
The Baptism of Clovis. By the Rev. Dr. JESSOPP.
Sketches made in Germany. By Mrs. BLYTH.
Some Recollections of Cardinal Newman. By AUBREY DE VERE.
At Sea. By MARTIN MORRIS.
The Jew-baiting on the Continent. By Dr. EMIL REICH.
On Inductive Morality. By the MARCHESE NOBILI-VITELLESCHI.
Boiling Milk. By Mrs. PERCY FRANKLAND.
A Northern Pilgrimage. By Sir WEMYSS REID.
An Attempt at Optimism. By the Hon. LADY PONSONBY.
Sailing for Ladies in Highland Lochs. By Mrs. WALTER CREYKE.
John Stuart Mill. By FREDERIC HARRISON.

London: SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & CO., Ltd.

Kegan Paul, Trench, Trübner & Co.
LIMITED.

THE BOOK OF THE HOUR.

HOW WE MADE RHODESIA. By Major ARTHUR GLYN LEONARD (late of the Chartered Company's Police). Post 8vo, 6s.

"Major Leonard certainly tells a plain tale well, and has not only a plain, but a very striking tale to tell. . . . . His book is a valuable and noteworthy contribution to the history of the origin of Rhodesia, and throws many a sidelight on the character and aims of those who undertook the task of making it. No one can read it without a quickened admiration for the nobler aspects of the work accomplished and for the men who did it."—Times.

HOW WE MADE RHODESIA.

"It is amusing because Major Leonard is a cultured Irishman who does not mind telling a good story, whether against his superior officer or against himself; it is interesting because it 'lifts the veil' to an astonishing extent, and reveals in a strong light the means whereby Rhodesia was 'made' and the personalities concerned in that making."—African Critic.

HOW WE MADE RHODESIA.

"In this very amusing and readable book he gives us his impressions mingled with many shrewd pieces of criticism and an ability to see fun in everything, which at once engages the reader's sympathy."—Glasgow Herald.

"A MODERN PILGRIM'S PROGRESS."—Vide Review of Reviews.

EN ROUTE. By J. K. HUYSMANS, Translated from the French by C. KEGAN PAUL. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"'En Route' is a notable volume which may be specially commended to the perusal of those persons to whom it will be most antipathetic—namely, the hard-headed, more or less materialistic, common-sense, matter of fact, nationalised Protestant of our day and generation. . . . It is a veritable 'Pilgrim's Progress' that we have here described, not by the Bedford tinker, whose artless story has been the staff and the stay of millions of humble souls for the last two hundred years, but an elaborate analytical study by one of the foremost French novelists of the successive steps taken by a soul in its pilgrimage from the City of Destruction to the Promised Land. It explains things which to many of us have been inexplicable, and renders thinkable ways of life which are utterly incomprehensible."—Review of Reviews.

EN ROUTE.

"'En Route' is the story of a modern man of letters flung upon the full tide of Parisian materialism and sensuality, finding himself, when over forty, irresistibly attracted to Catholicism. . . . It is a book of which the appeal is for a far wider circle of readers than is comprised in the Roman Communion alone. Its supreme merit lies in the rare force and simplicity with which it brings home to the mind the inevitableness of the great realities of religion and the absolute common-sense of the mystic's life detached from the world by constant realisation of the omnipresence of God."—Guardian.

EN ROUTE.

The Hon. W. E. Gladstone, in a letter to the translator, says:—"It places the claim of the 'Route' through mysticism higher, I think, than any other book I have read; and by this fact alone it imposes modesty and reserve upon all critics from outside and from a distance."

PATERNOSTER HOUSE, CHARING CROSS-ROAD, LONDON.

F. V. WHITE & CO.'S PUBLICATIONS

THE TRUTH-TELLERS. By JOHN STRANGE WINTER. In one vol., 6s.

"A book that cannot be effectively described, for its dainty humour must be enjoyed at first hand."—Sheffield Daily Telegraph.

VIGNETTES. By RITA. In one vol., 6s.

FOUR WOMEN IN THE CASE. By ANNIE THOMAS. In one vol., 6s.

THE SORROWS OF A GOLFER'S WIFE. By Mrs EDWARD KENNARD. In one vol., 2s. 6d.

HANDICAPPED. By SIR RANDAL ROBERTS. Picture cover, 2s.

THE SAME THING WITH A DIFFERENCE. By JOHN STRANGE WINTER. In one vol., price 1s.

F. V. WHITE & CO., 14, Bedford-street, Strand.

A MODERN VIEW OF JESUS CHRIST
See
THE FORTNIGHTLY REVIEW,
SEPTEMBER, which also contains
SIR JOHN MILLAIS, BY J. AND E. R. PENNELL.
THE CRETAN QUESTION, BY W.
DR. JAMESON'S RAID, AND THE TRIAL AT BAR.
EDMUND DE GONCOURT.
TWO ARTICLES ON ITALY, BY OUIDA AND J. T. BENT.
THE PRESENT EVOLUTION OF MAN. Etc. etc.

CHAPMAN'S MAGAZINE
For SEPTEMBER, contains EIGHT COMPLETE STORIES
BY VIOLET HUNT, LEONARD ASHTON, W. L. ALDEN, ALLEN UPWARD, MARY HARTIER, C. E. MITTON, G. STANLEY ELLIS, MARSHALL STEE E, and the continuation of
"THE HERB MOON," by JOHN OLIVER HOBBES.
CHAPMAN & HALL, Limited, London.

MESSRS. HURST & BLACKETT'S
NEW AND POPULAR NOVELS.

Now Ready, at all the Libraries, in 2 vols., crown 8vo.

VAL; A STORY OF THE TIVY-SIDE.

By JUDITH VANDELEUR.

"The breezy girlish story is just the sort of thing to make maidens happy at the seaside or on the breezy moors."—Glasgow Herald.

SECOND EDITION NOW READY.

At all Booksellers' and Libraries, in 1 vol., crown 8vo, price 6s.

THE WOOING OF FORTUNE.

By HENRY CRESSWELL, Author of "A Modern Greek Heroine," "A Woman's Ambition," &c.

"Mr. Cresswell takes off badly, but once in motion slides away smoothly and satisfactorily enough, without any of that habit of retrospection which Mr. Pickwick displayed when upon the ice."—The Times.

"The book is brightly written, and the style easy and agreeable."—Pall Mall Gazette.

SECOND EDITION NOW READY.

At all Booksellers' and Libraries, in 1 vol., crown 8vo, price 6s.

HER POINT OF VIEW.

By G. M. ROBINS (Mrs. Baillie Reynolds), Author of "The Ides of March," "To Set Her Free," &c.

"The characters are admirably conceived, and the tale is well balanced and proportioned to the needs of the plot."—Literary World.

"A pleasing story, sensible and wholesome, brightly written and clearly expressed."—Black and White.

HURST & BLACKETT, LIMITED, 13, Great Marlborough-street.

TWO POPULAR SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.

Eighth Edition Ready this day. Crown 8vo, 6s.

THE SOWERS.

By HENRY SETON MERRIMAN, Author of "With Edged Tools," "The Grey Lady," &c.

"We do not often read a novel that we can recommend so confidently all round. It is exceedingly interesting, thoroughly wholesome in tone, and above all most readable."—Guardian.

"It is the most absorbing story I have ready for many a day."—Vanity Fair.

THIRTIETH THOUSAND. Crown 8vo, 6s.

CLEG KELLY.

ARAB OF THE CITY.

By S. R. CROCKETT.

"'Cleg Kelly' is from first to last a wholly delightful and stimulating figure—a hero fit to make the fame of any book."—Westminster Gazette.

"A book which will add to the fame of its author, and establish the popularity of the Scotch story on still wider and broader foundations."—Review of Reviews.

London: SMITH, ELDER, & CO., 15, Waterloo-place, S.W.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON'S LIST OF NEW NOVELS NOW READY.

ANTHONY BLAKE'S EXPERIMENT. In 2 vols., crown 8vo. 12s.—GODDESSES THREE. By D. Hugh Pryce 2 vols., 12s.—THE YOKE OF FREEDOM. By Charles James, Author of "On Turnham Green," &c., 1 vol., 6s.—OUT OF THE WORKHOUSE. By Mrs. Herbert Martin, Author of "Britomart," &c., 1 vol., 6s.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON, New Burlington-street.

New Series. Price One Shilling.

THE ARGOSY

for SEPTEMBER contains:—

The Mistress of Brae Farm. By Rosa Nouchette Carey. Chaps. XXXVII.-XL.—A Glimpse of Maria Edgeworth.—Chéric. By C. N. Carvalho.—The Colibri's Revenge. By A. Beresford.—Aragon the Fair. By Charles W. Wood, F.R.G.S.—A Strange Adventure. By W. W. Fenn.—Anecdotes and Adventures. By Lindon Meadows.—Pilgrims of the Night. By Sarah Doudney.—Chaps. XXIII.-XXV.—Ruth. By Ada M. Trotter.—Coldharbour House. By George Fosbury.—A Nursing-Sister of St. John's. By A. E. Glase.—Faint Yet Pursuing. By Christian Burke.—&c., &c.

Profusely and Beautifully Illustrated.

London: R. BENTLEY & SON, 8, New Burlington-street, W.

AT ALL BOOKSELLERS AND LIBRARIES.

JUST PUBLISHED.

In One Volume. Cr. 8vo. Six Shillings.

THE STORY OF A LOST SOUL.

A Novel. By HUGH COLEMAN DAVIDSON.

Author of "The Green Hills by the Sea," "Not a Moment to Spare," "The Old Adam," etc., etc.

SIMPKIN, MARSHALL, HAMILTON, KENT & CO., Ltd.

ON THE STŒCHIOLOGICAL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION,
ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, AND LUNG COMPLAINTS.

By JOHN FRANCIS CHURCHILL, M.D.

One Shilling, Post Free.

T. BURLEIGH, LATE DAVID STOTT, 370, OXFORD STREET.

MISS BRADDON'S LATEST NOVEL.

Cheap Edition, Just Published.

Author's Autograph Edition, cloth gilt, 2s. 6d.

Picture boards, 2s.

SONS OF FIRE.

Truth says:—"If, however, you prefer to unbend your mind with a novel, you cannot do better than order the ever-young, inventive and vigorous Miss Braddon's latest novel 'Sons of Fire.'"

London: SIMPKIN & CO., Lim., and all Booksellers'.

CASSELL'S NEW FINE ART SERIAL

PART 1, NOW READY, PRICE 6d.

PICTORIAL ENGLAND & WALES

EACH PART WILL CONTAIN ABOUT

32 PAGES OF BEAUTIFUL PICTURES

(Prepared from Copyright Photographs).

TO BE COMPLETED IN ELEVEN PARTS.

 The large First Edition of Part 1 was exhausted on the day of publication, but the Part having been reprinted, copies are now on sale at all Booksellers'.

CASSELL & COMPANY, Limited; and all Booksellers

STERILITY IN WOMEN: Its Causes and Curative Treatment. By J. B. RYLEY, M.D., M.R.C.S., London. An Illustrated Edition of this Work is now ready. Price 3s. 6d.; post free, 3s. 8d. London: HENRY RENSHAW, 356, Strand.

1/- BY POST, 1s. 2d. 1/-

Reprint of 6th Series (Violet).

QUEER STORIES

— FROM —

"TRUTH"

PUBLISHING OFFICE,

10, BOLT COURT, FLEET STREET, LONDON, E.C.

ESTATES, AUCTIONS, &c.

Without Reserve.—The "EXCELSIOR" LINGFIELD and LONDON STAGE COACH.—35 HORSES will be SOLD by AUCTION by Messrs. W. & S. FREEMAN, at ALDRIDGE'S, St. Martin's-lane, London, on WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 9th, 1896. They comprise Matched Stepping Pairs, Teams, and Single Harness Horses. Good Hacks and Hunters, five and six years old, all in good hard condition, having worked on this Coach for the last six months, and will be warranted sound and quiet to ride and drive. On view at Aldridge's, Monday, September 7th, 1896.

The "VIGILANT" (Eastbourne and Brighton) COACH HORSES, the property of Messrs. Chapman & Sons, will be SOLD by PUBLIC AUCTION, next WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 9th, by Messrs. FREEMAN, at ALDRIDGE'S, St. Martin's-lane, London, 23 young, fresh, and well-conditioned HORSES, all 5 and 6 years old. Amongst them are some well-matched Pairs, also some good Brougham Horses and Hunters. The horses will all be warranted in single and double harness, and most of them hunted last season. Veterinary surgeon's inspection invited. Full catalogue on application.

TO INVALIDS.—A LIST of MEDICAL MEN, in all parts, willing to RECEIVE RESIDENT PATIENTS, giving full particulars and terms, sent Gratis. The List includes Private Asylums, &c. Schools also recommended—Address, Mr. G. B. STOCKER, 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C.

TO NOBLEMEN, GENTLEMEN, and OTHERS requiring good Valets, Coachmen, Grooms, Caretakers, Lunatic Asylum Attendants, &c.—Apply to Commandant, Discharge Depôt, Gosport, who can supply Men of excellent character on the shortest notice.

£20 TOBACCONISTS COMMENCING. Illd. guide (259 pages), 3d., "How to open respectably £20 to £2,000." Tobacconists' Outfitting Co., 186, Euston-rd., London. Mngr. H. MYERS, Est. 1866.

"TRUTH" HOTEL LIST.

BONCHURCH HOTEL, Bonchurch, Isle of Wight, one mile from Ventnor Station.
A comfortable, quiet, and most beautifully-situated Hotel. Pretty garden. Good sea view.
H. RIBBANDS, Proprietor.

BOSCOMBE, Bournemouth.—THE CHINE HOTEL. Under new management.
Magnificent sea views. Moderate charges. Book East Station.
Miss BARNETT (late of the Inns of Court Hotel), Manageress.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HIGHCLIFFE HOTEL (first-class). Unrivalled position, West Cliff, full south. Splendid sea view. Most comfortable. Electric light. Table d'hôte (separate tables). Supplies from own Alderney Dairy Farm. Telephone 27.
JOHN KILNER, Proprietor.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HOTEL MONT DORE.—South aspect, 150 rooms, electric light throughout, passenger lift, first-class cuisine, winter garden and lounge, covered tennis court. Turkish, sea-water, and medicated Baths. The Hotel is within two minutes' walk of the Golf Links.—For tariff, address W. KNEESE, Manager.

BRIGHTON.—BEDFORD HOTEL.—Old-established. Unequalled in situation; opposite West Pier. Spacious coffee and reading rooms; sea-water service; unequalled cuisine; great variety of excellent wines. Moderate tariff. Electric light in all rooms.
GEO. HECKFORD, Manager.

BRIGHTON.—GRAND HOTEL.
Centre of Sea Front. Electric Light throughout.
NEW LIFT TO ALL FLOORS.
Inclusive terms if desired from 10s. 6d. per day.
For Illustrated Tariff apply to A. D. HOOK, Manager.

CARBIS BAY HOTEL, CORNWALL. The very spot to obtain rest and quietude. Overlooking the finest bay in England. Mild yet bracing climate. Within easy distance of London by G.W.R. Splendid Golf Links. "A more beautiful spot for residence could hardly be imagined."—Truth.

FOLKESTONE.—ROYAL PAVILION HOTEL, facing Sea. 200 Apartments. Near landing-stage for Continent. Large winter garden. Table d'hôte at 7 p.m.
G. SPURGEN, Proprietor.

FOLKESTONE.—BATES' HOTEL, West Cliff Gardens, and LONGFORD PRIVATE HOTEL, The Lees. Oldest established and most select Family Hotels in Folkestone. Reduced terms during Winter and Spring months. Pension (new Coffee-room) at Bates' Hotel.—G. L. HART, Proprietor
Sanitation Certified.

GRAND CANARY.—THE METROPOLE.
Newest and best Hotel.
Delightful position, fronting the sea.
Terms most moderate.

JERSEY.—The GRAND HOTEL is charmingly situated, facing the sea, with full south aspect, and sheltered from the north and easterly winds. Every home comfort and liberal management.—For terms apply to D. DE LEIDI, Manager.

MALVERN—One of the most charming places for the Holidays.—The IMPERIAL HOTEL occupies the best position, and receives visitors en pension. The golf-links (18 holes) are one of the best in England. Capital stabling for hunters. Droitwich Brine, Turkish and large Swimming Bath in separate buildings. For tariff, apply to the Proprietor and Manager.
F. MOERSCHELL.

TORQUAY.—IMPERIAL HOTEL.—Under entirely New Management. New sanitary arrangements throughout. It is the largest and best-situated Hotel in Torquay, and the best winter residence on the South Coast. Visitors received en pension or à la carte. Terms moderate.
F. FISCHER, Manager.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.—WELLINGTON HOTEL, Mount Ephraim. Under the distinguished patronage of his Grace the late Duke of Wellington, K.G., the leading nobility and gentry, &c. 422 ft. above sea level, south aspect; elegantly furnished; piano in every sitting-room. Cuisine English and French. Electric light throughout.—BRABY, Proprietor,

For COMFORT and CONVENIENCE.
THE LANGHAM HOTEL,
PORTLAND-PLACE, LONDON, W.
Situated in the most fashionable, convenient, and healthy locality. Artesian Well Water. Electric Light throughout. Moderate Tariff.
Table d'Hote 6.30 until 8.15. WALTER GOSDEN, Manager.

THE GROSVENOR HOTEL,
BELGRAVIA, LONDON, S.W.
Well known for Wedding Breakfasts and Dinner Parties.
TABLE D'HÔTE OPEN TO NON-RESIDENTS.
Covered Communication to three Railway Stations.
The only Terminus Hotel of the Brighton Railway Company in London.
Pure Water from an Artesian Well on the premises.
Electric Light throughout. Address, MANAGER.

HOTEL BELGRAVIA,
VICTORIA STREET, S.W.
(Quite close to Victoria Station.)
This is an Hotel in name only. In reality it is a REFINED HOME, replete with every convenience, every comfort, every luxury. Large and small Suites by the day, week, month or year. Also single Bedrooms.
TABLE D'HOTE, at separate tables, open to non-residents.
FIRST-CLASS CUISINE. CHOICE WINES.
For tariff and all particulars apply to MANAGER.

THE WESTMINSTER PALACE HOTEL, facing the Abbey and Houses of Parliament. Every modern comfort and convenience. Reasonable tariff, and no charge for attendance. Telegrams "Hostelry, London."

INNS OF COURT HOTEL, Holborn.—A first-class Family Hotel, with 200 bedrooms, all modern conveniences. Electric lights, lifts, &c. Banquets arranged. The Central Hall is the finest and the Dining-room the pleasantest in London. Masonic lodge, public meeting rooms, &c. Table d'hôte, 6 to 8, 3s. 6d.—FRANK BLACKLEY, Manager. Inclusive terms from 10s. 6d. per day.

A COMPLETE LIST OF
HOTELS OF THE MIDLAND RAILWAY.

London MIDLAND GRAND (St. Pancras).	Leeds ... QUEEN'S.
Liverpool... ADELPHI.	Derby ... MIDLAND.
Bradford ... MIDLAND.	Morecambe MIDLAND.
	Normanton STATION.

The Favourite Hotels for Tourists, Cyclists, and Pedestrians.
Specialities—Comfort, Good Cuisine, Moderate Charges.
WILLIAM TOWLE, Manager, Chief Office, St. Pancras, N.W.

ILFRACOMBE.
ILFRACOMBE HOTEL,
The PRINCIPAL and ONLY HOTEL facing the Sea.
Unrivalled sea frontage and open surroundings. Grounds five acres. Lawn Tennis Courts. Croquet Lawn. Large Swimming Bath. Elegant Lounge hall. 250 rooms.
H. R. GROVER, Manager.

HASTINGS. Due South, Facing Sea.
QUEEN'S HOTEL,
LARGEST AND BEST APPOINTED.
Sunny, and most sheltered position in Hastings and St. Leonards.
ELECTRIC LIGHT. PASSENGER ELEVATOR.
Moderate Tariff. Hotel Flys attend the trains.
WILLIAM GLADE, Manager.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE.—"The healthiest, most bracing watering-place in the world."—Vide report, Lancet. The GRAND ATLANTIC is the principal and leading Hotel, facing the sea. 130 sumptuously appointed rooms, delightful public rooms, hydraulic lift, every modern comfort. Nearest to Golf Links and Railway Station. "Own model farm."—Apply, Manager. Telegraphic address, "Atlantic." Telephone No. 11.

HANS CRESCENT HOTEL
HANS CRESCENT, BELGRAVIA, LONDON, S.W.
Within three minutes' walk of the Albert Gate Entrance to Hyde Park.

THIS FAMILY HOTEL, sumptuously Furnished and Appointed, is now
Open for the reception of Visitors.
It is luxuriously complete in every detail. There are many self-contained Suites of Apartments, ensuring the utmost privacy (each having a Bathroom), as well as Single Bedrooms. A HIGH-CLASS RESTAURANT (à la carte and at fixed prices) is attached to the Hotel for Non-Residents.

RECHERCHÉ CUISINE.

One of the many attractions of this Hotel is the unique WINTER GARDEN, splendidly proportioned, and occupying an area of 2,500 square feet.

Manager, MONS. C. DIETTE.

HOTELS, &c.

LOWESTOFT GRAND HOTEL.

The finest Situation on the East Coast; 300 ft. sea frontage, facing the German Ocean. Stands in its own beautifully wooded grounds, within easy distance of Oulton Broad.

Connected with the ROYAL HOTEL, LOWESTOFT; also RIDLER'S HOTEL, HOLBORN, where Tariff may also be obtained.

DIEPPE. HOTEL ROYAL.

Hotel of the Best Class. Established 50 Years.

200 Bedrooms (130 facing the sea). 24 Private Sitting Rooms facing the sea.
Public Drawing and Reading Rooms.
Within 40 yards of Casino and Etablissement des Bains.
THE ONLY HOTEL IN DIEPPE WITH A LIFT TO EVERY FLOOR.
Electric Light. Telephone. Perfect Sanitation.
HIGH-CLASS CUISINE. MODERATE TARIFF. Season, June 15 to Oct. 15.
For Terms, address, MADAME LARSONNEUX, Propriétaire.

HOTEL DE PUYS, Dieppe, NOW OPEN. Beautifully placed on the edge of Cæsar's Camp, with spacious verandahs overlooking the sea. Magnificent Salons. No back bedrooms. English sanitation and furniture. Electric light, and refrigerating chamber. Good bathing and cycling, lovely drives and walks, delicious cooking, moderate charges, and all the comforts of an English country house.—J. PELLETIER, Manager.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE.—Charming health resort for this season.—ROYAL HOTEL, aristocratic and old established, facing sea and standing in its own grounds of 8 acres. Every home comfort and attention, with unrivalled cuisine. Dairy produce and vegetables from home farm. Four tennis courts. Near golf links and beautiful woods. Extensive view of Welsh coast. Terms strictly moderate.—Proprietors, ROGERS BROS.

BUXTON, DERBYSHIRE.

THE PALACE HOTEL.

Large and high-class Hotel. Upwards of 200 rooms. Finest position in Buxton. Surrounded by own grounds of six acres. Ground-floor sitting-rooms and bed-rooms. Magnificent public rooms. American elevator. Table d'hôte at separate tables. Tariff, with plan of rooms and sketch map of Buxton, on application. A. CROSS, Manager.

PITLOCHRY.

THE ATHOLL HYDROPATHIC (MACDONALD'S).

The ORIGINAL and very much the LARGEST. Every window commands a view of the MOST MAGNIFICENT SCENERY in SCOTLAND. 500 feet above sea level. Pure, dry, bracing air. Extensive Pleasure Grounds.
TENNIS—CROQUET—GOLF—ARCHERY—FISHING.
To prevent disappointment, address all communications—
"THE ATHOLL, PITLOCHRY." Telegraphic Address, "ATHOLL."

CARTER 6A, NEW CAVENDISH ST. PORTLAND PLACE, LONDON.

ONLY ADDRESS OF ORIGINAL CARTER

LITERARY MACHINE.

For holding book, lamp, meals, &c., in any position over an easychair, bed, or sofa.
Deliciously luxurious. A most useful gift. Prices from 17/6

Carrying Chairs from £1.
Breakfast in Bed Tables from 30/-

INVALID FURNITURE.
ADJUSTABLE COUCHES and BEDS from £1. 10/-

Bed Lift £3. 10/-	Bed Rests 7/6
Reclining Boards, 25/-	Leg Rests 10/-
Walking Machines	Crutches 10/6
Portable W.C.'s.	Bed Baths 12/6
Electric Bells, Urinals, &c.	Commodes, £1. 5/-
Air & Water Beds.

Self-Propelling Chairs from £2

BATH CHAIRS FROM £1. 5/-

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUES POST FREE.

JOHN CARTER, 6a, NEW CAVENDISH ST. Portland-pl. London, W.

AMUSEMENTS.

GAIETY.—Lessee and Manager, GEORGE EDWARDES.—ANOTHER GAIETY SUCCESS.—EVERY EVENING, at 8.15, a New Musical Play, in Two Acts, entitled MY GIRL, by James T. Tanner, Music by Osmond Carr, Lyrics by Adrian Ross. Box-office open daily from 10 till 6. MATINEE Saturday Next, at 2.30.

SAVOY.—Every Evening, at 8.30, and Every Saturday Afternoon, at 2.30, THE MIKADO, by W. S. Gilbert and Arthur Sullivan. At 7.50, WEATHER OR NO. Box-office 9 a.m. to 11 p.m.—R. D'OYLY CARTE, Proprietor and Manager.

DALY'S THEATRE.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. AUGUSTIN DALY.—EVERY EVENING, and SATURDAY MATINEE. Mr. George Edwardes's Company in THE GEISHA. The book by Owen Hall. Lyrics by Harry Greenbank. Music by Sydney Jones.

VAUDEVILLE.—A. & S. GATTI, Sole Lessees and Managers. EVERY EVENING, at 9, a Farcical Comedy, in Three Acts, by Georges Feydeau and Maurice Desvallières, entitled A NIGHT OUT. Preceded, at 8.15, by PAPA'S WIFE, by Seymour Hicks and F. C. Phillips. Music by Ellaline Terriss. MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY, at 3. Doors open 7.45. Box office open 10 to 10.

AVENUE THEATRE.—Licensee, Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY. Managers, Messrs. HENRY DANA and H. J. WILDE. EVERY EVENING, at 8.15 (doors open 7.45) a Musical Comedy, by Sidney Carlton, Harry Greenbank, and Howard Talbot, MONTE CARLO.
Misses Lottie Venne, Kate Cutler, Emmie Owen (by permission of D'Oyly Carte, Esq.); Messrs. Richard Green, Eric Lewis, E. W. Garden, Mr. Robb Harwood.
Box-office (Mr. Fry) open 10 to 10. Seats at all Libraries.
FIRST MATINEE of MONTE CARLO SATURDAY NEXT, September 5, and EVERY following SATURDAY, at 2.30.

AVENUE THEATRE.
MONTE CARLO.
A GENUINE SUCCESS.
ENTHUSIASTIC RECEPTION.

ALHAMBRA.—TO-NIGHT, Two New Grand Ballets, RIP VAN WINKLE and DONNYBROOK. Grand VARIETIES. Prices, 6d. to £3. 3s. Open 7.30. ALFRED MOUL, General Manager.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—EVERY EVENING, Two Grand Ballets, FAUST and LA DANSE. Great success. LUMIERE'S CINEMATOGRAPHE. GRAND VARIETY ENTERTAINMENT. Doors open at 7.30.

PALACE, Shaftesbury-avenue.—The HANDSOMEST THEATRE in EUROPE. The finest Variety Entertainment in London, including the NEW SERIES OF TABLEAUX VIVANTS. Full Licence. Prices from 6d. Doors open 7.40.—Manager, Mr. CHARLES MORTON.

TIVOLI, Strand, London.—Cool and Well Ventilated.—Open EVERY EVENING, at 7.45, and SATURDAY MATINÉE, at 2.30, with a STAR PROGRAMME, embracing every Artiste of note now in London.—Manager, Mr. VERNON DOWSETT.

LONDON PAVILION.—TREMENDOUS PROGRAMME. Dan Leno, Lucy Clarke, R. G. Knowles, Fannie Leslie, James Fawn, Bessie Wentworth, Lily Burnand, Jolly John Nash, Tom White's Arabs, Julie Mackey, Walter Munroe, Jenny Valmore, Charles Mildare, Mdlle. Lalo, Reuben Hill, Nellie Navette, The Fanes, Ada Lundberg, The Musical Avolos, Major Newell. The Sliding Roof off every evening. Prices from 1s. to £3. 3s. Doors open at 7.30. Box-office open from 11 to 5.

MADAME TUSSAUD'S EXHIBITION, Baker-street Station.—Grand Historical Tableaux representing the Announcement to Her Majesty Queen Victoria of her Accession to the Throne, &c., &c. Portrait Models of Fowler and Milsom, Mrs. Dyer, &c., &c. The Actual Confession of Mrs. Dyer. Admission, 1s.; Extra Rooms, 6d. Open from 9 a.m. till 10 p.m.

INDIA & CEYLON EXHIBITION,
EARL'S COURT.
Main Entrance:—LILLIE ROAD, WEST BROMPTON.
Indian, Cingalese, and Burmese Palaces and Shops.
Colonnades, Lakes, Jungle, Gardens, and Streets.
Artisans, Performers, and Illusionists.
MUSIC.
Five BANDS.
The Grenadiers.
The Coldstreams.
Venanzi's Orchestra.
Mr. Imre Kiralfy's
Great Spectacle "India."
1,500 Performers; 200 Chorus.
Two Performances daily, at 3.30 and 8 p.m.
IMRE KIRALFY, Director-General.
Open 11 a.m. to 11.15 p.m. One Shilling.

GIGANTIC WHEEL running daily.
Two 20-guinea Waverley Bicycles
Given weekly to passengers.

QUEEN'S HALL.
PROMENADE CONCERTS.
Conductor, Mr. HENRY J. WOOD.
EVERY NIGHT, at 8.
Season Tickets (Transferable), 21s. Admission 1s.
Reserved Seats 2s., 3s., and 5s.
Robert Newman's Box-office, Queen's Hall, Langham-place, W.

CRYSTAL PALACE.
Admission daily, One Shilling.
MAGNIFICENT DISPLAY of FIREWORKS, by C. T. BROCK & CO., Every Thursday, at 8.30.
BROCK'S BENEFIT, Thursday, September 3rd.

Highest Award at Food and Cookery Exhibition, London, May, 1895.

BREAD
HOVIS
REGD
BISCUITS

CURE FOR INDIGESTION.

SUPPLIED TO H.M. THE QUEEN AND ROYAL FAMILY.

Imitation is the Sincerest Form of Flattery.

The public are cautioned against accepting from Bakers spurious imitations of "Hovis," which, having met with such unprecedented success, is being copied in many instances as closely as can be done without risk.

If any difficulty be experienced in obtaining "Hovis," or if what is supplied as "Hovis" is not satisfactory, please write, sending sample (the cost of which will be defrayed) to

S. FITTON & SON, Millers, Macclesfield.

BAKERS RECOMMENDING ANY BREAD IN PLACE OF "HOVIS" DO SO FOR THEIR OWN PROFIT. BEWARE!

ALFRED CARTER, LIMITED

47, HOLBORN VIADUCT, LONDON, E.C. (ONLY ADDRESS).

INVALIDS' MECHANICAL FURNITURE, BATH CHAIRS, &c.

Maker and Inventor of VIADUCT AMBULANCE LITTER, used all over the World.

BRIGHTON BATH CHAIR.

SPINAL AND BATH CHAIR COMBINED.

WICKER BATH CHAIR.

BATH CHAIR.

PERAMBULATORS.
(New Designs for 1896.)

SELF-PROPELLING AND CARRYING CHAIR COMBINED.

ALFRED CARTER, Ltd., 47, HOLBORN VIADUCT, LONDON.
Illustrated Catalogue Post Free. No connection with any other Firm.

The complete Furniture of a comfortable Bedroom: Wardrobe, Dressing Chest, Washstand, 2 Cane-seat Arm Chairs, Chamber Service, Bed, Bedding, &c., folds into one small case measuring 6 ft. by 2 ft. 6 in. by 2 ft. Rigidity and appearance of glued-up Furniture. Patented all over the World. Invaluable to Colonists, Hotels, Officers' Quarters, Spare Bedrooms, Shooting Boxes, &c., &c. Suites at all prices, separate parts can be had. Obtainable at all Dealers' or direct from

THE
V.P. FOLDING BEDROOM SUITE & FURNITURE CO., LIM
330, OLD STREET, LONDON, E.C.

BEST & SAFEST DENTIFRICE
SOLD BY ALL CHEMISTS AND PERFUMERS IN ELEGANT CRYSTAL TOILET CASKET
PRICE 2/6.
ALSO IN PATENT METALLIC BOX
PRICE 1/-

PRESERVE YOUR TEETH
BY USING THE
OS TOOTH BLOCK
Established 20 years
Over 3000 Testimonials

BREAKFAST—SUPPER
EPPS'S
GRATEFUL—COMFORTING.
COCOA
BOILING WATER OR MILK.

FLORILINE

FOR THE TEETH AND BREATH

Is the BEST LIQUID DENTIFRICE in the WORLD.

PREVENTS THE DECAY OF THE TEETH.

Renders the Teeth Pearly White.

IS PERFECTLY HARMLESS AND DELICIOUS TO THE TASTE.

Is Partly Composed of Honey, and Extracts from Sweet Herbs and Plants.

Of all Chemists and Perfumers throughout the World.

2s. 6d. per Bottle.

FLORILINE TOOTH POWDER,
Only put in Glass Jars, Price 1s.

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER

Prevents the Hair from Falling off.

Restores Grey or White Hair to its ORIGINAL COLOUR.

Being delicately perfumed, it leaves no Unpleasant Odour.

IS NOT A DYE.

Should be in every House where a HAIR RENEWER is needed.

ASK YOUR CHEMIST OR HAIRDRESSER FOR

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

Price 3s. 6d. per bottle.

THE BELGRAVE LADIES' AGENCY

83, EBURY STREET, Near Victoria Station,

HOUSES HOUSES HOUSES HOUSES

Have a LARGE SELECTION of First-rate HOUSES and FLATS for the Parliamentary and London Seasons. Rents MODERATE. Every care is taken to save clients unnecessary trouble and expense. Also APARTMENTS in London, Country, and Abroad. Continental Agents. Rooms all inspected, and the highest references given. Entirely worked by Ladies.

LIQUEUR of the GRANDE CHARTREUSE.

This most excellent Liqueur, the great preventive of Indigestion, and almost certain remedy for sea-sickness, can now be had of all Wine Merchants, and at prices much lower than formerly.
Sole Consignee, W. DOYLE, 35, Crutched Friars, London, E.C.

REAL GERMAN HOLLOW GROUND

KROPP RAZOR

Black Handle 5/6 | Kropp's Duplex Strop 7/6 | Pair, Ivory Handles, in
Ivory Handle 7/6 | Kropp's Strop Paste ...6d. | Russia Leather Case, 21/-
From all PERFUMERS & DEALERS.—Wholesale: OSBORNE, GARRETT, & CO., LONDON, W.

FARADAY & SON's

Electric Light Fittings

NEW DESIGNS for SEASON '96

2 & 3 BERNERS ST.
LONDON W

SPECIAL NOTICE TO ARCHITECTS.
AN IMPORTANT INVENTION.

The HOMACOUSTIC APPARATUS (Cutmore's System).

A REVOLUTION IN SPEAKING TUBES.

Patented throughout the World. The Telephone superseded for Short Distances. The Homacoustic System is being universally adopted, and is a Leading Feature in all New Buildings.

THOUSANDS ARE IN USE.

The following are the names and testimony of a few of the Patrons of the Homacoustic in London. All are unanimous in praise of such a perfect and simple system.

The following are a few of the large establishments where the Homacoustic Speaking Tubes are in use:—

W. & A. GILBEY, Pantheon, Oxford-street.
JAMES WILLING, Junr., 125, Strand.
GAZE & SONS, Tourists' Bureau, Strand.
B. A. MOORE, "Cheshire Cheese," Fleet-st.
"TRUTH" Offices, Westminster.
SPIERS & POND, Limited, Head Offices.
ROBERTS & LEETE, 19 to 25, Bermondsey-street, S.E.
R. WAYGOOD & CO., Falmouth-road, S.E.
E. P. SAUNDERS & SON, 81 to 83, Cannon-street.
ALLIANCE ASSURANCE CO., Bartholomew-lane, E.C.
LONDON ASSURANCE, Royal Exchange.
OETZMANN & CO., 67 to 79, Hampstead-road, N.W.
LLOYD'S BANK, Limited, 189, Fleet-street.
— LITHGOE, Esq., 39a, Wimpole-street, Oxford-street.
CAPITAL AND COUNTIES BANK, Threadneedle-street, E.C.
STRAITS INSURANCE, Change-alley, Cornhill.
KELLY & CO., London Directory, Holborn.
LONDON AND BIRMINGHAM AND SOUTH WALES BANK, Gracechurch-street, E.C.

TESTIMONIALS.

The Gresham Life Assurance Society,
St. Mildred's House,
Poultry, London, E.C.,
June 27, 1893.

Dear Sirs,—I have pleasure in stating that a very extensive installation of your Homacoustic Speaking Tubes and Apparatus has been established in this office, communications being made between each of the principal officers and nine departments in the office. Your invention is found to work quite satisfactorily and is undoubtedly a great advance upon any other means of simple communication known to us, whether by speaking tubes or telephones. The Homacoustic Tubes and Commutators we find in practice to be a considerable economy of time and labour by greater concentration and facility of reference between the officers and the clerks, and we have no doubt that your ingenious invention will be increasingly employed in large offices or houses of business where readiness of communication is a first necessity.

I am, dear sirs, yours faithfully,
THOMAS G. ACKLAND Actuary and Manager.

The Homacoustic Speaking Tube Co.

Atlas Assurance Company, Fire and Life, 92, Cheapside, London, E.C.

Dear Sir,—I have pleasure in stating that I have had one of your Homacoustic Speaking Tube Commutators and Instruments in my room, communicating with seven departments in this office, and that I find the same to work admirably. It is a vast improvement on the old method of a separate mouthpiece for each tube, and it is an invention which I think needs only to be known to command very wide adoption.—I am, dear sir, yours faithfully,
SAML. J. PIPKIN Secretary

The Central London Throat and Ear Hospital,
Gray's Inn-road, W.C.,
December 14, 1891.

I have much pleasure in testifying to the excellence of the principle of the Homacoustic Speaking Tube Instruments, as well as to the perfect workmanship of the tubes fitted at this Hospital.

Quite independently of sanitary reasons it is decidedly more agreeable to have a Speaking Tube by which all blowing and breathing into the face are avoided. There is no difficulty whatever in its employment.
LENNOX BROWNE, F.R.C.S.E.,
Senior Surgeon to the Hospital.

Beware of Fraudulent Imitations. Infringers will be prosecuted. Send for Explanatory Pamphlet and Price List Free by Post.

THE HOMACOUSTIC COMPANY, Head Offices and Showroom, 6, Bruton-street, New Bond-street, W.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE, LONDON.—The SESSION of the FACULTIES of ARTS and LAWS and of SCIENCE (including the Indian and Oriental Schools and the Department of Fine Arts) will BEGIN on OCTOBER 6th. The Introductory Lecture will be given, at THREE p.m., by PROFESSOR J. P. POSTGATE, M.A., Litt. D.

Subjects.	Professors or Teachers.
Latin ...	A. E. Housman, M.A.
Greek...	J. A. Platt, M.A.
Hebrew (Goldsmid Professorship) ...	The Rev. Dr. D. W. Marks
Comparative Philology ...	J. P. Postgate, M.A., Litt. D.
Archæology (Yates Professorship) ...	E. A. Gardner, M.A.
Egyptian Archæology (Edwards Professorship...	W. M. Flinders Petrie, D.C.L., LL.D.
English (Quain Professorship) ...	W. P. Ker, M.A.
History ...	F. C. Montague, M.A.
Philosophy of Mind and Logic (Grote Professorship) ...	J. Sully, M.A., LL.D.
Political Economy ...	H. S. Foxwell, M.A.
Statistics (Newmarch Lectureship) ...	A. L. Bowley, M.A.
Architecture ...	T. Roger Smith, F.R.I.B.A.
Fine Arts (Slade Professorship) ...	Fredk. Brown.
French ...	H. Lallemand, B. ès Sc.
German ...	F. Althaus, Ph.D.
Italian ...	F. de Asarta
Mathematics ...	M. J. M. Hill, M.A., D.Sc., F.R.S.
Chemistry ...	W. Ramsay, Ph.D., F.R.S.
Pathological Chemistry ...	Vaughan Harley, M.D.
Physics (Quain Professorship) ...	G. Carey Foster, B.A., F.R.S.
Zoology (Jodrell Professorship) ...	W. F. R. Weldon, M.A., F.R.S.
Botany (Quain Professorship) ...	F. W. Oliver, M.A., D.Sc.
Geology (Yates Goldsmid Professorship ...	The Rev. T. G. Bonney, D.Sc., LL.D., F.G.S., F.R.S.
Physiology (Jodrell Professorship) ...	E. A. Schäfer, F.R.S.
Applied Mathematics and Mechanics	Karl Pearson, M.A., LL.B., F.R.S.
Mechanical Engineering...	T. Hudson Beare, B.A., B.Sc., M.Inst. C.E.
Electrical Engineering ...	J. A. Fleming, M.A., D.Sc., F.R.S.
Civil Engineering ...	L. F. Vernon - Harcourt, M.A., M.Inst.C.E.
Roman Law...	A. F. Murison, M.A., LL.D.
Jurisprudence ...	J. Pawley Bate, M.A., LL.D.
Constitutional Law and History ...
Law (Quain Chair) ...	Augustine Birrell, Q.C., M.P.
Indian Law ...	J. W. Neill
Sanskrit ...	C. Bendall, M.A.
Pali ...	T. W. Rhys Davids, Ph.D.
Arabic ...	S. A. Strong, M.A.
Persian ...	E. Denison Ross, Ph.D.
Hindustani ...	J. F. Blumhardt, M.A.
Marathi ...	J. W. Neill
Tamil ...	R. W. Fraser, B.A., LL.B.
Burmese ...	R. F. St. A. St. John, M.A.

Students are admitted to all classes without previous examination.

Scholarships, &c., of the value of £2,000 are offered for competition annually. The regulations as to these, and further information as to classes, prizes, &c., may be obtained from J. M. HORSBURGH, M.A., Secretary.

THE COLONIAL COLLEGE, HOLLESLEY BAY, SUFFOLK.

Training for Colonial Life, &c.
Fine Sea Air. Dry Soil.
1,800 Acres of Land.
Farming in all its Branches.
Dairy School. Veterinary Science.
Land Surveying. Horticulture.
Laboratory. Workshops, &c., &c.
Full information from the Director at The Colonial College, or from The London Secretary at 6, Victoria Street, Westminster Abbey.

THE ENGLISH SCHOOL of JOURNALISM.—Principal, D. F. RANKING, M.A., LL.D. Offices, 141A, Strand, W.C.—The Curriculum embraces a full course of practical study. The Autumn Session commences September 25.—Address, for Prospectus (2 stamps) SYDNEY PAYNE, Secretary.

HOSPITALS & APPEALS.

LONDON FEVER HOSPITAL, Liverpool-road, Islington, N.
ADDITIONAL HELP is urgently needed.
Scarlet fever and diphtheria are very prevalent. Subscriptions and donations will be thankfully received by the Secretary at the Hospital.
MAJOR W. CHRISTIE.
Bankers—Prescott & Co., 50, Cornhill, E.C.

GREAT NORTHERN CENTRAL HOSPITAL.
VERY POOR, FREE, and UNENDOWED.
The only Hospital available for a population of one million.
An urgent APPEAL is made for FUNDS to support the work of relieving 1,200 In-patients and 30,000 Out-patients annually.
Holloway, N. L. H. GLENTON KERR, Secretary.

CANCER WARDS of the MIDDLESEX HOSPITAL.—35 beds devoted to Hopeless Incurable Cases.
A FUND of £12,000 is being raised for the purpose of erecting a separate BUILDING for the accommodation of the FEMALE CANCER PATIENTS hitherto located in the hospital, an improvement which is urgently demanded on the ground of the health, comfort, and convenience of the patients. Towards the cost of the new building the sum of £9,000 has been paid or promised, and an URGENT APPEAL is now made for the balance of £3,000 still required. Patients are admitted without letters or any recommendation, save that of necessity, and are permitted to remain until "relieved by art or released by death."—F. CLARE MELHADO, Secretary-Superintendent.

THE EARLSWOOD ASYLUM FOR IDIOTS.
About 150 AFFLICTED CASES, from all parts of the United Kingdom, are now seeking admission.
FUNDS URGENTLY NEEDED to maintain the Elected Patients now under care and training in the Institution.
Cases on payments regulated by the Board received as soon as approved.
JAMES DOWNING, Secretary.
Offices—36, King William-street, London Bridge, E.C.

STORAGE BATTERIES

of the most durable and satisfactory type are manufactured by

THE CHLORIDE ELECTRICAL STORAGE SYNDICATE, LIMITED,
16, VICTORIA ST., WESTMINSTER, S.W.,
AND
CLIFTON JUNCTION, near MANCHESTER.

Batteries of any other type can be refilled with plates of our manufacture at a small cost, and the power of old batteries greatly increased, and the frequency of charging now necessary reduced by one half.

BABY'S BOON.

IS RIDGE'S FOOD.

Time, Trouble, and Expense saved in Households by the use of

Maggi's

CONSOMMÉ. In Gelatine Tubes. Boxes containing 10 Tubes, 1/3; Post Free, 1/10½.

FRENCH SOUPS (33 Varieties). In Packets of 6 Tablets each Packet 1/4; Post Free, 1/7.

THE QUEEN, December 7th, 1895, says:—"The only preserved and condensed Soups that require nothing but a certain proportion of water to produce a bowlful of perfect Consommé."

OF ALL GROCERS AND ITALIAN WAREHOUSEMEN.
AND OF THE SOLE AGENTS—
COSENZA & CO., 95 & 97, Wigmore-st., London, W.,
Where the Consommé and Soups may be tasted daily.

THREE GOLD MEDALS.

Exquisite Models. Perfect Fit. Guaranteed Wear.

THE Y & N PATENT DIAGONAL SEAM CORSET

Will not split in the Seams nor tear in the Fabric. Made in White, Black, and all the fashionable colours and Shades in Italian Cloth, Satin, and Coutil, 4/11, 5/11, 6/11, 7/11 per pair and upwards.

CAUTION.—Every genuine Y & N Corset is stamped.

Sold by Drapers and Ladies' Outfitters in the United Kingdom and Colonies.

FOR COMPLAINTS of the STOMACH, LIVER, etc., DRINK

VICHY CELESTINS Spring

Sold by all Chemists, Druggists, and Grocers throughout the Kingdom.
Sole Importers: INGRAM & ROYLE, Ltd., 52, Farringdon Street, LONDON, E.C.

A Bad Complexion

4d

is often due to a bad soap.

BLOTCHES ARE REPULSIVE, AND WILL MAR THE APPEARANCE OF ANY FACE. YOU CAN'T GET RID OF THEM WITH BAD SOAP.

PREMIER VINOLIA SOAP

Is made specially for delicate, sensitive, irritable skins, and is scented with the most charming and innocent Perfumes.

PREMIER VINOLIA SOAP

yields a profuse, cleansing, demulcent, lather, and tends to keep the skin soft and velvety, and the complexion beautiful and clear. Its use doesn't cost a farthing a day.

4d

Vinolia is a Complexion Soap.

VINOLIA CREAM.—For Itching, Sunburn, Insect Bites, &c., 1/1½ and 1/9.
VINOLIA POWDER.—For Roughness, Chafes, &c., 1/1 and 1/9.

Soft Water in Every Home.

MAIGNEN'S

Patent Apparatus for Softening

HARD WATER.

MADGE, in her letter to AMY, published in "Truth" of May 7th, says:—

"Every one who lives in chalk districts ought to use Maignen's Process."

"Some friends of ours at Brighton—where as you know the water is decidedly hard—have one of their filters fitted to their cisterns, and are delighted with it."

"I quite sympathise with you, for there is nothing more detestable than hard water."

Full and Illustrated Particulars from Maignen's Filtre Rapide and Anti-Calcaire Co., Ltd., 255, Regent-street, London, W., where the Process can be seen at work.

CLARK'S

SCOTCH TWEEDS

Send for Price List at Once. Any Length Cut.

Patterns sent on approval Post Free, on application to—

CLARK BROS., SCOTCH TWEED MANFCTRS., CALASHIELS, N.B.

Agents Wanted. Please mention this Paper.

CORALLINE Keeps the Teeth WHITE and SOUND.

A Delicious DENTIFRICE. TOOTH PASTE.

ROBERTS & CO.,

Foreign and English Chemists,

LONDON— 76, NEW BOND STREET, W. Post Free, 2/6 PARIS— RUE DE LA PAIX, 5.

Sample Box sent free on receipt of post-card.

Hunyadi János

BEST AND SAFEST NATURAL APERIENT.

25 Years Success in the United Kingdom.

Recommended and Prescribed by Medical Men Everywhere.

"HUNYADI JÁNOS has established itself in favour with leading physicians and therapeutists of every country, whose testimonies bear witness to its action as a speedy, sure, and gentle Aperient for ordinary use; it is remarkably and exceptionally uniform in its composition, and free from defects incidental to many other Hungarian Bitter Waters." —British Medical Journal, Aug 30th, 1884.

PROFESSOR VIRCHOW, the celebrated Berlin Physician, says that "HUNYADI JÁNOS" has always given him prompt and satisfactory results, and he considers it to be "one of the most valuable of the Curative Agents at our disposal."

CAUTION.—Every Bottle bears the Signature of the Proprietor, ANDREAS SAXLEHNER.

ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT

PURELY VEGETABLE, Perfectly Harmless. Will reduce from two to five pounds per week; acts on the food in the stomach, preventing its conversion into Fat. Sold by Chemists. Send stamp for pamphlet.

Botanic Medicine Co., 3, New Oxford-street, London, W.C.

SPECIAL ADVANTAGES TO PRIVATE INSURERS.

THE IMPERIAL INSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED. FIRE. Est. 1803, 1, Old Broad-st., E.C., & 22, Pall Mall, S.W. Subd Capital, £1,200,000. Paid-up, £300,000. Total funds, over £1,500,000.—E. COZENS SMITH, Gen. Man.

PRUDENTIAL ASSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED.—Holborn Bars, London.

EVERY DESCRIPTION OF LIFE ASSURANCE AND ANNUITY BUSINESS TRANSACTED.
REVERSIONS PURCHASED.

Invested Funds, £25,000,000.

The last Annual Report can be obtained on application to the Secretary.

BIRKBECK BANK (Estab. 1851), Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane, London. Two and a-half per cent. interest allowed on deposits, repayable on demand. Two per cent. on current accounts, on the minimum monthly balances when not below £100.
The BIRKBECK ALMANACK with particulars, post free.
FRANCIS RAVENSCROFT, Manager.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

NOTICE.

No Member of the Stock Exchange is allowed to advertise for business purposes, or to issue circulars to persons other than his own principals.

Persons who advertise as Brokers or Share Dealers are not Members of the Stock Exchange, or under the control of the Committee.

A List of Members of the Stock Exchange who are Stock and Share Brokers may be seen at the Bartholomew-lane Entrance to the Bank of England, or obtained on application to

FRANCIS LEVIEN
Secretary to the Committee of the Stock Exchange.

Committee Room, The Stock Exchange, London, E.C.

LONDON AND COUNTY ADVANCE AND DISCOUNT COMPANY, Limited.—Cash advanced from £10 to £500, without preliminary fees or deductions for interest, for short or long periods, repayable by easy instalments, at moderate rates, upon approved security. Bills Discounted. Forms free. Offices, 57 and 58, Chancery-lane, W.C.—JOHN STONE, Secretary.

REVERSIONS and LIFE INTERESTS in LANDED or FUNDED PROPERTY or other Securities and Annuities PURCHASED, or Loans or Annuities thereon granted, by the EQUITABLE REVERSIONARY INTEREST SOCIETY, LIMITED, 10, Lancaster-place, Waterloo Bridge, Strand. Established 1835. Capital £500,000. Interest on Loans may be capitalised.

JOHN SHAW, STOCK & SHARE DEALER.

HEAD OFFICE:—

WARDROBE CHAMBERS, DOCTORS' COMMONS, LONDON, E.C.

BANKERS:—
CAPITAL AND COUNTIES, Ludgate-hill, Long Acre, Piccadilly, and Brighton Branches.
LONDON AND MIDLAND, Newgate-street and Tooley-street Branches.

DIRECT PRIVATE TELEGRAPH WIRE between LONDON and BRIGHTON Offices.

FULL PARTICULARS of SPECIAL ARRANGEMENTS for DEALING sent post free on application.

COVER SYSTEM.—The loss is limited, the profits are unlimited, and there is such an independence in acting that the principle must and does recommend itself to business men—indeed, it is the only method on which they deal—for speculative accounts.

£5 COMMANDS £500 STOCK.

£10 COMMANDS £1,000 STOCK.

£50 COMMANDS £5,000 STOCK.

£500 COMMANDS £50,000 STOCK, and so on in proportion.

NO OTHER LIABILITY WHATEVER.

JOHN SHAW, STOCK AND SHARE DEALER, LONDON, BRIGHTON, MANCHESTER, AND DUBLIN.

W. B. COCHRANE & CO.,
STOCK AND SHARE DEALERS.
13 and 14, CORNHILL, LONDON, E.C.
Telegrams: "Reinvest, London."
Bankers: London and Westminster, Lothbury, E.C.
Accounts opened for the Stock Exchange Fortnightly Settlements, and also upon the usual Cover System.
Prospectus, Monthly Investment Book, Mining List, and Market Reports, with the latest advices, forwarded gratis upon application.
W. B. COCHRANE & CO., 13 and 14, Cornhill, E.C.

GOLD MEDAL
Health Exhibition, London.

"Retained when all other Foods are rejected. It is invaluable." —London Medical Record.

BENGER'S

FOOD FOR INFANTS, INVALIDS, AND THE AGED.

BENGER'S FOOD

is sold in Tins by Chemists, &c., everywhere.

To the Directors of the 139, Cannon-street, London, E.C. : August 10, 1896.

COLONIAL FINANCE CORPORATION, LIMITED. WEST AUSTRALIAN PIONEERS, LIMITED. HANNAN'S PROPRIETARY DEVELOPMENT COMPANY, LIMITED, AND CORSAIR CONSOLIDATED GOLD MINES, LIMITED.

MY LORD AND GENTLEMEN,—I arrived in Perth, Western Australia, on the 2nd of May this year, and before I left the city for the gold-fields, I proceeded to examine the land investments, which had been made by our representative, Mr. George Gray.

I found that the freehold properties, which had been selected by him in the centre of the city, had risen enormously in value since our various purchases less than twelve months ago.

The Cottesloe Estate, of about twenty acres, overlooks the Swan River on the way to Fremantle, and is one of the most attractive spots near the capital of the colony. There has been a large increase in the value of the land, and, after consultation with Mr. Gray, we agreed that it should be held for still higher prices.

The extensive property, bought on the joint account by the West Australian Pioneers, and the Colonial Finance Corporation, in Hay-street West, had also largely increased in value, and owing to the substantial dwelling-houses which are being erected close to the property, will become still more valuable in the near future. Before I sailed for England several more acres had been bought by the Colonial Finance Corporation, adjoining the blocks held on joint account.

In my opinion the pick of the landed property held by the two Companies named is the seven-acre block in Lake-street, and, acting on my advice on my return to England, I think that we have done very wisely in deciding to build about sixty houses on this property, which, as you will remember, cost us £3,000, and for which Mr. Gray and I refused an offer of £10,000 cash before I left for London. The houses which we have arranged to build will produce, in accordance with Mr. Gray's estimate, 15 per cent. on the capital expenditure. I found generally that the city of Perth was increasing very rapidly both in area and population, and that the fresh arrivals in the Colony, while I was there, reached from 900 to 1,000 persons per week. In fact, from my own personal experience, I can say that there was a difficulty in obtaining the necessary food supplies at anything like a reasonable figure, and, moreover, the revenue of the Colony was attaining the respectable figure of about three millions sterling per annum, much to the satisfaction of the able Premier, Sir John Forrest, K.C.M.G.

From Perth I travelled up to Coolgardie, and from thence drove 25 miles over a treacherous road to Hannan's Proprietary camp, which I found to be very comfortable quarters, and one of the show camps of Western Australia. I took an early opportunity of going into the Kalgoorlie township (the new name for Hannan's), and found there that our success in investments in town sites had exceeded my expectation, so far as increased value was concerned. We hold two important blocks in the principal street. One of these cost us £300 for the freehold, and is now let at a rental of no less than £850 per annum to a well-known firm of brokers in the town, and for the other block, which cost £900, opposite one of the leading hotels, a cash offer of £8,000 has been made and refused. These results, I think you will agree with me, promise well for future dividends.

At Hannan's Proprietary camp Mr. George Gray and myself were joined by that well-known expert, Captain William Oates, one of the first men on Hannan's field, and he and Mr. Gray treated me with every kindness and showed me over the field, giving me at the same time every information in their power. I found that the development on our main camp had been undertaken in Mr. Gray's usual thorough manner, and that the shafts and the general equipment of our various mines, together with the cross-cutting across the Hannan's lode formation, had been well done.

I brought home with me from the various shafts samples which had been sent into the office of Hannan's Proprietary camp and which will be subjected to assay by Messrs. Johnson, Matthey & Co. My opinion is that they will yield a result of several ounces to the ton. Mr. George Gray told me that out of the twenty-two leases held by the Hannan's Proprietary Development Company, he expected to find at least nine or ten permanent payable Gold Mines, and he is not alone in that opinion.

The Lady Forrest, Oratava, Lake View East, Golden Pike, and Ironsides are all developing in a highly satisfactory manner, and there are many others upon which the working capital of the Company has been most intelligently laid out. Samples were brought up from Lake View East while I was at the camp, and you will be pleased to hear that the assays went no less than eight ounces to the ton. It should be borne in mind that the capital of Hannan's Proprietary Development Company is £500,000, and, as we have 500 acres, the cost of our property to the Company, was £1,000 per acre. At the present time, however, owing to extremely rich finds which have been made on the Hannan's Goldfields, the property can be readily sold at from £6,000 to £7,000 for the acre, so that the present price of the shares is fully warranted, and as a matter of fact is very much below their intrinsic worth. It is impossible to form an adequate estimate of the value of our Hannan's leases without bearing in mind the Hannan's water-right on Hannan's Lake, for which, as you know, the West Australian Government have just signed the lease to us, and I have no hesitation whatever in saying that this water-right is of great value. Mr. George Gray, and I went carefully over the concession, and on the day of our first visit to Hannan's Lake there were certainly three feet of water on the ground. On examining the experimental plant and the boring apparatus, which had been put down on the western side of the Lake, we found that ample water had been struck only 25 feet below the surface. I cannot over-estimate the value of this find, because water means practically gold on the Hannan's field. Acting on the advice of our experts I strongly advise the immediate issue of the Prospectus of the Hannan's Water Company, which should prove a first-class investment to intending subscribers, and I would suggest that a preferential allotment should be given to our own shareholders in the Hannan's Proprietary Development Company.

A competent hydraulic engineer should be sent out immediately from London to co-operate with Mr. George Gray in putting up the necessary pumping plant on the Hannan's Lake, as it is my opinion that not only will a large revenue accrue to us by this water-right, but that perhaps even the future of the field is bound up with our water scheme.

While on the Hannan's Goldfields I took the opportunity of visiting the Lake View and the Great Boulder Mines, and they certainly are two of the richest gold mines in existence. I saw lodes in both the Lake View and the Great Boulder from 15 to 40 feet wide, yielding 4, 6, and 7 oz. of gold to the ton.

From the Hannan's Proprietary Camp we drove about six miles to see the work which had been done at the Corsair Consolidated Mines, and we found both the miners' camp and headquarters on this property had been put up in Mr. George Gray's usual business-like manner.

This property is situated on the side of a hill, and trenches were being cut and shafts sunk at 10 or 12 different places, so that the lode formation could be cut. I saw two of the shafts, which were down about 90 feet, and they produced each 5,000 gallons of water per diem. I have laid before you samples which I have brought from this property, and the shareholders will be glad to hear that in addition to the satisfactory developments which we have ourselves made, the whole of the properties surrounding us have yielded excellent results. Several of them have cut lode formations going 3 oz. to the ton.

I look for an important improvement in the shares of the Corsair Consolidated Company this autumn, as we have reason to believe that we have secured a property of great value.

There is no doubt whatever about the future of Western Australia as a gold-producer, and anybody who has the common-sense and a certain amount of mining knowledge has only to go there to recognise at once the extraordinary richness of many of the properties, which are now being opened up. I speak more especially in regard to Hannan's Goldfield, because I spent three weeks there, but there was reliable news coming into Kalgoorlie township every day of important finds being made in outlying districts, and I need only mention as instances Lake Lefroy, Mount Margaret, Mount Ida, and Mount Malcolm. Hannan's Goldfield is picturesquely situated in a valley to the westward of a small range of hills, and it is interesting to note that the gold seems to have hugged the hills, or rather the slopes of the hills, and it was at their foot near Kalgoorlie township on the flat that Mike Hannan first discovered gold. For some four miles, stretching away from the township right down to the Great Boulder camp, the ground has been turned over by alluvial diggers with the pick and shovel, and I was informed by a well-known miner, who was on the spot twenty-four hours after Hannan discovered his first nugget, that no less than £90,000 worth of gold had been dug up on the surface by these primitive methods.

It is only reasonable to suppose that this gold was shed from some great mother-lode or lodes, and I believe that, in addition to the rich lodes discovered in the Lake View and the Great Boulder, there are others quite as rich in the immediate vicinity and perhaps running parallel. Of the permanency of the goldfield there can be no doubt. The entire expert opinion is that the Hannan's goldfield holds the premier position in Western Australia to-day.

I should like to add one word in regard to the cost of mining at Hannan's. Under present conditions it is probably a little less than 1 oz. of gold to the ton; but we had been promised by the contractors that the railway would be at Hannan's by, at any rate, the end of last month. My own opinion is that it will not be completed and running until September, and, naturally a great many mining engineers in the camp have been keeping their machinery at Fremantle and Albany awaiting the advent of the line. When the great delay and the cost of carriage by waggon is borne in mind, their position as regards this matter can be readily understood, and naturally the railway will largely decrease all round the cost of mining and of living.

Faithfully yours, HERBERT MOIR, Managing Director.

Since the above was written the following cable has been received from the manager of the Corsair property:—

"Corsair blocks labour concentrated. Commenced to drive at 140 feet depth on four points on strong lode formation. Have struck a flow of water at 200 feet in the water-shaft."

PLAYER'S NAVY CUT

Beautifully Cool and Sweet Smoking.

The Original

PLAYER'S NAVY CUT TOBACCO is sold only in 1-oz. Packets, and 2, 4, and 8-oz. and 1-lb. Tins, which keep the Tobacco in Fine Smoking Condition. Ask at all Tobacco Sellers, Stores, &c., and take no other. The genuine bears the Trade Mark, "NOTTINGHAM CASTLE," on every Packet and Tin.

PLAYER'S NAVY CUT CIGARETTES are sold in Packets of 12, and Tins containing 24, 50, and 100.

Also supplied in a new size—"MAGNUMS"—packed in Pocket Tins containing 16; and in 50's and 100's.

A MASTER KEY

of this SIZE

Can be made to open any number of Locks. Many Ladies and Gentlemen have the whole of their locks so arranged that a MASTER KEY, so small as to be worn in a finger-ring or locket, will open every lock they possess—from their Dressing Bags, Trunks, Jewel Cases, Despatch Boxes, &c., to the Front Door, Wine Cellar, Park Gates, &c. Just think of the Convenience! The locks are made in suites, each suite with its own key, so that the ladies' maid or valet can open the luggage, the butler the wine cellar, and so on, but the suite keys are of no use for any but their own series.

For Prices and Particulars apply to—

NEEDS & CO. Late BRAMAH & CO.

Sole Manufacturers of the real Bramah Locks,

100, NEW BOND STREET, LONDON, W.

BRAMAH JEWEL SAFES,

BURGLAR AND FIRE RESISTING, SPECIALLY ADAPTED FOR BED AND DRESSING ROOMS.

Specialities in fitted Suite Cases and Dressing Bags, Jewel Cases, Despatch and Deed Boxes, Bramah Street Door Latches, with small keys, Bramah Padlocks for Bicycles, with Leather-covered Chains, &c. &c.

NEW ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUES POST FREE.

The Newest Materials in vogue this season will be found in the Shawswater

DRESS FABRICS.

NEW CLOTHS AND NEW COLOURS IN AN EXTENSIVE ASSORTMENT.

OUR SPECIALITIES

For the present and coming Seasons comprise the following materials:

CURL CLOTHS.—In Coloured Ground, with raised Curl in Black, Figured, Striped, and Plain. In self-coloured Grounds, with Curl of same shade.

TWEEDS AND HOMESPUNS.—In fancy Heather grounds, with effect in contrasting Curl, plain surface Tweeds in Twills, &c., in newest shades. Durable Diagonals in a large and varied range.

CRAPE TWEEDS.—In fashionable mixtures, beautiful Greens, Petunia, Cardinal, Brown and Blue, blended with Black.

COVERT COATINGS.—In Greys, Heather effects, Blues, &c.

FANCY BLACKS.—With bright figured effects at prices to suit all purses.

CHEVIOTS.—In plain and fancy patterns.

SILK & WOOL MATERIALS.—In Tartans and figured effects; very lustrous. Suitable for blouses, &c.

SERGES.—We hold a high reputation for this class of materials, giving good value, at moderate prices.

New PATTERNS and STYLES are continually being added. Samples free on application to—

FLEMING, REID, & CO.

Worsted Mills, GREENOCK, N.B.

SINGER

Grand "Modèle de Luxe"

HIGHEST GRADE CYCLES ONLY.

Prompt Delivery may now be had.

SINGER & CO. LTD., COVENTRY.

LONDON: 17, HOLBORN VIADUCT.

DELICIOUS AND NUTRITIOUS.

BIRD'S CUSTARD POWDER

THE FRUIT SEASON AND BIRD'S CUSTARD.

BIRD'S CUSTARD advantageously takes the place of cream with fresh, Stewed or Tinned Fruits.

So rich, yet will not disagree; enhances the flavour. So cooling, agreeable, and wholesome. The safest of dishes.

BIRD'S CUSTARD is the one thing needed with all Stewed or Tinned Fruit.

The best resource for every housekeeper, affording a constant variation in the daily menu.

NO EGGS! NO TROUBLE! NO RISK!

OUR PUZZLES.

RULES.

1. The sum of £2. 2s. will be given every week for the best EPIGRAM, CONUNDRUM, LIPOGRAM, BOUTS-RIMÉS, or whatever the announced subject of the competition for the week may be.

2. The Puzzle Editor reserves the right, however, of dividing the above sum between two or more competitors, or of withholding the prize, should exceptional circumstances render such a course desirable.

3. The decision and award of the Puzzle Editor must be considered final and irrevocable, and, for obvious reasons, no appeal from his critical judgments can be entertained.

4. In every instance the prize will be given in money, subject to no condition whatever, except the publication of the winner's real name and address in this journal.

5. Competitors will be allowed eleven days for the composition and despatch of their efforts; but all such communications must, at the latest, be received at the TRUTH OFFICE by the first post on the morning of the second Monday succeeding the publication of the subject for competition.

6. Not more than one Prize will be given a Quarter to the same competitor.

7. ALL NEW CONTRIBUTORS ARE REQUIRED TO FORWARD WITH THEIR FIRST ANSWERS THEIR REAL NAMES AND ADDRESSES FOR REGISTRATION; such names and addresses will not be published except in the case of Prize-winners.

8. The nom-de-plume chosen by competitors should not exceed 12, and must under no circumstances consist of more than 14, letters.

9. COMPETITORS MUST ON NO ACCOUNT CHANGE THEIR NOMS-DE-PLUME THEY HAVE ONCE ASSUMED.

10. On the announcement of the Prize-winner's nom-de-plume, the successful competitor must write and make formal application for the Prize, stating the address to which the cheque must be sent. Any competitor failing to do so within three months of winning the Prize will forfeit all claim to the same.

11. No communications can be received on post-cards, by telegraph, or by hand. They must all be sent by the time named above. All post letters addressed—

PUZZLE EDITOR OF "TRUTH," CARTERET-STREET, QUEEN ANNE'S-GATE, S.W.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 914.—SUGGESTION FOR COMMEMORATING THE SIXTIETH YEAR OF THE QUEEN'S REIGN.

EVE (real name and address will be published in due course) £2 2 0

SPECIAL NOTICE.—THE NEXT "TRUTH" DOLL SHOW.

I wish to draw special attention to the announcement made in another part of this paper that the Dolls have now arrived, and that the Editor is anxious to receive applications forthwith from those ladies who intend to assist in dressing them. Any number of Dolls can be sent, and it is hoped the demand for them will be great. As on former occasions, the available Dolls are of two sizes.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 919.

An amusing correspondence is going on in the Spectator on the subject "SHOULD BISHOPS RIDE ON BICYCLES?" It will be interesting to see what the readers of TRUTH have to say on this subject, and the usual Prize of Two Guineas is therefore offered to the competitor who sends

THE BEST ANSWER TO THE ABOVE QUESTION IN THE FORM OF A RHYMED STANZA, CONTAINING NOT MORE THAN EIGHT LINES.

The answers may take the form of reasons why Bishops should, or should not, ride bicycles; and must reach me by the morning of Monday, September 14, at the latest. The stanzas may be written in any metre which is in ordinary use.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 915.

The announcement of the Prize-winner in this very popular competition will be made next week. Meantime let me acknowledge the receipt of verses from the following competitors whose names should have been included in last week's list—viz., Kitty, Mesmerist, Anglo-French, A. W. T., Stultulus, De Valroy, Hilda, Cynthia, A. Norman, Wanda, Nodding Violet, Imal Oswin, R. A. Grange, Lucie d'Aymant, Carrie W., Pembroke Castle, H. H., Tinkle, Matador, Dumuorix, M. P. B., Treize.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

 The real name, with the address, of KOTTABOS, winner of a half of Prize No. 912, is Conyngham Greene, Esq., Penbury, Walmer.

 At Mr. Conyngham Greene's request, the amount of his Prize (one guinea) will be added to the Children's Holiday Fund which is being raised by Lady Jeune.

 The real name, with the address, of CLARA, winner of a half of Prize No. 911, is Mrs. Clara Shennan, Roselee, Christchurch-avenue, Brondesbury, N.W.

 The real name, with the address, of ALMAVIVA, winner of a half of Prize No. 913, is Joseph Harry Fry, Esq., 64, Craven Park, Willesden, N.W.

SINGRON.—I am much obliged to you for your suggestion.

W. H. C. and TRIEZE.—I hope to be able to announce the result of the Yearling Puzzle next week.

PAX VOBISCUM.—Many thanks for your kind suggestion.

MASTER GUNNER.—The first was the correct intimation. I have handed your letter to the Editor in order that your ingenious suggestion may be duly considered.

NEMESIS.—Let me thank you very much for the ingenious suggestions you have made. I shall have something more to say about them when I have had time to more thoroughly consider your proposals.

THEOLOGY.—Thanks for the specimen you have sent me.

THE PUZZLE EDITOR.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 916.—ASSORTED SPECIMENS—GOOD AND OTHERWISE.

EPITAPHS ON THE RECENTLY-EXPIRED SESSION OF PARLIAMENT.

Here lies our dear departed session,
Which, dying, made this sad confession—
It tried to rule the education
Of its good grandmother, the Nation;
But failed, alas! to raise a quorum
To get across "pons asinorum!" Clive.

D. M. S.
SISTE VIATOR.

Here lieth the session of ninety and six;
Like rockets it rose, but came down like the sticks.
As sky-scaling Icarus, soaring it sings,
Till the strong sun of truth melts the wax of its wings;
Then earthward, swift-swooping, it slumped like a log,
And wriggled and ramped in expediency's bog;
Where, ventose with verbiage, full filled with fog,
It burst with a bang, like the fabulous frog.
Its name—like its record—in water is writ;
Circumspice! Nihil ex nihilo fit. Tibicen.

WRITTEN BY A DISGUSTED EAST-ENDER.

The crew of our ole ship o' State
Did what they didn't oughter—
They spent their time upon the land,
And not upon the water.
Oom Paul.

A UNIONIST TRIBUTE TO THE DEPARTED SESSION.

It was sitting more weeks than we quite like to own,
And now it is lying beneath the cold stone;
And for all it did—sitting—we're fain to confess
That now, lying here, it can hardly do less.
Pat-a-cake.

Here lies the Session of 1896:
First the majority joined it, and now it has joined the majority.
Pat-a-cake.

To the fond memo.
of
FRANK FAILURE, the only child
of
Earnest Hope, and his wife, Faith.
He breathed his last Aug. 15, 1896, aged one year.
Though so young, he celebrated his majority,
and obtained considerable applause for his few Acts.

His voluntary suicide in the schools
(under the influence of a Bowl of Bishop), led to his having to repudiate a heavy Bill,
in which his honour was deeply involved.
His end was a tail of woe.

Large his majority, his soul sincere,
Heav'n did some counteracting weakness send,
He made each champion all he could—a peer;
And gained from Churchmen many a lukewarm friend.
Nodding Violet.

Here lies the Carcase of
M. T. SESSION,
Offspring of the late Retro Session, of St. Stephen's, Westminster.

Having neglected to avail himself of the Education provided for him in his Youth, his Maturity failed to justify the Flattering Hopes and Promises of his Sponsors; and, being Deserted
by many of his Quondam Friends in his Old Age, EXTREME MORTIFICATION set in, and he shared the Fate of The Great Majority
on August 14, 1896.

Scant praise, alas! can we bestow;
His virtues were not strong,
He did but little here below,
And did that little wrong!
Vox.

In memory of
The late Session of Parliament,
Which, after a wasting disease, passed away
To the happy hunting grounds
On August 14, 1896.
Its youth was full of promise,
But a forced and ill-judged education
Sapped its constitution,
Leading to a creeping paralysis which ended
A useless life.
Its friends, who had made preparations for Celebrating its majority,
Now sorrowfully confess
It had better it had never been born.
The funeral car bore a single wreath,
Sent by the Irish Nationalists with this Text from Timothy:
"The husbandman that laboureth must Be first partaker of the fruits."
Dandelion.

Here "lie" no longer England's chosen men;
Widely dispersed, they hope to meet again.
Sad to relate, though lacking not the will,
They passed a Session, yet passed scarce a Bill.
Corn Cob.

"A plague on both your houses."—H. E. G.

In the grave of this Session, all dead and forgotten,
There lie Bills that were healthy and Bills that were rotten;
There lie, too, the remains of the monster majority,
Who lied better still when they weren't in authority!
Forsan.

EXCESSIT, EVASIT, ERUPIT, ABIIT.

Free translation: It went to extremes, it equivocated, it broke loose, it adjourned.

In place of the classical addendum: "It said it was the Opposition."—Enoch.

In memory of the First Session of a Parliament pledged mainly to stand still while the world moves. What they have done undoes them; and what they have left undone is their true doing.—Mora.

Here lies a babe, "Procrastination,"
Who never cut his wisdom teeth;
Whose sponsors spoilt his education,
Yet on his tombstone place a wreath.
His military life was short,
And though at sea he won his rating;
His brother next year really ought
To do some work with less debating.
Heurteloup.

Of the still dead speak nought but well,
Let silence greet the prompter's bell;
If through our errors we've gained fame,
Pray call it by another name,
Penguin.

Rest, Tories, rest, nor heed the route
Until the Liberals sound the grand "turn out."
Balaklava II.

A giant of strength, but a monster of weakness,
'Neath the shade of the past, here we lay;
Advancing with boast, withdrawing with meekness,
His motto was—Bluff, and give way.
Singeon.

Here lies a Parliament of whom we can't belave it,
Nullum tetigit quod non ornavit.
Arch. Gibbs.

Here lies six hundred and fifty-eight
Members appointed to legislate;
What they have done, and what they have said,
To tell would puzzle a wiser head,—
Though I through all the journals should dig,
For one is so little, the other so big!
Biddenham.

Here lie
Blunder and Waste,
Who lived in a hurry, and died in haste.
The rogues
Prorogued themselves, that they Might end their ills,
And make fresh bills,
Wherewith to blunder at the judgment-day.
Uffculme.

Here lies disgraced
Gigantic Waste;
His epitaph—
The wide-world's laugh!
Uffculme.

The late Session, wherein hon. members lied and slept, is now lying asleep. May it lie still.—Pigtail.

Here lies the Session, gone for good or ill,
Through life it lied, and now is lying still,
Its only assets were dishonoured Bills
(Its guinea-pig directors swept the tills),
Its capital was raised on false pretences,
The parish paid its funeral expenses,
Its personalties were sworn below,
How much or little only the Lords know.
Dandelion.

Dry Stones!
Drier Bones!
Oh, my! Here they lie! Heave a sigh? Why? Why?—
Told no lie! Clear as "pie"!
Measures passed! So strongly cast! For ever last!—
Thus Fama's blast. Stephanotis.

Here passed from view with loads of pills,
And remedies for all the ills,
From Irish plagues to sisters' wills,
The Grand Bargees of "Ninety-Six"—
A motley crew from Thames to Styx.
Idem II.

Here rests a body gigantic in promise and proportions, but puny in strength. In its abortive encounter with the children, it contracted the fatal child(1), and—for the rest—took a turn again to "rend" (Matt. vii., 6). It "taxed the land to give the money" (2 Kings xxiii., 35) to them that "toil not neither do they spin" (Matt. vi., 28). "The cattle" it "took for a prey" (Josh. xi., 14) "of them that are afar off upon the sea" (Psalm lxv., 5). "It is the (land)lord, let him do what seemeth him good" (1 Sam. iii., 18). "The memory of the just (canvassed) is blessed"-ly short (Prov. x., 7).—Nitram.

It died of inanition,
With many sins 'twas rife—
Omission and commission,
Palavering and strife.
It did a few good actions,
Of evil it did none,
And but for warring factions,
Much business might have done.
It riled an anxious nation,
To please a pack of fools
Who'd stifle Education,
To fill the parsons' schools;
But common-sense, victorious,
Soon crush'd the hateful Bill,
And showed—tho' oft uproarious—
"We are a people still."
The Session now is over,
It's lying in its grave;
From Pentland unto Dover,
Let peer and parson rave,
While we fulfil our mission,
Its epitaph to write—
"It died of inanition,
Tho' erst so full of fight!"
Balaclava.

IN MEMORIAM.

Gone! from the wide world's history, floating away with the stream,
Our latest political mystery, drowned in each turbulent scene;
Gone, with obstructionists' fury, all that landowners hold dear,
Crafty of soil, likewise of spoil, nought but the grave do they fear.

AD VALOREM.

Weep not o'er fallen statesmanship, 'twere better pluck to show
That Englishmen brook no defeat, tho' statesmen play her low;
Their own untimely efforts dug themselves an early grave;
Let those who mourn the country's loss be to themselves more brave.
Sol.

1. Here lies our Tory Parliament,
Us it tried to educate;
We, ungrateful wretches, went
And in return gave it checkmate.
2. Pendulum Parliament, long thou wert dying,
Now wilt thou gain the reward of thy lying;
'Stead of the hoped-for words, "Friend, come up higher!"
Mind there's no counterblast, "Stir up the fire!"
Alastor

In eighteen eighty-six began
A Session which 'twas thought,
Would run a very glorious course,
And make laws good and short.

They had a great majority
(The Unionists I mean);
Union less unanimity
No Union is I ween.

Oh! stranger, read my little song,
That Session's use is dead;
To find a reason takes not long,
The party was ill led.
Jeff.

Stranger, or friend, or foe, whatever name you bear,
Whatever creed profess, or controversial feeling share,
Stop! and here upon this new-laid mould,
In silence pause, ere now the corpse's dust be cold
And drop a tear.

Think how a life, begun in bounding prance,
Has fallen low beneath Truth's scathing glance;
Think how his promises, in confidence expressed,
Have fallen short of all that he professed.
And lo! his bier.

Mighty was he of frame, his soul of strength impaired,
For all his deeds fell short of what he loud declared;
Humanity in vain called to his high chief for aid,
When Mussulman and Turk made raid on raid,
And felt no fear.

How weak his will to do, see Bills all cast aside,
For e'en the framer's followers would only these deride;
Disgust, though long time latent, burst at last in flame,
And whelmed the Ministry in ridicule and shame.
His end was near.

Stoutly he stood his ground, but friends and foes combined
To make his end a toil, by artfulness refined;
His steps began at last to totter, and his strength to fail,
His chief supporters looked upon his death without a wail;
E'en gave a cheer.

And now, dear people all, since here he lies confined,
His good or evil projects left perforce behind;
In charity condemn him not, for what was other's ban,
But leave his deeds for Truth and History to scan,
And drop a tear.
Culpepper.

Used on the Tooth-Brush

In the Morning a few drops of

SOZODONT,

THE PLEASANTEST DENTIFRICE in the WORLD,
WILL SWEETEN THE BREATH ALL DAY.

SOZODONT

KEEPS THE TEETH, LIPS, AND GUMS HEALTHY, AND OF A GOOD COLOUR.
It Cleanses the Teeth, and the spaces between the Teeth, as NOTHING else will do.
THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE.
In Toilet Case, complete, 2s. 6d.
BE SURE OF HAVING SOZODONT.

TORPID LIVER. HEADACHE.

Small Pill.
Small Dose.
Small Price.

Purely Vegetable, Sugar Coated.

1s. 1½d.

BUY FROM THE GROWER.

TEA MERCHANT TO HER MAJESTY
BY SPECIAL APPOINTMENT THE QUEEN.

LIPTON'S DELICIOUS TEAS

HAVE THE LARGEST SALE IN THE WORLD.

APPRECIATED EVERYWHERE FOR THEIR DELICATE FLAVOUR AND EXQUISITE AROMA.

NO HIGHER PRICE. PER 1/7 LB. NO HIGHER PRICE.

THIS IS THE FINEST TEA THE WORLD PRODUCES.

PER 1/4 LB. RICH, PURE, AND FRAGRANT. PER 1/- LB.

LIPTON, Tea Planter, Ceylon.

Chief Offices, CITY ROAD, LONDON. Branches Everywhere. Agencies Throughout the World.

10/6 THE "PELICAN" SELF-FEEDING PEN 10/6

(PATENTED)

WRITES INSTANTLY AND CONTINUOUSLY.

Has Extra Large Reservoir of Ink. Secure against Leakage in any position. Flow of Ink regulated with the Greatest Nicety.

POLISHED VULCANITE, HANDSOMELY ENCHASED, FITTED WITH SPECIAL BARREL PEN in 14-ct. GOLD, IRIDIUM-POINTED. Also

THE "NOTA BENE" STYLOGRAPH OR FLUID PENCIL

(PATENTED)

5/- 5/-

IS READY FOR INSTANT USE, WITHOUT ANY ADJUSTMENT. MAY BE CARRIED IN ANY POSITION, WITHOUT FEAR OF LEAKAGE.

POLISHED VULCANITE, HANDSOMELY ENCHASED, WITH NEEDLE, SPRING, & NOZZLE, MADE OF THE PRECIOUS METALS.

Sold by all Stationers. Wholesale only by the Sole Manufacturers, THOS. DE LA RUE & CO. Ltd., Bunhill Row, London, E.C.

MORGAN & CO., Ld.

Under Royal and the Most Distinguished Patronage.

45 FIRST CLASS PRIZE MEDALS

And 9 HIGHEST AWARDS CHICAGO EXHIBITION.

THE "MORVI" CAR,

As supplied to H.I.M. Empress Frederick of Germany.

Most Perfect 2-wheeler for a Lady's Driving.

EASY ACCESS. PERFECT BALANCE.

LONG ACRE, & 10, OLD BOND-ST.

MAPLE & CO

TOTTENHAM COURT ROAD

THE LARGEST AND MOST CONVENIENT

Furnishing Establishment

IN THE WORLD

Heating Ventilating Sanitary

Newest Appliances
Newest Designs
Best Selection by all the LEADING MAKERS
Schemes and Estimates Free

Engineers Engineers Engineers

NEW MODEL WROUGHT IRON AND COPPER TABLE LAMP
Fitted with large Copper Container, Safety Duplex Burner, plain Globe and Chimney, complete 14/6

VERY PRETTY NEW DESIGN WROUGHT IRON & COPPER TABLE LAMP.
Fitted with Copper Container, Safety Duplex Burner, Etched Globe and Chimney, complete 18/9

NOVELTIES IN LAMP SHADES
Designs Free

NOVELTIES IN TABLE LAMPS
Designs Free

ALL LAMPS FITTED WITH ABSOLUTELY SAFE BURNERS

Catalogues of Lamps Post Free

CUTLERY ELECTRO-PLATE
New Showrooms

MAPLE & CO. have also a most extensive assortment of all the finest and best qualities of TABLE CUTLERY, as well as every description of copper goods, ironmongery, and culinary utensils. They supply and furnish a kitchen with these requisites for £8. 3s. 6d., or with a larger stock for £16. 4s.

ARTISTIC NOVELTIES IN LAMP SHADES
Designs Free

DINNER SETS BREAKFAST SETS
Immense Stock

MAPLE & CO have always an immense assemblage of DINNER, Tea, and Breakfast SERVICES, comprising the beautiful productions of Minton, Worcester, Derby, Wedgwood, Coalport, and other potteries, as well as less expensive varieties. A dinner set of artistic design and colourings for 15s. 6d.

SPECIALITIES IN LAMP SHADES
Designs Free

LAMPS CLEANED AND PUT IN WORKING ORDER

Catalogues of Lamps Post Free

A VERY CHASTE DESIGN BRASS TELESCOPIC FLOOR LAMP, WITH MEXICAN ONYX TABLE
Patent extending movement, fitted with Safety Duplex Burner and Chimney complete; 5 ft. high, rising to 6 ft. 3 in., 95/- Shade extra.
A very stylish Shade in Florentine Silk, with figured silk coronet and panels, complete with strong brass support, 36/6.

MASSIVE WROUGHT IRON AND COPPER EXTENDING FLOOR LAMP
4 ft. 9 in. high, rising to 7 ft. fitted with Copper Container, Safety Duplex Burner and Chimney, complete, 22/9. Shade extra.
Decorative Shade in Sateen and Lace, complete with strong brass supports, 12/3.

THE ARCADIAN OIL STOVE

This Stove is constructed on perfect scientific principles, is absolutely safe, entirely free from smell, possesses a heating power equal to that of ordinary stoves consuming twice the quantity of oil.
Costs less than one farthing an hour.
Designs and all particulars post free.

VERY ARTISTIC NEW MODEL WROUGHT IRON AND COPPER FLOOR LAMP
4 ft. 3 in. high, rising to 6 ft. 9 in. fitted with Copper Container, Safety Duplex Burner and Chimney, complete 24/6 Shade extra
The "Halcyon," a very pretty Shade in Florentine Silk, with Lace and good Ribbon bow, complete with stout brass support, 19/6 extra.

Printed for the Proprietor by WYMAN & SONS, Limited, Great Queen-st. W.C. and published at 10, Bolt-ct. Fleet-st. E.C. in the Parish of St. Dunstan-in-the-West, in the City of London. Cheques and Post Office Orders should be made payable to REGINALD E. BOOKER, "Truth" Buildings, Carterot-st. Queen Anne's-gate, S.W.

• TRUTH •

"Cultores Veritatis Fraudis Inimici."—Cicero.

No. 1028. Vol. XL. Thursday, September 10, 1896. Price Sixpence.

NOTICE.

In response to various communications which reach me on the subject, I beg to notify that the terms of Subscription to Truth, which are payable in advance, are as follows:—To any address in the United Kingdom, for 3 months, 7s.; 6 months, 14s.; and for 12 months, 28s. The Thin Paper Edition is forwarded to countries within the Postal Union for 3 months for 7s. 8d.; 6 months, 15s. 4d.; and 12 months, 30s. 8d. Cheques and Post Office Orders should be made payable to the Manager, Truth, "Truth Building," Carteret-street, S.W.

A reprint of the Truth report on the Kilburn Sisterhood can be obtained at the Publishing Offices, Bolt-court, Fleet-street, price 2d.; by post, 2½d.

ENTRE NOUS.

THERE will be no Braemar Gathering this year, as the Queen has forbidden the function in consequence of the death of Prince Henry of Battenberg, so the usual parades and marches of the egregious Balmoral and Duff "Highlanders" will not take place. If the late Sir James Mackenzie had lived for a year or two longer, we should no doubt have heard by this time of the Glenmuick "Highlanders."

The Princess of Wales will accompany the Emperor and Empress of Russia from Denmark to Scotland, and H.R.H. is to stay at Balmoral during the Imperial visit. The Princess will afterwards spend a week or two with the Duke and Duchess of Fife at Mar Lodge. The Princess had not intended to visit Scotland this year, and she has not been seen at Deeside since the autumn of 1894, but her plans have been changed in consequence of the Queen of Denmark having decided to proceed the week after next to Gmunden, in Upper Austria, on a visit to the Duke and Duchess of Cumberland, at their splendid and beautiful domain on the Traun See. The Empress Dowager of Russia will probably accompany Queen Louise to Germany, and King Christian will then take up his residence at the Amalienborg Palace in Copenhagen.

After the Imperial yacht has landed the Emperor and Empress of Russia at Leith, she will go round to Portsmouth, where their Majesties are to embark for Cherbourg. The Emperor and Empress are to travel direct from Ballater to Portsmouth Harbour without passing through London, and they will be accompanied by the Grand Duke Alexis, who is expected at Balmoral the week after next on a visit to the Queen.

Last week the St. James's Gazette, in recording the eighteenth birthday of Princess Alexandra of Coburg, remarked that the elder sisters were married before this age was attained, but that bachelor Princes are not now so abundant as they were a few years ago. My contemporary need not have lavished any such egregious condolence on Princess Alexandra, as she was married nearly five months ago to the Hereditary Prince of Hohenlohe-Langenberg.

The King of the Hellenes, who is expected at Copenhagen this week, will come to England at the end of October for a short time on a visit to the Prince and Princess of Wales at Marlborough House and at Sandringham. On leaving England King George will proceed to St. Petersburg, to attend the wedding of his daughter, the Princess Marie, and the Grand Duke George Michailovitch.

A news-agency announced last Thursday that the Empress Frederick has purchased the Ditton Park domain, near Windsor, from the Dowager Duchess of Buccleuch, and this nonsense was copied by several of the evening papers. It happens that the Dowager Duchess of Buccleuch died about eighteen months ago. Ditton came to the late Duke of Buccleuch from his uncle, Lord Montagu, and it was the dower house of the Dowager Duchess, on whose death the estate passed to her second son, Lord Montagu of Beaulieu, to whom it now belongs. Ditton is a fine old house, with beautiful gardens and a well-wooded park. The place is to be let furnished at the rent of £1,200 a year, and there was some talk at Windsor in the spring of the Empress Frederick becoming the tenant, which was probably the origin of the ridiculous report that she had bought the property.

The Duke of Cambridge is next week to be the guest of Sir George and Lady Julia Wombwell, at Newburgh Park, where there will be a large party for partridge shooting. The Duke is expected to attend the Agricultural Show at Easingwold on Wednesday.

The Pall Mall Gazette announced on Friday that "yesterday" the Duke of York took part in a deer drive at Invermark, which resulted in a bag of 146 brace of grouse! How a deer drive could have produced simply a number of grouse it is not easy to understand. As a matter of fact, however, the shooting in question had taken place on the previous Tuesday, and there was no deer drive, but simply a series of grouse drives. The Duke and Duchess of York go this week to Balmoral, and they will stay in Deeside until they return to Sandringham at the beginning of next month in time for the Musical Festival at Norwich.

Last week Lord Cadogan paid his first Viceregal visit to the South of Ireland. On Monday he left Dublin, accompanied by Lady Cadogan—who had just returned from her visit to Lord and Lady Arran in Sligo—and a Viceregal suite, for Fota, Mr. Smith-Barry's residence near Cork. Amongst the house party assembled to meet the Lord-Lieutenant were Lord and Lady Bandon, Lady Castletown, Sir R. and Lady Penrose Fitzgerald, and Miss C. Verney.

The week was a busy one for the Viceregal party, who took part in many public functions in Cork, the Lord-Lieutenant being called on to make the usual speeches. Lord Cadogan has adopted a habit of having his state carriages sent from Dublin when he visits the leading towns in Ireland, which, as the Irish Viceregal carriages are always admirably "turned out," gives great effect to these visits. Besides opening a bazaar and attending luncheon and tea parties, Lord and Lady Cadogan visited most of the public institutions and sights of Cork and the neighbourhood, making journeys by water, as well as by land in some instances. They were politely received throughout the visit. The weather, though of the mixed nature to be expected in September, was fine enough to give an interesting object lesson in the beauty of Irish scenery to Lord Cadogan, who is President of the Tourist Promoting Society in Ireland.

Lord and Lady Cadogan left Fota at the end of the week for Killarney, to spend a few days with Lord Kenmare. On Monday they were due at Lismore Castle, the Duke of Devonshire's picturesque residence—in which he so rarely resides—on the banks of the Blackwater.

Whilst the Lord-Lieutenant was visiting the South, the Chief Secretary and Lady Betty Balfour were making a tour in the North of Ireland. Mr. Balfour received many addresses, and Lady Betty Balfour many bouquets. A marked practical spirit, an improvement on the conventional and sentimental one, pervaded the addresses, the Chief Secretary's replies being sympathetic and encouraging.

At this present moment there is no doubt that the Irish landlords are sulking with the Lord-Lieutenant and the powers that be, especially those in the Cabinet. The Irish Landlord Convention has passed a resolution thanking Lord Macnaghten and Mr. E. Carson for their services on the occasion of the late Revolt in the House of Lords. With this state of things, the appointment of an Irish Peer, or rather of a Peer who is an Irishman, to the vacancy in the Order of the Knights of St. Patrick, has special interest. It is hoped in Ireland that a distinguished Irishman, rather than one who has politically helped the Government, will receive the vacant ribbon.

Lord Waterford's coming of age was celebrated last week at Curraghmore, co. Waterford, with great festivity. Amongst the house party assembled for the occasion, in addition to the members of the Beresford family, were the Duke and Duchess of Beaufort, Lady Lansdowne, Lady Beatrice Fitzmaurice, Lord Ormonde, and others. Entertainments of various kinds were given, the neighbours and tenants of all sorts and conditions being Lord Waterford's guests during the week.

The Northern Meeting is to be held at Inverness next week, on Thursday and Friday. A ball will take place on each night of the gathering, which is to be attended by the Duke and Duchess of Sutherland and a large party from Dunrobin Castle.

I wish somebody on the spot would put me in possession of the exact facts in regard to the changes which the new Lord Warden is said to have made at Walmer Castle. Some months since it was reported—and I have received a repetition of the story within the past few days—that soon after Lord Salisbury assumed the office, the Wellington room was dismantled and the relics of the Iron Duke banished to some attic or cellar. More recently there have been complaints that Lord Salisbury has departed from the practice of his predecessors by closing the whole of the castle to the public, and preventing the use of the drive through the park which has hitherto been freely enjoyed. On the other hand, I have had a letter denying that the Wellington room has been interfered with, and affirming that in regard to the closing of the castle and the drive Lord Salisbury has pursued the same course as his predecessors. I should like to know which of these conflicting reports is correct; as, if it turns out that any injustice has been done to the Prime Minister, I should like to at once put the matter right.

A correspondent writes:—

The Sleeping Car Company or someone else in England ought to be able to give tourists coming to Switzerland some definite information respecting the entry of bicycles into Switzerland. I started from England for Coire in the Engadine express. At the Victoria Station I was told that I must book my bicycle to Calais, and there rebook. On arriving at Calais, I did rebook. When I reached Coire, there was no bicycle. My destination was the Engadine. There I passed a fortnight, writing to Coire, Bâle, &c., to obtain news of the whereabouts of the machine. At last I learnt that it had stuck fast at Bâle, and, after further correspondence, an agent forwarded it to me. A deposit has to be paid on entrance into Switzerland, which is returned on leaving the country and showing the receipt at the custom house on the route by which the country is left. So far so good. But how about entry? If the owner has to leave the train and to pay in person the deposit at the frontier, where is this payment made on coming direct from England? At the frontier or at Bâle? In either case the Engadine express does not stop long enough either at the frontier or at Bâle to render this possible. Moreover, I do not know whether the Engadine express takes bicycles.

In regard to all this I could get no definite information in London. I asked an expedition agent, and suggested that he should forward the bicycle. He replied that even if sent by him grande vitesse it would take ten days reaching its destination. This is why I took mine with me. But the plan does not seem to have been very successful. What I should like to know is this. Given that a person starts for any place in the interior of Switzerland with a bicycle, where does he pay the entrance duty? Also if he is passing through Switzerland to Italy by the St. Gothard Railway, can he book through, and, if so, does he

---

For the Truth Hotel List, see page 681 in the present issue.
For Hospitals and Appeals, see page 682.
For Amusements, see page 683.
For Our Puzzles, see page 689.

not pay duty on passing through Switzerland? At the Engadine I found most people with bicycles had had as much difficulty in respect to them as I had. In France things are made easy to bicyclists. As Switzerland counts upon tourists, it might be well that it should also be made easy to those going there; in any case, however, the exact steps that have to be taken by those who start for that country with a bicycle, in order to get it on arrival without a delay of many days, should be known.

I have another suggestion to make to those who may be weighing the alternatives of hotel and lodging house as desirable resorts for the holiday season. It is to take a trip in one of the big ocean liners. I have been led to the conclusion that this would be an eminently desirable method of recruiting exhausted energies by the report of a representative whom I sent to inspect the new Castle Line s.s. Dunvegan Castle. He makes it quite clear to me that the Dunvegan Castle is nothing less than a floating palace, and I am bound to believe that having once tasted of its luxuries nothing less than the strictest sense of duty enabled him to tear himself away from its delights.

Once more I am asked to utter a protest against the brutal conduct of the wretched cockney sportsmen whose main delight at the seaside is to shoot as many sea-birds as possible. The complaint comes from a recent visitor at Scarborough and Bridlington, who states that whilst out boating he has repeatedly seen maimed gulls, some with legs shot away and others winged, floating about in agony. I have had similar complaints before from Scarborough, and for some reason the practice of slaughtering and maiming sea-birds would seem to be especially prevalent on that part of the coast. There is, I fear, no way of checking it, except by the influence of public opinion, and, unfortunately, the parties who indulge in such wanton butchery are not likely to care much for the scorn and reprobation they bring upon themselves from all humane and decent-minded people.

A vast amount of correspondence has reached me in reference to the astonishing disparities in the charges which chemists in different places make for the same articles. Many instances are given, which cap even those I related the other week, and the question is one which it may be interesting and instructive to further deal with. I do not intend, therefore, to lose sight of it, and meanwhile I beg to thank my correspondents for the information with which they have favoured me.

In spite of the hysterical paroxysms in which the log-rolling admirers of Stevenson have been indulging during the last few months, it may be doubted whether any of his books will be "alive" twenty years hence. Could anything be more crack-brained than Mr. Andrew Lang's description of Stevenson as "the chief literary glory" of Scotland after "Burns, Scott, and Carlyle"? Longo intervallo, I should say. As a matter of fact, no clear-headed and competent critic would place Stevenson on a level with Hume or Smollett, much less above them. Was not Galt a "literary glory," and is anything of Stevenson's equal to that writer's "Annals of the Parish"? There is also Drummond of Hawthornden, to say nothing of John Gibson Lockhart, Francis Jeffrey, and poor James Boswell. The biographies of Scott and Johnson will continue to be read long after the very name of Stevenson is forgotten.

With regard to a recent announcement that the Duke of Rutland has closed Belvoir Castle, I am informed that the Castle is still open as usual to the inspection of the public, the arrangements for the admission of persons wishing to see it remaining unaltered. I also hear on good authority that it is not, as was reported, the intention of the Duke to live principally abroad for the next few years.

Great preparations are being made for next week's meeting of the British Association at Liverpool, which is to be attended by Dr. Nansen. There will be abundance of hospitality, and Lord and Lady Derby, who are to entertain a large house party at Knowsley, will give a garden party there. Excursions have been arranged to Chester and Eaton Hall, Hawarden Castle, the Manchester Ship Canal, the Railway Works at Crewe, the Northwich Salt Works, and the Rivington and Vyrnwy Waterworks, while some marine dredging expeditions have also been planned. There are excursions after the meeting to the Isle of Man and to the Lake District, which will extend over several days. Dr. Farrar, Dean of Canterbury, is to preach the sermon in Liverpool Cathedral next Sunday. Lord Derby, as Mayor of Liverpool, will give several large luncheon and dinner parties during the week.

Dean Macdonnel, who is now the Canon-in-residence at Peterborough Cathedral, has completed his Life of Archbishop Magee, and the work will be published next month in two volumes. I am glad to hear that a selection of the Archbishop's correspondence will be included in the book, as he was an admirable letter writer.

The Rev. Henry Granville Dickson, Secretary of the Church Defence Institution, has no doubt rendered valuable service to the Tory Party, as he has been working zealously in the cause of "Church Defence" for several years. Mr. Dickson has been generously rewarded by the Archbishop of Canterbury, who has given him the valuable rectory of Coulsdon (one of the best livings in the gift of the Primate), which ought properly to have gone to one of the diocesan clergy, several of whom have well earned such preferment.

I am not in a position to say what sort of progress is being made with the egregious proposal to present a testimonial to Mr. Harry S. Foster, M.P., in recognition of his "advocacy of the rights of private patrons and the just liberties of the clergy." It may be interesting, however, to mention the fact, just brought to my notice, that Mr. William Sparks, the honorary secretary of the committee, is Mr. Foster's brother-in-law. This should greatly stimulate the flow of subscriptions.

WATER SUPPLY FOR MANSIONS, &c.—Artesian Bored and Driven Tube Wells, Wind Engines for pumping, &c.—State your requirements to ALFRED WILLIAMS & Co., 39, Gt. Eastern-st., London, E.C.

Canon Ainger is not to put in his usual term of residence at Bristol this year, and with the consent of Dean Pigou, he has arranged for one of the Honorary Canons to take his place in the Cathedral services. In sanctioning this arrangement the Dean has doubtless been actuated by the most amiable motives; but the absence of the Master of the Temple has caused much unfavourable comment in Bristol, and no small amount of disappointment to the congregation, who are deprived of his sermons. Many people hold that a Canon drawing a stipend of £700 a year ought to do at least the three months' duty for which he is so handsomely paid. I think so myself; indeed, if I had the ordering of the matter, I would make it a rule, "No work, no pay."

"MAY BISHOPS BIKE?"

(Vide SPECTATOR passim.)

May Bishops bike? Why, certainly! without a doubt or question.
There's not the slightest need to jib at such a sane suggestion.
We would, indeed, still further go—we've given the point some thought, too—
And when we're asked "May Bishops bike?" we'd answer, "Nay, they ought to!"

There are some people, it is true, who urge with much malignity
That Bishops ought to sit apart and stand upon their dignity;
But this is folly; let us say, in accents most emphatic,
Bishops can only hope to last by being democratic.

They in the daily life of those o'er whom they watch should mingle;
They should be partners in their griefs and with their joys should tingle;
And how can they more strongly feed this mutual sort of feeling
Than by developing a zest for what is known as "wheeling"?

It is no wish of ours, be sure, a bishop to disparage,
Yet we have never cared to see one lolling in his carriage.
We do not like those cushions soft that he is prone to lie on:
He looks to us as though he were too much "at ease in Zion."

But, put him on a bike, and lo! how all his aspect alters!
Straight on the path of duty then he rides and never falters;
He ceases like a derelict that see of his to cumber,
When once he has acquired, and knows the way to ride, his "Humber"!

How strange, too—should he be engulfed in fashion's latest eddy—
To know that in one way, at least, he for the change is ready!
His gaiters and his apron may not be to all folks liking,
But no one can deny they are the very things for "biking!"

Nor can the innovation fail to foster his ability,
The cycling Bishop would, we hold, be dowered with new utility;
Think how throughout his diocese he daily could be "spinning,"
Redressing wrongs, and in the cause of right new triumphs winning!

The harassed curate then might find in him a strong protector,
As he all suddenly "scorched" down to chide a despot rector;
The erring vicar then would feel that, like a new St. Michael,
His Bishop any day might swoop upon him from his cycle!

Think how he might inspire new zeal in dull and droning preachers!
Think how each hamlet in his see might get to know his features!
Till even Liberationists might find it hard to dish up
Fresh charges 'gainst a Church in which was found the Cycling Bishop!

So when the staid Spectator asks "May Bishops bike?"—right cheery
Is the rejoinder that we give to its persistent query—
"In this direction we've no wish their lordships' tastes to fetter;
By all means let our Bishops bike—the sooner, too, the better!"

Commenting upon the Archbishop of Canterbury's official warning against the employment of unworthy clergymen, the Church Times states that "the law makes provision for the due protection of our congregations from the ministrations of clerical mauvais sujets, since a strange priest may not officiate in a church on two consecutive Sundays without the diocesan being informed of it." The case I mentioned last week shows, however, that if this is the law, it is, as at present administered, far from affording "due protection" to congregations. The minister to whom I referred was the Rev. Evan Jenkins, formerly Rector of Monafon, in the diocese of St. Asaph. He was deprived of his benefice in May, 1893, for disgraceful conduct which brought him before the magistrates no less than three times within a week, but nevertheless in the document he lately addressed to me he stated that for two years since this misfortune he had been doing duty in the dioceses of Southwell and Exeter, and I now learn that in a recent application for clerical employment he has asserted that for about eighteen months of this period he was practically in sole charge of the parish of Wingerworth, in the diocese of Southwell, where the incumbent is incapacitated by old age. In view of this reverend gentleman's antecedents, it is impossible to suppose that the Bishop would knowingly have allowed him to have charge of a parish for eighteen months. Is it a fact that he did so? If it is, there can be no question that in the diocese of Southwell the regulation cited by the Church Times is either wholly ignored or else the notification of the Bishop where a strange priest is engaged for two consecutive Sundays is a mere useless formality.

SUFFERERS from all liver and gouty complaints, unable to visit the Spa, reap great benefit from taking the Carlsbad Waters or Sprüdel Salts (Löbel Schottländer, Carlsbad, on wrapper). Of all Chemists, and INGRAM & ROYLE, LTD., 52, Farringdon-street.

"HÔTEL BURLINGTON," AT SUNNY BOSCOMBE. (200 rooms.) Every luxury. Delightful grounds. Magnificent golf links. Sea-water baths. Moderate charges.—Bournemouth East Station.

The Clerk of the Dungannon Presbytery has now replied to the questions I raised on August 20 in reference to the system under which Ministers connected with the Presbytery are allowed to collect money for Church objects in England and Scotland. He states that there is no rule in the constitution of the Presbyterian Church in Ireland to the effect that the credentials granted to such collectors shall only hold good for twelve months. As to this, I must say that the absence of such a rule is to be regretted, for if no renewal is required for certificates which are granted for some special or temporary purpose, there is always the possibility that they may still be used after the purpose in question has been fulfilled. So far as Dungannon is concerned, I now have the Clerk's assurance that accounts of the money raised in connection with each congregation are annually submitted to the Presbytery, and, as I have previously mentioned, a committee of that body has reported that the collecting-books have been carefully and correctly kept. But whether the practice of cadging "outside the bounds of the Presbytery" which has been carried on for so many years past is altogether creditable to the Church is a question on which the Clerk is judiciously silent.

The University College of South Wales has raised its local fund of £20,000, so this institution can now claim a grant of that amount from the Government, besides £10,000 from the Drapers' Company. Lord Bute has given £10,000 to the College, which is to be employed in promoting technical education.

One or two Americans write to me in defence of the National University of Chicago. They appear to think I have attacked it, but I have done nothing of the kind, I have only attacked the "Universitas Nationalis Illinoiensis" of Chicago, which is evidently an entirely different institution. It is true that in the country newspaper which I quoted last week the "Universitas Nationalis Illinoiensis" was alluded to as "the Chicago University." But this is only one of the tricks by which the agents of the former establishment in this country seek to humbug the public as to the source of the degrees which they are ready to procure for anybody prepared to pay prices ranging from £12. 10s. for a "B.A." to £21 for an "LL.D."

I have received the following amounts towards Lady Jeune's Holiday Fund for Poor London Children:—B. F. A., £1; A. V., £1. 1s.; C. P. C., 10s.; Herbert Stephenson, £1. I have also received £1 from Margaret towards this year's Toy Fund.

Carpet Beating Season.—The Queen says: "A good place to send carpets to is the Compressed Air Carpet and Tapestry Cleaning Company, Brook Green, Hammersmith, W. Dust blown out. No beaters used." To prevent deception carpets cleaned by this process bear the Trade Mark on the back.

Some one has sent me a newspaper report of the entertainment which was given by the N.C.O.s of the 4th Hussars to the N.C.O.s of the 9th Lancers on the eve of the latter's departure for South Africa. The report states that Regimental Sergeant-Major Brown, of the 4th Hussars, presided over this gathering, and that "in the course of the evening Colonel Bloomfield Gough and between twenty and thirty other officers visited the mess and united in the conviviality of the time." Far be it from me to say a word in depreciation of the conduct of these officers—on the contrary, I think their mingling with the N.C.O.s for an hour or so's social intercourse on such an occasion was a most praiseworthy proceeding. But the incident becomes very curious and instructive when it is considered in connection with the case of Mr. Bruce, of the 4th Hussars. As my readers will remember, that young officer's conduct in passing half-an-hour in the Sergeants' mess of his regiment, on Boxing Night, and (at the request, by the way, of the above-mentioned Regimental Sergeant-Major) drinking the health of the mess in a whisky and soda, was actually made the pretext for forcing him out of the Army. It would be interesting to know whether any of the bullies and snobs who so shamefully persecuted Mr. Bruce were among the officers who "united in the conviviality" of the N.C.O.s the other night.

My attention has been called to a paragraph in the Broad Arrow of the 29th ult., with reference to the account given in Truth some weeks ago of the treatment of a subaltern of the 20th Hussars. The paragraph is of the usual impudent character, and the editor of the Broad Arrow has the goodness to inform me what he considers to be due from me "in common honesty." Pending my fulfilling the requirements of "common honesty," the Broad Arrow graciously defers the publication of the "an authoritative statement" in its possession respecting the subaltern in question. I am much obliged to my contemporary for his consideration, but as he is about the last person in the world whom I should allow to dictate to me in matters relating to the management of my own business, I should advise him to publish his "authoritative statement" without further delay. I should then be in a position to judge whether it is anything of the same character as another authoritative statement purporting to come from the 20th Hussars, which reached me two or three weeks back. My "authoritative statement" was of such a nature, that, after considering it carefully, I could not possibly believe it to be genuine; and I accordingly at once put myself in communication with the officer from whom it purported to come, in order to test its genuineness before taking any notice of it in Truth. It may turn out yet that the editor of the Broad Arrow would have done better to take similar precautions; but if he will have the kindness to publish his "authoritative statement," we shall then be in a position to judge on that point.

Mortlock's China and Glass Business, Oxford-st., has entered its 150th year, being founded by John Mortlock in 1746. It is carried on by John George Mortlock, the great-great grandson of the founder, who solicits patronage and recommendation.

With regard to the original story in Truth, about the 20th Hussars, I have only to say again that, though it was not founded on evidence at first hand, it came to me on authority which I consider to be amply sufficient to justify its publication—authority which I should certainly not repudiate on the mere ipse dixit of the editor of the Broad Arrow. There was further justification for the publication of the story in the fact that it was generally current in India, and called for repudiation on behalf of the officers of the regiment. I was careful to say all this when I published the statement, and it would follow, as a matter of course, that if any full and satisfactory disclaimer on behalf of the regiment was forthcoming, I should feel it my duty to give it the fullest publicity. Beyond that I do not conceive that my duty extends. Up to the present no disclaimer which I can consider either full or satisfactory has reached me, but, as mentioned above, I have been favoured with a document, which, if it turns out to be genuine, I shall know how to deal with.

In addition to the statement referred to above, I have received from India another lengthy document relating to various incidents in the recent history of the 20th Hussars, and though it is true that, in regard to the particular matter with which I dealt some weeks ago, this account differs in certain details from that to which I gave publicity, yet in substance the story is the same. I am now making further inquiries, and the Broad Arrow may rest assured that the full truth as to a number of interesting incidents in connection with this regiment, both in India and at home, shall in due course be made known in these columns.

An Anglo-Indian correspondent asks me to call attention to the practice of the Government of India in exacting income-tax from officers serving in the Berar Commission. These officers are employed in the administration of the districts which were assigned by the Nizam for the pay of the Hyderabad Contingent. The whole cost of this administration and of the Contingent is taken from the revenues of the province, and the balance handed over to the Nizam; so that practically, if not nominally, the officers in question are the Nizam's servants, and, as an Indian contemporary has pointed out, if they have to pay income-tax at all it should be credited to his Highness. There certainly seems to be no just reason why they should pay it to the Government of India; but in matters of this kind the Government of India cares less for what it ought to do by right than for what it can do by might.

The following narrative affords an edifying example of the meanness displayed by the War Office in dealing with meritorious officers. A late quartermaster of a certain regiment originally enlisted on the understanding that by exemplary conduct for a certain number of years he would gain a good conduct medal and a gratuity of £15. In due course he gained the medal, but not the £15, the amount of gratuity having been reduced to £5 by a regulation made subsequently to his enlistment, and without regard to the vested interest of the rank and file. Even the payment of the £5 was so long deferred that the War Office were moved to send 6s. 9d. interest at the same time. In the course of time, the hero of the story gained his commission, and upon this a demand was actually made upon him to refund his £5. The officer returned the £5, and, not wishing to be under any obligation to a Government which would treat him in this way, he sent back the 6s. 9d. interest. The War Office for some reason returned the 6s. 9d., but the officer sent it back a second time, saying that if he was not entitled to the £5 he was certainly not entitled to the interest on it, and the War Office acquiesced in this view and kept the money. If any instance can be given in which an officer has been treated with more contemptible shabbiness than this, I should uncommonly like to hear of it.

A good instance of the way in which medical officers are shunted about from one station to another has recently occurred in Ireland, where a medical officer of Surgeon-Captain's rank has been moved no less than nine times in five months. This incessant changing of work and surroundings must be bad enough from the officer's point of view, but what about the patients?

The detachment of the Medical Staff Corps at Hong Kong, whose good character and good work have often received official commendation, seem to be rather discontented just now, judging from the growls that have reached me. Among other things, it is complained that since the arrival of a new P.M.O. needless and vexatious changes have been introduced which bear hardly on the men, and especially that the hours of duty have been so excessive during the recent spell of hot weather—the hottest known at Hong Kong since 1885—as to be really injurious to health. As to the latter grievance, the fact appears to be that the detachment is not strong enough to work the hospital properly, and it is to be hoped that the authorities will accede to the application which has been made for additional N.C.O.s and men.

Is it strictly legal, having regard to the provisions of the Army Act on the point, for a junior officer to be placed in the position of having to inspect and give orders to his senior officer in rank? This state of things has long prevailed among the Army Medical Staff in India, where the P.M.O. on the Commander-in-Chief's Staff is junior to the P.M.O.s of the Bengal and Bombay commands, who are, nevertheless, his official subordinates, and have to take orders from him. Nor is this sort of arrangement absolutely confined to India, for only a few days back Surgeon-Major-General Taylor was inspecting the establishment at Netley, which is under the charge of his own senior. Considering what an abnormal amount of stickling for rank and etiquette there is among Army doctors, these arrangements are a little surprising.

Typewriters and Cycles for Sale or Hire. Great bargains in Standard Machines.—N. Taylor, Manager, 74, Chancery-lane, London. Established 1884.

A good instance of the inequitable way in which payments for outside engagements of regimental bands are divided has recently occurred in the 1st Royal Dragoons. The band of that regiment recently played at a promenade concert in the absence of the Bandmaster, who was on furlough, and whose bâton was wielded for the occasion by the band-sergeant. Nevertheless, the bandmaster was credited with £1 out of the proceeds, in addition to the 15s. allowed to the band-sergeant. It seems a very unjustifiable thing that the bandmaster should take his fee for a performance in which he took no part.

There seems to be something requiring the attention of the higher military authorities in the present condition of the 4th Volunteer Battalion Scottish Rifles. The following account of certain recent occurrences reaches me from a gentleman in Glasgow who has interested himself in what has been going on. A colour-sergeant named Roy, serving as an instructor in the battalion, considering himself entitled to a good-conduct medal, went to Hamilton to make inquiries on the subject. According to his own statement to my informant, Roy did this on the advice of the Adjutant, Captain Brogden, whom he had consulted on the subject. On inquiry being made, however, of Captain Brogden as to whether he had authorised Roy to proceed to Hamilton, that officer denied having given such authority. It is further alleged by Roy that at the same time the Adjutant privately asked him to take the blame upon himself, which Roy refused to do. An entry was then made against him in the defaulter sheet of the company for stating a falsehood by saying that he had been authorised to go to Hamilton by the Adjutant. This entry, which still stands, was made without any formal charge being made against Roy, and without being brought to his knowledge in any way, and seems, therefore, to have been a pure irregularity. When Roy eventually discovered what had been done, he applied to the Colonel to have the entry removed, which request was refused, and he then laid a complaint before the Officer Commanding the District. He was next placed under arrest for making this complaint direct instead of through his own C.O.; but, after inquiry by the Officer Commanding the District, he was exonerated from all blame, and underwent no further punishment. The entry, however, which was the cause of his complaint, still stands. Subsequently to this incident the Colonel, I believe, resigned the command of the regiment.

This seems a queer business all round, and it gets an uglier look from the fact that a year or so previously Roy, in company with another colour-sergeant, had preferred complaints of a very serious nature against an officer of the battalion with regard to certain returns that had been sent in. Nothing, so far as I can learn, has come of these complaints, unless the above experiences of Colour-Sergeant Roy are to be looked upon as an indirect result of them. These complaints must be either true or false—if the latter, the N.C.O.s who made them ought to be sharply dealt with; if the former, other steps ought to be taken. Either way, the whole business clearly requires investigation, and ought not to be left upon its present footing.

Reference was made in Truth a fortnight ago to the severity of the newly appointed Board of Examiners for Lieutenants of Engineers, which resulted in the rejection of nearly every candidate sent up. It has been represented to me that this severity may not only be called for by the circumstances, but is highly desirable in the public interest; and having heard a great deal of late of the incompetency of the Royal Engineers in many respects, I am bound to admit that there may be much force in this view of the matter. I heard not long ago of a case in which plans and estimates were prepared for a small job by a Lieutenant R.E., which were so hopelessly wrong and unworkable that it was obvious that the young man had merely put together two or three detached scraps cribbed from other plans and estimates which he thought would meet the requirements of the case for which he had to provide. I hear on very good authority that similar exhibitions of incompetency are by no means unknown among senior officers of the Royal Engineers, and I have a copy of a letter before me which contains a practical admission of ignorance of the simplest and most elementary of engineering work. Probably there is no department of the service in which more outrageous waste of public money is committed, owing to the incompetence of the officials concerned in the spending of it, than in the Royal Engineers; and I must admit that under these circumstances the utmost strictness on the part of the examiners is to be highly commended.

It seems that my explanation of the erratic marking of the geological papers by the Sandhurst Examiners was correct, and that it is due to the fact that, like most men of science, they belong to different schools of thought. Thus one is a follower of Lyell, another treads in the footprints of Prestwich, whilst others may be generically described as New School men. Consequently, if the papers of a candidate who has been crammed with Lyell fall into the hands of Prestwich or New School examiners, the unhappy candidate has to bear the brunt of the professional contempt for rival theories. The only way I can see out of the difficulty is for the Commissioners to state definitely which school is to be followed, and so prevent the waste of the candidate's time and money.

Another correspondent takes me to task for questioning the value of geology in the army, and cites as an instance that a force in the field might find itself in a country where the water supply was scanty or absent, under which circumstances the services of a geologist would be invaluable, as he would know where to look for it. I have my doubts in regard to the value of a geologist under the circumstances. But if this is the only reason why geology is taught I should imagine that it would be better for all parties if the rival school men were ousted from their positions on the Examination Board and a competent water diviner appointed. There could be surely no two opinions as to proficiency in the simple art of water divination.

Scott Adie, 115, Regent-street, London, for Shooting Gowns, Cawdor Capes, Travelling Ulsters, Jackets, Racing Coats, Carriage Rugs, Mauds, Shawls, and Scotch Tweeds. Patterns post free.

A question was asked in Truth of July 2 respecting a sum of money said to have been collected in the 2nd Royal Scots Fusiliers, for the purpose of erecting a stone over the grave of a colour-sergeant, and not expended for that purpose. The question was asked in consequence of representations made to me purporting to emanate from the rank and file of the regiment; but I now hear from Major Frere, commanding the battalion, that no colour-sergeant of the battalion has died since January, 1881, and only one sergeant, over whose grave a stone was erected within four months of his death (1892). This seems to answer the question conclusively, and I trust that my original correspondents will be satisfied with the result.

We have heard a great deal of late about the necessity of a long purse for any man desirous of getting on as a cavalry officer; but it is something new to hear that an N.C.O. depends on the same condition for his promotion. Nevertheless, I am informed, in regard to a certain Line Regiment in the South-West District that unless a sergeant has plenty of money there is no chance of his getting promoted to colour-sergeant. What this means I cannot say, but it might be well for the officer commanding the battalion to give his attention to the statement. Certain it is that promotions of junior sergeants have taken place in this battalion which are not to be explained by any ordinary rule.

The unjustifiable and vindictive sentence of the Court-Martial which reduced Sergeant Sayers, of the 2nd Berkshire Regiment, to the ranks, does not seem to have exhausted the animus he had excited by his activity and success in performing the duty of "prisoner's friend" for some of his comrades. Sayers has just been transferred to the Army Reserve. On his certificate the C.O. has entered his character as "formerly good (1887-1894)." This purports to give the man's conduct and character "according to the records," and the entry plainly implies that since 1894 his conduct and character, "according to the records," have not been good. But what are the facts? There was an entry on Sayers's defaulter's sheet on February 13, 1894, but, as the prosecutor admitted at the recent Court-Martial, he was "clear of crime" of any kind from that date until January 23, 1896, when he was punished for absence without leave, and within about a fortnight two more entries were made against him. At that particular time Sayers was acting as "prisoner's friend" for another N.C.O., and there was no further entry against him from February 8 until June, when he was again acting in the same capacity. It will be seen from this that the C.O.'s statement on the certificate of character, "formerly good (1887-1894)," is calculated to convey an entirely erroneous impression as to Sayers's character since the beginning of 1894, and if that is the object with which it was made, it is a very mean and contemptible piece of work.

A very grievous affliction has befallen a worthy divine not unconnected with the Army. He was passing through the barrack square at Dum-Dum on Sunday, the 16th ult., and saw what appeared to be the whole of the Royal Munster Fusiliers turned out to watch a football match between a team of the Munsters and a Calcutta team. He was horrified. Nor did a night's repose lessen his perturbation. On the succeeding day he wrote to the Colonel in command of the regiment:—

> This is the first time in my thirty years' experience of military work in India that I have heard of or seen a football match played by British troops on the Lord's Day. I hope yesterday's match was played without your knowledge or consent. May I also respectfully request that you will be pleased to forbid all football matches hereafter on the Lord's Day in the barrack square?

Now, I am convinced that if this worthy minister of the Gospel had given a trifle more reflection to the subject, he would never have penned such a request. He would have realised that there is no sacrilege in football per se, and would, perhaps, have further come to the conclusion that no more admirable means for keeping the whole regiment out of the proverbial mischief for idle hands could have been devised.

It is not always that my comments upon Army matters meet with such a prompt justification as has been the case at Malta. On July 30 I inquired the reason why the troops at this sub-tropical station should not be allowed to walk out in khaki instead of the regulation red serge. Upon August 28 a Local General Order was issued, giving permission for khaki to be worn by men when walking out up to 5 p.m., except on Sundays, and the further boon that men out of barracks at 5 p.m. need not return to change. It seems quite evident that some one in authority is amenable to reason, and under the circumstances I hope that by this time the second little matter in regard to dress at Malta, to which I have referred—i.e., the extension of the permission to all warrant officers to wear mufti instead of a privileged few—will be an accomplished fact.

The injustice done to time-expired men in India by keeping them waiting for months after the expiration of their period of service is apparently to be perpetuated again this season. The programme for the trooping season has just been issued, and according to the arrangements December 12 is the date of sailing of the first ship to take "details." Consequently many men will be compelled to serve months over their time without any compensation. It should surely not be impossible to devise some scheme whereby so gross a breach of contract could be obviated.

I gather from a letter written by a civilian correspondent that in cavalry regiments it is not an uncommon thing for an officer to have two, or possibly more, soldiers waiting upon him in the capacity of servants. My correspondent instances the case of a man of his acquaintance who has been taken from his military duties, much against his will, in order to act as a second groom to one of the officers. In this case, the servant's duty is simply to look after two polo ponies, so that it cannot by any stretch of imagination be considered as military duty. Is there any limit to the number of men who may be thus transformed from soldiers into grooms or stable-helps; or would it be open to any plutocrat in one of those cavalry regiments which make it a point of honour to "go the pace" in everything but soldiering to employ half the regiment as his menials?

An officer, to whom I have been indebted for many valuable hints on military matters, gives me the following reasons for the prevailing desire of both commissioned and non-commissioned officers to exchange their uniform for plain clothes whenever possible: (1) That uniform is far more expensive and more easily damaged than plain clothes; (2) that it is far less comfortable to wear; (3) that it makes the wearer exceeding conspicuous in a crowd, and draws on him an uncomfortable amount of attention, often uncomplimentary, from the lower classes. Reasons 1 and 2 could be easily got over—the first by making the uniform cheaper, or increasing the soldier's allowance of clothing, the second by making the uniform more comfortable. With regard to the third, as to which I had a long letter not many weeks back from a non-commissoned officer, it strikes me as possible that there would be very much less of these unpleasant attentions on the part of the public, if officers and N.C.O.s always appeared in public in their full war paint. No doubt the complaints of our warriors on this head are natural and reasonable, and that is one reason why, when I hear of a publican or anybody else insulting the Queen's uniform, I always hasten to pillory him. It strikes me, however, that the attentions paid to soldiers by the general public, whether in railway carriages or elsewhere, are as a rule more flattering than uncomplimentary; and that, on the whole, it does not require a very great deal of fortitude in order to put up with them.

A gallant warrior who is laid up in the Station Hospital at Eastbourne wants to know why things provided for the use and comfort of the patients are kept locked up in stores. What particularly disgusts him is the absence of such little articles as, for instance, egg-cups and spoons, so that when he gets an egg he has to take it in his hand and scoop out the contents with his fingers or his knife, a barbarous method of eating which is enough to spoil his appetite. Will somebody please look into the stores and bring out the spoons and other requisites to which sick Tommies are entitled under the hospital regulations?

Some few weeks back I called attention to the lack of newspapers provided for those unhappy members of the British Army who are condemned to serve their country at Port Blair, in the Andaman Islands. From a communication that I have just received from that part of the world, it would seem that there is a lamentable lack of provision all round for the comfort of the troops stationed there. The so-called library is a miserable apartment, containing only some thirty worm-eaten volumes, not one of which is complete, and the only furniture is two or three rickety forms and tables, not even a chair being provided. For a long time past it was impossible for the men to obtain any suppers at the coffee-shop, and when this was reformed it was only to the extent of making provision for some few of the men. Complaints were also made of the delay in paying the men, a circumstance of considerable significance, as the pay-sergeant was also canteen steward. There are many other minor complaints, and the state of things on the station would seem to call for inquiry. If there is a place in the whole world where everything that can be done should be done for the comfort of soldiers, I should think that place is the Andaman Islands.

The Admiralty have been curiously unfortunate of late in their purchases of tugs. The Stormcock was bought at an extravagant price, and then it was discovered that an expenditure of £4,000 would be necessary in order to make the vessel serviceable. The Crocodile, purchased for £7,500, has required an outlay of nearly £3,000, and she was in such a filthy condition (being thoroughly infested with vermin) that it was impossible for the crew who brought her round to Devonport from Liverpool to sleep on board. Indeed, the Crocodile is still in a very nasty state in this respect, although she has been cleaned and fumigated over and over again.

A petition to the Governor-General of India for those who have suffered from the high rates of passage in vogue between Europe and India is just now being extensively signed. Frequent reference has been made to this question in TRUTH and to the reason by which the system has been prolonged, viz., the fact that the P. & O. Company, by practically holding the monopoly of the mail contract, is in a position to dictate the terms upon which passengers shall be conveyed. The effect of this is that a second-class return passage between Bombay and Brindisi actually costs more than a first-class return passage between Bombay and Australia, although the latter journey is about 5,000 miles longer than the former. The petition advocates the abolition of the mail monopoly and the insertion of a clause in future mail contract agreements fixing minimum rates of passage-money between Europe and India in accordance with rates current in other parts of the world. If these recommendations were to be acted upon, it is evident that cheaper and more rapid communication between England and India would speedily become a reality.

For some time past a state of things most disgraceful to the authorities of the Ordnance Survey has prevailed in the office at Southampton. The process of preparing zinc plates is carried on in a shed, the roof of which ranges from about 9 ft. to 12 ft. in height, the place possessing the most inadequate arrangements for ventilation. From twenty to twenty-five men are employed there. Various acids—sulphuric, hydrochloric, and sometimes nitric—are used in treating the zinc. Other chemicals which give off noxious fumes, such as saturated solution of caustic potash, are also used. There are two hot-water boilers with gas stoves continually alight. Wet sand is also constantly being dried in the place, and the smell given off is at times intolerable. The condition of the atmosphere under these circumstances may be readily imagined, and, apart from the discomfort arising from it, can hardly fail to have an injurious effect upon the health of the men. No Factory or Sanitary Inspector ever enters the place, and I presume no such officer has any jurisdiction over it; but this state of things only imposes the stronger obligation upon the Government authorities to keep their workshops in a wholesome condition. The "model employer," that we hear so much about, would probably have been heavily fined long ago, if he had been subject to the ordinary law. The men employed in this pestilential hole are, many of them, earning not more than 18s. a week, and only two of them are receiving the maximum rate of 4s. per diem—a miserable pittance enough for work under such noxious conditions. It would be interesting to know whether any definite facts can be adduced respecting the health of the men thus employed.

Every requirement for Furnishing tastefully at least expense is amply illustrated in the Galleries and Catalogues of HAMPTON & SONS, Furnishers & Decorators, Pall Mall East, S.W.

From a progressive point of view there is little to be said for the last Annual Report on the Post Office, recently made public. The salient item, which is presumably considered sufficient to cover any shortcomings, is the substantial profit earned during the year of over three millions and a half. But those who look for promises for the future, in the shape of an Imperial penny postage rate, the omission from all charge of the address in sixpenny telegrams, or other similar salutary reforms, will be doomed to bitter disappointment. The fact is the Department may just now be said to be looking after itself. Without questioning his will, the Duke of Norfolk is incapable of grappling with the workings and the wants of such a large establishment, and as innovations mean increased work for permanent officials, our Post Office is likely to be a "Sleepy Hollow" for some time to come.

In the Post-office at Bedford a place has been found, by somebody's influence, for a female clerk, who, though she has not been properly "appointed," received the same commencing salary as those who are "appointed," and shortly afterwards was granted an increase, again without passing any examination. This lady not only blocks the chance of promotion of a duly qualified telegraphist, but she is favoured in various ways, one instance being that she was recently given a week's leave of absence at the expense of the Department to attend a relative's funeral, while, about the same time, another clerk (a male) had a difficulty in obtaining two hours' leave at his own expense to follow his father to the grave. Favouritism of this kind is naturally irritating to the rest of the employees and it ought to be checked.

Hewetsons, Tottenham Court-road, London, send their Illustrated Catalogue post free, and it is acknowledged to be the best Furnishing Guide extant.

It is quite twelve months since a considerable amount of attention was directed to the "snowball" emanating from a Miss Brown, of Hanville, Kasee County, Illinois, U.S.A., in which that misguided individual appealed for used postage stamps, with the object of obtaining an entry of a cripple into a medical institution in the United States. Yet, in spite of the wide-spread publicity and equally wide-spread condemnation given to the project, and the endeavours of every one concerned to stop its progress, this "snowball" is still rolling merrily onward, India being at the present moment the field of operations. There can be no more effective object-lesson of the imbecility which conceives such a means of collection than this particular "snowball," which is now nothing but a nuisance to its originator and fulfils no end but that of swelling the Post Office revenues.

A traveller at Munich the other day addressed a German post-card to London, where, on its delivery, a fee of 5d., being double the postage at the letter-rate, was charged. The post-card had been treated as unpaid by the Bavarian Post Office, and St. Martin's-le-Grand has explained that this was done "because German Imperial post-cards are not available in Bavaria." I suppose this is one of the little matters in which that State likes to show its independence of the German Empire. It is an absurd and anomalous state of things, however, and the King of Bavaria and the Emperor William should see whether they cannot agree to put an end to it.

For many years past an old man named Terrell has been a familiar figure to passers-by the Park gate at Hyde Park Corner, where he has picked up a precarious livelihood by the sale of newspapers. He lately disappeared from his old haunt, and for a time he was in the workhouse. It appears that he was forced into this last refuge of the poor and friendless through the action of the authorities in suddenly withdrawing the privilege of affixing his contents bills and papers to the Park railings, which had been freely accorded to him since 1879 or 1880. This step was evidently not taken in compliance with any general edict against the vending of newspapers outside Park gates or in other public places, for the occupiers of similar stands are still to be seen in their accustomed places. Nor does there seem to have been any complaint against Terrell on the score of his character and conduct. Indeed, I believe the police expressed their regret at being obliged to interfere with him. Why, then, has the old fellow been deprived of the privilege he has so long enjoyed? His case strikes me, at present, as a very hard one; but there may be some official justification for his treatment. If there is, I should like to hear it.

I take the following from a local report of a recent meeting of the Swaffham Guardians:—

The relieving officer reported that Louisa Rose, of Hilborough, had been discharged from the County Asylum as fully restored, but that a great deal of difficulty had arisen in the case, in consequence of the father's employer forbidding him to receive his daughter, or to have her in any part of Hilborough. One of the Guardians had assisted in persuading the father and mother to take the girl to an adjoining village, where she had been able to find shelter for a few nights, but had now had to go to Watton. At a later stage the father applied to the Board for pecuniary assistance, as, in consequence of not being allowed to have her at home, it became so expensive that he could not afford to maintain her. As, however, the girl was discharged as cured and was reasonably able-bodied, the Guardians could not assist.

This bald narrative relates to one of the most amazing manifestations of landlord tyranny that have ever come under my notice during a long experience. Let me fill in the details of the story. The employer referred to above is Mr. Joseph Trueman Mills. He is a J.P. and a Director of the Great Eastern Railway Company. The whole of the village of Hilborough belongs to him, and so also does the village of Little Cressingham. The parents of the girl Rose are employed by Mr. Mills as caretakers at Hilborough Hall. They have stated that they were prepared to receive their daughter on her return, and had arranged for her to reside at a cottage in the vicinity of the Hall. However that may be, just before she was discharged from the asylum, the man Rose received a letter from Mr. Mills' agent informing him that the girl would not be permitted to live at the Hall "or any house in Hilborough," and that if he could not arrange for her to be kept elsewhere, he must leave his place as caretaker. This seems to have terrorised the parents out of any natural affection they may have had for their daughter, and when the girl arrived at the nearest railway station, six miles from Hilborough, they resolutely refused to take her home, and it was only with the greatest difficulty that they were prevailed upon to conduct her to a neighbouring village and give her a few shillings to pay for a week's lodgings. So anxious were they not to incur the displeasure of their employer that they took a long roundabout way to this village in order that their daughter should not even pass through his sacred estate. Singularly enough, the woman with whom Louisa Rose has now found a temporary home is said to have been herself compelled to leave Hilborough some time ago, because she would not give up keeping a pony and cart!

If the reason of this unfortunate girl had been again unhinged by her extraordinary reception on leaving the asylum, it would not have been at all surprising. For the fact that she has escaped that misfortune no thanks are due to those who were bound by every tie of affection and responsibility to shelter and protect her. The conduct of the parents, even allowing for the difficult position they were placed in, was indefensible. But what shall be said of the individual whose threat impelled them to take so unnatural a course? He had a right to say that the girl should not live with her parents at the Hall, though, in the circumstances, most people will consider it would have been a harsh proceeding to do so. But to absolutely forbid her residence anywhere in the same village, under pain of her parent's dismissal from his service, was nothing less than barbarous. What motive Mr. Mills can have had is simply inconceivable, though if he likes to send me any explanation I shall be glad to give publicity to it.

The following story has been sent to me by the Chairman of the Town Commissioners of Tipperary, who vouches for its accuracy. A private in the Seaforth Highlanders, lately stationed in the town, died there, and was buried in the graveyard attached to the Protestant Church. Last week his widow journeyed to Tipperary from Cardiff with the pious purpose of having a memorial stone placed over his grave. An initial difficulty was to discover the grave, but after some trouble, and an expense she could ill afford, this was done. The widow then arranged for the erection of the headstone she had provided, only to be informed at the last moment that it could not be admitted to the churchyard until she paid a fee of £1. 2s. 6d. Being at the end of her resources it was impossible for her to meet such a demand, and so, for the time at any rate, she had to abandon the object of her visit. My informant characterises this as a cruel exaction, and few, I think, will disagree with him. The authorities of the churchyard have, I suppose, a legal right to levy this tax upon the bereaved, but it is little to their credit that they should have insisted upon doing so in such a case as this.

Wishing to give me a higher opinion of the management and usefulness of reformatories, a correspondent forwards a copy of the entry two Government Inspectors made in the visitors' book on a recent visit to a reformatory in the Midlands. It is a favourable report, but for two reasons it does not make much impression upon me. In the first place, I have never supposed or suggested that all reformatories are badly conducted. Secondly, my faith in the present system of inspection has been so much shaken that I attach little importance to such reports. One of the most disquieting features of the scandals that occurred a year or two back was the revelation of the ease with which the worst abuses could be concealed from the inspectors.

Can nothing be done to stir up the Darbys and Joans, who are forced by stress of poverty to find their last shelter but one in the Purton Workhouse, to demand the measure of justice the Legislature has accorded to them? I find from the report of a recent discussion of the Cricklade and Wootton Bassett Board of Guardians, who are the ruling body of the workhouse in question, that the rule in force is that an inmate should only be allowed to see her husband or his wife for one half hour per week. In one case the Guardians have thought fit to vary the rule, fearing the expense consequent upon the couple demanding the right secured to them. But what about the others?

There was an angry debate at the last meeting of the Preston Guardians over a proposal that laundry machinery should be introduced into the workhouse, and several members protested in vigorous language against a change which would allow the female inmates "to pose as ladies, instead of being kept to hard work!" However, the proposal was carried, and very properly, seeing that, in consequence of the present inadequate laundry arrangements, no fewer than 400 male paupers had been kept in bed on Sundays owing to scarcity of shirts.

Mediterranean and Baltic Cruises for Eighteen Guineas, Conducted by Mr. Woolrych Perowne, on the s.s. "Midnight Sun" (3,188 tons).—Particulars, Secretary, 5, Endsleigh-gdns. Ldn. N.W.

For some reason or other the following appears to have been omitted from the usual Police-court reports in my daily contemporaries:—

At the Worship-street Police-court yesterday, Thomas Stordy was summoned by the East London Bread Company for non-payment of his bread-rate.

The Solicitor of the Company produced the Act of Parliament, showing that the Company had the power to levy a bread-rate assessed on the value of a house. The defendant, who occupied a flat on a second floor, had refused to pay his rate. Under the circumstances, the Company had the right to cut off his bread, but they were unwilling to take extreme measures, and as it was understood that Stordy was, in a sense, a ringleader, to whom many foolish persons looked for guidance, they had thought it better that the case should be tried in that Court.

The Magistrate: Well, defendant, what have you to say?

Defendant: In the first place, your worship, I haven't had the bread. This summons is for bread up to Christmas, and we're only in August.

The Solicitor: That is so, your worship. The Act gives us power to demand the rate in advance.

The Magistrate: Anything else, defendant?

Defendant: Then why do they charge me more than the man on the ground floor?

The Solicitor: The Act gives us power to charge an extra 15 per cent. for high service.

The Magistrate: And high service is ——?

The Solicitor: Delivery of bread 10 ft. above the level of the pavement.

Defendant: Your worship, for six weeks the Company didn't deliver an ounce of bread, and yet they claimed the rate all the same.

The Solicitor: Quite right; our ovens were out of order—of course they wear out in time—but the Act allows us to levy the rate, supply or no supply.

Defendant: Well, but when your ovens were in order again, the supply wasn't regular.

The Solicitor: It is true that for a time we gave an "intermittent supply." There was an unusual scarcity of wheat, but by using horse beans and potatoes we were able to give half the usual supply. This would have been more than ample, but the waste by ratepayers is really terrible. Why, at the time of the greatest scarcity, the children of this very man were seen feeding sparrows in Victoria Park with bread, our bread!

Defendant: It come out of their breakfasts, anyway.

The Magistrate: Really, defendant, this is reprehensible. At a time of scarcity of bread your family waste it in this way.

The Solicitor: In consequence of this wanton waste, several families had to go short for days.

The Magistrate (to the defendant): Have you anything more to say?

Defendant: What's the good of my saying anything?

The Magistrate: I am afraid it would be a waste of words to say much to you, defendant. You must pay the rate and £3. 2s. 6d. costs, or go to prison for a month. I advise you to pay the money, and not to let me see you again. And let me recommend you to cultivate a feeling of sympathy with the Company and its chief baker and other officials, who at great cost and inconvenience supply you with a necessity of life. Where would you be if the Company did not supply you with bread? And yet you have the gross indecency to grumble!

Stordy refused to pay, and was removed to the cells.

Concerning the imprisonment of fishing apprentices at Grimsby, I have had a letter from a gentleman whose precise views on the subject I do not quite understand. He has just returned from a trip on a steamer which had on board a number of fishermen, all of whom served their apprenticeship at Grimsby. Three of them said they were sent to gaol there for not joining their vessels; and they all agreed that they deserved the punishment. My correspondent seems to be of the same opinion, for he refers to the loss that arises when a smack is prevented sailing at the appointed time through an apprentice's absence. But then he goes on to say that he thinks "the reason so many of the lads run away is not so much any ill-treatment that they receive on board the smacks and steamers, but the monotony of their existence at sea." Even accepting this explanation of the constant desertions, it seems to me that the apprenticeship business cannot be regarded as a satisfactory one from any point of view but that of the employers. As I have repeatedly urged, the fact that it causes so many youths to abscond, and if they are caught, to become gaol birds, is in itself sufficient to condemn the system; and so long as this continues I shall not fail to protest against it.

The new rule which has just come into force in the Royal Irish Constabulary, giving half the vacancies in the rank of the District Inspectors to head constables, appears to be a good one, so far as it goes, but it does not go far enough. Three head constables are to be appointed by competitive examination, and three under the old system of recommendation. But it seems that only officers under a certain age are allowed to enter for the examination, and the senior head constables are completely shut out from the competition, so that any of them who are not favoured by the sort of influence which is required for promotion in the old way are no better off now than they were before the introduction of the rule. To limit the competitive examination in this way seems both an absurdity and an injustice.

Owing to their arbitrary and unreasonable proceedings in various cases, the police at Aston have of late come in for a good deal of criticism in the local newspapers. The officer in charge of the force is one Walker, and for any journalist to presume to censure him or his minions is evidently to his mind "flat burglary as ever was committed." His wrath exploded with terrific effect at the Police-court last week. The reporters asked him to allow them, as usual, to see the charge-sheet. "No, I shall not give you anything," replied the indignant Dogberry; and then he proceeded to relieve his overcharged feelings. "There was not," he declared, "a paper in Birmingham—he meant a daily paper—the Post, the Gazette, the Daily Mail and the Argus, but what at some time or other their representatives, or members of their staff or relations, had been locked up at Aston."

This observation was impertinent in both the classic and the common acceptation of the word. Of course, nobody acquainted with the Birmingham Press will believe it, though even if the truculent Walker could substantiate his statement it would not signify much, for the police at Aston have shown themselves capable of locking up people on any or no pretext. But while my contemporaries can afford to treat Superintendent Walker's outburst with contempt, it is a serious matter that Aston should be under the dominion of an officer with such a temper as he appears to possess. I hope the Chief Constable of Warwickshire will recognise this, and lose no time in investigating the complaints which have been made against the police in this division of the county.

If you want to entirely Furnish your House or select any article of Furniture or Carpet, &c., send for Hewetsons' Illustrated Priced Catalogue.—Hewetsons, Tottenham Court-road, London

The County Court Acts do not, I believe, expressly direct the Judges to give preference to their own sons in the distribution of their patronage. Judge Turner and Judge Bedwell apparently look upon this as an oversight on the part of the Legislature which it is their duty to remedy. The first-named Judge has just bestowed the Registrarship of the Stockton and Middlesbrough County Courts—a post worth £1,300 a year—upon his son Mr. E. M. Turner. Hitherto this gentleman has held the Registrarship of the Darlington County Court, which his father conferred upon him soon after he was admitted as a solicitor. The other berth, however, is more valuable, and so, as a matter of course, he gets it the moment it becomes vacant. Judge Bedwell has appointed his son, Mr. Hugh Bedwell, a solicitor of some five or six years' standing, to the Registrarship of the Malton County Court. Another of his Honour's sons is the Registrar of the Scarborough County Court; and if he has any more we shall doubtless, in due course, see them provided with comfortable berths. These flagrant jobs have aroused great indignation, especially among members of the legal profession; but the Judges know what they are about. The only person who could call them to account and make things unpleasant is the Lord High Jobber, and he can hardly blame these minor judicial luminaries for following his own example.

On the occasion of the amazing proceedings at Caerphilly Brewster Sessions, which I described last week, no fewer than thirteen J.P.s were present to demonstrate their ignorance of the law, and their contempt for the judicial practice of hearing both sides of a case before arriving at a decision. On the 1st inst., it became the duty of the same Bench to deal with the ordinary business of petty sessions, but only one magistrate put in an appearance, and he only did so because he happened to have been summoned as a witness in a case. Efforts were made by the police to obtain a second magistrate, but without success, and after nearly two hours' delay, the business had to be adjourned until the next sitting, thus causing great inconvenience and no small expense to something like a hundred interested parties, including several professional men. It is possible that after the ridicule and contempt they had brought upon themselves a week previously the Great Unpaid at Caerphilly were ashamed to show their faces on the Bench. A more probable explanation, however, may be found in the fact that this sitting of the court was, unfortunately, fixed for St. Partridge's Day. Whether shame or shooting kept their worships away, the incident affords another reason for bringing the conduct of this Bench to the notice of the Lord Chancellor.

A very harsh and unjustifiable course appears to have been adopted in the case of a bargeman named Plant, who was before the Reading Bench on Monday week on a charge of assaulting his son, a youth of sixteen, on the previous Friday. The defence was that the man had only properly corrected the lad for a serious fault, and the Bench dismissed the case. But while Plant was thus acquitted by the magistrates, he had already undergone the punishment of two days' imprisonment, having been arrested on a warrant at midday on Saturday and confined in a cell at the police-station till Monday. Plant's address was known, and it is a scandalous thing that he should have been treated in this way when the case was obviously one in which the interests of justice would have been equally well served by the issuing of a summons.

The Mayor of Boston has again distinguished himself. Last Friday one Parkinson was charged with the atrocious crime of wandering abroad and lodging in the open air, "not having any visible means of subsistence." As a matter of fact the defendant had 2d. in his possession, but I suppose this was not a sufficient amount to be regarded as "visible means of subsistence," nor do I see how a man so situated could be expected to pay the penalty of 4s. 6d., including costs, which the Bench imposed. It was in announcing this decision that the Mayor came out with another of his delightful little speeches. The defendant was fined, he explained, "not so much for this offence, but because he had twenty-five previous convictions against him." I know plenty of magistrates proceed on this pernicious principle of punishing a man over again for his past misdeeds, but it is not often that they avow the fact with the Mayor of Boston's ingenuous bluntness.

At Bradford last week a man named Henry Jackson was charged with having ill-treated his son, a boy of eight. It appeared that the child had been drowned under circumstances which pointed to suicide, and, according to the statements of the mother at the inquest, he had been continually ill-treated by the defendant. He was, it was alleged, exceptionally cruel to the boy a day or two before he was drowned; and a witness asserted that on being told that his son had committed suicide the defendant remarked "that's all right," subsequently saying that "he was very glad." The newspaper report states that the Bench dismissed the charge, as they did not think the evidence "sufficient to warrant a conviction." It may be that the report is incomplete, but if the outline of the case which is given is anything like correct, one can only wonder what amount of evidence these justices would really consider necessary "to warrant a conviction."

It will be well within the memory of my readers that I have on several occasions found it necessary to deal with a white-washing letter that had been obtained by the man Benham, of the Jubilee Hospital, from one Wm. Martin Baker, a solicitor practising under the name of Montague Scott & Baker, at 10, Gray's-inn-square. The whole circumstances of the case were of so gross a nature that I felt compelled to bring them under the notice of the Incorporated Law Society, who promptly took action in the matter. I attended upon subpœna before the Committee of the Incorporated Law Society, though I am glad to say that they did not find it necessary to make any very extravagant demand upon my time. However, the inquiry into the facts was completed, and, as I understand, the report was being drafted when any further proceedings were rendered unnecessary by Baker being struck off the rolls upon another charge. In one way I regret this result, inasmuch as it would have been a matter of sincere pleasure to me to have been the means of removing so pernicious an individual from the list of practising solicitors and so limiting his future opportunities of mischief. Nevertheless, I have not the faintest doubt but that had the previous case failed, the one in which I was more particularly interested would have brought about the desired result. Meanwhile, the incident throws a flood of light upon Benham's attempts to bolster up his reputation, since it is from the ranks of discreditable persons of the character of Mr. William Martin Baker that he finds it necessary to call witnesses as to his own character.

Sundry letters have reached me in reference to my recent note respecting the constant cheating of customers which goes on at a well-known restaurant in the City where the waiters receive no remuneration whatever and so are under a direct inducement to obtain their income in this way. The system is not, of course, confined to one establishment. One way of getting it stopped, or, at any rate, of effectively exposing the proprietors who thus practically compel their employees to be dishonest to the public, is suggested in a communication from the Amalgamated Waiters' Society. It is that some of the parties who are victimised should lay the facts before the magistrates at the October Licensing Sessions, and see what they have to say about such a system.

Can any one give me any information about the occupants of Staunton Villa, Albany-road, Southsea? I ask because from this address numbers of appeals to purchase worthless pieces of lace or needlework are sent out over different signatures. The latest I have seen purports to come from a Mrs. Sheter, who describes herself as "being left with a large family and a very small income," and expects in consequence total strangers to purchase her worthless handiwork. From my knowledge of Leigh Sampson and others who have been mentioned in TRUTH as resorting to similar methods for the sale of their wares, I find that this particular device is an extremely profitable one, and I should not be at all surprised to learn that the occupants of Staunton Villa are managing to secure a fairly luxurious existence by means of it.

THE HERNIA INSTITUTE, 489, Oxford-st., London, W., absolutely CURES RUPTURE in from three to six weeks. Highest testimonials. Pamphlets and consultations free.

My Legal Pillory for this week includes, as usual, a sentence of imprisonment on a fishing apprentice at Grimsby; though on this occasion the defendant was charged with doing some trifling damage to the smack-owner's property at the apprentices' home, instead of with the familiar offence of disobedience to orders and neglecting to go to sea. It will be seen from another case at the same court that while the Grimsby Shallows thus award a fortnight's hard labour to a youth who wrenches two bars off a window, they are content to impose a fine of 42s. on a ruffian who thrashes a woman, kicks her, jumps upon her and breaks one of her ribs—a very effective illustration of the relative heinousness in magisterial eyes of damage to property and damage to the person. As to the rest of the list I would specially call attention to the lenity with which assaults on women have been treated at a number of courts, while on the other hand vagrancy, poaching, and petty larcenies continue to be punished with undiminished severity:—

Grimsby Borough Police-court. Before the Mayor (Alderman E. Palmer), Messrs. W. Jackson, C. Morton and W. Southworth. Henry Loftus charged with assaulting Elizabeth Henitt. The parties lived in the same house, and complainant stated that defendant went to her room late at night, struck her between the eyes and in the mouth, and when she fell to the ground he jumped upon her and kicked her. One of her ribs was broken. Fined £2. 2s, including costs.

Kirkcaldy Police-court. Before Bailie Bennet. Thomas Hume, convicted of assaulting his mother, an old woman of 76, by striking her on the body and face with his clenched fist. Fined 20s.

Sevenoaks Police-court. George Reeves, charged with cruelty to a horse. Defendant was driving a waggonette containing seven persons, and the horse was completely exhausted. He nevertheless severely beat the animal with the butt end of a whip, covering it with weals, some of which were stated to be as much as 3 ft. long. Fined £2 and costs.

Kilmarnock Sheriff-court. Thomas Healey pleaded guilty to assaulting his wife and step-daughter. He kicked his wife in the abdomen and struck her on the head with his fists, and he gave his step-daughter a blow in the mouth. He had been previously convicted. Fined £2.

Ardrossan Police-court. Patrick Burns pleaded guilty to assaulting his wife. He went home drunk, and without any provocation caught hold of his wife, threw her to the ground, and kicked her brutally about the legs and body. Fined £2 or thirty days.

Kirkintilloch Police-court. John O'Neill, convicted of assaulting his wife. He tore her clothes to ribbons and cut up her boots, and when she left the house owing to his conduct, he overtook her, threw her down in the street, lifted her up again and threw her violently down a second time. Fined 15s.

Grimsby Borough Police-court. Before the Mayor, Aldermen Louth and Jackson, Messrs. W. S. Letten and J. M. Dennis. William H. Reed, fishing apprentice, charged with wilful damage by wrenching two bars off a window at the apprentices' home. Fourteen days.

Saffron Walden County Petty Sessions. Before Messrs. E. B. Gibson, J. Bell, and H. Byng. Arthur Goodman, labourer, charged with stealing two faggots, value 4d. Fourteen days.

Long Eaton Petty Sessions. Before Messrs. J. Orchard and A. Marriott. George Bingham, Henry Hopewell, and James Ellendar, charged under the Poaching Prevention Act with being found in possession of fourteen rabbits, and nets, and bags. Hopewell fined £1. 6s.; Bingham, £2. 6s.; and Ellendar, £5 and costs.

Derby Borough Police-court. Before the Mayor (Mr. H. Boam), Sir John Smith, Messrs. W. H. Marsdon and A. Longdon. John Pearson, charged with wandering abroad and lodging in the open air in King-street, and being without visible means of subsistence. Seven days.

Hay Police-court. Before Colonel Thomas and Mr. F. R. Trumper. Richard Chipps and Albert Evans charged with poaching. Six weeks each, and a further six months in default of finding sureties.

Totnes County Police-court. Before Messrs. R. H. Watson and J. Hamlyn. Ellen Macken, cook, pleaded guilty to stealing a table-cloth and six dusters belonging to her employer. They were found in a locked box. The prosecutor asked the Bench to be lenient with the prisoner. One month.

Coventry County Petty Sessions. Before Messrs. R. Lant, T. R. Vickers, and Colonel Woodlcombe-Adams. Benjamin Edwards, charged with assaulting Charles Cox. He pulled complainant to the ground, kicked him in the head and back, and bit him near the eye. Fined £1 and costs.

Blackburn Borough Police-court. Before Messrs. J. Hoyle, H. Lewis, and J. A. Watson. David Allen, charged with assaulting his wife. The parties were separated, and defendant went to the house where his wife was living, struck her several times with his fist, knocked her over a chair, and then kicked her. Fined 20s. and costs.

Aldeburgh Petty Sessions. Before the Mayor, Messrs. J. G. S. Anderson, W. H. Hall, and H. Cowell. John Rose Davey, charged with cruelty by working a pony while in an unfit state. The animal was suffering from bad wounds upon which the harness pressed; it was also afflicted with an abscess, both knees were broken, and there were many sores about its body. Defendant had previously been cautioned. Fined £1 and 9s. costs.

Spittlegate (Grantham Police-court. Before Lieut-Colonel C. J. B. Parker. Walter Bailey, Joseph Bailey, and Elizabeth Bailey, charged with stealing turnips valued at 3d. from a field. Seven days each.

Kettering Police-court. Before Messrs. J. T. Stockburn, T. Wallis, and F. Barton. Charles Prestige, George Willis, and Ambrose Mabbutt, charged with poaching. Two months each.

Banbury Petty Sessions. Before Messrs. A. T. C. Cartwright, J. F. Starkey, W. Anker, and P. S. Edmunds. Frederick Dainty, charged with stealing apples, valued at 2d., from an orchard. One month.

Chichester City Police-court. Before the Mayor (Mr. E. Prior) and Mr. E. M. Street. Emily Day, charged with sleeping out and being without visible means of subsistence. Seven days.

Mr. Rider Haggard has rendered a public service, and I hope at the same time gained a useful experience, by his prosecution of Valentine Rose, alias Fabian Ross, at Manchester last week. The piteous tale set forth by this rascal in a begging letter so worked upon the feelings of the unsuspecting novelist that he sent him a sovereign. Not content with this, Rose asked for more, whereupon Mr. Haggard made some inquiries, and the swindler was arrested. He is an old hand at this business. I exposed him myself so long ago as 1892, when he was inditing his touching appeals from Ashton-under-Lyne, though he was actually under police supervision at the time. He has been convicted more than once since then, and now he has got another three months, at the end of which he will probably resume his old game. It is a game, however, which he and scores of similar impostors would find to be not worth the candle, if only charitable people like Mr. Haggard would take the trouble to make inquiries before bestowing their bounty upon any stranger with the knack of telling a plausible story of distress.

I see that this man Rose is described in some of the papers as a "journalist." He has about as much right to be called one as my printers' devil has. But nowadays it is becoming the fashion for every man who gets into trouble to claim that he is a journalist, while all sorts of disreputable females pose as "actresses." Why newspapers should help to libel the two professions by so describing prisoners in their Police-court reports I cannot understand.

Whether it is that recent climatic conditions have rendered indoor pursuits desirable, or whether the great army of beggars has returned to its homes with renewed energies from its annual holiday at the seaside, I am not prepared to say; but the fact remains that during the past week I have been deluged with inquiries respecting beggars of all classes and conditions. Some of them I know, some of them are new to me; but in regard to one and all, I can safely say that much more deserving recipients of charity are to be found without any very extended search.

Take, for instance, the appeal which a certain Duncan E. Mackay issues from 1, Myrtle Villas, Temple-road, Hounslow. Mackay writes that he is in temporary pecuniary difficulties, and bases his claim for charity on the grounds that the educational classes to which he holds the post of instructor are closed during the summer months; that he is a successful "speaker on political matters pertaining to the Conservative cause," and that he has a sick wife and five young children dependent upon him. I find that for the past twenty years "temporary pecuniary difficulties" have been invariable in their attendance upon Duncan E. Mackay. In 1887 he was begging for money to release a poem he had written from the hands of the publisher, and in the following year because he was out of work and his landlord was about to distrain upon his effects. In 1893 he sent out piteous appeals because his wife was "hourly expecting confinement," and in 1894 he made a bid for practical sympathy with the announcement that his "dear baby boy, aged eight months, has died." No domestic incident is too slight a peg for Mackay to hang upon it one of his numerous appeals, and he seeks sympathy—upon a strictly cash basis—from all the world. One curious point about Mackay is the fact that the instructorship to which he refers is a semi-official appointment at Chiswick, Brentford, and Hounslow Police Stations, for the coaching of police constables in the necessary promotion examinations. I should suggest that if for one occasion an alteration of the respective rôles of master and pupils could be brought about, the result would have an eminently educative value to Duncan E. Mackay.

Another pertinacious beggar at the present moment is the Rev. James W. Smith, of Bourney Rectory, Roscrea, Ireland. His appeals are a really amazing example of clerical impudence. To one gentleman from whom he has regularly begged for the past seven years he makes the modest request for funds to purchase any or all of the following articles:—

A Brazen Eagle or Lectern.
New Books.
Cathedral Glass in 6 Windows.
Furniture for Vestry.
2 Oak Cathedral Chairs.
3 Curtains, Brass Rods and Bars.

In this instance, as in a number of others brought under my notice, the gentleman to whom the appeal was made has not the faintest interest of any sort in Ireland, and has never been at Roscrea in his life. For the Rev. J. W. Smith to write that he is "constrained" to such a course is an additional impertinence. I wonder what he would think if I wrote him that I was constrained to appeal to him for new furniture for my office. Yet the justification is in both cases the same.

There are a good many clerics of all denominations, however, who imagine that the wants of their parishes justify appeals to utter strangers, and so do much to foster begging-letter writing. A very striking instance of this is to be found in the following letter from a Miss Florence Firmstone, of which nearly every post brings me lithographed copies :—

Winchester.

Dear Sir,—Will you kindly send me 1s. towards helping a deserving case? For thirty years a nurse has been engaged in sick nursing, and is universally respected. Till lately she has had to help support her mother, so her savings are small. I hope, by means of these letters, to augment them and buy her a small old age Pension in the Nurse's Pension Fund. Do send me 1s. I have now got £145. It seems hard that such a good, self-denying life should end in the workhouse.—Yours truly,

Florence Firmstone.

You may remember my name in connection with the building of my father's church, St. Paul's, Winchester.

It is evident from the postscript to the foregoing epistle where Miss Firmstone graduated in the art of begging-letter writing. About the lady's bona fides I have no information, nor have I any wish to question them in the slightest degree, for to my mind the mere fact that such an appeal is sent out broadcast is sufficient to condemn it utterly. There can be no excuse for sending such an appeal to an absolute stranger to all the parties, and by so doing Miss Firmstone takes up a position precisely analogous to that of the beggar's assistant, who leads his master to a well-frequented spot, carefully arranges his sores to catch the eye of passers-by, and stands with outstretched hand to receive their pennies. I would put it to Miss Firmstone whether such a position is altogether a desirable one. I can assure her that in the opinion of a large number of my correspondents her action is open to considerable misconstruction.

Many of my readers will, doubtless, remember the exposure in Truth in January and December last of a Farm Pupil Agency which owed its inception to the arch-swindler Pointing, styled itself the International Emigration Association, Limited, and had an address at Albany-buildings, 47, Victoria-street, Westminster. The manager of this precious concern was a Mr. A. L. Atkinson. Now the International Emigration Association has disappeared from Victoria-street, only, however, to be resurrected, under the title of the "International Emigration and Colonisation Company," at Dacre House, 5, Arundel-street, Strand. Of this Company, as of its predecessor, Mr. A. L. Atkinson is still the leading spirit, and he is at the present moment actively engaged, with the assistance of the Evening Standard, in touting for cadets at £22 a head to join his next personally-conducted party, which is announced to leave Liverpool on October 22, per Dominion Royal Mail steamer Canada, for Montreal. To any one who might be contemplating the acceptance of the costly but doubtful benefits of this Company I can only reiterate facts I have frequently stated before. To ship a youth from Liverpool to Montreal costs £5. 10s. A pound or two more will take him to places where plenty of decent farmers will be only too glad of his services, and an inquiry of the Agent-General for Canada at Westminster will secure him advice and recommendations to such free of charge. It is evident, therefore, that any one who pays Atkinson the fee he asks is simply making him a present of some £15.

This latter point is made abundantly clear in a particularly specious circular which is included amongst the literature forwarded to applicants by the International Emigration and Colonisation Company. In this circular, which purports to be a "Caution" against "Mushroom Agencies" and "Private Advertisers," it is stated that the special object in view in the formation of the Company "was to establish a trustworthy and reliable medium for sending out to Canada, and elsewhere, farm cadets, without the payment of premiums"—to any one but Messrs. Atkinson & Co., the circular should have added, in order to be strictly accurate. Whatever excuse there may be for paying a premium to the farmer—and the Canadian Government have publicly announced that there is none—there is still less excuse for handing over sums of money to agencies like this of Atkinson's for services which are absolutely valueless.

An advertisement which has been appearing very frequently of late in nearly all the leading newspapers makes an offer of a "very powerful six-guinea binocular, with twelve lenses, twenty-five miles' range, fitted with sun-shades; in leather sling case complete, unsoiled," for 35s., the address given being Mrs. B., 38, Willes-road, Kentish Town, N.W. Having my suspicions as to the genuineness of this bargain, I have taken the trouble to investigate it. Mrs. B. I find is a myth, and 38, Willes-road is merely an accommodation address. However, an application brought a speedy response from a Mrs. T. Fielding, of "The Limes," Great Yarmouth, whose name will no doubt be familiar to those who remember my exposure of the cutlery swindle some little time ago. I have obtained one of the "Powerful Six-Guinea Binoculars" and submitted it to experts, and the universal decision is that to so characterise such a race-glass as this is nothing less than an impudent falsehood. There can be no doubt that the price asked, 35s., shows a very good margin of profit, and further, that the glasses are specially manufactured for this particular form of trade. Under these circumstances it seems scarcely necessary to warn any intending purchasers that they would, instead of securing a bargain, merely become the possessors of an article at its full value, and one which is likely besides to prove of an exceedingly unsatisfactory nature.

Some months ago I had occasion to publish a warning against an impudent advertising swindle carried on by some persons calling themselves variously Mason & Co., Mason-Smith, Mason-Roberts, and Smith & Co., all of 145, Fleet-street. This much-titled firm is again particularly active, though experience, probably, has led them to make some slight alteration in their methods.

The bait is an innocent-looking advertisement offering employment to those willing and able to address circulars and to copy. In response to an answer to such an advertisement the following circular is received :—

Agent's Address :—A., 112, Graham-road, Hackney, London, N.E.

Dear Sir or Madam,—In reply to your inquiry respecting the employment advertised by me, I should state that I am engaged by Messrs. Mason & Co., publishers, of Smith's, 145, Fleet-street, London. Your handwriting being satisfactory, they will be prepared to accept your application. The employment they offer can be engaged in entirely at home, without any canvassing, and consists of copying addresses, inserting announcements, &c. Messrs. Mason & Co. think it necessary to mention that they have no connection with rubber stamp dealers, or any other firms who offer higher salaries than their agents ever receive.

For a Specimen Copy of the Book, value 1s., a fee of 1s. is required, which will be returned in full immediately you take up the employment. Messrs. Mason & Co. are obliged to charge this small fee to applicants owing to many persons replying to their advertisements who do not intend to work, but are merely trying to obtain something for nothing. On my receiving 1s. postal order or thirteen stamps, and 1d. stamp extra for postage, I will forward the necessary amount to Mason & Co., who will send you the Specimen Copy with full instructions, and give you an appointment.—Yours faithfully, (Unsigned).

Persons sending their shillings in reply to this circular get a book of "Useful Recipes and Prescriptions," and instructions to publish in some newspaper an advertisement similar to the one described above. On receipt of the answers to this advertisement the agent is to post to the senders a circular similar to that quoted, to make a list of those who take the bait and forward their shillings, each of whom in his turn is expected to become an agent in the same way. It is difficult to imagine that many could thus be deluded into parting with a shilling. Yet a gentleman who had the curiosity to call at 145, Fleet-street, the other day, found the sole representative of Messrs. Mason-Roberts-Smith & Co. seated at a table with a goodly pile of 1s. postal orders and sheets of stamps before him. It seems a pity that in a case of this kind the police should wait the initiative of the aggrieved party before taking action, for such a course gives swindlers of this stamp practical immunity, owing to the helplessness of the class upon whom they prey.

An advertising dodge which has frequently been noticed in Truth has recently been applied to the selling of bicycles by some persons calling themselves Couthrie, Thompson, & Co., of 4, Featherstone-buildings, High Holborn. The advertisement took the form of a ridiculously easy problem competition, the winners of which were to have the option of purchasing a pneumatic safety bicycle at a greatly reduced rate. The next step was the receipt by those who had answered the advertisement of the following communication from Couthrie, Thompson, & Co. :—

Investor Prize Competition.

Dear Sir,—We are authorised to state that, although not one of the three prize-winners, you are numbered among the six competitors whose answers were perfectly correct.

We have consequently been instructed to forward you a Pneumatic Safety similar to the one offered as First Prize (drawing enclosed), should you care to forward remittance, £8. 17s. 6d. for gent's, or £9. 7s. 6d. for lady's machine.

The above charges include all accessories, and for lady's safety a pretty gear-case and dress-guard.

The "drawing enclosed" bears the title of "The 1896 'Claremont' Pneumatic Safety," which is priced at £20. Upon hearing of this offer, a correspondent of mine at once called at Messrs. Couthrie, Thompson, & Co.'s office to make inquiries, and, presenting himself as a possible purchaser, learned to his surprise that the prices mentioned above were the ordinary prices asked for the machines in question. I also sent a representative on a similar errand with the same result. I therefore would warn any one against becoming the purchaser of one of these machines without first having them examined by an expert; for it is evident that the promised reduction of price to prize-winners is a mere blind; and, if it were possible to place a trustworthy machine of the kind on the market at such prices, I am convinced that Messrs. Couthrie, Thompson, & Co., would, instead of having to find purchasers by such shady tricks, have difficulty in executing the orders entrusted to them.

From certain letters which have been appearing in the Grocer, it would seem that many firms in the grocery trade have lately been imposed upon by a trick analogous to the one which I have often exposed under the name of the "marking-ink trick." In one of these instances an individual comes round and invites tradesmen to take up a local agency for the sale of "cattle spice." He represents that the article is to be extensively advertised, showing handbills and posters in proof of his assertion, and as there is a prospect of a good sale, the grocer not infrequently gives a handsome order. The promised advertisements are never published, and the tradesman finds himself with a consignment of goods on his hands which are totally unsaleable, and probably utterly worthless. A grocer near Newcastle who has been one of the victims of this dodge, tells me that in his case the man who called gave the name of "Francis Robbins, Cattle Food Manufacturer, Shrewsbury." There are probably many varieties of this same trick, and it is about time that tradesmen of all classes were on their guard against it.

The most astonishing discovery that I have made for some time about the "Spanish prisoner" is that he is now having his circulars lithographed. This shows, more significantly than anything I have yet come across, the systematic way in which this trick is worked. Evidently in some parts of Spain the thing is looked upon as a regular industry, with the prisoner, the buried treasure, the orphan daughter, and all the rest of it, as so much commercial stock-in-trade; and in the usual course of business the parties living by their industry have their business correspondence lithographed just like any other tradesman would. I suppose it must also be concluded that there are plenty of people in the United Kingdom so green and unsuspicious that they will swallow the cock-and-bull story of the Spanish prisoner, even when the letter which that worthy purports to write from his dungeon at Madrid or Barcelona is manifestly a lithographed document.

Really, I must ask Mr. Gladstone to be a little more discreet in his correspondence. I am compelled to do this when I see his name prominently used in the furtherance of the business of that enterprising advertiser Mr. Ernest Goode. As all readers of TRUTH are aware, Goode is the man who advertises the free gift of a watch to any one who can guess correctly some ludicrously easy puzzle, a minor condition, apparently, being the purchase of a chain to wear with it. In Goode's latest advertisements there occurs as a sequel what is termed a "Unique Testimonial from the Right Hon. Wm. E. Gladstone," consisting of a warm acknowledgment through Mr. H. Drew of a present Goode has sent to him. Of course, Mr. Gladstone probably thought that he was merely acknowledging a tribute of admiration from some ardent follower; but the fact remains that his utterances, whether they refer to the "Assassin on the Throne" or to Goode's watches, are of considerable value. The use to which Goode has put this particular letter makes it seem that Mr. Gladstone has been a pleased participant in one of the competitions.

I received an invitation last week from the Directors of the Crystal Palace, on the occasion of Brock's benefit, to view the fireworks. I was unable to make use of it myself, so I unwarily handed it to a member of my staff who has a sneaking sympathy for minor poets. The result was disastrous—four columns at least of poetry. I do not profess to be a judge of poetry, but this effusion seems quite up to the modern standard. Besides being poetically sympathetic, I should also judge that my representative is in full intellectual accord with Pinero's doctrine of praise. I had not really suspected him of such an extraordinary command of superlatives as he has shown himself to have. I regret that the exigencies of space prevent my giving publicity to his descriptions, which are every bit as brilliant as the source of his inspiration—the fireworks themselves. Under the circumstances, I think I must be content with recording the two first words of his ode. These words at least record a truism in a convenient form. They are:—

Great Brock!——

Last week a firm of provision merchants at Liverpool sent out a black-bordered circular announcing, with very much regret, the sudden death of one of the partners. Their grief does not seem, however, to have altogether blunted the keen business instincts of the surviving partners, for three pages of the circular containing the mournful intelligence were filled up with quotations of the current prices for bacon, cheese, butter, eggs, and other goods. After this, it will not be surprising to hear of the epitaph on the departed merchant's tombstone winding up with an intimation that his partners continue to carry on the business as usual.

"TRUTH" will be sent weekly to any address in the United Kingdom for 7s. for 3 months; 14s. for 6 months; or 28s. for 12 months. The subscription for all Countries included in the Postal Union is, 3 months, 7s. 8d.; 6 months, 15s. 4d.; 12 months, £1 10s. 8d. All subscriptions are payable in advance, and cheques and P.O.O.'s should be made payable to the MANAGER, "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-street, S.W.

I have to thank a great many readers in different parts of the country who have sent me evidence of the practicability of employing windmills for generating electricity. There seem to be several places at which dynamos are being worked by windmills for illuminating purposes, and, judging by what I am told, the experiment has in all cases been successful, there being no difficulty in storing enough electricity to carry an establishment over those brief intervals in this country when there is no wind blowing. There really seems to be no reason why every London householder should not rig up a windmill on the top of his house for generating electricity, and snap his fingers at the electric lighting companies.

Apropos of my recent references to the cruelty of compelling a prisoner at a court-martial to stand throughout a protracted trial, I have been asked to ventilate the grievance of a numerous body of persons, not even under accusation of wrong-doing, who are similarly tortured while in attendance on the Private Bill Committees. Seats are provided in each Committee-room for the Committee, for counsel, and for the reporters; but for everybody else there is only a single common school form against the back wall, and a good portion of this is nearly always taken up with boxes and papers. The consequence is that the majority of the witnesses and other interested parties—and they are mostly middle-aged or elderly men—are compelled to stand hour after hour and day after day in a close and crowded room. In the Commons a witness is indulged with a seat whilst under examination, but in the Lords he must continue to stand even then. It will easily be understood that the ordeal is a very trying one, more especially for professional men, who are expected to keep their minds alert and attentive on behalf of their clients during proceedings which last for four or five hours a day without an interval. Why do not the expert witnesses and others who have to endure this hardship session after session combine in some representation to the authorities at Westminster, or get some Member to take the matter up?

With regard to the practice at courts-martial, an officer tells me that in India he has often seen both the prisoner and his escort provided with seats. No doubt this is especially necessary in a hot climate; but my correspondent agrees that at home also prisoners ought always to be allowed to sit down during a long trial, and he suggests that the omission to do this is due to thoughtlessness more than anything else on the part of the president of the tribunal. I dare say this explanation applies to the majority of cases, and probably if the prisoner asked for a seat he would be allowed it. At the same time I am bound to add that on the occasion to which I originally referred the prisoner did ask for permission to sit down, that his request was contemptuously ignored, and that, consequently, he had to stand throughout a trial which extended over five days. There was, therefore, something worse than thoughtlessness on the part of the president in that case.

The Convention of the Irish Race last week in Dublin is one more blunder to be classed with the Plan of Campaign and New Tipperary. Such is the verdict of Irish common sense. But there is evidently a good deal in heredity. Two speakers at the Convention, who had come from across the water, contributed the following sentences in the course of their speeches:—Said one, "Until last week I had never set foot in the land of my birth." The other, in giving some details of personal history, informed his hearers that "he had left Ireland fifty-three years before, a naked little boy, without a dollar in his pocket."

At a Primrose League garden-party at Halifax the other day two important items in the programme were "a washing competition" and a "race with donkeys" (won by the secretary), while in connection with a Unionist "Demonstration" at Holker Park a race for M.P.s occupied a prominent place in the bills. Such are the tomfooleries by which the Tory party obtains the support of an enlightened electorate! Might not the attraction be even greater, and would not the arrangement be more fitting, if the M.P.s' race and the race with donkeys were merged into one event?

Occasionally I am asked for information as to the prospects which fruit-farming in California offers as a career for a young man able to invest a moderate capital, and anxious to seek his fortune in some such sphere; but except that I most strongly warn everybody against the farm-pupil system, which is very much the same swindle in California that it is in Canada, it is not possible for me to give advice on the subject. Some of my readers may be interested, however, in the following extracts from a letter by a gentleman who has had several years experience in California. The writer, Mr. W. E. Pedley first recommends intending fruit farmers not to pay anyone a premium for the privilege of working on a farm; not to make any purchase until they have been out six months or more; and when they do start to be sure and get within two or three miles of a railway station, and to examine, with the utmost care, the position of the markets for whatever it is proposed to produce, for it is neglect of this vital precaution that has brought most colonists to grief. As to what is and what is not paying at the present time, he writes:—

Except a tree or two for home use, avoid all fruits which ripen and have to be disposed of at once, such as peaches, cherries, nectarines, plums, &c.; if allowed to ripen, it is very difficult to get them to market without bruising, and if picked unripe they have but little flavour. Raisins are not paying; wine grapes are doing a little better, but the industry cannot be said to be in a flourishing condition. Prunes yield well, but the price of the dried product is very low. Olives and walnuts are doing satisfactorily, and in places, very well, and the same applies to almonds; but by far the best-paying fruits at present are oranges and lemons. Orange growers, on foothill land, with sufficient water and suitable soil, have been for some years clearing fifty per cent. (net) per annum on their original purchase price, and even considerably more; not in one place or one instance only, but wherever the conditions are suitable and the orchard well looked after. Please take note of italics.

Any one knowing the law of supply and demand will say at once that for these exceptional profits there must be some exceptional cause, and so there is, i.e., the total destruction of almost the whole of the Florida orange groves by frost in the winter of 1894-95. Prior to that year Florida used to ship about 5,000,000 boxes of oranges per year, whereas it now ships hardly any, almost all the trees being killed. Even assuming that the frosts do not recur, many years must elapse before Florida can again become a serious competitor. In 1895-96 California only shipped 1,900,000 boxes, so that clearly an enormous expansion of production would have to take place before Florida's missing 5,000,000 boxes could be replaced.

There is a great deal of land suitable for oranges in Southern California, but the available water supplies are already about all taken up, and in many places the supply is unequal to the task of properly supporting the existing orchards in dry years, so that facts and figures do not indicate that overproduction is at all probable, and present rates for oranges are likely to be maintained or even increased; under these conditions there is no doubt that orange orchards, at prices now ruling, are a wonderfully paying investment, and living is much cheaper than in England.

While reading Lady Baker's "A Year's Housekeeping in South Africa," I came across the following passage, which refers to Natal, but which is probably even more applicable to Rhodesia. No attempt is there made to civilise the natives. The Government under a Company, whose shareholders seek to become rich by running up the price of the shares in the market, make no endeavour to convert them into self-supporting human beings; all is done to make them work for their rulers, whilst these rulers have but one thought—to make money:—

It is said that immigration is the cure for all the evils of this country, and that we want more white people. Now, it seems to me that is just what we don't want—at least white people of what are called the lower class. Of course, every colony is the better for the introduction of skilled labour and intelligence of every kind, no matter how impecunious it may be. But the first thing a white person of any class does here is to get Kaffirs under him, whom he knocks about as much as he dares, complaining all the time of their ignorance and stupidity. Everybody turns at once into a master, and an independent gentleman with black servants under him, and the result is that it is impossible to get the simplest thing properly done, for the white people are too fine, and the black ones too ignorant or too lazy. English servants directly expect two or three Kafirs under them to do their work, and really no European seems to do anything except by deputy. Now if we were only to import a small number of teachers and trained artisans of the highest procurable degree of efficiency, we could establish training schools in connection with the millions which are scattered all over the country. In this way we might gradually use up the material we have already to our hand on these swarming black people, and thus bring them into the great brotherhood of civilisation. They are intelligent, good-humoured, and easily managed. It is more easy to get at the children than at the grown-up people. I want to see training schools set up all over the country, where boys could be taught carpentering and all other trades, and the girls housewifery.

I do not believe in "Armenian patriots" getting hold of a bank, killing some of the employees with bombs, throwing these missiles at those outside, and, after filling the cellars with dynamite, threatening to blow up the establishment if a programme of reform is not granted by their rulers. Still less do I believe in these "patriots" if, after killing and causing to be killed many, they surrender on condition that they themselves receive no punishment. Nor do I greatly wonder at the Mahommedans taking a bloody vengeance in Constantinople upon the Armenians, whose Revolutionary Committee adopted these means to show their indignation at Christian Europe not coming to their rescue. If the Polish Jews in London were to lay hands on the Bank, and to throw thence, and from windows, bombs on the troops sent to dislodge them, it would go hardly with those Jews. I forget what animal a French naturalist declares to be a most ill-conditioned beast, because he defends himself when he is attacked. Beasts of all kinds are in the habit of acting in this improper fashion.

Englishmen are gradually realising what the Turkish question really is. In Turkey, wherever there is a Christian population, that population is more or less misgoverned by the dominant Mohammedans. This is inherent in Turkish rule, and, so long as that rule continues, this misgovernment will continue. For nearly one hundred years our efforts have been devoted to maintain this Empire; had it not been for us it would have ceased long ago to exist. Of late we have fallen back upon insisting that nothing shall be done in Turkey without a European concert, and, as this concert never takes place, this is tantamount to saying that nothing is to be done. Our statesmen still hold to this policy, but public opinion has at length awakened to its iniquity.

Turkey closes the road of Russia towards the open sea. Westwards Austria is her near neighbour. Politically the territorial arrangements in that corner of Europe in no way concern us if we only emancipate ourselves from the illusion that it is our mission to hinder the access of Russia to the open sea. The aim of Russia has always been to establish a sort of paramount suzerainty over the Black Sea and the outlet from that sea into the Mediterranean. To this Austria never has objected provided that she, on her part, exercises the like suzerainty over the western portion of Turkey. Since we have laid hands on Cyprus and Egypt we are viewed with jealousy by every Continental Power. What, then, should be our course? To declare that beyond a desire to see an end to Turkish misrule, we are prepared merely to be spectators of what territorial changes may occur. If we do this, in a very few years there will be no Turkish question. Austria will extend to Salonica. The Sultan will become a sort of protected potentate under Russia, much as the native rulers are under our protection in India, and, like them, he will have to do justice to all. The islands in the Levant will fall, in part to France, in part to Italy, and in part to Greece. In all this I do not see that we shall be damnified, for all that concerns us in the Mediterranean is to ensure that the roadway for our carrying trade between the West and the East is left open, and we have absolutely nothing to gain by an increase of territory in that sea.

When we hear of conferences between the Continental Powers with a view to action, the above is their aim. They would solve the question in the only way that it can be solved, and the sooner that we frankly accept this solution the better it will be for the well-being of Europe, and especially for the well-being of the Christians in Turkey.

"ABDUL THE DAMNED."

Each day the proofs of guilt are made more sure,
  Each day the grave indictment grows more grim;
Surely the time for sentence is mature,
  Surely the cup is filled now to the brim.

Lying and subterfuge cease to avail,
  The damning truth can be suppress'd no more;
Well may the cowering Abdul quake and quail,
  For see! his trembling fingers drip with gore.

See, where he stands, his villanies disclosed,
  His plots unravelled and his treachery known!
See, how he shakes, detected and exposed,
  An arch-assassin, trembling on his throne!

Full long has Europe closed her listless eyes
  To all the horrors his black heart conceived,
Full long has she feigned deafness to the cries
  Of his doomed victims, tortured and bereaved.

But surely now her listless eyes must see,
  Her careless ears no more can deafness feign,
Even her callous heart must now decree
  Just vengeance on this slayer of the slain.

The time for diplomatic "Notes" has fled;
  How can vain chatter deadly wrongs appease?
Whilst victims, unavenged, lie stark and dead,
  Who recks the babble of the Embassies?

Ambassadors may talk, but Abdul acts;
  Whilst they dispute, he deals his craven blows;
He meets their endless words with direful acts;
  As they delay, more daring still he grows.

How long, then, Europe, shall your hand be stayed?
  How long shall devilish deeds like his be screened?
Oh, when will you proclaim a new Crusade
  Against the sway of this incarnate fiend?

In Mercy's name, your rivalries forget;
  For once let Policy to Pity yield;
Let party jealousies aside be set
  Whilst you the tardy sword of Justice wield.

And wield it sternly! End, with one swift stroke,
  The rule that now so fair a land can ban;
And save a tortured people from the yoke
  Of one accursed alike by God and man.

SCRUTATOR.

THE KILBURN SCANDAL.

Where the Guilt Really Lies.

"IN the current issue of Truth," writes "An Old Subscriber to the C.E.A.," "you ask whether anything is to be done to avert the impending ruin of the great work which the Kilburn Sisterhood has undertaken? Many of us are asking the same question; but the difficulty is to decide what should be done. Cannot you help us with some practical advice on this point?" I am glad that this request has been made to me, and I will do my best to respond to it. I may say at once that I believe that one thing, and one only, is required, and that is a reform in the personnel of the governing body of the Sisterhood. The subscribers to the C.E.A. are not, of course, in a position to effect this directly, but they are unquestionably in a position to bring to bear pressure which will effect it. The Kilburn Sisterhood, although an autonomous body quite independent of the subscribers to the Church Extension Association, is yet absolutely dependent upon that association for the means of continuing its present work. Should the C.E.A. collapse by the defection of its subscribers—which from what I hear is within a measurable distance—the Kilburn Sisterhood would be reduced to financial extremities scarcely distinguishable from bankruptcy, and the position of the Sisterhood, even as a religious community, would be seriously imperilled. With such results in sight, it is clearly within the power of the subscribers who have hitherto supported the work to bring to bear, by means of concerted action among themselves, such pressure as the present masters of the situation will find it difficult to resist.

---

Gratis and post free, very elaborately-illustrated Price Lists, showing exact sizes of Havana Cigars issued by the HAVANA Trading Association, 177, Piccadilly.—C. A. Carlin, Gen. Manager.

The first point, then, which has to be realised by the subscribers and members of the C.E.A. is the necessity for a radical change in the personnel of the present management. I have already given my opinion in the report on the TRUTH inquiry that the main cause of all the trouble into which the Kilburn Sisterhood has drifted is that a work has been undertaken which it is beyond the competence of the Sisterhood as it stands now to discharge satisfactorily. I think it has become my duty to add to this that the Sisterhood is at present ruled by persons who are not only incompetent from a business point of view, but have been guilty again and again of a duplicity and untruthfulness which render them unworthy of all public confidence. Up to the present time I have refrained, so far as possible, from making any personal imputations in connection with what I have seen of the management of the Kilburn charities, hoping that the force of the facts and conclusions set out in the TRUTH report would have been sufficient to bring home to the Mother Superior and her present advisers the untenability of the position they have taken up, and the impossibility of carrying on their work without substantial reforms. But it is now clear that any such hope is futile, and that these ladies are prepared to adhere to the attitude they have adopted, regardless of the consequences to the various institutions under their charge. It therefore seems to me necessary to point out to the public the reasons why these ladies must be regarded as totally unworthy of confidence.

Let me first remind the reader of the course of the TRUTH negotiations. When I had noticed the first Charity Organisation Society's report in TRUTH, and had mentioned that important evidence respecting the management of the orphanages was in my possession, and that I intended to publish it at an early date, the representative of the Sisterhood wrote to me with profuse compliments to my charitable disposition, assuring me that I had been misinformed, and that the Sisters were desirous of showing me the true state of the case. As the result of this letter, it was arranged, first, that I should see two of the Sisters; secondly, that I should personally inspect the Kilburn charities in respect to which unfavourable allegations had been made; thirdly, that I should personally inspect the accounts which had been made the subject of unfavourable remark, and should interview the auditor who had been responsible for the accounts at that time. It was also arranged that, having heard what the Sisters had to say, I should consult the C.O.S. respecting their answers, and hear anything that the C.O.S. had to say in support of their original allegations. It was also definitely agreed that I should deal in the same way with the evidence which I had mentioned as having been given me in proof of the mismanagement of the orphanages. Nothing could be clearer or simpler than this understanding, which is evidenced by the correspondence which preceded our first meeting, and by the record of what passed at the very outset of my interview with Miss Frances Ashdown and Sister May. Was the agreement thus made carried out? Emphatically no. Having allowed me to investigate matters up to a certain point, the Sisters shifted their ground, and invented one excuse after another for preventing the original arrangement being carried out. They next categorically informed me that they could not allow certain things which they had promised to allow. They then put up a lawyer to propose a totally different course of procedure; and they finally threatened me through this lawyer with proceedings for libel, if I made known the result of my inquiry so far as it had gone, or made any unfavourable reference to the Sisterhood in TRUTH. This change in the attitude of the Sisterhood took place after an attempt had been made by them to get out of the original arrangement in regard to the inspection of the accounts and the interview with the auditor, by showing me books for the last six months only, and introducing me to an accountant who had only been in office for that time; and after I had personally informed the Mother Superior that I had seen several of the witnesses who testified to cruel treatment in the Orphanages, and that I was very strongly impressed by their evidence. Any one who reads the detailed account of the negotiations, as set out in the TRUTH report, can have little doubt that the Mother Superior, seeing that I was unfavourably impressed on certain points, and that I was determined to inspect the accounts, the inspection of which had been promised me, resorted to the tactics that I have above described for the purpose of defeating my further investigation.

But more than this was done. At the interview with the Mother Superior just mentioned, a request was made by that lady that I would inform her of the names of the witnesses whom I had seen. As I had not the permission of the witnesses to mention their names, and there being no agreement with the Sisters that the names of the witnesses should be indicated, I demurred at the moment; but subsequently I wrote giving the names of nine young women whom I had seen, and stated at the same time that I did so "in confidence." How this confidence was treated readers of TRUTH already know. No sooner were the names received than Sisters were sent down from Kilburn to attempt by threats or cajolery to induce these girls to vary or withdraw the evidence they had given. This proceeding alone was one of very doubtful honesty, and calculated to destroy all confidence in the good faith of these ladies, who had invited me to examine their side of the case; while it also strongly suggested that the Sisters were afraid of the evidence of these girls, and were prepared to use any means to close their mouths.

PRINCE OF WALES HOTEL, HARROGATE.—Finest position, facing the Stray. Redecorated and sumptuously refurnished. New management. Excellent stabling. Electric light throughout.

BOOT AND SHOE MAKERS.—MAJOR HOWE & Co., 16, Coventry-street, W.; 60, Strand, W.; 13, Queen Victoria-street, City; 81, Gracechurch-street, City. (Klenrusha Polish.)

Nor did these questionable tactics end here. As described on the same page of the TRUTH pamphlet, letters in defence of the Sisters were about this same critical time—that is to say, two or three weeks after my interview with the Mother Superior, and at the moment when that lady had brought my investigation to a standstill—addressed to me from all parts of London and the provinces. Some of these letters purported to be written by former inmates of the orphanages, some by children still there, some by workers and visitors at Kilburn, and some by outsiders who had interested themselves in the work. Apart from the conclusion obviously suggested by their all arriving within a week or two of each other, and without anything having appeared in TRUTH to prompt them, these letters all bore internal evidence of having been inspired from a common source; and the attempts of some of the writers to disguise this fact, and to suggest that they had been prompted to write to me by something which they had themselves seen or read, were so transparent as to be almost comic. Here are a few examples, out of about seventy letters in all, which deserve to be rescued from oblivion. A youth wrote from Newcastle:—

DEAR SIR,—I fear there have been grave mistakes appearing lately in your published book TRUTH. Mistakes that may cause harm to one of the noblest works in England. I refer to the work of the Sisters of the Church at Kilburn. You may think what right I, a young fellow of nineteen, have to criticise the mistakes of TRUTH. But you will think that no longer when I tell you that I have been brought up by the Sisters for ten years. . . .

Note that this was written on March 7, and that the last previous remarks on the Kilburn Sisterhood had appeared in TRUTH of December 12. What made this youth suddenly fear in the first week in March that "grave mistakes had been appearing lately in my published book TRUTH"? A lady in the country wrote:—

SIR,—I am truly grieved to see that the papers are speaking so ill of the Church Extension Association, when those good Sisters are doing such a noble work for our Heavenly Father in caring for His poor, and clothing, teaching, and feeding the orphans which would otherwise be left to starve, or worse. . . .

This lady, it will be seen, attempts to disguise the fact that she is writing in response to a request from the Sisters by suggesting that her letter is prompted by what she has seen in "the papers." What papers, I wonder? Another lady, writing from a London suburb, had somehow got it into her head that "information" was appearing in TRUTH, and hastened to supply her evidence—needless to say, evidence entirely irrelevant to any point which required elucidation:—

SIR,—I am sure the information respecting the conduct of Kilburn Sisters towards the inmates in their Homes which appear in your paper of TRUTH could not have been given by an eye-witness. I not only have heard from an inmate, but have been to the Home unexpected and uninvited, and cannot allow such a false statement to pass without saying a word or two in the highest praise of those who have been and are so unjustly judged. The good that these noble women do is untold, &c.

GOUT and RHEUMATISM permanently cured by Post's C.B.Q. Certificate of Analysis proves it absolutely free from COLCHICUM, CALOMEL, or MERCURY, or ingredients equally injurious.—Full particulars and testimonials free on application to A. M. POST, 98, Leadenhall-street, London, E.C.

A Rear-Admiral wrote to me:—

DEAR SIR,—As I know you are a lover of truth and would not insert in your paper anything that could harm a society, unless you were fully acquainted with both sides of the story, I am writing to beg you to send some trustworthy and reliable person to inspect the Orphanages of the C.E.A. I have known of their Society for many years, and have helped them to the best of my power, &c.

This was when I had been occupied for nearly two months in interviewing the Sisters and inspecting the work, as any one who read the references to the matter would have known for himself. I should like to hear from this gallant officer what he supposed I had "inserted in my paper," and how he came to suppose that I had inserted anything. Then came a mysterious letter from Brighton, the writer of which had somehow heard that the enemies of the Sisters had been "assailing me with letters." Had she said the friends of the Sisters, she would have been much nearer the mark:—

DEAR SIR,—It has grieved me to hear that the enemies of the Church Extension Association have been assailing you with letters to publish bringing charges of cruelty to orphans against the Sisters of the Church. To people who are familiar with the Orphanages and Homes this charge seems almost absurd, &c.

A Lieutenant R.A. was moved on board his ship at Portsmouth to contradict something which he apparently imagined I was actually then saying:—

SIR,—With reference to the remarks you make in TRUTH about the treatment of children under the care of the Church Extension Association, I should like to state that I have been all over the largest of their institutions in London, and can testify most warmly, &c.

A lady at Torquay began:—

SIR,—I am sorry that you are still, in spite of many contradictions, asserting that the Sisters of the Church are cruel to the orphans in their charge. I have visited the orphanages at various times, and stayed some days, and can assure you there is not the least foundation, &c.

This lady is one of the best of the lot. She states point blank that I am "still" traducing the Sisters, and doing it in spite of contradiction. Apparently hints in almost identical terms were sent to Torquay and the neighbouring town of Exmouth, for a lady at the latter place begins in precisely the same strain:—

DEAR SIR,—Your words have great and far reaching influence, that I am sorry to see them directed against those victims of misrepresentation, the Kilburn Sisters. I have known and co-operated with these ladies for nearly twenty-four years, &c.

But the writer who spoke most severely of my supposed unkindness to the Sisters was the Vicar of a place called Battyeford. This gentleman began:—

MY DEAR EDITOR,—As it would appear that the enemies of the Church Extension Association have found in you a champion worthy of their cause, I write as a true friend of the Sisters to ask you to allow the plea of audi alteram partem. I am speaking from a lengthy experience extending over a period of more than sixteen years, &c.

Considering that at the time when this was written I had been for about two months in constant communication with the Kilburn Sisters, and doing my best to hear everything that they had to say for themselves, I should certainly like to hear from this reverend gentleman how it "appeared" to him that the enemies of the C.E.A. had found in me "a champion worthy of their cause."

As an interesting appendix to this Vicar's letter, here is a sample of one from a professed unbeliever—for even the infidel were summoned to the rescue of the Sisters of the Church in the hour of their emergency. It will be seen from what the lady says that the Sisters knew something of her religious doubts. It would be interesting to know whether she was put up to write to me specially for that reason, and whether in the instructions she received, any hint was given her to inform me of the truth about her religious status :—

Dear Sir,—Will you allow one who does not belong to the High Church party, who is not even a professing Christian, to say a word in your columns respecting the Kilburn Sisters? I have stayed with them a number of times, and for several months at a time. They kindly allowed me to help in the secular work, without attending religious services, which I respected, but did not understand.

I have been astonished to hear the charges, &c.

It would only weary the reader to multiply extracts from this extraordinary mass of correspondence. As regards the body of the letters, they were all virtually to the same effect, that is to say, expressions of the writers' opinion that there was no credibility in any of the allegations respecting the ill-treatment of the orphans; but there was, of course, not a syllable in any one of them, nor in the profuse expressions of gratitude to Sisters which came from children still in the homes, which could for a moment be regarded as an answer to the specific allegations of the girls who were sent away in 1893 respecting their treatment. The reader who has been through the TRUTH report will also know from what appears there that the Sisters whom I saw were themselves not able to give any satisfactory or convincing denial to the allegations which these girls make. Could anything be more silly than this attempt, when the evidence of the girls themselves could not be refuted, to bias my opinion by turning on me this stream of irrelevant correspondence from people, not one of whom knew anything at all about the facts?

But this proceeding was worse than silly. The way it was done makes it in the highest degree disingenuous, more especially when it is remembered that, at the time when this attempt to influence my judgment was made, the Sisters were concocting pretexts for preventing me from completing the inquiry on the lines which they had originally agreed to. Within the last week or two, however, I have discovered a fresh piece of evidence which throws a flood of light upon the way this whole correspondence was worked, and the flagrant dishonesty of those who had recourse to these tactics. Among others who were requested about the end of February to write their opinions to the Editor of TRUTH was a foreman, at that time in charge of one of the workshops of the C.E.A. In reference to his writing to TRUTH, the following instructions were conveyed to him. I take them from a letter signed "Sister Kate," written from "The Elms, Hampstead." The italics are mine :—

The Mother thinks it would do more good if you wrote to
The Editor,
Truth Buildings,
Carteret-street,
S.W., as an outsider. Do not mention you know or work at any of our Homes, but write from your own address, and say you are surprised to hear of the disgraceful attack made against the C.E.A. Then mention its work among the unemployed, &c., &c., and say the C.O.S. ought to be had up for libel, and that you and many more will be obliged to come forward and put a stop to the damaging reports, and will take strong measures to do so. Something of the sort might do great good if you take them with a high hand, asking TRUTH to do his best to put an end to false reports.

It will be a great help if you will write. Will you also write to The Secretary,
Charity Organisation Society,
Buckingham-street, and threaten them well. Say anything you can to show how bad their conduct is. Could we have copies of letters?

Here the reader will see for himself, if he had any doubt upon the subject, how the oracle was worked. "Say you are surprised to hear of the disgraceful attack made against the C.E.A. Then mention its work, &c." Such, doubtless, were the hints sent out in all directions to the supporters of the Church Extension Association about this time, and the result is to be seen in the flood of correspondence with which I was forthwith deluged, and of which I have given samples above. I regard this last letter as the crowning iniquity of the Kilburn Sisters. Here is a deliberate attempt to impose upon me, at a time when I was investigating their case at their own request, by putting up a man in their employ as an independent outside witness on their behalf. The man is categorically instructed by one of the leading Sisters, at the instigation of the Mother Superior, to utter a succession of lies by assuming a fictitious character, and representing himself—a working man on weekly wages—as one who is prepared with others to come forward to prosecute the Charity Organisation Society. This wilful misrepresentation is to be perpetrated for the purpose of deceiving me and influencing my judgment in the inquiry which I had undertaken at the Mother Superior's request. I cannot imagine anything more calculated to shock those who have hitherto believed in the religious professions of the Sisters, or to stamp them in the eyes of the public as totally undeserving of any kind of confidence.

In connection with this letter I have further to call attention to another equally unpleasant circumstance. Reference has been made in the TRUTH Report to my desire to see personally the Sister who took a leading part in the inquisition at the Orphanage in 1893, and against whom serious allegations were made by numbers of girls whom I have seen. It being essential, where there is a direct conflict of evidence, that the witnesses on both sides should be seen personally, I specially represented to Sisters Frances and May, when they called upon me, the desirability of my seeing Sister Kate. They replied, as stated in the TRUTH Report, that this lady was so ill that it was out of the question for me to see her. Sister May, in particular, described Sister Kate as having been completely broken down by the late events at the Orphanage, and she even said that Sister Kate had been kept "on her back" for several months, leading me to suppose that Sister Kate was on her back still. I went so far as to suggest that even if the lady was unable to stand, it might still be possible for me to see her, and hear what she had to say in regard to the allegations of the girls; but the answer was that it was impossible. Further, on referring to this matter at my interview with the Mother Superior at Kilburn, I urged upon the Mother the desirability of my seeing Sister Kate. From the Mother CHAMBERS (Bachelors only), close to St. James' Park Ry. Station. Two rooms, unfurnished, first floor, £42; bath and w.c., speaking tubes; perfect sanitation; office (ground floor) also.—Resident Housekeeper, 31, Broadway, S.W.

I heard the same story as from the two Sisters. She was quite certain that Sister Kate's condition was such as to render an interview out of the question, and when I suggested that the doctor's opinion should be ascertained, I was told that it might be taken for granted that the doctor would not permit such a thing. Yet what do we find now? Within two or three weeks of my interview with the Mother Superior at Kilburn, Sister Kate writes the above letter to the foreman of a department over which she had charge; and not only is she there seen to be taking an active part in the little plot for imposing upon the Editor of TRUTH, but it appears from other passages in the letter, which I need not quote, that she was at this time going about from one place to another, and actively superintending the work of this particular department. The man to whom the letter was written tells me that she was going about at this time apparently in enjoyment of her usual health. I can only infer that the pathetic tale told to me, and reported to me so late as February 12, about Sister Kate's broken-down state, and the impossibility of my seeing her personally, was another fiction, invented for the purpose of obstructing my investigation, and preventing my seeing the most important of all the witnesses on the Kilburn side. I do not wish to use strong language, but in the course of a long experience I have never come across a more lamentable display of duplicity, and when it is remembered that these are the acts and words of ladies whose lives are professedly dedicated to the service of religion, the thing becomes shocking in the extreme. Incidentally, it must also be remarked that the fact of such tactics being resorted to has a most important bearing upon the merits of the dispute between the Sisters and their accusers. If they had nothing to be ashamed of or to conceal, why should these ladies, after inviting me to judge between them and their enemies, endeavour to put me off with deliberate falsehoods?

Nor can it be pleaded in mitigation of the offence that it is a mere isolated indiscretion, committed at a moment when the Sisters found themselves in a position of difficulty. On the contrary, the evidence is only too clear, and will be found scattered all through the pages of the TRUTH Report, that recourse to prevarication and downright falsehood, when it suits their purpose, is an habitual practice with the present rulers of the Kilburn Sisterhood. An exceptionally bad instance of this was the insertion in a published report of the C.E.A. of an appeal for contributions for "a home for children of weakly intellect," which institution was a pure figment of the imagination of the writer. It was deliberately stated that such an institution was being carried on at "The Elms," West Hampstead, and that a "happy family party of twenty-nine," which implied, of course, twenty-nine imbeciles, was to be found there; whereas the truth was that "The Elms" was used at that time as a home for those elder girls who were employed as pupil teachers in the various schools conducted by the Sisters, and that no institution of the kind described in this appeal ever existed among the Kilburn charities. Many other statements of a purely imaginative character have been repeatedly put forth in the monthly journal, Our Work, for the purpose of obtaining cash from the public. The allegations which have been publicly circulated from Kilburn, in regard to the secession of 1894, are of the same character. In this case, as pointed out in the TRUTH Report, the ladies who found themselves compelled to separate from the community after having, in some cases, been connected with it from its very foundation, placed on record their reasons for so doing in letters to the Mother Superior. Yet within a month or two an official statement, signed by Sister May, was issued from Kilburn, alleging as the reason for the secession, that the seceders had desired to Romanise the religious services—a reason which was at variance with the written declarations of the seceders, and was beyond all doubt a mere fiction invented for the purpose of prejudicing the seceders in the eyes of the public, and disguising the unfortunate state of things then existing at Kilburn. This fiction was again repeated to me by the Sisters who visited TRUTH Office. I asked these ladies what was the real reason for the secession, and they told me that the seceders had formed a Romanising party, thereby obviously suggesting to me that this was the only reason for the secession; the fact being that the seceders had expressly given as their reasons for leaving that they had lost confidence in the Mother Superior, and were dissatisfied in various particulars with the government of the Community. No one who studies all these facts can doubt for one moment that these ladies—the leader of them one who had been associated with the Mother Superior for twenty-two years—were amply justified in the course they took, or, indeed, that some such step was forced upon any lady of honour and prudence who saw the principles on which the policy of the Community was being directed.

The latest evidence of the shifty and prevaricating tactics of the Sisterhood is to be found in the incident that has just occurred at Plymouth. In an article on that affair, I have already told how notices were inserted in the local papers to the effect that "a Senior Sister" was coming down to attend a meeting and answer the allegations that have appeared in TRUTH and elsewhere; how "all persons interested," friendly or otherwise, were invited to attend; how, when a representative of the Western Morning News presented himself, he was told that the meeting was not a public one; and how the Senior Sister (Sister May), whom all interested had come to hear, declined to address the gathering if it was to be considered a public one. Since that, a characteristic attempt to explain the fiasco has been addressed to the Western Morning News by a lady signing herself "E. P. Davie." Mrs. (or Miss) Davie states that "the meeting was planned and advertised by herself and another lady without the authority or knowledge of any of the Kilburn Sisters"; and that she only "found out when too late that nothing could be further from their wishes than that any public meeting of the kind should be held." These statements are almost too extraordinary for belief. That two ladies in a provincial town should plan and advertise a meeting to be addressed by one of the Senior Sisters from Kilburn, without any member of the Sisterhood having the slightest knowledge of their intentions, is, if not incredible, incomprehensible. Even if strictly accurate, the statement suggests conclusions highly unfavourable to the intelligence and business abilities of those who have the local control of the Association's affairs. But the point which is of most importance is this, that the Senior Sister did attend the meeting got together in this way, and that she was perfectly prepared to address the meeting if it was to be treated as a private one, that is to say, if her observations and anything else which passed were not reported and made public. So that the only thing objected to was publicity. Sister May was quite willing to take advantage of the unauthorised proceedings by which the meeting of "all interested" had been got together, and expound her own views on the TRUTH report or anything else, but on condition that everything she said was kept within those four walls. Only when this condition was not granted were the terms on which the meeting had been called repudiated, and the meeting declared to have been summoned without the authority of the Kilburn Sisters. Such pitiful shuffling is only characteristic of the people who could, in April last, inform me through a solicitor of their intention to commence an action for libel if I made known the result of the inquiry they had themselves invited, and who now admit that "nothing could be further from their wishes" than to offer any answer to the TRUTH report at a meeting to which reporters are admitted. The whole history of their proceedings since they came to solicit my good offices in December last is a history of shuffling, trickery, and deceit.

The conclusion which I desire to impress now upon the public, and more particularly upon subscribers and members of the C.E.A., is that what these Senior Sisters did in 1894 it has now become the duty of all members of the Association to do, unless the present government can be reformed. Without disguise or equivocation, those ladies then told the Mother Superior that they had lost confidence in her and in the government of the Community. That was the opinion formed by personal friends after intimate association with the Mother and the work for twenty years and more, and everything that has happened since shows how right that opinion was. The errors and blunders that have been pointed out in TRUTH are the work, not of the Community as a whole, but of the Mother Superior and the two or three Sisters who act with her as the Governing Body. Upon the Mother Superior herself rests undoubtedly the moral blame, as well as the formal responsibility for everything that has been done amiss. Miss Ayckbowm—I regret that her name was incorrectly given in the TRUTH Report—has been from the first the inspiring spirit of the whole organisation, and of late years she has been practically free from any shape or sort of control. One of the chief complaints of the seceding Sisters was that "important steps were taken without the knowledge or advice of Council or Chapter, which, indeed, had ceased to exist," and this is only one piece of evidence out of many that the government of the Community has been for many years past in the hands of the Mother Superior and those two or three Sisters whom she has chosen to take into her confidence. It has been remarked by one of the apologists of the Sisters, in reply to a passage of the C.O.S. Report, that the question of the constitution of the Community is a domestic affair of the Sisters, in which the public are not concerned. This is a plausible proposition, but it loses all weight when it is remembered that this Sisterhood is administering a revenue of something like £36,000 a year drawn from the contributions of the benevolent public, not to mention a further large sum of an unknown amount indirectly drawn from the same source. The question how a Community occupying this position is constituted and governed is one of most vital concern to every body who subscribes to the funds; and if it is found that the administration is deplorably defective in many respects, that grave errors of judgment have been repeatedly committed, that false statements have been laid before the public for the purpose of obtaining money, and, finally, that recourse has been had to shameful trickery and falsehood for the purpose of hushing up the truth, and preventing the public learning how matters really stand, then every one can see for himself that the management of the institution has fallen into incompetent and unworthy hands, and that the first step towards putting things right is to effect a reform in the personnel and machinery of the government.

We thus come back to the point at which I started. There is no hope for the Kilburn Institutions until the management has been reformed and placed in the hands of ladies who can possess the confidence of one another and of the public. Neither is there any hope that this reform can come from within. The Mother Superior and her advisers have sufficiently manifested their indifference to public opinion, and their resolution to persevere in their fatuous and discreditable tactics at whatever cost to the work on which they are engaged. As to the great body of the Sisters, I believe that they are practically ignorant of what has been going on, and powerless to influence the course of events, even if they knew the truth. There are over a hundred Sisters in the Community—the great majority of them, I doubt not, good and honest women, entirely free from blame for anything that has taken place. But in the government of the Community they are ciphers. The Sisterhood has never had anything more than a provisional constitution, and even that would appear to have been over-ridden at will; and, whatever the theory may be, there is practically no representative council of the Sisters which has any power or authority in the institution. It comes, therefore, to this, that the Mother Superior is at present master of the situation. She is at once the person primarily responsible for everything that has brought discredit upon the institution, and the person who has to be moved from her present attitude and policy, if not from her present position, before there is any hope of better times for the Sisterhood. I would earnestly call upon those outsiders who are interested in the welfare of the Sisterhood, and the great work which they have taken in hand, to attentively consider these remarks. Let me repeat again that I have, unlike many of their critics, no hostility whatever against the Sisters as a body, and I would wish to see their work placed on a secure foundation and entering upon a great career of usefulness. My sole object in what I have said now, and what I have said on other occasions, is to call attention to grave abuses which have grown up, and to point out to those concerned in what way they must go to work if they desire to see those abuses remedied. The rest remains in the hands of the subscribers.

THE ENGADINE.

Whether a person is bettered in his health by perching for a time in some valley of high altitude I should say is somewhat doubtful. The theory is that it does not conduce to the well-being of the microbes, who repay the hospitality afforded to them by preying on the lungs of their host. This may be true, but then every one's inside is not a home of these microbes. Be all this, however, as it may, the Engadine is a high valley, and as a health resort it was invented by a certain Badruth, who practised the calling of a blacksmith there, and built a hotel, small at first, but which has become a huge caravanserai, and a cause for the erection of other hotels in the valley. I have been at the Engadine, under the notion that its mountain air is invigorating, five or six times in the last twenty years. Climatically, it is as nasty as most medicines. My experience of it is that the fine days are few, and the bad days many. Its normal condition is rain, snow, or sleet, with a biting and an eager wind. On each of my visits I have been told that all this is exceptional; so perhaps I have by some ill chance come in for the exception instead of the rule. Certainly during the few days of fine weather that I have seen there, the air is bracing and exhilarating, but they are like angels' visits. This year there has been one during the whole of my sojourn. The best thing about the place is the pastry, for the Engadine produces a race of pastrycooks who go forth into the world, make fortunes, return to their valley, where they build themselves a house with very thick walls and very little windows, and hibernate in this habitation like bears, until they die. The English visitors are, I should imagine, in the minority; and the majority consists of Italians, Germans, and Americans. Nevertheless, the English seem to impress their individuality on the place, and lawn tennis and golf flourish as though they were to the valley born, whilst every self-respecting male dresses as a member of the Alpine Club, ready to ascend a mountain at a moment's notice. Few, I imagine, do ascend mountains, and most content themselves with "dressing" the part. Of ladies, the name is legion: in the matter of dress they are sensible, and they do not, as at Homburg, work through half a dozen trunks of the latest fashions. In the evening they dance, but the "Alpine climbers" are generally too fatigued with intending to climb, and are therefore unable to take part in this amusement, so the ladies mainly dance with each other. The Duchess of York and the Duchess of Teck have passed the autumn here, and presumably they have enjoyed themselves, for there has been little of the staring and the mobbing that dog the steps of Royalty, and which must be such a nuisance to the victims. A little beauty in Royalty goes a great way, but the Duchess of York, even if she were not Royal, would, I think, pass as a pretty girl. This week we have had a conjurer, last week we had Mr. and Mrs. Bancroft, the former reading "The Chimes," the latter reciting a poem. Mr. Bancroft reads well and emotionally. Many wept. To-day there is a sage examining the lines in persons' hands, at five francs the hand. As it is amusing, there is a run upon this professor of a dark art. What contempt he must feel for the human intellect!

St. Moritz consists of an upper and a lower village. Dominating the upper is the Badruth Hotel, and a second hotel with all modern comforts has just been opened by one of the family. In the lower village there are about a dozen hotels and about two dozen booths, where coral, olive wood boxes, and such like articles are sold. The upper village is picturesque and old; the lower is hideous and new. Winter, I am told, is more pleasant than summer, and there are several hundred guests in the Badruth Hotel. They skate, they toboggan, and they dance. Life must be much like what it is on board ship, for they are cut off from the rest of the world. The change that has come over hotel life since I first knew it is great. Then everybody affected a sort of travelling undress, and if a man had appeared at a table d'hôte in evening costume he would have been regarded as a waiter on his holidays. Now all — men and women — dress. There are, moreover, a vast number of families who have no homes beyond hotels. From year's end to year's end they live in them—husband, wife, and children—their goods and chattels being contained in half a dozen huge boxes. This sort of communistic life, without any household cares, never seems to pall on them. In winter they go to Italy or to the shores of the Lake of Geneva; in summer, to the Swiss mountains or to the German baths. The sons go forth into the world to make their fortunes; the daughters generally flirt themselves into marriage. The hotel flirt, like the garrison beauty, has become an institution; but, more fortunate than the latter, she is able to vary the scene of her operations, and thus generally picks up a husband before she becomes flat, stale, and unprofitable. On the whole, not having unsound lungs, I have come to the conclusion that the great charm of the Engadine is that a short sojourn in it tends to reconcile the visitor to the climate of the rest of the world.

The most curious thing connected with the Engadine is a picture. Who would have supposed that the Sixtine Madonna in the Dresden Gallery is a copy, and that the original is in the Hotel Badruth at St. Moritz? Yet this is what M. Gaspar Badruth asserts, and he has written a book in which he cleverly and exhaustively seeks to prove it. This is the history of his picture, as related by him. The Madonna was painted by Raphael, and carried in April 11, 1513, by Alfonso I., Duke of Ferrara, as Confalione della S.R. Chiesa, in the coronation procession of Pope Leo X. It was afterwards, having become the property of Alfonso, taken by him to Ferrara, and hung in the chapel of the Ducal Palace as an altar-piece. As the Court of Este had to move to Modena in 1598, the picture was transferred in that year to the Ducal Chapel there. At the end of the last century this chapel was demolished, and its contents were scattered. The Madonna became the property of the family of Baraldi, which had been in the service of the House of Este since 1752. Until 1882 the picture remained in the Palazzo Pentetorre, the house formerly occupied by the Baraldi family, but which, with the picture, had become the property of the Bertoni family of Reggio, and in that year it was purchased by the father of M. Gaspar Badruth from Signorina Elisa Bertoni. In 1888 it was sent by him to Herr Sesar in Augsburg to be cleaned and restored. Herr Sesar stretched the picture on new canvas, cleaned it, and removed the uppermost layer of paint, which covered the robe and the lower part of the picture, filled up the wide rents in the Madonna's drapery, and enlarged the picture upwards, downwards, and sideways. The heads, however, were not touched. In M. Badruth's book there is a photograph of the picture before and after restoration. Then what is the Dresden Madonna? A copy, replies M. Badruth. And he suggests that it was obtained by the Benedictine monks of San Sisto in Piacenza in the following manner:—In March, 1543, Pope Paul III. travelled to Piacenza to meet the Emperor Charles V. On his way, he stopped for some time at Ferrara, where he was entertained by Duke Hercole II. Paul, whilst Raphael was still living, must have been acquainted with his principal works. Finding the Madonna at Ferrara, he asked Hercole to give it to him, a request that the latter could not well refuse, and so soon as he obtained it he made a present of it to the Benedictines of San Sisto. But why give it to them? Because Cardinal Gambara was just then devoting himself to make Piacenza a princely residence for the Farnese family, and San Sisto, being situated close to the Castello, afterwards the Farnese Palace, became the royal chapel. But Hercole, although as a vassal of the Pope not liking to refuse his request, had no desire to part with the original Madonna. He therefore gave Paul a copy, and kept the original himself.

A Fair Beautiful Skin.—By washing with Sulpholine Soap the natural tint and peach-like bloom of a perfect complexion is ensured.

My knowledge of art is not sufficient to enable me to express an opinion as to which of the two pictures—the one at Dresden and the other at the Hôtel Badruth—is the original. This, however, is certain—the one is a copy of the other; and the copy, whichever it may be, dates from the sixteenth century. The Dresden picture is painted on coarse canvas with two cross seams; the Badruth picture is painted on one piece of damask linen, and, as M. Badruth urges, no other genuine Raphael is painted on more than one single piece of canvas. In 1892, M. Badruth proposed to Professor Woermann, Director of the Dresden Gallery, that the two pictures should be exhibited together, and the Professor agreed that they should be placed side by side for one hour, provided that the public were not admitted. This M. Badruth declined, as he thought that the test would not be conclusive unless a large number of art critics and admirers of Raphael were allowed to examine them in juxtaposition at their leisure. For all that I know to the contrary, M. Badruth's picture may be the copy, but it would be interesting were his request assented to by the Director of the Dresden Gallery; indeed, I can see no reason for its refusal.

Cycling Suits are a speciality at Ulster House, Conduit-street, London, W., where Ulsters, Overcoats, and Capes are kept ready for immediate use.

NOTES FROM PARIS.

AN OASIS IN BRITTANY.

I AM somewhere in Brittany, but won't give the address. My present abode is in an old-world seaside place, affording much to arouse curiosity and interest. One has on view a river equal in beauty to the Dart and superior in the freshness of the air. Clustered on its banks are, within sight of each other, most charmingly picturesque towns, none of which is of any great size. But they look as if arranged for an artist to image them on canvas. The quaintest and oldest is a northern Avignon, so far as its ring of turreted and machicolated fortress walls go. These ramparts are mellowed by time from grey to yellow. All kinds of stone-plants bloom on them, and tamarisks have managed to gain a footing in the rocks on which the old walls stand. Another of the towns in the prospect is less old, but still ancient. As it climbs a low hill one takes in its main points at a glance. It is set in beautiful suburbs, all ancient, too—suburbs formed of villas standing in high-walled gardens, also mellowed by the action of time. Most of these villas date from the seventeenth century. But they were solidly built, and are in as good repair as if fresh from the mason and carpenters' hands. They were built by Corsairs, who preyed in war times on Dutch and English merchantmen. Roofs are all high, in the Henri IV. style. But the Versailles plan of a corridor running from end to end on one side, and of rooms opening on to each other and on to that passage on the other side, is followed in the internal structure. Wainscotings to the ceilings keep off the coldness of the granite walls. All the rooms look on the garden. What stories these roomy old houses might tell, if they could but speak! As it is, they in their stately simplicity suggest a great deal. They inculcate also a lesson of philosophy. They are now mostly inhabited by English families living on fixed incomes, and impervious to every French influence. A few are let as boarding houses to ladies—English, too—who have seen "better days" and are none the less sharply businesslike in looking out for profits. There are three casinos in a range of four miles, a good many hotels commanding heavenly views, and a few English book clubs and tennis courts. Episcopacy is well represented. The Briton has Low Church here, High Church there, a Jubilee Church somewhere else. There is said to be a deal of hot religious controversy over the different shades that divide and sub-divide. The chaplain of one place is as much heckled as a stickit-minister by a Scotch congregation. Nothing he can do will please the Low Church members of his flock. The poor man is slightly High, and is, of course, thought a Jesuit in disguise. He thought to set an example of cheerfulness by dancing at little festive gatherings. This brought the serious persons down upon him. A good many others found fault with the eye to good looks, good dress, graceful manners, and social standing evinced in his choice of partners. Was it Christian to let wallflowers remain wallflowers, or to neglect the shabbily-dressed girls?

Brittany roads would be the best in France for cycling were it not for the granite particles that lie thick on them. Tires are perforated just as if they ran over broken glass. It is amazing what shoals of cyclists the Southampton steamers shoot on to the Brittany coast. The lady-cyclists are seen at a great advantage beside the men. They sit erect on the saddle—I have not yet seen one with her nose on the handle-bar. Though they still wear skirts, the motions of their limbs does not strike one as fearfully ungraceful. Skirts, I see, are shortened. But why do bands of British cyclists sneeze in chorus as they shoot by French? Since they will behave like donkeys, why not bray at once?

The "bike" revolutionises in all directions. It wakes up—I am sorry to say often in a boisterous and cad-like way—lonely places. But it scatters money in wayside places. Towns used to be spoken of as congestions. The "bike" is de-congestionising as fast as it can. A casino hairdresser tells me that lady-cyclists (French) are losing their taste for capillary art and artifices. For one forehead fuzzy fringe he sold this season he sold fifteen last year. Now, such a fringe is thought cheap at 12f. Judge of the loss. The muscular fatigue of cycling tells also on casino profits. After doing thirty or forty miles, how can cyclists be attentive to a three-act play, or care to dance? They want to go to bed. The cycle keeps the young—and of both sexes—from going on fine Sundays to the English churches here. Dressmakers say it kills the time-out-of-mind taste for flimsy finery. The coquette now when before the mirror thinks chiefly of her necktie and the fancy "shirt" front that her open jacket shows. Englishmen not in the movement complain that cycling and other kinds of sport now fill the papers. A qui la faute? Paterfamilias has long gone in for the muscular Christianity of Kingsley. There has been nearly half a century of it. Youngsters were brought up like carnivorous animals. To have muscles they had to take up football, cricket, rowing, running, and the rest. To keep up and improve the muscles they had to devour meat—the worst brain food that there is. Eating often, and in large quantities, the brain and stomach were in conflict when studies had to be gone through. The victory was, of course, to the ignoble organ, the noble getting depleted. Thus ill-used it got sluggish, and to use one's brain became not a cause of pleasure but of pain. Those sneezing cyclists already mentioned can think of nothing but sport. It is appalling to think what will happen when fair cyclists bring their brains to the same state. I am not afraid of the sport-hobby being ridden to death in France. The French have bright, active minds, and take more pleasure in using them, than any sport-excitement short of betting could make up for. The cycle will be their servant, but not their master. Directly French fathers and mothers found that Rugby football, cricket, and other athletic sports prevented their boys from passing good exams., they fell into disfavour. The Collége Monge, where they were most favoured, found itself suddenly without pupils. Doctors then had their say, and assured us that meat and muscularity were a cause of premature old age.

I have been to a Pardon, or Pattern. The spirit is akin to what is rife at Lough Dearg. But the costumes, caps, old stone crosses round the shrine, and much other local colour, are lovely. The painter who has best depicted a Pardon is Jules Breton. Saints venerated by Bretons knew how to choose sites for their shrines. The whole province is dotted over with pilgrim resorts. Convents are to be found near most of them; some of them are inns where hospitality is neither gratis nor very dear; some are schools which, in separate buildings and grounds, are devoted to the education of genteel, non-genteel but paying, and working-class youth. For the latter charitable patrons pay. There are other convents that receive only the poor children of the neighbourhood as day pupils.

In summer, the nuns go away for a change. Lay sisters and a Directress remain and turn these houses into hotels and pensions. They are mostly to be found near the sea-side, behind ridges that shelter trees from ocean winds. Wayfarers can put up at them for eight francs a day. The extra charges are not high. If one binds one's self to stay a week, terms are a good deal reduced. Coffee and wine are not included in the general price for lodging and entertainment. Those whom three meals a day do not satisfy can have goûter or a "snack" for fifty centimes. A room larger than a nun's cell is charged for at the extra rate of three francs. Children under ten and servants are received for twenty-five francs a week. Young ladies can hire a piano for eight francs a month. Gentlemen are thought more troublesome and more greedy than ladies, and charged for accordingly. That is to say, their greed and the trouble they give are appraised at two francs a week extra. "No English clergyman need apply for admission." No English lady or gentleman can be taken in unless well introduced. English boys must keep out in the cold with the clergymen.

A French person asking for admittance must have a certificate of religion and good manners from a Bishop or a Vicar-General. Non-Catholic English men and women are taken in if very well introduced. But their room is preferred to their company. "They have," said a reverend mother, "a fault-finding spirit, and are not accommodating. We must give them veal often because Brittany sheep are so small, and oxen so tiny. All the veal has been well fatted, and is succulent and toothsome. Whenever they see a dish of veal they begin to grumble. It is no use hinting that they had better go away, for they are well alive to the advantages of the place." "In all reason," said a Catholic pensionnaire, "they ought to be delighted. The big bell is, no doubt, rung at five and then at seven in the morning; but the first breakfast is not at seven. It is served according to the hour of the tide, to enable us to bathe in the morning. We have any quantity of bread, butter, fresh milk, fresh eggs, and those who like it have café au lait. Lunch is at noon, and consists of fried fish, ragout, cold meat, potatoes, or other vegetables. We have soup, fish, beef, with vegetables, roast or fricasseed fowl or rabbit, or roast mutton or veal, and dessert at dinner. All is good. The whole house, including the kitchen, is, as you have seen, beautifully clean, spacious, airy, simple. Outer doors are locked and lights out at nine. Of course there is no casino or anything approaching it. We, who come to rest and enjoy air that dilates one's lungs and stimulates one's vitality, do not want plays acted by scratch companies, or les petits chevaux to bet on. You have seen the shady grounds so rare at the seaside; you have seen the wild headland on which they open, and the lovely cliff, sands, and sea encircling it. What reasonable being with an eye for beauty could require more? It is quite true that the boarders enable the Order to educate poor children gratis. The nuns have a work to accomplish with the money they make. Why should they not then look to the exact payment of bills?" It appears that their capacity as business women was jeered at by some British boarders. The most sarcastic of the lot bears a high Scotch name, and a retired Field Officer. I am not going to tell the name of this convent. If I did, the headland next summer would be black with trippers. I have spoiled so many lovely spots by descanting on their beauties in TRUTH.

Prince Lobanoff could have never, with the sanction of the Czar, encouraged the Sultan to massacre. But he would have said, "Since the massacred Armenians cannot be called to life again, let us derive what benefit we can from the slaughter. Lord Salisbury put spokes in our wheels at Berlin. We can now return the compliment by showing what a sorry plight he is in as Protector of the Armenian Christians. France will follow our lead, whatever we may do." Prince Lobanoff was new to his department and had not its restless agents in hand. Had he been able to control them, much bloodshed and misery would have been avoided, for he dreaded turmoil, war, and the unloosing of great forces. His greatest object was, from day to day, to conceal his unfitness for public business. He could go in a groove, but had long grown unfit to cope with new difficulties. A heavy feeder, and a frequent diner out, he had ruined his digestion and arterial system. The veins were "furred" like an old boiler. Indeed, they were like the shank of a clay pipe. As to the fine capillary arteries that renovate skin and brain, they were silted up. The poor starved brain was often in a state of daze and dizziness. Memory grew slippery, and words were not always at command. A doctor, who saw a good deal of him at Contrexéville, said to me last year that the notion of a war scared him, and that he was never tired of preaching the policy of watching and waiting. But he could not master any situation, and might therefore be pushed into making a plunge. He showed great skill in hiding his infirmities. One of his little tricks was pretending to ask for information and encouraging interlocutors to give it to him at great length. Prince Lobanoff's grandfather not only drew up the Treaty of Tilsit, but organised a bureau of espionage in Paris, the most complete that was ever known. He bribed a number of War Office clerks to give him information about Napoleon's plans and to lend him secret documents, copies of which were sent to Russia. As he was coxcombical, in some ways odd, and said to be rolling in riches, he went on some time without being suspected. He got, through his cleverness and address, out of the scrape, but had to go back to Russia. The late Prince had a passion for collecting autographs of historical personages and other documents. He was a Mary Stuart enthusiast. Mary Stuart, he found, always interested ladies throughout Europe. He gave up believing in her innocence, but thought she deserved absolution when judged according to the standards of her time and the circumstances of her life.

MAIGNEN'S FILTER is the only one adopted after public competition by the City of Paris (10th July, 1896) see Bulletin Municipal Officiel, 30th July, 1896.—Full particulars from Maignen's Filtre Rapide & Anti-Calcaire Co., Ltd., 255, Regent-street, London, W.

LETTER FROM THE LINKMAN.

THE eldest son of the celebrated Madame Ancelot, Dear Lady Betty, once produced a piece of stamped paper and observed, "You see this piece of paper? It is worth twenty-five centimes. When I have written my name at the bottom it will be worth nothing."

The Radical Party is, perhaps, worth little at the present moment, but when Lord Rosebery has placed himself at the head of it—it will be worth nothing.

* * * * *

Writing in the Quarterly Review in 1872, the late Mr. Abraham Hayward, the brilliant essayist, declared that there was then "Nothing first-rate under forty." How much more reason have we to complain that this is so now! The English of to-day can organise, can classify, can manufacture, can discover—but they seem to be utterly unable to create or to decorate. Science and mechanism are at the highest point that they have ever attained, but originality—not eccentricity—the creative faculty, literature and art appear to be set at excellent mediocrity. We are immoderately moderate.

Where are the leaders who tower above the rest of their contemporaries? We may ask, as Mr. Hayward did a quarter of a century ago, where is the Byron, the Scott, the Wordsworth, the Coleridge, the Shelley, the Moore, the Tennyson, the Dickens, the Thackeray, or the Carlyle of the younger generation? Where is the Sir Thomas Lawrence, the Constable, the Wilkie, the Turner, the Flaxman, the Chantrey, the Landseer, or the Millais? Where, in politics, are the successors to Disraeli, Gladstone, Cobden, Bright, Peel, and Palmerston. Where are those whose wit equals that of Sydney Smith, Hook, or Hood? Where, in English society of to-day, are the ladies who have replaced even Lady Palmerston, the late Lady Waldegrave, or the late Lady Molesworth of Pencarrow? Where are the brilliant conversationalists who compete with the late Lord Houghton, the late Mr. Abraham Hayward, the late Mr. Bromley-Davenport, and others of the same calibre? Where even is he who has succeeded the late Mr. Augustus Lumley as the hero of the drawing-rooms and the arbiter of fashion?

We are, I know, all famous now—especially the infamous—but whose name is destined to live to-morrow?

* * * * *

I have no intention of being extravagantly unfair, but is not the following imaginary conversation almost word for word such a one as may be heard every night at every other dinner-table throughout the country?

Scene: Drawing-room. Time: Before Dinner.

He is introduced to her. Let us name them A and B. They bow. Pause.

B: "What wretched weather!"

A: "Wretched, and it does not look like clearing soon."

Another pause. Dinner is announced. Having settled at the table:

B: "What pretty flowers!"

A: "I was admiring them. They arrange flowers now much better than they did."

That leads to nothing. After an interval of silence:

B: "Have you taken to cycling?"

A: "Oh, yes; I was one of the first to ride."

B: "Do you cycle in the Park in the morning?"

A: "Not now. I found it was becoming too crowded, so I returned to Battersea Park."

This seems to meet with her approval. Evidently a man who follows the fashion and disposed to be exclusive.

B: "I much prefer Battersea Park—all the best people now ride there."

Again this leads no further. After an embarrassing pause:

A: "Have you been very gay this season?"

B (brightening up. An admirable chance this for giving him the means to place her socially, and to enable her also to form an estimate of HIS social value): "Yes, we were very busy. We have been out almost every night. Were you at the Duchess of Dunderhead's last night? It was a capital ball."

Lets him know by this that she is in the Duchess's set, and gives him an opportunity of making known to her that he is in it too.

A: "No, I was so sorry, but I had promised to go to Lady Fitzfoodle, and it was too late when I left there to go on."

B gives him a quick look to discover if he is telling the truth or is merely attempting to conceal the fact that he had not been invited by the Duchess. Not being fully satisfied:

B (frigidly): "Yes, I did hear that Lady Fitzfoodle gave something. What was it like?"

A: "Oh, slightly dull of course, but she is a very old friend of mine, and I had to go to it."

B (thinking): "Well, in any case he is obviously not utterly below contempt, as he is an old friend of Lady Fitzfoodle."

Thaws . . . . . .

And so the conversation—if it may be called conversation—drags drearily on until the hostess rises and the women have left the room.

That which is still more pitiable is that this same conversation with trifling modifications will be repeated indefinitely by A and B even if the acquaintance between them continues for thirty or forty years!

Let the man hazard an original observation he will at once in May fair society be regarded as being "bad form;" in middle-class society as being "vulgar;" and by club-men as being "dangerous."

Originality in the England of to-day is equivalent to Original Sin in theology. You must repent and do penance for it.

Upon the other hand, if a man or a woman succeeds in obtaining the reputation of being privileged to say or to do unconventional things, he or she will be permitted to make the rudest and the most offensive remarks, and all will laugh at whatever he or she may say.

Conformity, however, is the order of the day. Each tries to adopt submissively the prevailing opinion of men, manners, and things. Individuality, independence, originality are very serious social crimes. Conversation, talent, art, and literature have never thrived, nor ever will thrive, under the depressing rule of conformity.

Our masters the mediocrities!

* * * * *

According to the Times, Messrs. Sampson & Low are about to publish a work entitled "The Civilisation of Our Day." "It will consist of a series of about twenty-five essays on phases of civilisation at the close of the nineteenth century." It should be interesting to compare this with the celebrated "Julien, ou la Fin d'un Siècle," by M. Bungener, which attempted to give a clear account of civilised life in Paris at the end of last century.—Believe me to be, very truly yours, MARMADUKE.

SPORTING NOTES.

THE numerous transactions on the Cesarewitch and the Cambridgeshire which have been recorded, represent merely the skimble-skamble fancies of the public, which are usually founded on the most intense ignorance. Count Schomberg, who was actually backed down to 16 to 1 before the weights appeared, is the nominal favourite for the Cesarewitch, but M. Lebaudy's steed appears to me to have quite enough weight. Captain Machell will be dangerous with either Portmarnock (the original favourite for the handicap) or Dosser, and the latter is believed to be a really good stayer. Rockdove (who won last year) is well in, but she may not stand a preparation. Sir Visto will probably be dangerous, and Bournemouth and Scotch Wisdom are general tips at Newmarket. Pride has been preposterously overweighted, and few people expected that Omnium II. would be top weight, but this horse certainly ought to have won the Ascot Cup. If Laodamia can stay she is nicely in, and she ran remarkably well in the Ascot Cup.

Thais is by way of being the favourite for the Cambridgeshire, but she does not seem to be in it with 8 st. It is very doubtful whether she could stay the course with a fast-run race, and I fancy she is more likely to go for the Duke of York Handicap at Kempton Park, or she may be kept for the Derby Cup. Red Heart is remarkably well in for the Cambridgeshire, but he may lack stamina for the last 200 yards, and he is another candidate that might be seen out at Kempton Park. Ghislaine is perhaps the pick of the lot in the Cambridgeshire. Teufel is thrown in with 6 st. 7 lb., and on the Kempton Park running last year this would mean St. Frusquin with about 7 st. 3 lb., whereas Mr. de Rothschild's colt is honoured with 9 st. 3 lb. Teufel has been running very badly this season, and probably (like so many others in this list) he cannot stay. Bay Ronald and Knight of the Thistle are both well in, and if Mr. McCalmont's colt should happen to win the Jockey Club Stakes (Persimmon having to give him 17 lb.), he would have no extra weight to carry. Laodamia will be near winning if in her best form, as she has the same weight (8 st. 9 lb.) as when she ran so well here as a three-year old, when Molly Morgan won. Indian Queen, who won in a canter two years ago, has risen in the estimation of the handicapper, as he has 8 st. to carry, whereas she had only 7 st. 1 lb. in the City and Suburban, and 7 st. 12 lb. in the Kempton Park Jubilee Handicap, and for the latter event she did not accept.

St. Frusquin has "gone," and he will be at once relegated to the stud. After galloping well for several days, Mr. de Rothschild's horse again manifested symptoms of soreness, and his condition was found to be so serious as to render it highly improbable that he would get through another preparation. The collapse of St. Frusquin is greatly to be regretted, as his withdrawal from the turf will vastly diminish the interest of the Jockey Club Stakes, and of next year's £10,000 races, in all of which he was entered.

Canterbury Pilgrim runs for the Park Hill Stakes on Friday, and she missed her Sandown engagement in order that she might be kept fresh for this race. Lord Derby's mare ought to defeat Helm, Miss Fraser, and all the others in the entry. Labrador cannot well lose the Doncaster Stakes, and The Rush or Laodamia should secure the Doncaster Cup. Mr. Dobell's horse has to give the Irish mare 2 lbs, whereas in the Cesarewitch they are handicapped at 1 lb. Love Wisely has the best chance for Friday's race if Major Egerton's estimate of Mr. Bass's colt is correct. In the Cup he will be receiving 4 lb. from The Rush, and 2 lb. from Laodamia. In the Cesarewitch, Love Wisely has to give 1 lb. to the horse, and 2 lb. to the mare. Palaverer and Whiston (who won last year) are well in for the Portland Plate to-morrow, and Monterey ought to be able to win the Rous Plate. There is nothing in the Scarborough Stakes that can beat Shaddock, and the Zetland Stakes should fall to Nouveau Riche, as Roquebrune has again been stopped in her work, and it is to be feared that this filly will never start for another race.

Melton, who won the Derby and St. Leger of 1885 for his breeder, Lord Hastings, has returned to England, having been purchased from the Italian Government by the proprietor of the Westerham Hill Stud for £11,340, which is a very much larger price than was paid for the horse when he left this country six years ago. Melton's fee next season will be 200 gs. He is the sire of Best Man, Avington, and Bullingdon, and the last of these would assuredly have won the Derby and St. Leger of 1894 for the Duke Westminster if he had been all right at Epsom, and if he had lived and flourished until Doncaster.

It is understood that the Stewards of the Jockey Club have been in considerable doubt as to whether it would be prudent of them to persevere for another year with their two £10,000 Stakes, which were established in 1891 with such mighty trumpetings. As the late Sir Robert Peel would have remarked, there were "three courses" open to the Stewards—to continue the stakes as before, to give them up, or to reduce their value. It has been finally decided to keep them on as before, and the Princess of Wales Stakes of £10,000 and the Jockey Club Stakes of £10,000 for now foals and yearlings, to run in 1899, will therefore close next Tuesday. In the hope of attracting larger fields, the owner of the second horse will in future receive £1,500, instead of £400, and the third is to get £1,000 instead of £200. As the bonuses to the nominators of the first and second horses amount to £600, it follows that the winner's share of the £10,000 will be only £6,900, which seems to me to be a preposterous cutting up of the stake. The idea that the change will lead to larger fields appears to be utterly chimerical, for the best horses of each year are tolerably sure to be entered for these races, and there will be no temptation to the owners of inferior animals to oppose them, as they could gain nothing by doing so. It is, however, highly discreditable to the authorities at Newmarket that the absolutely idiotic conditions as to penalties have not been altered. We still have the winner of the Derby, St. Leger, and Grand Prix made to carry 12 lb. extra, while any winner of £3,000 has a penalty of 9 lb. We see the result this year. Persimmon has 12 lb. extra for winning the Derby, whereas St. Frusquin's penalty would be only 9 lb., although he has carried off two stakes of £10,000 each. Why, in the name of common sense, is not the extreme penalty imposed for every winner of £4,000 and upwards. The official advertisement in the "Calendar" draws the attention of public breeders to the fact that generous bonuses are given to the nominators of the first and second horses, but it is a strange fact that although thousands of foals and yearlings have been entered for rich stakes of this description by individuals who breed for sale, yet never has one of these events been won by such an animal. These races are certain to fill, as the Stewards stipulate for only 200 entries for each stake.

Lord Beaconsfield described the Doncaster race week as "the Carnival of the North," but from a variety of causes the meeting has lost a great deal of its old prestige. At a former period, Yorkshire and Lincolnshire hospitality during Doncaster week was on a scale that reminded one of Lady Holland's famous receipt for making Parmesan cheese, which commenced—"Take the milk of a hundred cows." Now, however, several of the great country houses which used to send the largest parties, are regularly closed during the week, and other places which are still open have only an exceedingly limited number of guests. The Leger has too often of late years been regarded as a "one-horse" race, and, putting aside that event, there is really nothing in the Doncaster programme which is worth much trouble. The Champagne Stakes, which has seriously suffered by the establishment of the Middle Park Plate, has been knocked to pieces by the £3,000 race at Kempton Park. This event will fall into utter contempt unless the unreasonably parsimonious authorities will tardily increase its value considerably, and there ought to be penalties for winners of £1,000 and upwards. The Leger for 1898 closes next Tuesday. Not one farthing is even nominally added to this race, which is simply a sweepstake for £25 each. Contrast this beggarly meanness with the conditions of the Grand Prix de Paris, which event also closes next Tuesday. Here we have £8,000 of bonâ fide added money, which is not (as is usually the case in England) given with a great deal of elaborate fuss, while most or all of it is quietly recovered from the subscribing owners by means of a dexterous arrangement of entrances and forfeit. To engage a yearling for the Leger means a liability of £25, but in the Grand Prix an owner can "get out" for £4 by declaring forfeit about six weeks before the race is run, by which time the chances of every animal in the entry can be estimated with tolerable accuracy, or, at least, it can be ascertained whether it is worth while to leave a beast in.

I hear that Catherine Luther, the dark filly by St. Simon out of Heresy, for which Mr. A. James paid 3,900 gs. at the sale of the Sledmere yearlings twelve months ago, is believed to be a real flyer, and she is to make her début in the Middle Park Plate, when Velasquez will have to give her 7 lb., and the Duke of Westminster's Orelio (brother to Ormonde) will probably make his début in that race as well. If Catherine Luther misses the Middle Park Plate she can try again in the Dewhurst Plate, when she will meet Goletta, with 7 lb. the best of the weights.

The Eclipse Stakes for 1899 has obtained 199 entries, as against 197 for next year, and 213 for 1898. This year there were 191 entries, which dwindled down gradually to an acceptance of twenty-five, and the race resulted in a considerable loss to the fund. The Eclipse Stakes began very well in 1886, when Bendigo ran, and there was a surplus of £430. The race was run for the second time in 1888, when Orbit was the winner, and the result of 169 entries was a deficit of £2,604. In 1889 there were 298 entries, with a surplus of over £1,100, and Ayrshire was the winner. There was no race in 1890, but in 1891, when Surefoot won, the result of 243 entries was a surplus of £1,675. There were 191 entries for 1892, and £4,831 had to be added from the fund, Orme being the winner. In 1893 Orme won again, and there was a surplus of £617, the race having begun with 208 entries. That, however, was the very last of the years of plenty, and now the lean times commenced in earnest. In 1894 there were 209 entries, and £810 had to be drawn from the fund, Isinglass being the winner. Last year, when Le Justicier won, there were 188 entries, and £1,081 was added. It is evidently a mere toss up how a subscription stake of this kind will turn out in the end.

The Eclipse Stakes of 1899 has been patronised by all the leading owners, but the public breeders have not been very generous in their support here. French owners have entered foals and yearlings, and Messrs. Belmont and Lorillard have engaged a number of animals bred in the United States, while Baron Bordinard is responsible for two colts by Melton, which were bred in Italy. The Duke of Westminster has fourteen entries, and one of his foals is a colt by Amphion out of Rydal (dam by Kendal), while another is a colt by Orme out of St. Mary, by Hermit. The Duke of Portland has ten entries,

Lord Alington has seven, the Duke of Devonshire has six, and Mr. L. de Rothschild has five, one of his yearlings being an own sister to St. Frusquin. The Prince of Wales has engaged his colt foal Sandringham, who is own brother to Persimmon. Mr. Platt, of the Bruntwood Stud, has thirteen entries, and several of the yearlings he has engaged are to be sold at Doncaster to-day. Among his foals is an own brother to Saintly, and at his sale next year there ought to be some high bidding for the filly by Kendal out of St. Marguerite, dam of Sea Breeze. Lord Rosebery's entry includes a filly foal by Sheen out of Illuminata, dam of Ladas, but he has no relative to Velasquez. Sir Samuel Scott is apparently intending to go in for breeding, as he has entered three foals.

There are only thirty-eight entries for the Prince Edward Handicap of £2,000, which is run at Manchester on the 26th, and very few good horses have been engaged. The best of the older ones are Troon, Laveno, Hebron, Ramapo, Ghislaine, Paris III., and the everlasting Gangway. The Duke of Westminster has engaged no fewer than four of the three-year-olds—Rampion, Conroy, Shaddock, and Kelvin, and the others of this age include King Hampton, Bradwardine, Belleven, Spook, Balsamo, Amphosa, and His Reverence.

There will be racing next week at Warwick, Great Yarmouth, Ayr, and Lingfield, but there is not likely to be any sport of much general interest before the Newmarket First October Meeting. There is, for some reason or other, an interval of three weeks this year between Doncaster and Newmarket, instead of a fortnight as usual. Intense (who ought to have won the Gimcrack Stakes at York) will secure the Gorleston Plate at Yarmouth, if she runs, and she has no other engagement this season.

In the midst of cricket we are in football. On September 1 broken collar-bones, inquests, and other exciting incidents of the winter game were in full swing. The Australian tour is over, county cricket is ended, and the curtain has dropped so suddenly that one can scarcely realise it. Let me begin by wishing the Colonial team a hearty farewell. When they came over they were practically a new team to us. Naturally, they were doubtful as to their powers and nervous about the success of the fresh hands. They said they would be satisfied if they won half the games and one test match. The result of the tour every one knows. They won a test match. Despite that wretched innings at Lord's, they were not beaten by an innings until they met Thornton's team at Scarborough. Like the famous team of 1882, they were not beaten by a single county. And this is all the more remarkable having regard to the new first-class counties that now figure in the list. Yorkshire, who easily heads the counties, played them three times and never won, although Peel proved most fatal to the visitors on every other occasion. They are a solid, stodgy class of batsmen, without any brilliant hitters like Bonnor, Massie, or Macdonnell. On the whole the fielding was brilliant, and Kelly at the wicket has accounted for a lot of victims. On a soft wicket McKibbin was deadly, and the bowling was much stronger than had been anticipated. At the same time they did not seem to like a wet wicket, and Hearne quite upset them in the last innings of the tour at Hastings.

In consequence of the incident as to the follow-on at the University match, the county secretaries have received a letter from the M.C.C. asking their views as to a change in the follow-on rule. If they desire a change, one of two courses is proposed. Either the follow-on is to be optional, or abolished, and then a team is to be able to "declare" when it pleases. Well, the follow-on does often work a hardship, and its object is not very apparent. The present rule as to declaring an innings is very arbitrary, and it is hard to ask professionals to risk their talent money and their averages by going in and getting out quickly.

After all, it is not only wicked man who is the sporting pot-hunter. The lady, in such pursuits as she can win a pot, runs him close in all his vagaries from the ways of honourable sport. Anyone who has taken an active part in local tennis tournaments in which visitors compete has often noticed the marvellous difference there is in a young lady's play before and after the handicap is announced. Then there is the other class of young lady who pesters the nervous umpire. He is, most likely, perilously perched in a high wind on the top of a pair of housemaid's steps. He combines in himself the duties of scorer, umpire, and linesman. Suddenly she cries, "How's that?" He says, "Play on," and a look of petulant dissatisfaction passes over the face of the player, who is probably not enjoying the first flush of youth and beauty. So she goes on until the umpire gets flustered, and gives a ball "out" in her favour when there has been no appeal at all. Everybody else sees it is in, and she herself plays at it and misses. The other side, surprised, ask her if she did not think it was in. She is too old a bird to be caught. She murmurs something about "What does the umpire say? What he says must be right," and she takes the game and set. Then linesmen are appointed, and her play and appeals fall off. Now this is a kind of lady player whom one too often meets. Strange as it may seem to say so, it is absolutely the duty of players in all games to assist the umpires as much as possible, and prevent the necessity of having linesmen, or so on. This can only be done by honest and straightforward playing, and by refraining from making appeals that are entirely uncalled for.

The latest form of German competition is that Schlee, the goal-keeper of the German Association Football team that has been visiting us, has signed on for Sheppey United. He is practically the only man in the team with any idea of the game. He has lived at Woolwich, and no doubt learned the game there. League matches are in full swing, and the Albion has started off by beating Aston Villa. In the Southern League, importations from the North and Midlands should raise the standard of play. The London Football Association has declared for amateurism, and really some such body is required to manage the amateur interests of the metropolis. I believe at Charterhouse School the League system prevails with beneficial results, and it would be a good thing in many ways if a strong Southern Amateur League were formed. As for Rugby football, the professionals will have a large accession to their ranks in the North, and it will not be long before similar developments may be expected in the West.

The autumn golf season is just now at its zenith. Many of the cracks were absent from the jubilee vase competition at St. Andrews. However, there were several scratch players, and one of them, Mr. Boothby, met Mr. Blackwell with four strokes in the final. The latter played a strong game, especially when going out, and won easily, as his opponent was clearly off his putting. At Comin, Sayers played a remarkably accurate game against Auchterlonie, the ex-champion, and beat him. A grand match of thirty-six holes was played at Hunstanton between Vardon and Herd. The former was five down at the end of the first round, but afterwards the champion played up splendidly and halved the match. The morning was fine and the afternoon soaking wet, and as Vardon is best on fast greens, his success was remarkable. In fact, at the fifteenth he was one up, and after halving the next two he played badly at the last hole and Herd halved the game.

At Wood Green the amateur records were beaten in the ten miles bicycle race after the sixth mile. Palmer, the winner, was well paced, but Bardsley rode rather disappointingly. At the Blackheath Harriers' Sports a similar race was badly muddled. The pacing was bad and there were apparently no lap scorers, and the judging did not give satisfaction. In the foot racing Parker's handicapping for the sprint, won by Davis, was excellent, and in the quarter, Butler, the medical student, won in brilliant style from scratch. At the L.A.C. Meeting on September 28, Fenton and Sturgess, the champion, are matched for a mile walk which should be worth seeing.

MAMMON.

From MOSES MOSS to BENJAMIN BOSS.

Sunday.

MY DEAR BEN,—The feature of the past week has been the growing influence which the American market is exercising upon the general position on the Stock Exchange. To begin with, the course of the money market is now being entirely guided by the requirements of gold for the United States, while on the other hand the important advance which has taken place in Yankee Rails tends to encourage an improvement in the other departments. These are undoubtedly Preparing for Active Business.

There was a pause, owing to the uncertainty as to what sums in gold might still be required for the States, but a temporary cessation of the demand for the precious metal has caused a reaction in the Money Market, rates in which had previously been rising sharply; and if there should be no further important efflux of gold during the ensuing week, we shall probably see a marked rise in Home Railway stocks, which have been sold on the prospects of dearer money. Consols are already on the up-grade again, and it strikes me that the operators who have sold these with a light heart, as a hedge against commitments in other markets, will have much difficulty in getting them back again, unless some other political incident should come to their aid; but the political horizon is clearing at present, the position both in Constantinople and in Crete having improved, and, notwithstanding Prince Lobanoff's death, the Tsar is continuing his visits to the European Courts. My view, that the death of Prince Lobanoff would not cause any trouble in the markets, has been borne out by the result, and if only an immunity from unfavourable events could be secured for a few weeks, we should, doubtless, have a general revival in business. One by one the holiday-makers are returning from their various haunts, and it is quite on the cards that the fag-end of the present nineteen-day account will see a good deal of animation. The Kaffir Circus is on the tip-toe of expectation as regards the August crushings, and if the sanguine predictions of another record output should be realised, there would be every prospect of a fresh upward movement following the slight setback of the past week. The relations between the Transvaal and this country continue satisfactory, and although the war in Rhodesia has not yet come to an end, the latest official cablegrams are to the effect that the Matabele are tired of fighting. This has not, perhaps, a direct bearing upon Transvaal securities, but curiously enough the latter stocks are undoubtedly being kept down by the weakness in Chartered shares and others of that ilk, probably because they are held in many cases in the same quarters. The West Australian market has presented a firm front, although there has been here and there some sliding back. This, however, in view of the excellent news from the goldfields, is perhaps only a case of reculer pour mieux sauter. The Cycle market has braced up under the influence of the announcement of the Dunlop settlement, and there has also been some increasing demand for Brewery stocks; but the most active section has undoubtedly been that of American Rails, and, as the financial position in the States has been strengthened by the large gold shipments, and recent political developments are in favour of sound money, there has been a distinct disposition in London to buy some of the much-depreciated stocks in this department. In fact, the market has been more active than for many a month, and it would not be surprising to see it assume some of its old animation, especially if, as I anticipate, the Milwaukee dividend, which will probably be announced on Thursday, should prove very satisfactory and above the market estimate. The outlook is all the more promising as a large "Bear" account has been created, which acts as a support to the market.

Prospects of Home Rails.

The old saying that the hour is darkest before the dawn has again been illustrated by latest events with reference to the dispute in the engineering trade on the Clyde. On Saturday morning the news was all in favour of a far-reaching and protracted lock-out, and prices of the Scotch stocks fell sharply. At noon, however, telegrams came to hand stating that the dispute was in course of settlement, and wires have since been received stating that a settlement has been arrived at. It is a pity that matters should have been allowed to go so far as to create a very threatening position; and if a lock-out had really come to pass, the trouble would, doubtless, have spread to other districts. As it is, a heavy decline has been caused in the stocks of the Caledonian and North British Railways, which was aggravated by the very disappointing dividend, at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, of the Caledonian. This result has been brought about by an exceptional increase in the ratio of working expenses and by the over-estimating of the weekly traffics. In the meantime both lines are doing exceedingly well, and with the labour trouble removed, prospects are so favourable that I look for a further recovery, especially after the North British dividend has been announced. The stocks of the Heavy lines have been kept down, partly by the advance in the money market, and partly by the fear that the labour difficulty might also interfere in their case. Neither of these factors is any longer threatening the position, and I shall not be at all surprised if investment purchases were to be resumed, traffic returns continuing most substantial, and showing in most instances increases on the top of large traffics in the previous year. The total increase in the traffic returns for the nine weeks of the current year is now as much as £567,000, of which considerably more than one-half is due to the splendid passenger business, the holiday traffic having beaten the record. Throughout the recent spasm Dover "A" have maintained a firm appearance, and at 104 promise a further substantial advance, in view of large traffics and the decline in ratio of expenses. Brighton "A" have been steady at 184, and in this instance, too, some improvement seems warranted.

Further Advance in Yankee Rails.

The few remaining jobbers in the Yankee market have begun to smile again, for their department is broadening out in an almost unlooked-for manner, and if the animation continues, some of the truants, who have gone over to the Kaffir Circus, will probably return to their old love. The sharp rally is not perhaps surprising, when it is considered that this is the only department in which for the last three months a persistent fall has been going on, while quotations elsewhere have been rising. There was thus a disposition on the part of operators to again enter this market as soon as ever some rift in the clouds could be discerned. The large gold shipments from Europe to the United States, which now exceed 20,000,000 dols., and which were undoubtedly facilitated by heavy exports of grain from the States, coincide with favourable developments in the political position, and already we hear of an improvement in the commercial and industrial position. Whether this beneficial change in politics will be followed by fresh Republican reverses remains to be seen, but the chances of Mr. McKinley carrying the elections for the Presidency are undoubtedly greatly increased. The sweeping Republican victory in the Vermont State elections has been followed by very satisfactory proceedings at the Democratic sound-money convention in Indianapolis. The platform adopted is to the effect that the gold standard must be maintained, and also the parity of every dollar issued by the Government. The free coinage of silver is opposed, and currency reform is urged which would confine the Government to its legitimate functions, completely separate it from the banking business, and would afford to all sections of the country a uniform, safe, and elastic bank currency under Government supervision. General Palmer of Illinois has been nominated as a candidate for the Presidency, and Mr. Buckner for the Vice-Presidency. It is not, of course, likely that General Palmer will be elected President, but the very fact that the Democratic Party has split up on the sound-money question will greatly reduce Mr. Bryan's chances of election and increase those of Mr. McKinley. The platform of the sound-money Democrats, by the way, is far more outspoken, and the policy advocated is sounder than that of the Republican Party, so that Mr. McKinley might well take a leaf out of the book of the gold Democrats. The advance which has taken place during the past week has been important, as will be gathered from the following comparison :—

Champagne.—Périnet & Fils' Cuvée Réservée. Vintages 1884, 1887, and 1889, are of unrivalled quality and highly recommended for present consumption. Of all Wine Merchants.

	Price Jan. 2, 1896.	High'st in 1896.	Low'st in 1896.	Aug. 28.	Sept. 7.
Atchison	14½	18 3/16	9¼	11⅛	12¼
Do. Five per Cent. Prefs.	22	23⅞	14¾	17¼	18½
Atlantic Firsts	22	26 5/16	20	24¼	24¼
Canadian Pacifics	51¾	65⅛	51	58xd	60¼
Central Pacific	15½	17½	13⅛	13¾	14⅞
Denver	12⅜	14 11/16	10⅜	10⅝	11½
Do. Pref.	42¾	51⅞	39	40½	43½
Erie	14⅛	16⅛	12	12½	13¼
Lake Shore	144	155	138	144¼	148
Louisville	44⅝	56¾	38⅝	40¾	41¼
Milwaukee	69⅛	81⅝	62⅝	66⅞	71¾
Mis., Kan., and Texas	11¼	13 13/16	9¼	10½	10⅝
Norfolk Pref.	8	14⅛	10⅛	13	*13⅝
Nor. Pacific Pref.	12½	17 11/16	10 1/16	16¾	*20
New York Central	98	101⅞	91	94¾	95½
Ontario	13¼	16½	12¼	12½	13⅜
Reading	2	8 3/16	3¾	3¾	*7¼
Southern Ordy.	8¾	11⅛	7	7⅜	7⅞
Do. Pref.	26½	34⅜	18½	20	21¼
Union Pacific	4⅛	9¾	3⅛	5¼	6¼
Wabash Pref.	15¾	20 3/16	13	13	14½

* Cum Assessments.

The most important rise has taken place in Milwaukee which are up 5 points on large purchases both on this side and in Wall-street, apparently made in anticipation of a satisfactory dividend announcement. In some usually well-informed quarters a further improvement of 5 dols. and more is predicted. Denver Prefs. have also risen nearly 4 points, and this is a stock which certainly deserves special attention. Even in the now unlikely case of the Silver Party triumphing, the large traffics which it would gain from the silver mines in Colorado would offset other unfavourable features. But results for the year ending June 30 already show a marked improvement over the preceding year, the gross earnings having increased by as much as 634,000 dols., which work out to a net increase of 277,000 dols. There is a surplus over fixed charges of as much as 835,000 dols. for the past year, out of which 473,000 dols. was distributed in a 2 per cent. dividend on the Preferred. The strong revival in gold mining in Colorado is helping this line materially, and Denver Preferred at 43½ are still at a very moderate level for a dividend-paying stock, which will, no doubt, eventually receive its full 5 per cent. dividends again. With the Prefs. the Ordinary shares will no doubt also improve. Atchison Five per Cent. Prefs. have also recovered, but there is here still much room for an advance, and the same applies more particularly to Louisville and Nashville. This stock has been most persistently raided by the "Bears," and so much energy has been expended in keeping the price down that it almost looks as if large operators had banged Louisville in order to purchase Milwaukee and other stocks under the cover of this attack. The most unscrupulous rumours have been utilised for the purpose, such, for instance, as the probability of a receivership, altogether ignoring the fact that during the year ended June 30 the Road earned a substantial surplus. It is well known, moreover, that the Louisville and Nashville is under a conservative management, and that some of our first English houses are represented on its Board. All this makes it probable that at a given time the ursine party will be subjected to a very unpleasant squeeze. The stock was already in very short supply at last settlement, and will be more so at the next carry-over. By the way, there has been a moderate recovery in American Railroad Gold bonds. Should affairs continue to shape themselves favourably, there will be a most substantial appreciation in all these bonds, and I strongly advise my readers to hold these, and to average if they can afford to take the bonds up. On no account should they now part with their holdings. Canadian Pacifics have been firm on satisfactory traffic returns, the quotation having advanced again above 60. Grand Trunks, on the other hand, are weak, as neither the traffics nor the working statement are encouraging.

Foreigners and South Americans.

The political barometer having risen again, the foreign Bourses have taken heart of grace, and even the bonds of impecunious Spain are firmer. There appears at last to be some prospect of greater unanimity amongst the European Powers in putting pressure upon the Sultan, and thus we may perhaps see some further reforms being introduced. Yet a fresh outbreak in some other portion of the Ottoman Empire will always have to be faced, and I should be sorry to embark my money in Turks, or for the matter of that in Ottoman Bank shares, which have, however, now recovered to 11⅞. Italians appear to have benefited by the proposed alliance of the Prince of Naples with a Montenegrin Princess, a consequent rapprochement with Russia being hoped for. Should no fresh trouble threaten the peace of Europe during the next month or so, we may look for a very active campaign on the Continental Bourses, and amongst the issues which will then make their appearance will no doubt be the new Spanish Quicksilver Loan and another instalment of the Chinese Loan. Argentine Government stocks have, after being long neglected, displayed more strength, in anticipation of the unification scheme being carried out. Cedulas are distinctly firmer, and as far as the National Series is concerned this is not surprising, as from the investment point of view they yield at the present gold premium from 7 to 8 per cent. per annum. The question of course is whether the premium will not advance again. There have been rumours of some proposed arrangement with the Provincial Cedula-holders, and it has been pointed out that the holders might take over the Provincial Mortgage Bank, and that the Cedula bondholders might besides obtain some provincial bonds from the province of Buenos Ayres; but the wish is no doubt father to the thought in this case. Uruguay bonds have hardened, the Old Loan being quoted at 50⅛, and the New Loan at 70. The remittances on account of the service of both these issues are being made with commendable regularity. A feature has been the advance in Mexican Sixes, the Old Loan having reached 94 again. Peruvian Corporation stocks are also at last on the up grade, the Debentures being up to 40. Amongst the South and Central American rubbish stocks there has been hardly any movement.

The Kaffir Interregnum.

Movements in the South African market have again been fitful and irregular, operators still displaying a waiting attitude. However hopeful the predictions as regards the crushings of the Witwatersrand Mines for August may be, the market would like to see actual facts, and we have thus another interregnum to pass through. All the same, advances have not been wanting, notably in Village Main Reef, Rand Mines, Kimberley Roodepoort, Geldenhuis, Salisbury, and a dozen others; while on the other hand, Modderfontein, Simmer and Jack, Ferreira, Jumpers, Orion, and others have declined. There has been no special reason for these relapses, with the exception of small realisations, which have had an exaggerated effect. The relations between the Transvaal

Notice to Connoisseurs of Fine Dry Champagne.—Périnet & Fils' Cuvée Réservée, Extra Sec, is in magnificent condition, at Hotel Cecil, Hotel Savoy, Midland Grand Hotel, Spiers & Pond's Hotels and Buffets, and most leading Hotels & Restaurants.

and this country continue satisfactory, notwithstanding the efforts which are being made in certain quarters to stir up strife again; and now that Lord Rosmead, the High Commissioner, has returned to South Africa, and Mr. Greene is shortly expected at his post in Pretoria, it is probable that matters will proceed still more smoothly. The event of the week has been the issue of the circulars giving full particulars of the great Barnato amalgamation. So much has already been written on this subject, that it is not necessary for me to enter into all the details of the arrangement. It provides for the absorption by the Johannesburg Consolidated Investment Corporation of the Barnato Bank, the Market Concessions Company, the Central Commercial Buildings Company, the Johannesburg Buildings and Estate Syndicate, and the Houghton Estate Company, and the acquisition of the Berea and Doornfontein Estates of the Johannesburg Waterworks Company. The new capital is to be distributed as follows:—Of the £2,750,000 to which the capital of the Johannesburg Consolidated will be raised, £834,000 is to be allocated share for share to the Johannesburg Investment shareholders; £1,503,125, or five for eight, to the Bank shareholders; £133,333 to the Waterworks Company; and various amounts to the other companies enumerated above, which bring up the total capital to £2,534,905. Then there is to be an issue of 200,000 shares to provide funds for the development of the valuable landed estates, and this issue is guaranteed by Messrs. Barnato at £3. 15s. per share. The premium on the issue (£500,000) will be placed to reserve, and with the existing reserves of the Barnato Bank and the Consolidated Investment Company—which together amount to £1,100,000—the Consolidated Company will start with a cash reserve of £1,600,000, which will place it in a very strong position. The above Barnato guarantee, by the way, is one of the largest of the kind ever given. Under the scheme the Barnato Bank shareholders will receive £2 10s. for each share, and although this does not bring up the price to the figure at which the extraordinary rush was made for them at the first issue, the shareholders have not much to grumble at, especially as their bank is amalgamated with a dividend-paying concern, the Johannesburg Consolidated Investment having just declared another dividend of 10 per cent., making 25 per cent. for the year. On the other hand, the Johannesburg Consolidated will no longer have to face the competition of a somewhat similar concern, as the Barnato Bank undoubtedly was. Very large assets are being acquired by the new company in land and house property in and around Johannesburg, which are undoubtedly of a very progressive nature; and if, as Mr. Barnato foreshadows, the Company will ere long be in the receipt of an income of £250,000 per annum from ground rents alone, this would be sufficient to ensure substantial dividends. This is altogether apart from the great possibilities of the holdings of mining and land shares acquired, and of the share in future financial business which will be assured to this powerful Corporation. Johnnies have been firm at 4, and Barnato Banks at $2\frac{5}{16}$. They would probably have experienced an advance had it not been for the somewhat dull surroundings. The Barnato group has, however, on the whole been very firm, and there have been smart improvements in two shares, viz., Kimberley Roodepoort to $3\frac{1}{8}$, and Langlaagte Royal to $2\frac{7}{16}$, after touching $2\frac{3}{4}$. This latter advance was evidently caused by a "Bear" squeeze, which would lead one to believe that the issue of the recent circular opposing the Barnato interest had been preceeded by special efforts of the ursine party. New Primrose are firm at $6\frac{1}{8}$, Glencairns at $3\frac{1}{2}$. New Rietfontein are firm at $3\frac{5}{8}$, and it is somewhat curious that Buffelsdoorn should be quoted only at 3 in view of recent very favourable developments on this mine. In the Robinson group there has been a good deal of selling of Randfontein, apparently for French account, which has caused a reaction to 3, but as soon as the Paris holders have sold out, we shall probably see a smart recovery. At all events, the sub-Companies of the Randfontein continue very strong, Porges Randfontein at $1\frac{15}{16}$, North Randfontein at $2\frac{3}{8}$, Robinson Randfontein at $1\frac{3}{8}$, and Block "A" at $1\frac{1}{8}$. It will be remembered that the Porges Randfontein commenced crushing on the first of this month. Langlaagte Estate have been firm at $5\frac{1}{2}$, and the dividend has just been received in London. Block "B" stand at $1\frac{7}{8}$, Langlaagte Star at $1\frac{9}{16}$. Last Monday's sale by the Langlaagte Estate and Building Company of townstands in the neighbourhood of Johannesburg appears to have realised excellent prices, and I hear that a number of these stands will be taken up by the railway, which runs through the property, for a station. Knight's have eased off to $7\frac{11}{16}$, but this is a most promising mine, and I look for a fresh advance in the near future. Modderfontein are now quoted $7\frac{1}{2}$ ex-rights, the issue of the new shares having caused a temporary decline. Modderfontein Extension have eased off in sympathy to 2. According to the Directors' report, good progress has been made with the exploration of the large area owned by this Company, which adjoins the Modderfontein and Van Ryn estates, and is no less than 4,550 acres in extent. The Company has still ample resources in hand, and, according to all indications, it has both the well-known Modderfontein and Van Ryn series of reefs. At the present prices the market estimate of the Modderfontein is very moderate, the capital amounting to £275,000 in £1 shares. Woodstock (Transvaal) have given rise to further dealings at $1\frac{3}{4}$, and advices are in every respect satisfactory. I understand that Mr. Roberts, the manager of the Woodstock, has also taken over the management of the Sheba Hill. Waterfall Estates are firm at $\frac{3}{4}$ to $\frac{7}{8}$, and there are very few shares on the market. Rand Reefs are quoted 10s. African Gold Properties are unchanged on the week, but the tone continues good. The shares of the Randt Gold Mining Company are being quietly bought by usually well-informed people at from 5s. 6d. to 6s. Oceana shares, now quoted $1\frac{5}{8}$-$\frac{3}{4}$, are likely to join in any general upward movement of the market now that, at Monday's meeting of the shareholders, the amalgamation has been confirmed, and there will in future only be the Oceana Consols to deal in, the African and Austral-African Companies having now ceased to exist. With reference to the Abercorn Reefs, Limited, and Umtoli Gold Reefs, Limited, I gave last week the address of a shareholder in London who proposes to act resolutely in this matter, and I hope that the other shareholders will combine to act with him in face of the unwarrantable action of the remaining three Directors—viz., Messrs. J. Dennis, J. W. Blackstone, and J. Coward. African Estates are slightly easier at $1\frac{7}{8}$. A few dissenting shareholders in Johannesburg, who held very unreasonable views, have now got out of their shares, which have been readily absorbed by the market. The bone of contention was the circumstance that the balance-sheet did not disclose the whole of the Company's business; but it is obvious that such a financial corporation must in its own protection suppress such details. That the opposing faction was only a small one is shown by the fact that the report was adopted at the Johannesburg meeting by 200,000 against 1,600 votes. It is generally acknowledged that this Company has passed through a very difficult and trying period in South Africa with considerable credit. It paid a dividend of 10 per cent. after one year's business, and accumulated a reserve of £225,000 out of profits, which is one-third of its entire issued capital, while it has a further sum of £20,000 undivided profit available in addition to £200,000 cash, and upwards of £500,000 in available securities. The Company is ably managed, and an important advance on the present price of the shares is looked for. The World's Patent Bradbury Drill shares are unduly depreciated at $1\frac{1}{8}$, and I hear of some favourable developments. A quarterly dividend of 10 per cent. is about to be paid, and a sub-Company has just been formed to acquire the American and Colonial patents, from which considerable profits are anticipated. The first return of the Bonanza is unexpectedly favourable, amounting to 3,803 oz., being an average yield of 17·09 per dwt. per ton from the mill, and 13·39 dwts. from the tailings. With reference to the Niekerk, it is now stated that the Company will be re-constituted under the name of the Niekerk Consolidated, with a capital of £200,000 in order to acquire 150 new claims south and east of the property, thus increasing the area to 217 claims. The Company has also acquired, for 7,000 shares, a large cyanide plant, and a 30-stamp battery is also about to be arranged for. I have repeatedly warned correspondents in "My Letter Box" against the Rowland Gold Mining Company, and as my contemporaries, including the Financial News and African Critic, have very extensively dealt with this apparently swindling promotion, I should have hoped that the latter had been put a stop to; yet I continue to receive inquiries from persons who read the advertisements in the country papers. Barberton Consolidated Goldfields have come into some demand at $1\frac{3}{8}$-$\frac{1}{2}$. This Company, which has a capital of £500,000 in £1 shares (of which 100,000 shares are reserved for working capital, and 50,000 remain unissued), owns 220 selected claims on either side of the Concession Creek in the Barberton district of the Transvaal and should come into some prominence when the Barberton district, as is generally expected, comes to the front. The Transvaal Exploring Company has just issued a circular making some very favourable announcements. In the first instance they state that they have acquired the ninety-nine years' lease of the farm Jackalsfontein, consisting of 4,800 acres, and the twenty-five years' lease, with the option of purchase, of the adjoining farm Kortfontein, which has an area of 1,500 acres. These farms are in the coal-bearing district of Middelburg, and, as will be gathered from the circular, the rights acquired are distinctly valuable, there being also a gold formation carrying banket on the property, which it is confidently expected will be found to contain payable gold reefs. The shares in this very ably and energetically managed Company appear to be cheap at their present price of from 1 to $1\frac{1}{8}$. Diamond shares have been firm, and almost the only shares for which Paris has sent buying orders have been De Beers, which are quoted $30\frac{1}{2}$. New Jagersfontein stand at $10\frac{3}{4}$, Kamfersdam at $1\frac{1}{8}$, and Consolidated Leicester Diamond at $1\frac{15}{16}$.

Golden West Australia.

At last the progress of the West Australian goldfields is finding expression in the official figures of the exports of gold from the Colony. These amounted in August to 29,517 oz. against 16,257 oz. in July, Coolgardie ranking with 7,009 oz., North-East Coolgardie with 8,723 oz., and Murchison 6,016 oz. These figures, however, are not complete, and do not represent the total output of the goldfields; and I would again press upon the Minister of Mines the advisability of arranging for regular monthly returns of the output of the mines to be made by the wardens of the different fields. The market for West Australian Mining shares has not yet quite recovered its tone, and the movements still show some irregularity, advances being offset by declines, the latter being just now in the majority. But the crushings are beginning to show better and better, new mines falling into line, as will be gathered from the yearly works' budget of returns announced by cable:—

	Tons of ore crushed.	Ounces of gold	Assay of tailings per ton.
Lady Shenton	237	954	37 dwt.
Golconda	415	974	$5\frac{1}{2}$ dwt.
Great Boulder Propr.	859	2,634	—
Hannan's, Brownhill	206	626	—
Menzie's Crusoe	530	1,031	15 dwt.
Maori (Menzies)	100	208	$1\frac{1}{4}$ oz.
Premier (25-Mile)	120	160	—
Gt. Boulder Main Reef	124	270	1 oz. 16 dwt.
Ivanhoe	187	1,335
Lady Loch	290	580
Lake View Consols	630	1,205	—

The Ivanhoe crushing for August just announced, and contained in the above table, is again a splendid one, being at the rate of nearly $7\frac{1}{4}$ oz. to the ton. The Lady Loch crushing, on the other hand, is unsatisfactory; and the decline in the shares which has recently taken place, was apparently in anticipation of this poor result. Some of the above, of course, are only trial crushings, which are, however, in every respect promising, and there can be no doubt that, when the larger mines have their additional stamps erected, the output will go up by leaps and bounds. The Hannan's Brownhill crushing appears to have disappointed some holders, as evidenced by the decline in the shares to $5\frac{15}{16}$, but I stated some time ago that until the machinery for treating the slimes was at work there was no prospect of an increased yield. This, I assume, will take another two months or so. I have reason for stating that one of the first groups to show a strong revival will be the Whitaker Wright group. Most of the men connected with these Companies are returning this week, and we are promised some lively doings. No doubt Lake View Consols, which have eased off to $8\frac{1}{4}$, will lead this revival. It is understood that Mr. Charles Kaufman, the consulting engineer of the West Australian Exploring and Finance group, is about to connect the battery of the Lake View Consols by pipes with the shafts of the Hannan's Golden Treasure and other mines on which there are already large volumes of water. This is expected to make it possible for the Lake View Consols to run 30 stamps, and thus to already increase the output in the near future. In the meantime a very large crushing has just been cabled over of 630 tons for 1,905 oz. in 23 days 23 hours. It will readily be seen how very large the output will eventually grow with the 100 stamps to which the battery is to be increased. The policy adopted not to crush only the very rich ore first, but to obtain such an average as can be maintained all along, is to be commended. Hannan's Golden Treasure is, as I have already stated, likely to prove another Lake View, and the shares at $1\frac{5}{8}$ are still very moderate in price. The Hannan's Golden Group is also a very promising mine, standing at $1\frac{9}{16}$. These, together with the Wealth of Nations Extended (now quoted $\frac{7}{8}$), and Wealth of Nations at $1\frac{1}{8}$, are the only shares of the Whitaker Wright group still standing at a low price. Mainland Consols stand at $3\frac{3}{16}$, Paddington Consols at $1\frac{7}{8}$, West Australian Exploring and Finance at $4\frac{3}{8}$, which is also the quotation of London and Globe Finance. In reply to several inquiries with reference to the position of the Wealth of Nations, I have obtained the information that the fall in these shares was merely due to the lack of water for crushing purposes, which causes delay. But in addition to the fact that the Government water scheme to Coolgardie is to be carried out, Mr. Charles Kaufman has arranged to build a dam that will give the mine an independent supply of water. In the opinion of insiders the present time is suitable for averaging Wealth of Nations for an early rise. The West Australian Goldfields group has been dull, notwithstanding the return of Mr. Allen H. P. Stoneham, and the Goldfields shares have declined to $9\frac{1}{4}$, and Hampton Plains to $4\frac{1}{8}$, although it is well known that a very favourable Directors' report is to be presented at the shareholders' meeting to be held this month, when a substantial dividend will be declared. The Ordinary shares in the West Australian Joint-Stock Trust stand at $3\frac{9}{16}$ premium, while the Founders' shares are easier at 60. The news from the Burbank's Birthday Gift is very favourable, and the shares are firmer at $2\frac{3}{8}$. From the Burbank's North advices are to hand that a new main shaft is being timbered, and that crushing will start on the 21st. These shares are quoted from $\frac{1}{8}$ to $\frac{1}{4}$ premium. The last excellent crushing of the Burbank's Birthday Gift, and the rich discovery made in the dam should, of course, also prove very favourable to the Burbank's North and Burbank's Consols. With reference to the latter, Professor Nicholas cables that he has taken possession of the property on behalf of the Company, and that he has discovered another reef on the mine in addition to those mentioned in the prospectus. He also states that the mine gives every indication of opening up well. The Explorers' Syndicate shares, now quoted $\frac{1}{4}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$ premium, should improve considerably in price during the next month or two, for it must be remembered that they have large interests in the various Burbank properties, which are opening up so well. I hear, moreover, that they own a share in the De Beers mine at Gibraltar, which is being quietly developed, and for a quarter share in which £150,000 in cash was recently asked. There seems to be no reason why the Explorers' Syndicate shares should not again touch the prices recorded last autumn, viz., 1¼ to 1½ premium. The Explorers' Finance Company is also doing a very good business, as the shareholders will know when the annual report is issued in January next, and I think the Directors are to be commended for not placing any new issues before the public at the present moment. The Founders' shares at from £20 to £25 are well worth picking up. Gladiators have been in active request at 1. The water-shaft has now reached a depth of 127 ft., and the main shaft in the Barrier Queen lease is down 113 ft., while developments with regard to the reef are described as satisfactory. Professor Nicholas's last cable from the Gladiator mine is to the effect that the main shaft is down nearly 190 ft., and that the prospects of the mine are as encouraging as ever. He believes that it will turn out to be one of the six best paying mines in Coolgardie. A moderate business has been transacted in Great Boulder Proprietary at 7½. With reference to Webster's Find, mentioned last week, I hear that private advices quite bear out the satisfactory reports received officially. This mine will probably be the first in the Niagara district to give returns. The shares are quoted in the neighbourhood of 10s. King of the West shares have improved to 2⅜. This promises to turn out a very important Company. The manager is urging that the machinery be at once erected, and he states that there is a large quantity of stone in sight, and immense reserves that may be reckoned upon to keep a large battery in full swing for years. This Company compares well as regards capitalisation. The issued capital amounts to only £40,000, of which 50 per cent. is available for working. Investors who buy the West Australian Mining Company's shares practically take an interest in what may be considered a West Australian mining trust owing to the large number of separate ventures with which this undertaking is identified. The shares remain steady at 8s. to 8s. 6d. Hit or Miss shares have improved to 2⅝, and it is hoped that the crushing which is now proceeding will yield very satisfactory returns. Bass and Flinders have been dealt in at 7s. 6d. According to the manager's report, dated July 11, the reef is widening as sinking progresses, and at the bottom level of 106 ft. the stone assays from 3 to 4 oz. per ton in the main shaft. The reef in shaft No. 2 is still disturbed, but the manager thinks that at about 70 ft. there will be a well-defined reef. The reef although broken is about 4 ft. in width at the bottom of the shaft at 55 ft. and prospects from 1 to 1½ oz. to the ton. The manager has also advised having cut a large reef which traverses the property, and which carries fine gold on the surface. The Legislative Council of Western Australia has agreed to the third reading of the bill authorising the expenditure of £2,500,000 for the water supply to the Coolgardie Goldfields, and we may now expect this scheme to be taken promptly in hand. It has been attacked in some quarters as unnecessary for the working of the mines, there being already sufficient water for that purpose; but this is an absurd argument. At the present rate of development the Coolgardie Goldfields will require ten times the amount of water as yet available, and there is, moreover, the drinking water to be provided for the fast growing population of the field, apart from the requirements of the railway. Samples from the City of London Gold Mine have assayed 3 oz. 5½ dwt. at the 60-ft. level, and 1 oz. 13½ dwt. per ton at the 82-ft. level. With reference to the Hicks' Mine it is stated that the battery will be delivered in twelve weeks' time. An adjoining property to the present lease has been purchased, thereby materially enhancing the value of the Company's property. I hear that the Golden Ridge (West Australia) Proprietary Company, the prospectus of which was published a fortnight ago, has been very favourably received, and I understand that it was over-subscribed. A cablegram received by the Gold Lands Corporation from Messrs. H. J. Saunders & Co. states that Mr. O'Brien reports from the Mona Gold Mine that the No. 2 reef varies from 2 ft. to 6 ft. in width, and shows visible free gold; while a sample of the ore on the dump panned out to 10 oz. per ton. Mr. Alexander Forrest has been interviewed on his return to Western Australia, and has made some very caustic remarks upon the state of affairs in London, with special reference to the flotation of Companies. What Mr. Forrest, however, seems to regret is that the investing public was unwilling to part with actual money. This impression has been apparently produced upon him by the fact that he floated a Company with a capital of £400,000, in connection with which he did not get any cash. Whether he would have preferred cash to shares he does not exactly state. It would appear to be about time that the Directors of the Golden Link Gold Mining Company, Limited, made a public statement as regards the state of affairs, these shares having dropped from 2 to 1 on all manner of rumours. The Gold Estates of Australia have issued an interesting report concerning their various properties, including the Union Jack Lease, and the Southern Boulder Leases, both at Hannan's. Concerning the Menzies' Alpha Leases the circular states that in a winze which is being sunk in the reef, it assays 12 oz. 18 dwt. of gold per ton at 59 ft. depth, and 23 oz. 17 dwt. at 75 ft. depth, these results being highly satisfactory. The Menzies' Consolidated, another sub-Company, has large bodies of ore proved in various parts of its mines, carrying 1½ oz., 3 oz., 5 oz., and 6 oz. of gold per ton, and a 20-stamp battery is being rapidly erected. The Menzies' Crusoë has now, with the above-mentioned crushing, yielded a total of 3,565 oz. from 1,390 tons, a very favourable showing.

Indian, New Zealand, and Other Mines.

Indian mining shares have moved somewhat irregularly, and while Goldfields of Mysore and Champion Reefs are firmer, Ooregum Ordinary and Prefs. and Nundydroog have eased off. In Australian mines other than West Australians, Aladdin's Lamp are fairly steady at 2 13/16, and Wentworth Proprietary are quiet at 15/16. A further improvement has taken place in Mount Lyell and Mount Morgan, and amongst Charters Towers shares Day Dawn P.C. and Day Dawn Block have improved; but Brilliant, St. George United, and Bonnie Dundee have eased off. Amongst Croydon mines there has been a strong tone for Croydon Consols at a smart advance. The latest cablegram is to the effect that the crushing for three weeks, of 422 tons, yielded 2,744 oz., equal to 6½ oz. per ton; also that crushing is going on continuously, and that the Company has purchased a quarter-interest in a 15-head stamp mill, thus effecting a considerable saving in cartage and cost of crushing. Broken Hill Proprietary are quoted 49s. 6d. I regret to notice that the private flotation of Australian Companies continues. Thus I see from a puff inserted in one of my contemporaries that the Nuggety Gully Gold Mine, Limited, has been formed to acquire a gold mine on the Calliope Goldfields, Queensland. If such a Company were formed publicly, and the prospectus fully advertised, this would be a distinct protection for the shareholders, and I hope that the public will discountenance this kind of flotation. Amongst New Zealand mines, a decline in Taitapu has been the feature. Consolidated Goldfields of New Zealand, Waitekauri, and Hauraki are also easier, and the only improvements have taken place in Woodstock and Komata Reefs. The fact is that the New Zealand market is overstocked, and until some of the new issues have found a resting-place this section will probably remain dull. In the general Foreign market very little business has been transacted. There has been a slight improvement in Lucky Guss and Burma Ruby, the former rising on the rich strike reported last week. Montana are also firmer, but Golden Feather and Charles Heidsieck Champagne.—Original Brand.—Extra dry or brut. Vintage 1889. One quality only shipped. To be obtained of all Wine Merchants and Stores.

China and Glass. — Messrs. Goode, Artists and Designers, solicit an inspection of their collection in their recently-extended South Audley-street premises, now by far the largest and most important in Europe. Messrs. Goode guarantee the excellence of all their productions, and invite a comparison of their prices with those of any co-operative stores.

Banner Gold have declined. The news from the Grand Central, the rich Mexican mine I mentioned some weeks ago, is so favourable that a further advance to 2½ has taken place. The Mines and Banking Corporation is a dividend-paying institution, and the shares are still obtainable at a small premium. It must not be forgotten that not one penny of promotion money was paid. Mines Contract shares are also likely to come into notice. I wonder who is behind the San Joaquim Gold Mining Company, Victoria, B.C., of which circulars are being sent out under date of August 28, signed R. W. Ward, setting forth that this property is proving rich in minerals and that the assays go very high. Mr. Ward puts a footnote that he will be at the Commercial Hotel, Kendal, on August 29 and September 5, and that letters addressed to him there will be forwarded. Is this a new way of raising the wind? A somewhat sensational statement was made lately on the strength of a Dalziel message from New York stating that Mr. Frank Gardner had completed for a London syndicate the purchase of a gold mine in Nevada for the sum of one million sterling. This, however, seems to be a large sum to pay for one of the Yankee mines, in which British investors have made such bitter experiences in the past.

My Letter Box.

The following are replies to inquiries from various correspondents:—

Government, &c., Bonds.

Sailor.—Your selection of Argentine and Chinese bonds A to D for investment is suitable for your purpose; but I think you could with advantage add the new Uruguay Five per Cent. Loan. Folkestone.—Yes, I still hold the view that Uruguay bonds are a first-class investment, and there is no reason to sell. A Beneficiary and a Trustee.—I have published your letter in this week's issue under "Various Investments" without comment, and I have no doubt that it will bring forth some expressions of opinion which will be useful to you.

Banks, Trusts, and Financial.

P. A., Stockwell.—I note that you have come to an arrangement, and hope that you have not been victimised too much. Chesterfield.—I cannot supply the information you require. Garonne.—I have repeatedly expressed the opinion that Douglas, Hungerford & Williams' system of speculation is not at all satisfactory; and that if these people were as infallible as they maintain, they would rather, I think, make 92 per cent. profit for their own account than for strangers. Of course, they may be philanthropists! I return the documents as requested. Insider.—1. Yes, if you have not paid the difference the broker would be justified in closing your account. 2. It is really impossible to tell without knowing all the circumstances; but if you have to deal with unscrupulous men, you must expect to be kept to the very letter of the law, and this you do not appear to have done. T. H. L. H.—I am sorry that, as a matter of principle, I cannot recommend stockbrokers. P.R.—I know nothing of the stockbroker in question, who appears to be an outside broker; but even if he has given orders to buy in the ten shares, he had no business to retain your money, nor ought you to have forwarded to him the cash beforehand. You should now insist upon the return of your money or the delivery of the certificates. The documents are returned. R. M. C.—The name of a firm of foreign bankers is forwarded in your envelope as requested. Militat-in-Sylvis.—Syndicate touts; I should advise you to have nothing to do with them. Wat.—Very respectable and prosperous. Vale of Neath.—Syndicate touts; have nothing to do with them. High rates of interest are not compatible with safety. Queer Tale.—Thanks for the suggestion. I should certainly advise you to keep up your premium with the American insurance office in question. It is very wealthy, and affairs in the States appear to be taking a more favourable turn. Chemicus.—I think you will not do amiss by investing the money in high-class bank shares such as you mention. I am of opinion, moreover, that you might now put some money into high-class American Railroad Gold bonds, as matters in the United States are taking a more favourable turn. La Bella Italiana.—If you have the money in question to spare, and can afford to lose it in case of need, you might put into a mining venture, and it appears to me that the Hannan's Golden Treasure is as good as any. You would, of course, have to be prepared to wait for a few months. L. M.—You might as well take your profit. You should certainly hold your American Railroad Gold bonds now. Vincent Gregson.—I do not like this outside concern, or its system. Koffeyfontein.—I should advise you to deal only through a member of the Stock Exchange.

Home Rails.

C. H. W.—Chathams have suffered through the idiotic decision of the House of Lords with regard to the raising of new capital; but they should certainly be held. Cambria.—Yes, I consider Dover "A" a very promising speculation at present price. Labourer.—No option but to hold. The document is returned. E.B.B.—No reason to sell Vestas.

American and Foreign Rails.

J. P.—The Times article in question was absurd. The position in the United States is very much better, at least, temporarily, and American Gold bonds should certainly be held. If Mr. McKinley is elected there will be a general and very important improvement in these; and even if he is not, the adverse position appears to be fully discounted in the present quotations. F. M. C.—Obviously the present unfortunate state of affairs in America is accountable for the collapse. New York.—Yes, the bonds Nos. 1 to 3 are suitable for investment. Dora.—1. These gold bonds will improve again; you should hold. 2. No reason to sell; the market appears to have taken a turn for the better. Louis.—No option but to hold the American Rails, matters are improving again. With reference to Peter Robinson, Limited, it had originally been intended to bring this Company out publicly; but other counsels have evidently prevailed for the present. Doubtful, Brighton.—I think you need not be afraid with reference to your American Railroad gold bonds Nos. 1 to 7. Affairs in the States have taken a more favourable turn, and these bonds are all well selected. Certainly hold Nos. 8 and 9. Nagpur.—The interest is quite safe as far as can be judged; and you should certainly hold these bonds for a recovery. Littlewood.—No option but to hold these bonds; the market appears to be turning round. Ceres.—1. Distinctly a permanent charge; but it is not possible to obtain from the Secretary or the Directors any statement as to the priority of the issues. 2. No. I should advise you to keep the Debentures, as this is not one of the Yankee lines which so easily go into the receiver's hands. Cumbrae.—Certainly hold your Manhattan Consolidated Mortgage Gold bonds for a recovery. Parrhesia.—1. I am not so sure about the further slump, as recent developments have created a very active market; but I quite agree with you that if you buy Louisville, Milwaukee, and Denver Prefs. at low prices, you are likely to make a large profit. 2. There should also be hopes for this; but I am not sweet on Wabash. 3. You are quite right in having bought Randfontein, and should hold for a further important advance. S.O., Liverpool.—The most promising stocks to buy of the more substantial class in the American market are Louisville, Milwaukee and Denver Prefs.

Mining Shares.

J. H. C.—I should advise you to have nothing to do with these people, or with the shares they offer. T. W. D.—No dividend has been paid, but the prospects of the Company are favourable. Speculator—1. You had better hold the shares, but do not buy more yet. 2. No option but to hold these. 3. Take your handsome profit, it is worth taking, even though the shares may be likely to further advance. Nemo, Brighton.—You should hold Nos. 1 to 6 for a rise. An Anxious Investor.—All your shares should be held, most of them are very promising. Ironsides.—You should certainly hold Hampton Plains (1), Mainland Consols (3), and there is no reason for selling Nos. 2, 4, 5, and 6. N. G. E.—I do not think much of these diamond shares; but it may be advisable to join the re-construction so as to be able to sell after. Yarg—No reason to sell any of your mining shares Nos. 1 to 11 now, as most of them are likely to improve. No. 11 is the least satisfactory of them. Helemsburg.—Amongst your list of mining shares, Nos. 1 to 31, there are a good many promising ones. Most are likely to improve again. The least promising are Nos. 10, 13, 15, 23, 25, 27, and 28. Acacia.—1. It is possible that this disappointing mine will come round again, and the price is very low; but I must leave it to you whether you will buy more. 2. Hold, but do not average yet. Crozier.—I think that the Oceana combination is in a good position, and that it will eventually pay good dividends. Beginner.—1.—I do not think much of Hannan's Treasure Trove (1); but No. 2 is a fair mining risk. Skelligs.—I do not care for either of the shares mentioned; you can do much better in those mentioned in my letter. Felis Leo.—I like No. 1, but not No. 2. Albemarle.—I am sorry it was not possible to reply to your letter before; but I must distinctly keep to the rule of not answering inquiries received after the first post on Friday morning. The present time is not at all favourable for putting money into gilt-edged stocks. With the rise in the value of money it is quite possible that we shall see these ease off, and my advice to you is to keep your money unemployed a little longer. Jones & Higgins at 2½ seem to be quite high enough. As you have already a considerable stake in American Gold bonds, it would be hardly advisable to increase it just yet. Scotia.—You must have paid an excessive price for Modderfontein "B." On August 29, 1895, the quotation was 4½. Wealthy.—See remarks under "Golden West Australia." Perthshire.—1. I think you might wait for a higher price; in view of the general advance in Indian mines you ought to make a good profit on these. 2. Whenever you see your money back you should certainly sell Chartered shares. No reason to sell Africanders. S. B. L., Beauly.—You seem to have got very high into Rand Mines (1), and altogether against my warning; at present you had better hold, on the chance of a further improvement. Also keep Rooderand (2). No reason to sell Nos. 3 and 5 now. Klerksdorp (6) at 32s. you have also bought altogether contrary to my advice, and there is no option but to hold. Average No. 4 at the present low price. Randfontein (7) should certainly be held for a further advance, although they already show you a good profit; and there is no reason to sell Sheba (8). J. T., Dublin.—A fair mining risk, but you can do better in the shares mentioned in my letter. A. B., Ennis.—I do not like the Friendship Gold Mine at all, neither are the other West Australian mines you mention tempting. You should have made your selection from my letter. About the industrial shares in question nothing is known. Neo.—I cannot see any option but to hold your United Langlaagte shares. The Company has, as I stated last week, been forced into liquidation by M. Jacques Lebaudy, and it remains now to be seen what he will do with it. He apparently objects to the present Directors, and wishes to turn them out. A. B., Glasgow.—1. A fair mining risk. 2. I do not think any dividends are in sight yet. 3. No particular temptation to buy these. Cigarette.—1. I have referred to Wealth of Nations in to-day's issue under "Golden West Australia." The other shares should be held. There seems no special reason for the decline; but I believe most of the men connected with this group are out of town holiday-making. Kirkcaldy.—I should advise you to leave this mine alone. The Bonanza is a promising property, but I do not like Lisbon-Berlyn. You had better leave your money in the Dock Company's stock than put it in the other shares mentioned. The Great Horseless Carriage Company is far too speculative a concern. A. R., Tottenham.—1. The prospects of this concern appear to be promising. 2. A fair mining risk; no reason to sell. 3. I have already stated my views regarding the Glencairn-Glenluce amalgamation. 4. Wealth of Nations are referred to under "Golden West Australia." A. G., Tirol.—It is quite impossible to obtain what you wish, viz., a high-class investment yielding 5 per cent. If you are prepared to run some risk, you might buy the new Uruguay Five per Cent. loan at 70. I referred to the Glencairn-Glenluce amalgamation a fortnight ago. Ajax.—It is quite correct that the Porges-Randfontein bonus on Randfontein is nearly due. Dunallen.—I do not like the mine at all. Enquirer, Dalton.—There is no reason why you should not invest in No. 1, and Hannan's King (2) is a promising mine. Marjorie W.—With reference to Wealth of Nations see remarks under "Golden West Australia." Herbert.—No; I do not advise purchase of these West Australian shares. You can do better in those mentioned in my letter. Rastus.—1. The old Directors of the African Gold Concessions have been turned out, and a Shareholders' Committee is inquiring into the concern. You should support them. No option but to hold the shares Nos. 2 to 6; they will doubtless recover again; also hold No. 7. J. K. D.—Certainly hold Hannan's Napier; it is a promising West Australian mine. Consul.—If the shares in question were dealt in only for special settlement, your broker would be right. Without knowing the name of the mine I cannot tell this. Tempest.—If you are a holder join the re-construction; but I do not advise purchase. Anglo-Saxon.—No option but to hold all your mining shares Nos. 1 to 3 for a recovery, which is probable; although I do not like No. 3. Enquirer, Birmingham.—1. No. 2. A fair mining risk. Homespun.—1. With reference to Wealth of Nations I confirm my remarks under "Golden West Australia." 2. No temptation to buy Hannan's Crœsus; you can do better in the shares mentioned by me under "Golden West Australia." 3. You have done right to buy Hannan's Golden Treasure. 4. No. 5. Quite right. J. W. J.—Yes, hold; but do not buy any more. Luther.—You should hold all your mining shares Nos. 1 to 10 for an improvement. I have not a favourable opinion of No. 10, and said so before. No option but to hold No 3. Mysore.—Taitapu Estates have been recommended by me from 1 upwards; but they seem to be high enough now. Sanitation.—Hold all your mining shares Nos. 1 to 14 for a rise. Evertonian.—You should hold your London & Globe Finance shares; they are likely to improve to a considerable extent. J. H. M.—I have entered your name on the list of Umtoli shareholders. Newtonian.—1. With the rest of the South African market these will probably recover. 2. Very doubtful 3. I must refer you to my letter. Coolgardie.—The Hit or Miss is doing extremely well; sell on a further rise. Considering the difference in price I should prefer Hannan's Golden Treasure. Tapley.—With reference to Wealth of Nations I must refer you to my letter. Irish.—Yes, I recommend you to hold these shares. Anxious, Devonport.—Many of your shares Nos. 1 to 20 are well selected, and they should all be held for a rise. Cyrrom.—I have entered your name on the list of shareholders of Abercorn Reefs. F. H. Y.—You can easily make your selection from my letter. Hit or Miss and Associated Southern are good mines. Apex.—African Estates should be held. Also hold Big Blow. I do not care much for De Lamar. W. C.—A. I do not like either the people or the system; have nothing to do with them. 2. Hannan's King (Brownhill) is a promising mine. Kingdom.—The first-mentioned is a fair South African finance company. Hold the New Zealand shares. Faraló.—All your mining shares Nos. 1 to 17 should be held for a rise. Japan.—1. With reference to Abercorn Reefs, I can only advise you to join with other shareholders in turning the Directors out. Nos. 2 to 8 should be held for an improvement. 9. It is quite possible that Chartered shares will go to the price you mention, when you should make haste to clear out. Borderer.—Take your profit on Hannan's Oroya. Advices from the Bass and Flinders are promising. Fifeshire.—The circular which you have received with regard to the Barnato amalgamation gives full particulars. The distribution of the bonus shares in question will no doubt be made in the near future. A. B. B.—Amongst the shares mentioned by you I can only advise purchase of No. 2 (Randfontein). The others are no catch, and you can do better by following the advice in my letter. Flageolet, No. 2.—A fair mining risk. Carnonstie.—Hold the West Australian shares Nos. 1 and 2. Medicus, Dublin.—1. Yes. 2. Certainly hold Langlaagte Estate, the dividend is payable almost immediately. Calluna.—1. No particular catch. 2. I do not think much of this. 3. Write to the London agency of the Simmer & Jack, 8, Old Jewry, for the information. 4. The Wemmer dividend was 10s. per share, and the shares are of £1 each. 5. Hannan's King (Brownhill) is a promising West Australian mine. A. B., Southport.—Yes, I still think that Barnato Banks will improve, the amalgamation being to the advantage of both Barnato Banks and Johannesburg Consolidated Investment. Barnato Consols should also be held for a rise. Vadsö.—Hold; but do not buy more to average. Big Ben.—Do not go too deep into West Australian Trading Corporation, the price is quite high enough. 2. Komata Queens are a fair mining risk. 3. No option but to hold for the present. Haben.—Hold the mining shares A to C for an improvement. Fiat Lux.—1. Yes, Wealth of Nations should now be bought to average. 2. Not yet. 3. Yes, hold. Sphinx.—The address of a smart firm of City solicitors is forwarded in your envelope. 3. I think you are entitled to the three Brilliant Gold Mines dividends. Umtoli.—I have placed your name on the list of shareholders who wish to move in the matter of Umtoli Reefs. Ajax, Brixton.—I think the way suggested by you is correct. Airdrie.—I should certainly prefer Croydon Consols and Gladiators. The Gladiator more especially is a promising mine. Cyril Bateman.—1. The Hannan's Golden Treasure is an established mine, which is being rapidly developed, and is very promising. 2. The price per £1 share is $1\frac{1}{16}$. G. O. P.—Nos. 1 and 2 are low-priced shares, which are likely to improve. I do not know what you mean by No. 3, you must give me the correct name. No. 4 is a fair mining risk; but I do not like No. 5. Hainthorpe.—Hold all your mining shares Nos. 1 to 10 for an advance. K. M.—No option but to join the re-construction, you will be able to sell better after. Edzell.—1. No option but to hold; there is every prospect of a recovery in due time. 2. The Company is in existence, and the office is at 73, Basinghall-street, London, E.C. H. D. D.—The paper in question is an outside broker's circular, which is absolutely valueless. My advice to you is to hold the shares, and disregard such comments. W. O'C.—You are very unreasonable. Surely it would not inconvenience you to write earlier, instead of my having to answer 50 or 100 letters which, instead of arriving on Friday morning, would be received on Saturday, thus entailing special inquiries on a half-holiday, when it is very difficult to meet with people. You have bought Elmslie, which are a good investment. Obviously, you cannot expect every mining share you buy to go up immediately in price!

INDUSTRIAL SHARES.

Homo.—The shares should be held, and it is supposed that the Company was well subscribed. Musicus.—I am afraid that the Incandescent Fire Mantel Company is not promising. You have, however, no right to discontinue paying the calls. A. H. L.—I do not advise purchase of these Waterworks shares at present. I do not think the brewery debentures in question are a high-class security by any means. Lingan.—The special settlement takes place this week, and you should be guided by this as to what steps to take. My advice is, always to take reasonable profits. The debentures should be safe enough. Dunlavin.—I have repeatedly expressed an unfavourable opinion of Beestons, and you do not appear to be a regular reader of TRUTH, or else you would know this. You must of course pay up your calls. Flageolet.—A very speculative industrial investment. H. S. F.—Very sound Preference stock, and you should hold it. I do not like Pryce-Jones debentures. Gipps.—You should be entitled to the dividend, unless you specially bought ex-dividend. Moses.—Yes. Certainly take your profit. When this kind of concern passes into the hands of a public Company, the profits generally fall off. Pianoforte.—You should combine with other shareholders for the purpose of getting out of Thomas Edward Brinsmead & Sons, Limited. I do not think that the statements in the prospectus can be maintained. Explosive.—I think that this is a very speculative investment, and I should advise you to take a small profit and get out. Surgeon-Major.—A very speculative industrial investment, about which I should not like to advise you. R. A.—I do not like the Salt Union, and do not recommend a speculative purchase of the shares.

MIXED INVESTMENTS.

F. L.—No option but to hold No. 1 a little longer, and No. 2 should also be held. You seem to have been very unlucky in your purchases, and if it were a question of investing savings you should have only put them into high-class securities. Camberley.—1. None. 2. Yes. 3. Not yet. 4. Yes. 5. 85-90. 6. No reason to sell. 7. Barnato Banks are bound to go better. 8. Both these low-priced shares should recover again. Gunner.—I do not like the Moss Litter Company, and never have. As regards the mining shares there is no option but to hold for the present. Milk.—You might sell the Cork Company's Prefs. now, but it seems to be a bad time to sell Grand Trunk stocks, and you might await a recovery. As regards South African shares, my letter gives you full information. G. N. S.—Your South African shares, Nos. 1 to 4, are likely to improve, and should undoubtedly be held for a rise. No 5 is quite high enough. As regards No. 6, which White-Lead Company do you refer to? Ignoramus.—You must know that I have a favourable opinion of Transvaal Exploring (1), and also think that Balkis-

Land (2) and Randfontein (4) are going better. No reason to sell No. 3, and the American debentures should also be held. No option but to hold No. 6 for the present. Russia.—1. Amongst the better-class, Louisville, Milwaukee, and Atchison Prefs. would be the best to buy; and amongst the low-priced shares, Reading, Erie, Denver, Missouri, Kansas and Texas, and Ontario. 2. No. 3. A local concern, about which no information is available here. 4. No; I do not like De Lamar. 5. If you have a profit, take it. 6. No. Bogton.—1. You should hold your London and Globe and West Australian Exploring and Finance for a further rise, also Hannan's Props. Hannan's Golden Group and Golden Treasure are very promising. I do not advise exchange out of one into the other. 2. The price of Jones & Higgins' shares is 2½. 3. Take your profit. Volunteer, Lincoln.—For the investment of your £500, I do not advise the cycle shares (1); but Nitrate Railway Mortgage bonds (3) and City of Monte Video bonds (2) should be suitable. Instead of Nos. 1 and 4, you might buy some of the new Uruguay Five per Cent. bonds at 70. Subaltern, Whitchurch.—1. In such cases it is generally advisable to join the reconstruction and sell after. 2. Not just now. 3. Too speculative. F. T. J.—1. No option but to hold these as American Rails generally are advancing. 2. There is no market for these shares yet, but they will probably settle shortly. 3. Yes. S. M., Anerley.—Your proposed small mining trust of Mainland Consols (1), Burbank's Birthday Gift (2), Buffelsdoorn (3), and Randfontein (4) is very promising. I do not like the Home investments you mention, and am not fond of cable property, which is not progressive nowadays. Teign.—1. Certainly hold for a recovery. 2. Yes. 3. Not just yet. Derwent.—You should hold your American gold bonds Nos. 1 and 2 for a recovery. No. 3 is a promising exploring Company. No. 4 is a fair mining risk; but No. 5 is no catch. R. H. S.—1. Yes, Uruguay bonds are a promising investment, and the new Five per Cent. bonds and the old 3½ per cents. rank pari passu, both having different securities; they are equally well secured. 2. No; Taitapu Estates are quite high enough. 3. I have no late news. Sigil.—1. I do not like Beestons, and warned my readers against them long ago. 2. West Australian Exploring and Finance should be held for an important rise, also Croydon Consols, West Australian Venture Syndicate, and Great Boulder South. 3. No reason to sell. 4. Join the reconstruction and sell after. 5. West Australian Gold Concessions are promising. Caveat Emptor.—1. You should hold this Argentine stock for an improvement. 2. Johnnies and Barnato Banks are likely to come right, and you should average your holding. 3. No reason to sell now. 4. Impossible to tell yet. 5. No option but to hold. 6. Yes. T. W. L.—No reason to sell the Railway stock, and you should certainly hold Baltimore and Ohio Terminal bonds.

Various Investments.

The Money Market still displays great strength in consequence of the gold shipments to the United States, and the rate for three months' bank bills has again advanced at one time to 1½ per cent., reacting to 1¼ per cent. Consols have stood their ground fairly well, being quoted $112\frac{9}{16}$ for cash. The following communication from a reader of Truth, who signs himself "A Beneficiary and a Trustee," opens up a question which it is well worth while for investors to study, and on which some of my readers will probably have something to say:—

As a trustee with funds to invest, and also as a beneficiary whose trustees are proposing to purchase Two and a Half per Cent. stock, may I ask you, for the sake of myself and others, to discuss or explain the enclosed point in your money article? You may, I think, feel that it involves a question of considerable public interest—the point as to the comparative prices of Consols and Government Two and a Half per Cents. Ought trustees to sell the latter and buy the former? Approximately, say, Consols are 112½, Two and a Half per Cents., 107½. Are the public, and many trustees, buying Two and a Half per Cents., or holding them, with the idea that there will be no reduction of interest, as with Consols, from 2¾ to 2½: in fact, with the idea that Two and a Half per Cents. are the stock of the future? But quite oblivious of the fact that the redemption of the Two and a Half per Cents. at par in 1905 is almost a certainty, because the total amount is only £32,000,000 (of which about 12 millions, according to a return of last session are held by Government). Such an amount as 20 millions, or even 32 millions, is so small that it surely will be redeemed without any difficulty in 1905. Any interference with 500 millions of Consols is quite a different matter, and so distant (1923) that it need not be considered in the present price. Consols at 112½, and paying 2¾ till 1903, are as if they cost 110¾ (very nearly), and paid 2½ per cent. from the present time; they practically pay $\frac{10}{11}$ of $\frac{5}{2}$, equal to $2\frac{3}{11}$ per cent., with a distant and very doubtful chance of redemption, or reduction of interest, in 1923. The Two and a Half per Cents. at 107½ pay $\frac{200}{215}$, equal to $\frac{40}{43}$ of $\frac{5}{2}$, equal to 2⅓ per cent. (very nearly); but if redeemed, as, for the reason stated, it seems they must be in 1905, there will be a loss of £7. 10s. in nine years, or about £$\frac{5}{6}$ per annum, and the rate of interest is reduced from 2⅓ to 2⅓ − $\frac{5}{6}$, equal to 1½ per cent. (approximately). Why should Two and a Half per Cents. be held to pay (in all probability) 1½ per cent. when Consols will pay $2\frac{3}{11}$, or, say, 2¼ per cent., to any trustees or others who may hold them?

Silver has been fairly steady, being quoted 30⅝d., and Rupee Paper has advanced to 64⅛. Nitrate Rails have maintained themselves at 7⅛, and the outlook for Nitrate Companies generally has somewhat improved, through a further arrangement which has been come to under the combination, fixing a limit of 20,100,000 quintals with a 2½ per cent. margin, for shipments from April 1, 1896, to March 31, 1897. There has, however, been hardly any movement in Nitrate-producing shares. The market for Cycle shares is slightly firmer, and from buying orders which have recently come in the market for Dunlop Deferred, it is evident that insiders are not afraid of the special settlement which is now in progress and at which the contango, opening at 2½d., finally went off to "even." Dunlop Deferred have now advanced to ¾ premium. Cycle Tubes have got over their special settlement, and are firmer at 1. I hear that the special settlement of the Singer Cycle Company will take place in the middle of this month; they are consequently lower at $\frac{1}{16}$ discount. Frank Tarrant & Co., 70 and 71, Bishopsgate-street, London, E.C., continue to boast of great successes, and in a circular dated September 5, they state that they have closed their Louisville "deal" at 237½ per cent. profit in five days. They still assert that in their long list of "deals" there is not one instance of a single failure. It is really very good of Frank Tarrant and Company thus to confer benefits upon their fortunate clients; but I should like to hear from some of the latter who have made all the profits without a single loss through Messrs. Frank Tarrant & Co. Another prophet has arisen under the name of Arthur Denny & Co., "Originators and Sole Proprietors of the famous Denny Co-operative Deposit System," 328, High Holborn, London, W.C. This is a gambling combination, and Denny & Co. boast of the "highly successful termination of their last month's operating at Spa." They are now forming the "Denny Co-operative Deposit Fund, from which fortnightly profits of from £18 to £40 per share, in addition to a regular coupon dividend of 5 per cent. monthly, may be relied upon;" but what would happen if the system upon which Denny & Co. are working, should go wrong, as is generally the case with such systems? The Royal London Investment Bank, 42, Charlwood-street West, South Belgravia, London, S.W., is to the front with a circular in which the statement is made that "founded on a former financial enterprise, which dates from April 28, 1890, it has now developed into the form of a Syndicate of honourable and experienced men of business, both commercial and financial, and is in most excellent business relationship with high-class bankers and financiers, whose valued recommendations and introductions are its main support." The capital of this ambitious concern is not stated, neither are the names of the directors given; although the name of the acting manager (Mr. Florance Wyndham) is furnished. Copies of two letters are subjoined, apparently in proof of the respectability of Mr. Wyndham, one of which is from Messrs Hoare & Co., of 37, Fleet-street, London, E.C., and according to which these gentlemen have written in a somewhat unusual manner, viz., "At the same time it is right to mention that the inquiries made as suggested by you, have been answered in a perfectly satisfactory manner as regards your personal character and antecedents." The Chief Cashier of the Bank of England, on December 10, 1894, also wrote the following letter to Mr. Wyndham, viz., "I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of to-day's date, and in reply to inform you that the Bank will be happy to send you bank notes by post registered at your risk, whenever you may require them." I wonder whether Mr. Wyndham, by publishing this last letter, means to imply that the Bank of England would send him bank-notes simply on his application? In addition to these delighful testimonials, a special notice is also inserted that the "Bank" possesses great advantages in procuring life insurance, fire insurance, and the purchase of house property through the instrumentality of the Provident Association of London, Limited. Considering that I have repeatedly shown that life insurance and the purchase of house property can be carried out far more satisfactorily through our leading life offices and high-class building societies, this latter paragraph seems to me to weaken the "splendid" testimonials from Messrs. Hoare & Co. and the Bank of England. It will be interesting to watch the progress of the Cape Colonisation Company, Limited, which proposes to establish on commercial, and in some respects on co-operative, principles, an extensive fruit farming, agricultural, and industrial colony in the Western Province of Cape Colony. In theory, the scheme looks very promising; how it will work out in practice remains to be seen, but if the undertaking should prove a success, it would doubtless be the forerunner of other enterprises established on a similar basis.—Your affectionate Uncle, MOSES.

All Rights Reserved.]

QUEER STORY.

LEGER-DE-MAINE.

"'DON'T BE WITHOUT MONEY!' Very excellent advice; and, unlike most other advice, everybody would willingly take it — if they could. Seems easy enough to manage, according to this advertisement, too! 'A gentleman wishes to lend £10,000, in sums of £5 to £500, on note of hand alone. Moderate interest. No tedious loan-office routine. No fees. Apply personally, or by letter, to Bernard Mervyn Ponsonby, Esq., 1, Jerusalem-row, E.C.' Any good writing to him? I trow not. Suppose he's on all fours with that money-lender whose advertisement I answered last week? Wouldn't look at me. Even my cloth wouldn't fetch him. Don't know what I shall do. There seems no chance of raising the wind. Must clear out of this shortly, too! Hilloa! What's that?"

"Lidy to see you, sir. Witin' in the 'orl," replied the small lodging-house maid, to whom the last question had been addressed.

"Who is she? What name did she give!"

"Wouldn't give no nime, sir; but she wants to see you most pertiklar. She's a stylish lidy, and looks most genteel."

"Oh, well—show her up," said the reverend gentleman, nodding.

The little maid disappeared to summon the visitor. His reverence threw down his newspaper, smoothed his hair before the glass, pulled the paper shields from his shirt-cuffs, and moved into the darkest part of the room, where the shabby seediness of his clerical black would be least noticeable. He was youngish, but his face was lined and careworn, and there was more than a sprinkling of grey in his black hair. Altogether, he gave the impression of being a worn and unsuccessful man—a type, unfortunately, too common among the ministers of the Established Church, which, while it contains, on the one hand, some of the sleekest divines in the world, can produce also, on the other, some of the leanest and hungriest.

Our reverend friend had scarcely completed his few trifling preparations before the lady visitor was shown in. As he bowed to her politely and drew forward a chair, he took a hasty, though interested survey of her face and appearance. Who was she? Was she some vicar's wife, come to engage his services on behalf of her husband? Many vicars' wives did, of course, engage the curates, and, for the matter of that, dismissed them as well. But no. This lady had nothing of the cut of a vicar's wife about her. She was young, good-looking, and (as the maid had said) stylish; three qualities seldom to be noted in a vicar's wife, even separately; and, in combination, altogether foreign to the species. And then another point. This lady had no managerial, masterful air about her; a circumstance sufficient of itself to negative the vicar's wife supposition. Her manner was courteous and apologetic. She addressed him in a tone which even bespoke humility. No! she was assuredly not the better-half of a beneficed clergyman.

"I trust," began the lady, "that you will pardon the liberty I have taken in calling upon you; but—but——"

"Oh! don't mention that, I beg," interposed our curate, blandly. "In what way can I serve you, my dear madam?"

"I—I—have come to you in—in your capacity as a minister of the Gospel. I wish to seek your advice."

The curate smiled encouragingly. He felt pleased and flattered. It is a pleasant thing for a young clergyman to have his advice earnestly sought by an attractive and stylish girl. Nothing is more calculated to make him feel benevolent and sympathetic.

"I will begin by asking you," said the young lady, fixing her eyes upon him anxiously, "what view you, as a minister of the Gospel, take of the practice of betting?"

"Of betting?" repeated the curate, evidently surprised at her question. "Surely, my dear lady, you cannot doubt what my answer will be?"

"That you condemn it?"

"Most unhesitatingly. Apart from its pernicious and disastrous consequences, betting is in itself a great sin; and I should not be doing my duty as a minister of the Gospel, if I were to pronounce any other opinion."

An expression of disappointment—almost of pain—passed over her face.

"Then you consider," she said, "that, from the point of view of a true Christian, the practice is, under any circumstances, indefensible?"

"I do not see," answered the curate, falling into professional phraseology, "how it could fail to be so. Sin is always sin. Circumstances can only palliate: they can never justify it."

"Not even if the bet was made for some good—some charitable purpose?"

The curate shook his head.

"We are expressly forbidden," he said, "to do evil that good may come."

"Well, I suppose that is the high line to take. But I—I—should just like to tell you the—the—exact circumstances which—which—have led to my coming and seeking your advice in this matter. You will then understand better the difficulty in which I am placed—the temptation to which I am exposed. Have you the time to spare me?"

"Oh, certainly; most certainly!" responded the curate, with heartiness. "For, though my opinion about betting is scarcely likely to be altered, I may at any rate be able to afford you counsel and comfort in your temptation and difficulty."

"You must know," explained the young lady, "that I have an only sister. Both our parents are dead; and she is, in fact, the one near relation I have in the world. She is married and has two children. Her husband, who is manager of a small branch of the Confederated Bank of London, has, I grieve to say, got into money difficulties, and—and—(this in the strictest confidence)—has been—been—tempted to—to—extricate himself by drawing upon the moneys of the bank."

"Ah! I see. Poor fellow!" interpolated the curate, sympathetically—with the sinner, of course, not with the sin; as a true Christian should.

"The bank has not yet discovered this," continued the young lady; "and until the next audit is not likely to do so. If, therefore, in the meantime my unhappy brother-in-law can replace the money, he will be all right. But the sum is a large one—£700, in fact—and he has no possible means of finding it."

"But surely," said the curate, as she paused, thinking he gathered the drift of her remarks, "for him to try to set himself right by betting, under these circumstances, would only——"

"There is no question of his betting," she interposed, quickly. "It is I who am thinking of doing so."

"You?"

"Yes. I am not well off. I earn only a small salary as a 'companion.' But I have £70 saved; and I believe I could invest that upon a horse so as to bring me in the requisite £700."

THE SANITARY ENGINEERING CO. (Carter Bros.), 65, Victoria-st., Westminster, for making Sanitary Surveys in London or country.

She spoke quietly and with confidence. The curate could scarcely repress a smile. Her ingenuous simplicity amused him, inwardly, not a little.

"My dear young lady," he said, "leaving morality out of it, and regarding this matter simply as one of worldly prudence, you are obviously far more likely to lose your £70 than to win your £700. It seems to me, therefore—you will pardon my saying so—that your project is financially ill-advised, to say nothing of its being morally wrong. And——"

"But I don't agree that it is financially ill-advised," expostulated the young lady, eagerly. "You see, I have private information about this horse upon which I can absolutely rely. The—the—gentleman to whom I am engaged to be married" (she blushed and faltered slightly) "is an—an—intimate friend of Mr. John B——, the celebrated trainer, who has given him, in confidence, this excellent tip for the Leger. When I asked his advice yesterday about my poor brother-in-law's difficulties, he—my fiancé, I mean—told me that I could not do better than invest what I could afford upon this particular horse. He himself would have found the money, had he possessed it; but he only has a small income, and has a mother and sister to support. He firmly believes that this tip is what he calls 'a good thing,' and, as he justly pointed out, £70 would be practically useless to my poor brother-in-law; and so, even if I lose the money, he will be little worse off; whereas, if I win, he will be saved from a most dreadful fate. He advised me, however, to put the money on at once, before the public get hold of the tip, and the odds against the horse become greatly reduced. That has not yet happened, for I see in the paper to-day that they still quote him at 10 to 1. These are the exact circumstances. After having heard them, do you still, as a minister of the Gospel, advise me not to make the bet?"

"My dear young lady," replied the curate, feelingly, "you are placed in a very difficult position. I sympathise deeply with the temptation to which you are exposed. If I were to speak simply as a man, I could not do otherwise than concur in your unselfish project. But as a priest, I dare not—I dare not."

She regarded him intently with her large dark eyes. They were very earnest and eloquent.

"I believe you are right," she said. "Something tells me that you are right. You seem surprised at my consulting you. Ah! I have always made it my rule to seek spiritual direction in the important crises of my life; and, my own dear pastor being just now abroad for his holiday, I—I—do not think I wish to flatter you—to say anything that may—may seem forward, but I came to you particularly, because I had—had heard so much about your good work among the poor and afflicted, and I felt that in you I should have a—a truly Christian, unprejudiced adviser—one whose mind was not warped by the—the narrow limitations of a formal clericalism. Yes; there are those who have sounded your praises in my ear, little as you may think it. I—I have complete confidence in you. I accept your advice. I—I will not make that bet. But think of me—will you not? Pray for me, that I may have strength to persist in my resolve. And now good-bye—good-bye!"

Her voice quivered with emotion. Tears shone bright in her earnest eyes. Our curate seemed quite touched. He tried to say something consolatory, but before he could formulate the words, she was gone. It was as if a beam of sunshine had vanished from his dingy room.

He sat down again and lighted his pipe. Even in the priesthood a pipe is a grand panacea.

The curate ruminated for an hour or so over his baccy, and in the course of his ruminations smiled a good deal to himself with some inward amusement. But he was not left long undisturbed. Shortly there arrived his tea, which he qualified with brandy; and soon after that, the post, bringing a few bills; two solicitors' letters; three negative replies from friends in answer to applications for a "trifling loan of £5, to be repaid by next Saturday week at the latest;" a betting tout's circular, "Henry Maine, having lately invested his large capital in a Betting Agency, offers unusual facilities to the gentry, nobility, &c., &c." Our curate perused this communication in an aimless sort of way for several minutes; then he leaned forward and picked up the newspaper which lay on the floor at his side. "She said the horse was quoted to-day at 10 to 1," murmured our curate, reflectively. "Ah! here we are. Only one horse at that price, I see, for the Leger. Thunderbolt. A good thing, eh? Wonder if it is? And if it is, how divinely simple that angelic creature was!"

* * * * *

One morning, about ten days later, two persons, a lady and a gentleman, were drinking whisky "splits" in a first-floor room over a greengrocer's in Glasshouse-street. The lady's acquaintance has been already made; the gentleman was Henry Maine, betting agent.

"There is no doubt, old boy," she was saying, emphatically, "that the clergy are the primest gulls in existence. Let me see! What do the profits work out at?"

Henry Maine opened a pocket-book, and spelt out the following account:—

"Two—four—six—eight—ten vicars at £15 = £150. Eighteen at £10 = £180. Thirty curates at £5 = £150. Total, £480. A very pretty haul!"

"They have all paid up, too, haven't they?"

"All except one; though I've had to threaten several with the Bishop before I could get the oof. That one has promised to look in and pay me to-day. He had better, too," added Maine, menacingly.

"Ah! He was the last curate whom I went to see. A poor, beggarly wretch, and the primest flat of the lot. Ha! ha! ha! I did lay on the lard thick for him; and he swallowed it all, the mug!"

"Well—though I say it who shouldn't—our game was a very clever one. That money-lending advertisement of mine in the Guardian, you see, got us the names of the likely parsons for our purpose. And then your visit, to seek their advice as Ministers of the Gospel, when you so artfully worked in your 'cert' for the Leger, followed by my betting-agency circular, did the rest. Never was anything neater. Ha! ha! ha! Hilloa! was that the bell? Ah!" (going to the window) "here's our curate!"

"Then I'll make myself scarce!" said the lady, with a laugh, as she slipped through a side door into an adjoining room.

A minute later our curate entered.

"Good morning, Mr. Maine," he said, with a nod.

"Good morning, sir. I am glad to see that you have come to redeem your promise. It is always unpleasant to be obliged to enforce payment from customers; and, being used to dealing with gentlemen, who would scorn to keep a poor man waiting for his money, I——"

"Ah! you needn't go on," interrupted our curate, speaking with sudden curtness. "You can't hoodwink me, Mr. Maine. I may as well explain to you that you are caught in a trap. I am no clergyman. I'm Detective-Inspector Pinch, of Scotland-yard; and I hold a warrant for your arrest. No, sir. It's no use showing fight. Two officers are waiting now outside the door. Come in, there!" cried the detective, raising his voice.

Immediately, in answer to the summons, two constables, in plain clothes, entered the room. With a look of rage, dismay, and baffled cunning, Mr. Henry Maine realised that he was fairly trapped.

"Now I must search the premises," said the Inspector, briskly. "Hand over your keys, please."

The betting agent muttered something about seeing him damned first.

"Come, my man," said the Inspector, in a voice that evidently meant business. "Resistance will only make matters worse for you. Do you wish to be handcuffed and have the keys taken from you by force?"

Seeing that his position was hopeless, Maine sulkily, and very reluctantly, complied. The Inspector went up to a small safe which stood in the corner, and after trying over the keys, at length found the one that fitted. He opened the door, took out several rolls of bank-notes, cheques, and other documents, and proceeded to count them over. While he was thus engaged, he was suddenly disturbed by the sound of a scuffle in the room, and looking round saw the form of Henry Maine vanishing through the open doorway, with both the plain clothes men after him. He heard a further scuffle on the stairs—a sound as of several men falling over one another—and then the patter of running footsteps on the pavement outside. They grew more and more distant. But the Inspector did not seem at all disturbed. He quietly applied himself to examining the papers which he had taken from the safe.

In about ten minutes the officers came back—without their prisoner.

"Got away?" inquired the Inspector, who, however, preserved an expression of great complacency under the escape of his captive.

"Clear away," said one of the constables; and then—the familiar fellow!—he actually winked at his superior officer.

"The lady has gone off, too, I believe?" remarked the Inspector, not appearing to resent his subordinate's liberty.

"I heerd her slip out some time previous!" and the ill-mannered constable winked again.

"So did I. Now I can dispense with your further services, my men. By the way, what did I promise you?"

"A fiver apiece, guv'nor?"

"Well, you managed so very cleverly not to recapture the prisoner that I'll make it a tenner. Here you are!"

The two men took their ten-pound notes, well satisfied, thanked their employer, and withdrew. The curate returned to his lodgings alone, chuckling mightily to himself as he went.

"Ah!" he soliloquised, "It was a sharp game of theirs, and if I had been a real cleric no doubt they would have 'had me on.' When I dubbed myself reverend, shaved my beard, and mounted the sables and choker, as a convenient disguise, I little expected this marvellous luck to result from it. Greek against Greek; and I was the Greekier! This year's Leger will always be associated in my mind with the name of Maine—a monumental instance of Leger-de-Main(e). Ha! ha! ha!"

MUSIC.

THE ARCHIEPISCOPAL DIPLOMA.

THE Lambeth Musical Degrees have often been satirised, but for a good joke it would be hard to beat the text of the Archiepiscopal diploma. It was read, it seems, over Dr. McNaught at Lambeth Palace by the Archbishop, the candidate kneeling and being clothed by one of the chaplains with the Mus. Doc. hood while the Archbishop was going through his part in the performance. This precious document recites:—

> Whereas in schools regularly instituted that laudable Usage and Custom hath long prevailed, and that with the Approbation as well of the pure reformed Churches as of the most learned Men for many Ages past, that they who have with Proficiency and Applause exerted themselves in the Study of any Liberal Science should be graced with some eminent Degree of Dignity . . . . We, therefore, being vested with the authority aforesaid, and following the Example of our Predecessors, have judged it expedient, in consideration of your Uprightness of Life and Purity of Morals, that you be dignified with the Degree of Doctor of Music.

The diploma is worthy of the notice of Mr. Gilbert. Of all the quaint reasons for conferring upon a man the degree of Doctor of Music, "uprightness of life and purity of morals" appears to be the most extraordinary. Musical knowledge, it seems, is not required at all; in fact it is not mentioned in the diploma. The sole qualifications beyond the oath of allegiance, are "uprightness of life and purity of morals," so that, in all fairness, this degree should be conferred upon our clergy, our legislators, our judges, our policemen, and all good people generally.

In this document, by the way, which is too long to quote in its entirety, the Archbishop of Canterbury claims his anomalous power of granting degrees "by the public authority of the law." The term is vague, and I believe there is no law whatever in the matter, the Archbishop having, so far as the statutes are concerned, no more power to grant musical degrees than I have. The Archbishop, in the Roman Catholic times, claimed the right, as Legate of the Pope, to license teachers in Divinity apart from the Universities. The Bull of Gregory IX. in 1231 contained regulations for conferring the Papal Degrees in the Faculties of Arts, Medicine, Law and Theology, though there was not a word about music. However, the Lateran Council of 1179 enacted that no price was to be demanded by a Bishop for a licence to teach. This, of course, we have improved, and the Archbishops of Canterbury of the present day so far dissent from the Roman Catholic doctrine, in that they demand from Lambeth Degree holders the trifling fee of £63 a head. So much for the advance of civilisation.

By the way, a Doctor of Music had at one time a very quaint privilege. It was ordained at Cambridge in 1578 that no man, unless he were a Doctor, was allowed to wear any hood lined with silk. The penalty was 6s. 8d., and if the delinquent refused to pay this fine, he was to be punished by the Vice-Chancellor for "wilful perjury." What perjury had to do with the taste and texture of a man's head-gear is not quite obvious.

Among the numerous suggestions which have been made for an autumn season of opera at Covent Garden is one in which I believe Signor Leoncavallo, a brother of the composer, is interested. With certain Italian capitalists this gentleman, I am told, proposes to take the theatre for a short season to produce Leoncavallo's "Chatterton," "I Medici," and other novelties, with a company at the head of which Signor Tamagno would be. There are also one or two other schemes, and it is, perhaps, a pity that Mr. Mapleson, who has organised a company to play in the United States towards the end of next month, did not have a short preliminary season in London. Any autumn season in fact, can only be a short one, for the theatre will be wanted before Christmas for the fancy dress balls. Autumn opera, particularly if adequate performances were given at cheap prices, used at one time to be a very profitable speculation. There is no reason why it should not be so again, and at any rate the time would seem to be ripe for a six weeks' season with a good company, but without expensive stars, although with a due proportion of novelties and at popular prices. Signor Leoncavallo, it is understood, has not yet signed contracts, but there is nevertheless good reason to hope that his season at Covent Garden will come off.

The Worcester Festival, which began on Sunday with the usual service in the Cathedral, boasts this year only one genuine novelty, the oratorio, "The Light of Life," by Mr. Elgar, of Malvern. The prospects of the festival are said to be fairly good, though of course the recent epidemic in the neighbouring city of Gloucester is not likely to improve business. Still, the county families are doing their best, and the list of noble and other guests invited for the festival week filled a couple of columns of the local papers on Monday.

The new edition of "The Little Genius," which was given at the Shaftesbury on Saturday night, is not very much better than the old. Mr. Lonnen, it is true, has worked up the fun, but this is the ordinary practice of comedians, who, in musical comedy, rarely develop their gags until after the piece has had some sort of run. The second act of "The Little Genius" has been rewritten, mainly, I suppose, in order to introduce the variety element. It comes in very comically sometimes. A gentleman, for example, happens casually to meet a lady acquaintance at Ostend, and exclaims, "Hallo! it's a long time since I saw you in Edinburgh." "Yes," she replies, "and then I danced like this," whereupon the skittish young damsel commences a skirt dance on the sea front, the gentleman meanwhile whistling the tune. Again, apparently in the middle of the afternoon during the fashionable season, the sky darkens—it may be a thunderstorm—and the electric lights disclose the Moulin-Rouge quadrille quartet, at their head La Goulue in yellow dress and displaying a profusion of black stocking, cerise garter, and lingerie generally. La Goulue and her associates, if not particularly good dancers, are almost acrobatic high kickers. Miss St. John, who was in poor voice but in high spirits, now for the first time assumes the part of Paola. There is a good deal of make-believe in musical comedy, but to suppose Miss Florence St. John, sprightly as she is, to be a small boy of twelve requires strong imagination indeed.

The death of Miss Alexandra Ehrenberg was inexpressively sad. This young lady, who had a class of nearly 100 pupils at the Guildhall School of Music, had just been promoted from the lowest to the intermediate grade, so that while earning the same salary, she might have avoided the hard work which beyond much question contributed to her fatal illness.

Mr. Wallworth, one of the best teachers at the Guildhall School and also of the Royal Academy of Music, has rather suddenly announced his intention of retiring into private life. He has made his pile, and proposes at the end of this month to go to South Africa, where he has relations, and perhaps another fortune in the goldfields. Mr. Wallworth in early life was a baritone of Miss Kelly's Theatre (the present Royalty), and he was one of the first members of the Pyne and Harrison Company. For the last thirty years, however, he has devoted himself to teaching, one of his most successful pupils being Mme. Alwina Valleria.

LETTERS ON BOOKS.

MY DEAR MR. WYNDHAM,—In one of the most interesting of the "Heroes of the Nations" series, "Jeanne D'Arc" (1), Mrs. Oliphant, who is always "on the side of the angels," makes an astonishing defence of the divine "voices" which misled the Maid to her martyrdom:—

> The voices of God—how can we deny it?—are often, though in a loftier sense, like those fantastic voices that keep the word of promise to the ear, but break it to the heart. They promised her a great victory; and she had it, and also the fullest deliverance: but only by the stake and by the fire, which were not less dreadful to Jeanne than to any other girl of her age. They did not speak to deceive her, but she was deceived; they kept their promise, but not as she understood it. "These all died in faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off, and were persuaded of them and embraced them." Jeanne, too, was persuaded of them, but was not to receive them—except in the other way.

Now, putting aside the case in which the "voices" were not only deceiving, but deceived, when they supposed the King of England to be, not the helpless little child he was, but a strong and resolute man, and promised Jeanne untruly that she should be brought before him; putting this case aside, and taking that only which is cited and justified by Mrs. Oliphant—the equivocation which entrapped Jeanne to her martyrdom. If the "voices did not speak to deceive her," why, upon perceiving that she was deceived, did they not undeceive her? If, on the other hand, they did speak to deceive her by a base and gross equivocation, why should it not be at least as true in heaven as on earth:—"That a lie which is half a truth is ever the blackest of lies"? As for the text cited by Mrs. Oliphant as illustrative and justificative of the trick played on Jeanne, and worthy only of "those juggling fiends that palter with us in a double sense," it is, of course, preposterously inapplicable. "Those who all died in faith" were not promised bread, and given a stone; but promised bread which they expected for supper, but were to get only after they had slept the sleep of the righteous, for breakfast. While on the subject of the heroes of the nations, I ought to tell you that one of the most interesting books about the most interesting of these heroes, "Constant's Memoirs of Napoleon" (2) has just been for the first time translated, and admirably translated, too, into English by Mr. Percy Pinkerton. It is no exaggeration to say that, with the exception of the rather stupid and spiteful "Souvenirs of a Lady-in-Waiting," which, without any rhyme, reason, preface or preparation, are thrust impertinently into the second volume, there is not a single dull page in these memoirs. Napoleon was unquestionably a hero to his valet de chambre, for Constant, who had been his head valet during all the years of his glory, adored him. At the same time, it must be admitted that Constant was not a stern, unbending censor morum. Can anything be more delightfully naïve, for instance, than his definition of immorality?

> The Emperor used to say that one might know a virtuous man by the way he treated his wife, his children, and his servants; and I hope that from these memoirs it will be seen that in this respect the Emperor, from his point of view, behaved like a virtuous man. In fact, he used to affirm that immorality was a monarch's most dangerous vice, for he had to make laws for his subjects.

But here, bethinking himself, no doubt, of the countless occasions when he "Sir Pandarus of Troy became" to his Master, the worthy Constant adds:—

> Doubtless by "immorality" he meant being found out—scandalous publicity given to intrigues which ought to be kept secret. As for the intrigues themselves, if they happened to come in his way he thought no more about them than anybody else.

Less, rather. Towards his servants, at all events, Napoleon was "the virtuous man" here defined, and I cannot resist quoting one instance of his consideration, not so much because of its intrinsic interest, as because of its refutation of the "monster of selfishness" idea of the Emperor.

> The Emperor went out about eleven, and remained away three or four hours. I sat down in his arm-chair near his writing-table to wait for him, and was so tired that I fell fast asleep, my head resting on my hands. When the Emperor came in with Roustan and Marshal Berthier I heard nothing. The Marshal was going to rouse me, and make me get out of his Majesty's chair, but the Emperor prevented him, saying, "Let the poor fellow sleep; he's been up for ever so many nights."
>
> Then, as there was no other chair, the Emperor sat down on the edge of his bed, bidding the Marshal follow his example. He chatted with him for a long time, while I continued to sleep. But as he wanted one of the maps on which my elbows were resting, his Majesty tried to pull it gently away. Though he did this as carefully as possible, he woke me, and I at once got up in great confusion and with profound apologies.
>
> "Monsieur Constant," said the Emperor, with a kindly smile, "I am so sorry I disturbed you; pray excuse me."

Surely the "Monsieur," used only and considerately on this occasion, deserves the emphasis here laid upon it by the valet. The chamber light by which Constant saw, as by X rays, every intimate movement of his master is at least as trying as "the fierce light which beats upon a throne;" yet it certainly shows Napoleon to advantage as domestically amiable and even lovable. The association of names must excuse my sudden drop from these fascinating memoirs to the Princess Laura Bonaparte's novel, "The Greek E" (3), a melodramatic tale in which crime and madness are made to hang, so to say, by a hair-trigger. The plot itself turns upon a hinge so slight as the detection of an anonymous post-card writer by his use of the Greek, in place of the English "e" in his correspondence—not at all an uncommon usage. Do you remember the "Punch" bonnet, advertised as "to be worn with the mouth partly open"? Here is a parallel passage from "The Greek E."

> She returned with a bewitching smile that became her bonnet well.

Mrs. Alexander's "A Winning Hazard" (4) is to the Princess Laura Bonaparte's sentimental melodrama "as moonlight is to sunlight, and as water is to wine." It is, in truth, milk for babes, and might well have had prefixed to it the Byronic motto:—

> O mirth and innocence! O milk and water!
> Ye happy mixtures of more happy days.

Mr. H. A. Hinkson's "O'Grady of Trinity" (5), on the other hand, is a rollicking story of University life, as

(1) "Jeanne d'Arc." Her Life and Death. By Mrs. Oliphant. ("Heroes of the Nations Series."). (London: G. P. Putnam's Sons.) Price 5s.
(2) "Memoirs of Constant, the Emperor Napoleon's Head Valet." Now first translated by Percy Pinkerton. 4 vols. (London: H. S. Nichols.)
(3) "The Greek E." By the Princess Laura Bonaparte. (London: H. S. Nichols.)
(4) "A Winning Hazard." By Mrs. Alexander. (London: T. Fisher Unwin.) Price 3s. 6d.
(5) "O'Grady of Trinity." A story of Irish University Life. By H. A. Hinkson. (London: Lawrence & Bullen, Ltd.) Price 3s. 6d.

exhilarating through the inspiration of its animal spirits as a College wine party.—Believe me, my dear Mr. Wyndham, ever yours very sincerely,

DESMOND B. O'BRIEN.

GIRLS' GOSSIP.

DEAREST AMY,—You, who are so excellent a sailor, can scarcely imagine what an odious sensation is that of sea-sickness. But I will draw a veil over its horrors and endeavour to forget them as rapidly as possible, since they have again to be encountered before very long. We left Folkestone for Boulogne on Monday morning and had a two hours' passage, the last twenty minutes of which were made uneasy by a troubled, choppy sea. I am using the mildest language I can think of to describe emotions that are highly disagreeable. Perhaps the time-honoured custom of adapting or paraphrasing Shakespeare to the occasion, is the best to follow. You remember when King Lear says "Down! down! thou climbing sorrow"? That seems rather appropriate, I fancy.

We were glad of some mutton cutlets at the Hôtel Meurice at Boulogne, and afterwards enjoyed an hour's delicious repose on downy couches, free from the troubled tossing of the boat. The station is only five minutes' walk from the hotel, and we were soon on our way to Dieppe, a long journey by rail, but we preferred that to the longer crossing viâ Newhaven. Being already at Folkestone, it seemed as easy to have the railway journey in France, and also more interesting, because more novel. And it is so nice to be able to see the land for which one is making. There is something consolatory about it. On the principle of "Le roi est mort; vive le roi!" we nodded adieux to the cliffs of England, and in the next moment "How d'y do?" to those of France. Clare and Bee would have made a good representation of a feminine Janus, as they sat side by side on deck; the more sentimental Clare with her face turned to England, and the vivacious, eager Bee on the look-out for France.

The first un-English thing we noticed was a man on his knees weeding in his little garden. The English peasant never kneels over his agricultural processes. He bends his poor back.

Do the French speak really more rapidly than we do? Or is what appears to us as frightful velocity simply the outcome of our own want of familiarity with their language? Do we speak as quickly to their ears as they to ours? For instance, our route lay past Etaples on the direct line du Nord, and we were told to change at "Aville," as it sounded to us. But when we looked it out in the railway guide we had bought, we found it was "Abbeville," rattled out with immense celerity. I suppose the English "Marylebone," "Shoeburyness," and "Cirencester" would sound equally abbreviated and puzzling to a foreigner. The country up to Abbeville was rather flat, so far as we could see from the railway, though pretty enough. Afterwards the views on either side were often lovely, though the train frequently ran us through deep cuttings with nothing but high stony banks to be seen. There had been rain, and the exquisite verdure of the undulating hills was most refreshing to the eyes after these deep cuttings, which seem actually to annoy the sight. The variety of trees was another feature in the beauty of the landscape. Tall poplars predominate, but there are grand old chestnuts, oaks, and elms, with silver birches, beeches beginning to wear their golden yellow autumn tints, and here and there a cluster of dark pines throwing the varied tones of green into beautiful relief.

As we approached Eu the scenery became grand, the hills rising higher, the forests growing thicker. A wide curve on the railway permits the traveller to see Eu from some two or three miles off, with its cathedral, the town being situated on the side of a very high hill, part of an extensive range which is covered by a dense forest. We longed, again and again, for a kodak.

At Eu we changed for Dieppe, and were glad to do so, for our carriage had been invaded by a family of children bound for Tréport, with spades and pails, and suffering from, or enjoying—whichever you like—a terrible restlessness of joyous anticipation which made them extremely shrill, besides causing them to knock their implements of pastime against our knees and to tread frequently on our feet. They were pretty children, however, so we forgave them much that, I fear, we should have resented had they been less interesting to look at.

On the way from Eu to Dieppe the scenery is worth going far to see. The hills are very high, and the valleys with their tall trees, winding rivers, little hamlets, picturesque villages, wooden bridges, brown cattle, the exquisite green of the meadows and their variety of trees, kept us interested throughout a rather tiring journey. We preferred to go first to our furthest point, Dieppe, returning towards Boulogne by easy stages. Richard like horses, is happier when his face is set towards home.

Arrived at Dieppe, we went straight to our hotel, which is near the Casino and opposite the theatre. We were too late for table d'hôte, but our "square party" was soon accommodated with an excellent square meal.

The girls professing to feel perfectly fresh, we all made our way to the Casino afterwards, and enjoyed the sight of the green tables where the people were betting on the petits chevaux, some with a perfect absorption of deepest interest, others with countenances expressive of nothing deeper than amused curiosity. The costumes of some of the ladies made us open our eyes and exchange looks of wonderment with each other. We did not dare to remark upon anything in audible language, for we heard English spoken all round us. The Casino is a magnificent building, opposite a grand old gateway, one of the few remaining relics of the fortifications that once protected Dieppe. Besides the large hall there is a fine corridor on either side of the petits chevaux room, and as it is all splendidly lighted, the fine toilettes are seen to perfection. People of every nationality appear to foregather here. We have heard German, Italian, Spanish, and Dutch since we came. There are some lovely faces to be seen daily on the Plage and nightly at the Casino, but some of the handsomest are, as usual, spoiled by their owners in the endeavour to improve upon Nature. However, this all tends to variety for the spectator and we are far from grumbling at circumstances that render the scene so animated, so interesting and so productive of oceans of conversation and comment afterwards.

There is, for instance, a handsome girl, a brunette, who visits the rooms with her dark-complexioned husband. She has fine features and one of those complexions that light up well at night, but are occasionally sallow by daylight. She wears a costume of deep, warm red, turned back with collar and lapels completely covered with lace in the deepest cream tint. It is most effective. Her hat, however, is rather too much so, being quite a foot in height on the side, where a huge panache of feathers stands erect like a family of waves crystallised and frozen in the act of breaking. At the tables the other evening, a tall and handsome blonde stood next this girl and made an excellent contrast to her. She was dressed in pink from head to foot, her gown being most elaborately made, with a whole army of half-inch tucks ranged in companies of seven round the skirt, the bodice being trimmed to match, with the tucks running horizontally to match those on the skirt. She had a lovely diamond star-brooch fastened in the waves of softest pink chiffon that rippled downwards from her neck, and another diamond brooch held the end of this cascade just above the waist. Her sleeves, all tucks, finished at the elbows and were met by long white suède gloves, which must have measured

John Busvine & Co., Tailors and Riding Habit Makers to the Royal Families of Europe. New materials and designs for the coming Hunting Season now ready. Patterns and sketches sent on application.

Now Ready.—Costumes for all kinds of Sports and Pastimes. Redfern makes a special feature of Costumes for all out-door pursuits, and is constantly introducing novelties. Everything practical, correct, up-to-date, and smart.—26, Conduit-st., London.

certainly a yard in length, in such a multiplicity of folds did they lie beneath the sleeves. Her hat was a mass of real Brussels lace, with pink roses and white ostrich feathers. Such a hat! Bee has been raving about it ever since. The roses stood erect and tall, such lovely pink ones, and the beautiful lace made them look like real somehow.

You should see the pretty toilettes on the Plage, both morning and afternoon. There is something in the way a French woman puts on and wears her clothes which far surpasses the ordinary English woman's efforts in that direction. The French woman holds herself so well, keeps her back so straight, poises her head so well on her shoulders, and keeps the shoulders so flat, the elbows so well back, that she does good justice to the efforts of her tailor and dressmaker, to say nothing of her corsetière. Our own country women incline to lounge, to sink somehow towards the waist, with a result of round shoulders and sunken chest. It is a pity it should be so, for the English figure is generally, apart from carriage, conceived on finer lines.

The prettiest promenade costume we have seen is a shepherd's plaid, with plain skirt, but with the coat turned back with green cloth in the shade of a laurel leaf, and the front filled in with a vest to match, fastened with small brown buttons. The hat is white straw, with a trimming of variegated petunias and begonias, deftly imitated from nature. Another good costume is blue "corkscrew," the new material, with red facings, and on it narrow lines of white braid, arranged horizontally on the revers, and perpendicularly on the collars, of which there are two, a deep one couchant, and a narrow one rampant, to seize a simile from heraldry.

We find ourselves so well amused here that we have almost abandoned the idea of going to Trouville. Richard has to be in London on the 15th, so after a week of Dieppe we shall begin to toddle homewards, visiting two or three places of interest on our way, and very probably the girls and I will stay longer in France than Richard.

Both language and coinage bother him. He is so intensely British, too, that he is already longing for "a cut from a joint." We three, on the contrary, are pleased with the change, and I am certain you will envy us when I tell you that some friends who entertained us on September 2 gave us perdrix aux choux at lunch, and perdrix aux choux-fleurs at dinner. Such luxury, you will say, especially on the day after partridge shooting begins, and they were such dear, plump and toothsome little birds.

Next week, dear, for recipes.—Ever, dear, your loving cousin, MADGE.

With the Japanese Troops.

JAMES CREELMAN, the American War Correspondent, in his dispatch to New York, dated PORT ARTHUR, Nov. 24, 1894, writes:—

In the camp on the march under the trying conditions of active warfare, Mariani Wine enabled me to resist fatigue & life exhaustion.

Mariani Wine fortifies, nourishes, and stimulates the Body and Brain. It restores Health, Strength, Energy, and Vitality: notably after INFLUENZA. Bottles, 4s.; dozen, 45s., of Chemists and Stores, or carriage paid from Wilcox & Co., 229, Oxford Street, London.

MODERN MOURNING.

Messrs. JAY

SUBMIT for INSPECTION WITHOUT CHARGE, in any part of the Kingdom, as at their Warehouse in Regent-street, a FULL SELECTION of MOURNING, either WITH or WITHOUT CRAPE.

SKIRTS, MANTLES, AND MILLINERY

Are READY for IMMEDIATE WEAR, and BODICES are COMPLETED to measure in a FEW HOURS.

JAY'S (Ltd.), REGENT ST., LONDON

THE MANUFACTURING

GOLDSMITHS' & SILVERSMITHS' COMPANY,

(The GOLDSMITHS' ALLIANCE, Ld. (A. B. SAVORY & SONS, late of Cornhill, E.C.) is Transferred to this Company.)

Show Rooms: 112, REGENT STREET, W. (adjoining Stereoscopic Company.)

Supply the public direct at Manufacturers' Cash Prices, saving purchasers from 25 to 50 per cent.

Exquisitely Chased and Pierced Silver Dessert Dish, £10. 10s.

THE LARGEST and CHOICEST STOCK OF SILVER PLATE IN LONDON,

For Public Testimonials, Wedding and Complimentary Presents.

AN INSPECTION INVITED. ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE POST FREE.

Goods forwarded to the Country on approval. Special designs and estimates free.

GRESHAM LIFE OFFICE.

Assets Exceed £6,000,000.

Special Terms for Naval and Military Officers.

ESTABLISHED 1848.

THE GRESHAM LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY, LIMITED.

Head Office: ST. MILDRED'S, POULTRY, LONDON.

GAIETY RESTAURANT, STRAND.

LUNCHEONS (HOT and COLD)—At Popular Prices, in BUFFET and RESTAURANT (on 1st floor). Also Chops, Steaks, Joints, Entrées, etc., in the GRILL ROOM.

AFTERNOON TEA—Consisting of Tea or Coffee, Cut Bread and Butter, Jam, Cake, Pastry, ad lib., at 1/- per head; served from 4 till 6 in RESTAURANT (1st floor).

DINNERS IN RESTAURANT—From 5.30 till 9 at Fixed Prices (3/6 and 5/-) and à la Carte. In this room the Viennese Band performs from 6 till 8. Smoking after 7.45.

American Bar. The GRILL ROOM is open till 12.30.

Private Dining Room for Large and Small Parties.

SPIERS & POND, Ltd., Proprietors.

METZLER'S NEW SONGS.

NELL. GABRIEL FAURÉ.
Sung by Madame Melba.
LES ROSES D'ISPAHAN. GABRIEL FAURÉ.
Sung by Mdlle. Landi.
CHANSON DU PÊCHEUR. GABRIEL FAURÉ.
Sung by Mdlle. Landi.
EN PRIÈRE. GABRIEL FAURÉ.
Sung by Mdlle. Landi.
FAR GREATER IN HIS LOWLY STATE. CH. GOUNOD.
Sung by Miss Esther Palliser.
ADORE AND BE STILL. CH. GOUNOD.
Sung by Mrs. Katharine Fisk.
MIGNON. CH. GOUNOD.
Sung by Mdlle. Landi.
REST IN PEACE. CH. GOUNOD.
Sung by Mr. David Bispham.
A SONG OF DECEMBER. BENJAMIN GODARD.
Sung by Mrs. Katharine Fisk.
ANGELS GUARD THEE. BENJAMIN GODARD.
Sung by Mr. Edward Lloyd.
A SONG OF JULY. BENJAMIN GODARD.
Sung by Mr. Iver McKay.
THE ARABIAN GIRL. G. BIZET.
Sung by Miss Esther Palliser.
SERENADE. C. SAINT-SAËNS.
Sung by Miss Mabel Berrey.
MENUET. C. SAINT-SAËNS.
Sung by Miss H. Buckley.
ROSE OF KILLARNEY. C. VILLIERS STANFORD.
Sung by Mr. Kennerley Rumford.
YOUR VOICE. L. DENZA.
Sung by Mrs. Katharine Fisk.
THE SEA HATH ITS PEARLS. F. H. COWEN.
Sung by Miss Mabel Berrey.
THE GOLDEN CHAIN. LAWRENCE KELLIE.
Sung by Mr. Iver McKay.
MARY DUNDAS. CHARLES DEACON.
Sung by Miss Ada Crossley.

All these songs are published in keys to suit all voices.

40 to 43, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

ROWLANDS' Macassar Oil

Preserves, Beautifies, Strengthens the Hair;
Also in Golden Colour, 3s. 6d., 7s., 10s. 6d.

ROWLANDS' ODONTO

The Best and Safest Dentifrice; 2s. 9d., of Chemists and Perfumers.
Send Postal Order to—

A. ROWLAND & SONS, 20, Hatton Garden,
LONDON.

Great Improvements in Ladies' Watches—Reduced Prices.

BENSON'S SPECIAL MAKE KEYLESS LEVER WATCH

Silver Cases, £5

18-ct. Gold Cases. £10

Three-quarter Plate LEVER Movement, Compound Balance, Jewelled throughout, strong Keyless action, with Seconds Dial and Gold Inner Cases. In Hunting, Half-Hunting, or Crystal Glass Cases, Monogram free.

Illustrated Book of Watches, Engagement Rings, Brooches, Bracelets, &c., post-free.

18-carat Gold, £10. Silver, £5.
Sent Free and Safe at my risk to all parts.
Selections of Watches and Jewellery sent on approval.

J. W. BENSON, STEAM FACTORY,
62 & 64, LUDGATE HILL.
Also at 28, Royal Exchange, E.C., and 25, Old Bond-street, W., LONDON.

The Piano Resonator

(DANIEL MAYER PATENT) LD.
HAVE OPENED SHOWROOMS AT
33, NEW BOND STREET, W.
WHERE
PIANOS BY VARIOUS MAKERS
MAY BE TRIED WITH AND WITHOUT
The Piano Resonator
THE GREATEST MUSICAL INVENTION OF THE AGE.

THE Chancery Lane Safe Deposit
AND OFFICES COMPANY, LTD.
53 TO 72, CHANCERY LANE, AND 5 TO 20, SOUTHAMPTON BUILDINGS,
Affords absolute Security for all kinds of Valuables.

SAFES from £1. 1s. to £5. 5s. PER ANNUM.
STRONG ROOMS from £5. 5s. to £105 PER ANNUM.
WRITING, READING, AND TELEPHONE ROOMS FREE TO RENTERS.
ARBITRATION and COMMITTEE ROOMS ON HIRE.
KEYS REGISTERED.
WEDDING PRESENTS GUARDED.
Office, Chambers, and Residential Flats to be Let.

DIRECTORS OF THE COMPANY.
J. JAMES COUSINS, Esq., Chairman.
ROBERT C. PONSONBY, Esq., Vice-Chairman.
Sir WILLIAM H. MARLING, Bart. | WALTER B. MARLING, Esq., J.P.
EDMUND BRODERIP, Esq., J.P. | H. HAMILTON MILLS, Esq.
EDWARD P. LITTLE, Esq.
E. VINCENT EVANS, Manager and Secretary,
63, Chancery-Lane, London, W.C.

THE ANCIENT WRITING PAPER OF THE PRIESTS.

NOTE PAPER, 5 Quires, 1s. COURT ENVELOPES, 1s. per 100. MOURNING ENVELOPES, 1s. 6d. per 100. THIN, FOR FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE, 5 Quires, 1s. MOURNING NOTE, 5 Quires, 1s. 6d

HIERATICA (Regd.)

Every Sheet and Envelope Watermarked HIERATICA. Reject Imitations. Any difficulty in obtaining, send stamps to Hieratica Works, 68, Upper Thames Street, London. Samples Free. Parcels Carriage Paid.

PRO BONO PUBLICO.—IMPORTANT APPEAL.—A married Gentleman seeks any work, that he may thus be enabled to produce his International Philosophical Books, whereby ANY Foreigner can most rapidly acquire any language whatsoever!!! This book will initiate vast results in the World's commerce, &c. (vide Review of Reviews Advt., Sept.).—T. LAXTON CLARK, 24, Somerford-grove, Lower Tottenham.

"TRUTH"
THE GALIGNANI LIBRARY,
224, RUE DE RIVOLI, PARIS.

CHATTO & WINDUS'S NEW BOOKS

SONGS OF TRAVEL. By Robert Louis Stevenson. Crown 8vo, buckram, gilt top, 5s.

DR. RUMSEY'S PATIENT. By Mrs. L. T. Meade and Clifford Halifax, M.D. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, gilt top, 6s.

Mrs. Lynn Linton's New Novel.

DULCIE EVERTON. By E. Lynn Linton, Author of "Patricia Kemball," &c. 2 vols., crown 8vo, 10s. net; and at every Library. [Sept. 17.

DEVIL'S FORD, &c. By Bret Harte. With a Frontispiece by W. H. Overend. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

JERRY THE DREAMER. By Will Payne. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d. [Sept. 17.

TWO MASTERS. By B. M. Croker, Author of "Pretty Miss Neville," &c. A New Edition. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

New and Cheaper Editions. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d. each.

A SIMPLETON. By Charles Reade. New vol. of the Collected Edition

THE PROFESSOR'S EXPERIMENT. By Mrs. Hungerford. [Sept. 14.

Free upon application (60 pages, demy 8vo). CATALOGUE with Descriptive Notices and Reviews of WORKS of FICTION published by CHATTO & WINDUS.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 110, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

MAIDEN SPEECHES IN PARLIAMENT.

A most interesting Article on the First Speeches delivered by Lord Salisbury, Mr. Gladstone, Mr. Chamberlain, Lord Rosebery, Sir William Harcourt, The Duke of Devonshire, Mr. Asquith, Sir R. Finlay, Mr. John Morley, Mr. Goschen, &c., appears in

THE

Windsor Magazine

For SEPTEMBER.

With Portraits of all the Orators by Harry Furniss, Walter Wilson, R.I. and Photographs.

Now Ready, at all Booksellers and Railway Bookstalls, price 6d.

London: WARD, LOCK, & CO., Ltd.

Just published, demy 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.

THE BOOK OF THE DAIRY:

A MANUAL OF THE SCIENCE AND PRACTICE OF DAIRY WORK.

Translated from the German of Prof. W. FLEISCHMAN.

By C. M. AIKMAN, M.A., D.Sc., and R. P. WRIGHT, Professor of Agriculture, Glasgow and West of Scotland Technical College.

Fully Illustrated, and containing the most recent Developments in the Science of Dairying with the best Practice in Dairy Work.

London: BLACKIE & SON, Limited, Old Bailey.

The New Review. Price 1s.

Edited by W. E. HENLEY.

CONTENTS: SEPTEMBER, 1896.

A CHILD OF THE JAGO.	Arthur Morrison.
SIR JOHN HARINGTON.	Walter Raleigh.
COBBETT'S ENGLISH GRAMMAR.	H. L. Stephen.
THE SON.	Stephen Phillips.
IN THE ASOLAN COUNTRY.	Eugene Benson.
THE TWO GRAVESTONES.	H. D. Lowry.
THE KING'S MINION.	Charles Whibley.
OUR LADY OF THE NIGHT.	Annie Macdonell.
THE BAYREUTH HALLUCINATION.	John F. Runciman.
ELIZABETH.	C. F. Keary.
CYCLING IN '96.	J. K. Starley.
CRICKET IN '96.	C. B. Fry.

London: WM. HEINEMANN, 21, Bedford-street, W.C.

KEGAN PAUL, TRENCH, TRUBNER & CO., Ltd.

THE BOOK OF THE HOUR.

HOW WE MADE RHODESIA. By Major Arthur Glyn Leonard (late of the Chartered Company's Police). Post 8vo, 6s.

"Major Leonard certainly tells a plain tale well, and has not only a plain, but a very striking tale to tell. . . . . His book is a valuable and noteworthy contribution to the history of the origin of Rhodesia, and throws many a sidelight on the character and aims of those who undertook the task of making it. No one can read it without a quickened admiration for the nobler aspects of the work accomplished and for the men who did it."—Times.

HOW WE MADE RHODESIA.

"It is amusing because Major Leonard is a cultured Irishman who does not mind telling a good story, whether against his superior officer or against himself; it is interesting because it 'lifts the veil' to an astonishing extent, and reveals in a strong light the means whereby Rhodesia was 'made' and the personalities concerned in that making."—African Critic.

HOW WE MADE RHODESIA.

"In this very amusing and readable book he gives us his impressions mingled with many shrewd pieces of criticism and an ability to see fun in everything, which at once engages the reader's sympathy."—Glasgow Herald.

PATERNOSTER HOUSE, CHARING CROSS ROAD, LONDON.

AT ALL BOOKSELLERS AND LIBRARIES.

JUST PUBLISHED.

In One Volume. Cr. 8vo. Six Shillings.

THE STORY OF A LOST SOUL.

A Novel. By HUGH COLEMAN DAVIDSON.

Author of "The Green Hills by the Sea," "Not a Moment to Spare," "The Old Adam," etc., etc.

SIMPKIN, MARSHALL, HAMILTON, KENT & CO., Ltd.

ON THE STŒCHIOLOGICAL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION,

ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, AND LUNG COMPLAINTS.

By JOHN FRANCIS CHURCHILL, M.D.

One Shilling, Post Free.

T. BURLEIGH, late David Stott, 370, Oxford Street.

NEW BOOK BY ANTHONY HOPE.

On Tuesday next. Crown 8vo, 6s.

THE HEART OF PRINCESS OSRA.

By ANTHONY HOPE.

With 9 Illustrations by JOHN WILLIAMSON.

 This Volume consists of a series of short stories dealing with the many adventures of the Princess Osra, of the House of Elphberg. The scene of the stories is Strelsau, familiar to the readers of "The Prisoner of Zenda."

London: LONGMANS, GREEN, & CO.

1/- (By Post, 1s. 2½d.) Reprint of the Earlier Series. 1/-

QUEER STORIES

—FROM—

"TRUTH."

"TRUTH" Publishing Office,

10, Bolt-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

STERILITY IN WOMEN: Its Causes and Curative Treatment. By J. B. RYLEY, M.D., M.R.C.S., London. An Illustrated Edition of this Work is now ready. Price 3s. 6d.; post free, 3s. 8d.
London: HENRY RENSHAW, 356, Strand.

BELGRAVE LADIES' AGENCY FOR THOROUGHLY RELIABLE SERVANTS can highly recommend an excellent BUTLER VALET. Height 6ft. 2in. Five years' personal character. Accustomed to four or five men. Wages £80. Town or country.

AS FIRST-RATE LADY'S MAID. French. Good character and hairdresser. Accustomed to travel. Wages £30 to £35. Country preferred. Thorough needle-woman.

NURSE. Accustomed to take baby from month. Can have entire charge of one or more children. Excellent character. Aged 34. Wages £20.

FIRST-RATE COOK. Wages £45. First-rate character. Town or country. Aged 35. Kitchen and scullery maid.—Apply, BELGRAVE LADIES' AGENCY, 83, Ebury-street, S.W.

TO LET, FIRST FLOOR FLAT, Ennismore-gardens, for Winter months or longer. Five bedrooms, three reception rooms, large hall, excellent kitchen, offices. Beautifully furnished. Rent 12 Guineas per week. Bath room.—Apply for full particulars, BELGRAVE LADIES' AGENCY, 83, Ebury-street, S.W.

EXCEPTIONALLY nice HOUSE in Lowndes-street TO BE LET for Winter at 8 Guineas per week. Six bedrooms, three reception rooms. Newly done up; also bath room.—Apply, BELGRAVE LADIES' AGENCY, 83, Ebury-street, S.W.

PRINCE OF WALES TERRACE, exceptional opportunity. TO BE LET, furnished; nine or ten bedrooms. One minute's walk from Kensington Gardens. Four reception rooms, bath rooms. Drains perfect. Rent 8 to 10 Guineas per week, according to length of let.—83, Ebury-street.

FLAT in Victoria-street TO LET from October until May. Two excellent servants left: H. Parlour Maid and Cook. Five bedrooms, two reception rooms, bath room, lift. 5 Guineas per week.—Apply, BELGRAVE LADIES' AGENCY, 83, Ebury-street.

THE COLONIAL COLLEGE, HOLLESLEY BAY, SUFFOLK.

Training for Colonial Life, &c.
Fine Sea Air. Dry Soil.
1,800 Acres of Land.
Farming in all its Branches.
Dairy School. Veterinary Science.
Land Surveying. Horticulture.
Laboratory. Workshops, &c., &c.
Full information from the Director at
The Colonial College, or from
The London Secretary at
6, Victoria Street, Westminster Abbey.

£20 TOBACCONISTS COMMENCING. Illd. guide (259 pages), 3d., "How to open respectably £20 to £2,000." Tobacconists' Outfitting Co., 186, Euston-rd., London. Mngr. H. MYERS, Est. 1866

HOSPITALS & APPEALS.

THE EARLSWOOD ASYLUM FOR IDIOTS.
About 150 AFFLICTED CASES, from all parts of the United Kingdom, are now seeking admission.
FUNDS URGENTLY NEEDED to maintain the Elected Patients now under care and training in the Institution.
Cases on payments regulated by the Board received as soon as approved.
JAMES DOWNING, Secretary.
Offices—36, King William-street, London Bridge, E.C.

GREAT NORTHERN CENTRAL HOSPITAL.
VERY POOR, FREE, and UNENDOWED.
The only Hospital available for a population of one million.
An urgent APPEAL is made for FUNDS to support the work of relieving 1,200 In-patients and 30,000 Out-patients annually.
Holloway, N. L. H. GLENTON KERR, Secretary.

CANCER WARDS of the MIDDLESEX HOSPITAL.—35 beds devoted to Hopeless Incurable Cases.
A FUND of £12,000 is being raised for the purpose of erecting a separate BUILDING for the accommodation of the FEMALE CANCER PATIENTS hitherto located in the hospital, an improvement which is urgently demanded on the ground of the health, comfort, and convenience of the patients. Towards the cost of the new building the sum of £9,000 has been paid or promised, and an URGENT APPEAL is now made for the balance of £3,000 still required. Patients are admitted without letters or any recommendation, save that of necessity, and are permitted to remain until "relieved by art or released by death."—F. CLARE MELHADO, Secretary-Superintendent.

LONDON FEVER HOSPITAL, Liverpool-road, Islington, N.
ADDITIONAL HELP is urgently needed.
Scarlet fever and diphtheria are very prevalent. Subscriptions and donations will be thankfully received by the Secretary at the Hospital.
MAJOR W. CHRISTIE.
Bankers—Prescott & Co., 50, Cornhill, E.C.

TOWN WATER SUPPLIES.
PURIFICATION BY
MAIGNEN'S FILTRE RAPIDE

MAIGNEN'S FILTER is the only one adopted after public competition by the City of Paris (10th July, 1896).—See "Bulletin Municipal Officiel," 20th July, 1896.—Full particulars from

Maignen's Filtre Rapide & Anti-Calcaire Co., Lim.
255, REGENT ST., LONDON, W.

"TRUTH" HOTEL LIST.

BATH.—LANSDOWN GROVE HOTEL.—Desirable residence, in beautifully wooded grounds, 400 feet above sea level, facing south, and protected from north and east. Air dry and bracing. Assembly and Pump Rooms within easy distance. Omnibus free to and from Hot Mineral Baths. Billiards, Tennis Lawn.

BONCHURCH HOTEL, Bonchurch, Isle of Wight, one mile from Ventnor Station.
A comfortable, quiet, and most beautifully-situated Hotel. Pretty garden. Good sea view.
H. RIBBANDS, Proprietor.

BOSCOMBE, Bournemouth.—THE CHINE HOTEL. Under new management.
Magnificent sea views. Moderate charges. Book East Station.
Miss BARNETT (late of the Inns of Court Hotel), Manageress.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HOTEL MONT DORE.—South aspect, 150 rooms, electric light throughout, passenger lift, first-class cuisine, winter garden and lounge, covered tennis court. Turkish, sea-water, and medicated Baths. The Hotel is within two minutes' walk of the Golf Links.—For tariff, address W. KNEESE, Manager.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HIGHCLIFFE HOTEL (first-class). Unrivalled position, West Cliff, full south. Splendid sea view. Most comfortable. Electric light. Table d'hôte (separate tables). Supplies from own Alderucy Dairy Farm. Telephone 27.
JOHN KILNER, Proprietor.

BRIGHTON.—GRAND HOTEL.
Centre of Sea Front. Electric Light throughout.
NEW LIFT TO ALL FLOORS.
Inclusive terms if desired from 10s. 6d. per day.
For Illustrated Tariff apply to A. D. HOOK, Manager.

BRIGHTON.—BEDFORD HOTEL.—Old-established. Unequalled in situation; opposite West Pier. Spacious coffee and reading rooms; sea-water service; unequalled cuisine; great variety of excellent wines. Moderate tariff. Electric light in all rooms.
GEO. HECKFORD, Manager.

CARBIS BAY HOTEL, CORNWALL. The very spot to obtain rest and quietude. Overlooking the finest bay in England. Mild yet bracing climate. Within easy distance of London by G.W.R. Splendid Golf Links. "A more beautiful spot for residence could hardly be imagined."—Truth.

FOLKESTONE.—BATES' HOTEL, West Cliff Gardens, and LONGFORD PRIVATE HOTEL, The Lees. Oldest established and most select Family Hotels in Folkestone. Reduced terms during Winter and Spring months. Pension (new Coffee-room) at Bates' Hotel.—G. L. HART, Proprietor. Sanitation Certified.

FOLKESTONE.—ROYAL PAVILION HOTEL, facing Sea. 200 Apartments. Near landing-stage for Continent. Large winter garden. Table d'hôte at 7 p.m.
G. SPURGEN, Proprietor.

GRAND CANARY.—THE METROPOLE.
Newest and best Hotel.
Delightful position, fronting the sea.
Terms most moderate.

JERSEY.—The GRAND HOTEL is charmingly situated, facing the sea, with full south aspect, and sheltered from the north and easterly winds. Every home comfort and liberal management.—For terms apply to D. DE LEIDI, Manager.

MALVERN—One of the most charming places for the Holidays.—The IMPERIAL HOTEL occupies the best position, and receives visitors en pension. The golf-links (18 holes) are one of the best in England. Capital stabling for hunters. Droitwich Brine, Turkish and large Swimming Bath in separate buildings. For tariff, apply to the Proprietor and Manager. F. MOERSCHELL.

TORQUAY.—IMPERIAL HOTEL.—Under entirely New Management. New sanitary arrangements throughout. It is the largest and best-situated Hotel in Torquay, and the best winter residence on the South Coast. Visitors received en pension or à la carte. Terms moderate.
F. FISCHER, Manager.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.—WELLINGTON HOTEL, Mount Ephraim. Under the distinguished patronage of his Grace the late Duke of Wellington, K.G., the leading nobility and gentry, &c. 422 ft. above sea level, south aspect; elegantly furnished; piano in every sitting-room. Cuisine English and French. Electric light throughout.—BRABY, Proprietor.

All applications for spaces in this List should be made to the ADVERTISEMENT MANAGER,
"TRUTH" BUILDINGS, CARTERET STREET,
QUEEN ANNE'S GATE, S.W.

THE GROSVENOR HOTEL,
BELGRAVIA, LONDON, S.W.
Well known for Wedding Breakfasts and Dinner Parties.
TABLE D'HÔTE OPEN TO NON-RESIDENTS.
Covered Communication to three Railway Stations.
The only Terminus Hotel of the Brighton Railway Company in London.
Pure Water from an Artesian Well on the premises.
Electric Light throughout. Address, MANAGER.

HOTEL BELGRAVIA,
VICTORIA STREET, S.W.
(Quite close to Victoria Station.)
This is an Hotel in name only. In reality it is a REFINED HOME, replete with every convenience, every comfort, every luxury. Large and small Suites by the day, week, month or year. Also single Bedrooms.
TABLE D'HOTE, at separate tables, open to non-residents.
FIRST-CLASS CUISINE. CHOICE WINES.
For tariff and all particulars apply to MANAGER.

INNS OF COURT HOTEL, Holborn.—A first-class Family Hotel, with 200 bedrooms, all modern conveniences. Electric lights, lifts, &c. Banquets arranged. The Central Hall is the finest and the Dining-room the pleasantest in London. Masonic lodge, public meeting rooms, &c. Table d'hôte, 6 to 8, 3s. 6d.—FRANK BLACKLEY, Manager. Inclusive terms from 10s. 6d. per day.

HASTINGS. Due South, Facing Sea.
QUEEN'S HOTEL,
LARGEST AND BEST APPOINTED.
Sunny, and most sheltered position in Hastings and St. Leonards.
ELECTRIC LIGHT. PASSENGER ELEVATOR.
Moderate Tariff. Hotel Flys attend the trains.
WILLIAM GLADE, Manager.

A COMPLETE LIST OF
HOTELS OF THE MIDLAND RAILWAY.

London	MIDLAND GRAND (St. Pancras).	Leeds ...	QUEEN'S.
Liverpool...	ADELPHI.	Derby ...	MIDLAND.
Bradford ...	MIDLAND.	Morecambe	MIDLAND.
		Normanton	STATION.

The Favourite Hotels for Tourists, Cyclists, and Pedestrians.
Specialities—Comfort, Good Cuisine, Moderate Charges.
WILLIAM TOWLE, Manager, Chief Office, St. Pancras, N.W.

THE WESTMINSTER PALACE HOTEL, facing the Abbey and Houses of Parliament. Every modern comfort and convenience. Reasonable tariff, and no charge for attendance. Telegrams "Hostelry, London."

ILFRACOMBE.
ILFRACOMBE HOTEL,
The PRINCIPAL and ONLY HOTEL facing the Sea.
Unrivalled sea frontage and open surroundings. Grounds five acres. Lawn Tennis Courts. Croquet Lawn. Large Swimming Bath. Elegant Lounge hall. 250 rooms.
H. R. GROVER, Manager.

HOTEL DE PUYS, Dieppe, NOW OPEN. Beautifully placed on the edge of Cæsar's Camp, with spacious verandahs overlooking the sea. Magnificent Salons. No back bedrooms. English sanitation and furniture. Electric light, and refrigerating chamber. Good bathing and cycling, lovely drives and walks, delicious cooking, moderate charges, and all the comforts of an English country house.—J. PELLETIER, Manager.

HANS CRESCENT HOTEL
HANS CRESCENT, BELGRAVIA, LONDON, S.W.
Within three minutes' walk of the Albert Gate Entrance to Hyde Park.

THIS FAMILY HOTEL, sumptuously Furnished and Appointed, is now
Open for the reception of Visitors.
It is luxuriously complete in every detail. There are many self-contained Suites of Apartments, ensuring the utmost privacy (each having a Bathroom), as well as Single Bedrooms. A HIGH-CLASS RESTAURANT (à la carte and at fixed prices) is attached to the Hotel for Non-Residents.

RECHERCHÉ CUISINE.

One of the many attractions of this Hotel is the unique WINTER GARDEN, splendidly proportioned, and occupying an area of 2,500 square feet.

Manager, MONS. C. DIETTE.

HOTELS, &c.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE.—"The healthiest, most bracing watering-place in the world."—Vide report, Lancet. The GRAND ATLANTIC is the principal and leading Hotel, facing the sea. 130 sumptuously appointed rooms, delightful public rooms, hydraulic lift, every modern comfort. Nearest to Golf Links and Railway Station. "Own model farm."—Apply, Manager. Telegraphic address, "Atlantic." Telephone No. 11.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE.—Charming health resort for this season.—ROYAL HOTEL, aristocratic and old established, facing sea and standing in its own grounds of 8 acres. Every home comfort and attention, with unrivalled cuisine. Dairy produce and vegetables from home farm. Four tennis courts. Near golf links and beautiful woods. Extensive view of Welsh coast. Terms strictly moderate.—Proprietors, ROGERS BROS.

BUXTON, DERBYSHIRE.

THE PALACE HOTEL.

Large and high-class Hotel. Upwards of 200 rooms. Finest position in Buxton. Surrounded by own grounds of six acres. Ground-floor sitting-rooms and bed-rooms. Magnificent public rooms. American elevator. Table d'hôte at separate tables. Tariff, with plan of rooms and sketch map of Buxton, on application. A. CROSS, Manager.

LOWESTOFT

GRAND HOTEL.

The finest Situation on the East Coast; 300 ft. sea frontage, facing the German Ocean. Stands in its own beautifully wooded grounds, within easy distance of Oulton Broad.

Connected with the ROYAL HOTEL, LOWESTOFT; also RIDLER'S HOTEL, HOLBORN, where Tariff may also be obtained.

DIEPPE.

HOTEL ROYAL.

Hotel of the Best Class. Established 50 Years.

200 Bedrooms (130 facing the sea). 24 Private Sitting Rooms facing the sea.
Public Drawing and Reading Rooms.
Within 40 yards of Casino and Etablissement des Bains.
THE ONLY HOTEL IN DIEPPE WITH A LIFT TO EVERY FLOOR.
Electric Light. Telephone. Perfect Sanitation.
HIGH-CLASS CUISINE. MODERATE TARIFF. Season, June 15 to Oct. 15.
For Terms, address, MADAME LARSONNEUX, Propriétaire.

PITLOCHRY.

THE ATHOLL HYDROPATHIC (MACDONALD'S).

The ORIGINAL and very much the LARGEST. Every window commands a view of the MOST MAGNIFICENT SCENERY in SCOTLAND. 500 feet above sea level. Pure, dry, bracing air. Extensive Pleasure Grounds.
TENNIS—CROQUET—GOLF—ARCHERY—FISHING.
To prevent disappointment, address all communications—
"THE ATHOLL, PITLOCHRY." Telegraphic Address, "ATHOLL."

WATER ABSOLUTELY FREE FROM DISEASE GERMS, BY USING THE

BERKEFELD FILTER

FOR THE PRIVATE HOUSE OFFICE, FACTORY, HOTELS RESTAURANTS, CLUBS, &c. &c.

Can be Easily and Cheaply Fixed to the Service-Pipe of any HOUSE having ordinary pressure.

No Country House Should Be Without One.

In use in all the Principal Hotels. Simple in Construction. Most easily cleaned.

PRICE FOR FILTER AS ABOVE, 42s.
SMALLER SIZE, 25s.
For other prices see price-lists.

Offices and Show-Rooms:
The BERKEFELD FILTER Co. Ltd.
121, Oxford St., London, W.

NOTE.—Write for Copy of the Special Report to the "BRITISH MEDICAL JOURNAL," Nov. 10, 1894, in which the BERKEFELD FILTER is specially demonstrated as affording COMPLETE PROTECTION against the communication of WATERBORNE DISEASES.

Supplied to H.R.H. the PRINCE OF WALES. DUKE OF WESTMINSTER, K.G., and others too numerous to mention; THE HOUSE OF LORDS, and THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

AMUSEMENTS.

GAIETY.—Lessee and Manager, GEORGE EDWARDES.—ANOTHER GAIETY SUCCESS.—EVERY EVENING, at 8.15, a New Musical Play, in Two Acts, entitled MY GIRL, by James T. Tanner, Music by Osmond Carr, Lyrics by Adrian Ross. Box-office open daily from 10 till 6. MATINEE Saturday Next, at 2.30.

SAVOY.—Every Evening, at 8.30, and Every Saturday Afternoon, at 2.30, THE MIKADO, by W. S. Gilbert and Arthur Sullivan. At 7.50, WEATHER OR NO. Box-office 9 a.m. to 11 p.m.—R. D'OYLY CARTE, Proprietor and Manager.

DALY'S THEATRE.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. AUGUSTIN DALY.—EVERY EVENING, and SATURDAY MATINEE. Mr. George Edwardes's Company in THE GEISHA. The book by Owen Hall. Lyrics by Harry Greenbank. Music by Sydney Jones.

VAUDEVILLE.—A. & S. GATTI, Sole Lessees and Managers. EVERY EVENING, at 9, a Farcical Comedy, in Three Acts, by Georges Feydeau and Maurice Desvallières, entitled A NIGHT OUT. Preceded, at 8.15, by PAPA'S WIFE, by Seymour Hicks and F. C. Phillips. Music by Ellaline Terriss. MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY, at 3. Doors open 7.45. Box office open 10 to 10.

AVENUE THEATRE.—Licensee, Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY. Managers, Messrs. HENRY DANA and H. J. WILDE.
EVERY EVENING, at 8.15, the Musical Comedy,
MONTE CARLO.
THE GENUINE SUCCESS OF THE DAY.
Box-office (Mr. Fry) open 10 to 10. Seats at all Libraries.
MATINEE EVERY SATURDAY, at 2.30.

ALHAMBRA.—TO-NIGHT, Two New Grand Ballets, RIP VAN WINKLE and DONNYBROOK. Grand VARIETIES. Prices, 6d. to £3. 3s. Open 7.30. ALFRED MOUL, General Manager.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—EVERY EVENING, Two Grand Ballets, FAUST and LA DANSE. Great success. LUMIERE'S CINEMATOGRAPHE. GRAND VARIETY ENTERTAINMENT. Doors open at 7.30.

PALACE, Shaftesbury-avenue.—The HANDSOMEST THEATRE in EUROPE. The finest Variety Entertainment in London, including the NEW SERIES OF TABLEAUX VIVANTS. Full Licence. Prices from 6d. Doors open 7.40.—Manager, Mr. CHARLES MORTON.

LONDON PAVILION.—TREMENDOUS PROGRAMME: Dan Leno, Vesta Tilley, Lucy Clarke, Fannie Leslie, James Fawn, Bessie Wentworth, Lily Burnand, Jolly John Nash, Tom White's Arabs, Julie Mackey, Walter Munroe, Jenny Valmore, Charles Mildare, Mdlle. Lalo, Reuben Hill, Nellie Navette, The Fanes, Ada Lundberg, The Musical Avolos, Major Newell, Passmore Brothers, Joe Elvin and Company. The Sliding Roof off every evening. Prices from 1s. to £3. 3s. Doors open at 7.30. Box-office open from 11 to 5.

TIVOLI, Strand, London.—Cool and Well Ventilated.—Open EVERY EVENING, at 7.45, and SATURDAY MATINEE, at 2.30, with a STAR PROGRAMME, embracing every Artiste of note now in London.—Manager, Mr. VERNON DOWSETT.

MADAME TUSSAUD'S EXHIBITION, Baker-street Station.—Grand Historical Tableaux representing the Announcement to Her Majesty Queen Victoria of her Accession to the Throne, &c., &c. Portrait Models of Fowler and Milsom, Mrs. Dyer, &c., &c. The Actual Confession of Mrs. Dyer. Admission, 1s.; Extra Rooms, 6d. Open from 9 a.m. till 10 p.m.

INDIA & CEYLON EXHIBITION,
EARL'S COURT.
Main Entrance:—LILLIE ROAD, WEST BROMPTON.
Indian, Cingalese, and Burmese Palaces and Shops.
Colonnades, Lakes, Jungle, Gardens, and Streets.
Artisans, Performers, and Illusionists.
Five BANDS.
Grenadiers. Coldstreams.
Venanzi's Orchestra and others.
Mr. Imre Kiralfy's Great Spectacle
"India."
1,500 Performers; 200 Chorus.
Two Performances daily, at 3.30 & 8 p.m.
IMRE KIRALFY, Director-General.
Open 11 a.m. to 11.15 p.m. One Shilling.

GIGANTIC WHEEL running daily.
Two 20-guinea Waverley Bicycles
Given weekly to passengers.

QUEEN'S HALL.
PROMENADE CONCERTS.
Conductor, Mr. HENRY J. WOOD.
EVERY NIGHT, at 8.
Season Tickets (Transferable), 21s. Admission 1s.
Balcony, 2s.; Grand Circle (Reserved), 3s. and 5s.
Robert Newman's Box-office, Queen's Hall, Langham-place, W.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—Admission daily, One Shilling.—MAGNIFICENT DISPLAY of FIREWORKS, by C. T. BROCK & CO., Every Thursday and Saturday, at 8. Can be witnessed by tens of thousands without extra payment.

ESTATES, AUCTIONS, &c.

PEEBLESSHIRE.—ATTRACTIVE PROPERTY FOR SALE BY PRIVATE TREATY.—THE MAGNIFICENT RESIDENTIAL AND SPORTING ESTATE OF PORTMORE.

THIS CHARMING AND WELL-KNOWN ESTATE has few equals in Scotland. The salubrity of the climate, the bracing atmosphere, the great beauty of the surroundings, the sporting amenities, and the fine mansion, with appropriate gardens and offices, make it fascinating and desirable.

Situated only 18 miles from Edinburgh and 6 from Peebles, and within 2 of Eddleston Station, communication with the North or South is rapid and easy.

The MANSION (surrounded by fine old ornamental timber, and erected on an elevated plateau with southern exposure, and sheltered from north and east by the hills) commands extensive and lovely views of the Eddleston valley and the Peeblesshire hills. The accommodation of the House is ample, there being 19 bedrooms and dressing-rooms, 5 reception-rooms, spacious corridors, and suitable servants' apartments.

There are excellent Stable Offices, good Gardens with ranges of Hothouses and Vineries, and all other suitable buildings and appointments.

In EXTENT there are about 9,600 acres, of which 800 are woodlands, adding greatly to the beauty and value of the Estate. The remainder is chiefly arable and pasture land of high quality, let at moderate rents to prosperous tenants, whose flocks have always borne a high character, commanding the best market prices.

The SHOOTINGS are well mixed, affording ample sport, and the kennels are convenient. There is trout fishing on the streams, and the fishing in Portmore Loch (a charming sheet of water, two miles in circumference) could be vastly improved if stocked with Loch Leven trout.

The present RENTAL (exclusive of the mansion and the principal shootings) amounts to £3,002 12., details of which, with a plan, have been prepared.

The FURNITURE in the Mansion, or a part of it, might be acquired at valuation.

Inquiries may be addressed to Messrs. DUNDAS & WILSON, C.S., 16, St. Andrew-square, Edinburgh; or to Messrs. BLACKWOOD & SMITE, Writers, Peebles. The latter will, on receiving notice, arrange with those desirous to view the Estate.

ALDRIDGE'S, St. Martin's-lane, London.—On WEDNESDAY, September 16, Messrs. W. & S. FREEMAN WILL SELL the "ROCKET" BOXHILL and LONDON COACH HORSES Catalogue now ready.

35

ALDRIDGE'S, St. Martin's-lane, London.—THE "SPORTSMAN" WATFORD, HARROW, and LONDON COACH HORSES.—The

17

Horses which have been working this Coach WILL BE SOLD on WEDNESDAY, September 16th. Catalogue forwarded.

TO INVALIDS.—A LIST of MEDICAL MEN, in all parts, willing to RECEIVE RESIDENT PATIENTS, giving full particulars and terms, sent Gratis. The List includes Private Asylums, &c. Schools also recommended—Address, Mr. G. B. STOCKER, 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C.

THE CAPE COLONISATION COMPANY, LIMITED.

HOW TO MAKE AN INCOME-PAYING HOME.

The object of the above Company is to develop the resources of their estate, consisting of about 12,000 acres, situated in the far-famed Tulbagh district in the Western Province of Cape Colony, about 75 miles distant by rail from Cape Town. They are promoting the establishment of a successful colony. The estate has been surveyed and laid out in blocks of about 40 acres each, a number of which have already been sold. The purchase price of this land this year (with all water facilities) is £12 per acre, threequarters of which can remain bearing interest at six per cent. per annum.

In order to provide for the success of every colonist who has sufficient capital at command to be able to enter into this business, but has no practical knowledge of the work, the company have engaged the services of an efficient manager and a skilled horticulturist; and who will, if desired, plant, cultivate, and attend to the development of each client's farm for one year or more.

Thus any settler, provided he gives ordinary attention to the details of the work this company have undertaken for him, can obtain, under the guidance of a skilled specialist, that practical knowledge which is essential in the working to the best advantage of dairy and fruit farms.

THE CAPE COLONISATION COMPANY, LIMITED.

The Company undertake, if desired, to clear, plant, fence, supervise, and generally manage any holding. They guarantee that 90 per cent. of the trees and vines planted under the supervision of their staff grow to maturity, as specified in the agreement, a copy of which can be obtained on application. The company will manage the estate of any absentee at a charge of £1 a year per acre, and will also undertake to erect on the estate any houses for the residence of a settler, which can be chosen in London before sailing, with estimates given. They further undertake to purchase from a settler, at marketable prices, any approved dairy, farm, and orchard produce.

At the company's headquarters, at Seven Fountains, are the orchard and vineyard belonging to the company, and extensive creameries, packing houses, &c., will be erected as soon as necessary.

Steps are already being taken for the erection of a sugar beet factory, &c., and it is the intention of the company to promote milling and other industries.

THE CAPE COLONISATION COMPANY, LIMITED.

The Company solicit enquiries from families who are seeking a fresh start in life.

Young gentlemen who are looking for an opening in which to make their way.

Farmers who for years have been losing money in this country and would like to start afresh.

Retired members of the Military, Naval, and Civil Services, desiring to increase their incomes.

The delicate (those inclined to bronchial and pulmonary troubles) who need an avenue for making an income in a congenial climate.

The General Manager of the Company is going out at the beginning of October, and will be pleased to have the Company of any one who desires to avail himself of this opportunity of a fresh start in life in a new field.

All are requested to be good enough to place themselves in communication with the Secretary of the Company—

3, PANCRAS LANE, QUEEN STREET, LONDON, E.C.,

from whom full particulars and papers on all points can be obtained. Also the illustrated book on the subject, price 2s., together with a Manual of Practical Orchard Work at the Cape. Published by the Department of Agriculture of the Cape of Good Hope.

LONDON, BRIGHTON, AND SOUTH COAST RAILWAY.

SPECIAL TRIP ROUND THE ISLE OF WIGHT,

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 12th.

A First, Second, and Third Class Train will leave Victoria 9.30 a.m., Clapham Junction 9.35 a.m., for Portsmouth, connecting with a Special Steamer for a trip round the Isle of Wight, returning in time for Up Train at 6.15 p.m. Fares, 12s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 6s.

(By Order) ALLEN SARLE, Secretary and General Manager.

PRINCE LINE.—EGYPT and the HOLY LAND.

CHEAP ROUND TOURS a Speciality. Fare £35. The only direct Line calling at Gibraltar, Tunis, and Malta en route.

MADEIRA and the CANARY ISLANDS.—Single fare £10. 10s. Return £15. 15s.

RIVER PLATE DIRECT (not calling at Brazilian Ports), the most direct and fastest Line. Fare £22.

Luxurious saloons and cabins and promenade decks, all amidships.

Head office:—JAMES KNOTT, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

CHIVERS'

DELICIOUS. WHOLESOME. REFRESHING.

Prepared in silver-lined pans. Highly prized by all. Flavoured with Ripe Fruit Juices.

Dr. GORDON STABLES, R.N. says:—'Jellies that really add to our health and luxury.'

GOLD MEDAL.

½-PINTS, 2½d. PINTS, 4½d. QUARTS, 8d.

S. CHIVERS & SONS, Proprietors of the First English Fruit Farm Jam Factory, Histon, Cambridge.

CHIVERS' PATENT CUSTARDS and BLANC MANGES—2d. and 3d. packets and 6d. boxes — two more delicious and digestible additions to the dinner and supper table. Made by simply adding milk and boiling.

CHIVERS' 1st PRIZE JAMS. The Royal Commission on Agriculture, in its report (1895), says: "Messrs. Chivers' Factory at Histon . . is now well-known throughout the country for the excellence of its manufactures."

JELLIES.

'One Piece' Studs

PATENTED UNBREAKABLE.

Beautifully Formed.

No one who appreciates a nice Stud wears any other.

AVOID IMITATIONS.

SEE THEY ARE STAMPED PATENT.

Sold by all Leading Jewellers.

Wholesale only, Saunders and Shepherd, London.

LIQUEUR of the GRANDE CHARTREUSE.

This most excellent Liqueur, the great preventive of Indigestion, and almost certain remedy for sea-sickness, can now be had of all Wine Merchants, and at prices much lower than formerly.

Sole Consignee, W. DOYLE, 35, Crutched Friars, London, E.C.

PUREST IN ENGLAND.

BOURNE

SODA, SELTZER, LITHIA, POTASH, LEMONADE, GINGER ALE, ETC.

Supplied in 6 Dozen Cases Carriage Paid by

TABLE

Analysis, &c., on Application.

R. M. MILLS & CO., BOURNE, LINCOLNSHIRE

WATERS

West-End Agents, WHEATLEY & SONS, 24, South Audley-street, W.

City Agents, RAE & CO., 6, Railway-place, E.C.;

And of all CHEMISTS, WINE MERCHANTS, &c.

"FOR THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE."

CLARKE'S

WORLD-FAMED

BLOOD MIXTURE

Warranted to cleanse the blood from all impurities from whatever cause arising. For Scrofula, Scurvy, Eczema, Bad Legs, Skin and Blood Diseases, Pimples and Sores of all kinds, its effects are marvellous. It is the only real specific for Gout and Rheumatic Pains, for it removes the cause from the blood and bones. Thousands of Wonderful Cures have been effected by it. In bottles, 2s. 9d. and 11s. each, of Chemists everywhere.

BEWARE OF WORTHLESS IMITATIONS.

W. & F. THORN'S CARRIAGES
AND ELSWICK CYCLES.

Acknowledged by all the World to be the BEST.

LONDON ADDRESSES—

19 and 19a, Great Portland Street, and 16 and 17, Little Portland Street, W.
Ranelagh House, Lower Grosvenor Place, S.W. London (only).

SPECIAL SHIPMENTS OF
ORIENTAL CARPETS
TO BE SOLD AT GREATLY REDUCED PRICES.
TRELOAR & SONS,
LUDGATE HILL.

PRICES ARE MUCH REDUCED, as not only is the Raw Material lower, but cheap freights and a low rate of exchange are at present in favour of buyers.

TURKEY AND INDIAN CARPETS

Are delivered to the warehouse two or three times a week in all sizes, both in the old and new colourings.

ANY CARPET WILL BE SENT ON APPROBATION TO APPROVED CUSTOMERS.

A CATALOGUE OF FLOOR COVERINGS POST FREE ON APPLICATION.

TRELOAR & SONS, LUDGATE HILL, LONDON, E.C.

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER

Prevents the Hair from falling off.
Restores Grey or White Hair to its ORIGINAL COLOUR.
Being delicately perfumed it leaves no unpleasant odour.
IS NOT a dye, and therefore does not stain the skin or even white linen.
Should be in every house where a HAIR RENEWER is needed.
Ask your Chemist or Hairdresser for

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

Price 3s. 6d. per large Bottle.
Prepared only by the
ANGLO-AMERICAN DRUG COMPANY, Ltd.,
23, FARRINGDON ROAD, LONDON, E.C.

FLORILINE

FOR THE TEETH AND BREATH.

IS THE BEST LIQUID DENTIFRICE IN THE WORLD.

Prevents the Decay of Teeth.
Renders the Teeth Pearly White.
Is perfectly Harmless and Delicious to the Taste.

Of all Chemists and Perfumers throughout the World.
2s. 6d. per Bottle.

FLORILINE TOOTH POWDER.
Put up in Glass Jars, price 1s.

H. HALFORD and COMPANY,
Stock Brokers,
70 and 71,
Palmerston Buildings,
Old Broad Street,
London.

Established 1869.

Business at close prices.
Speculative Accounts opened.
Dealings reported by wire if required.
Full particulars on application.
Prompt Settlements.
Thousands of Testimonials from Clients.
African and Australian Mines—a Speciality.
List of Closing Prices gratis.
Bankers, Commercial Bank of Scotland, and Parr's and Alliance Bank, Limited.
Telegrams: "Monitor, London."

NO CONNECTION WITH ANY OTHER FIRM.

ALL HEADACHES INSTANTLY CURED OR MONEY REFUNDED.

LEGAL GUARANTEE.

7½D. EMERSON'S BROMO-SELTZER, the most successful American remedy, is an effervescent powder, taken in water. If three doses do not cure any head-ache, no matter how caused, send the bottle to us, saying where obtained, AND WE WILL AT ONCE REFUND THE PRICE.

Trial Bottle, post free, 7½d. Larger Sizes, 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 3d. Sold by many Chemists or obtained to order by almost all.

EMERSON DRUG CO., Ltd.
46, Holborn Viaduct,
LONDON, E.C.
INSIST ON FULL NAME—

EMERSON'S BROMO-SELTZER

DIASTASED FARINA FOOD.

A New and Very Superior Food for Infants, Delicate Children, and Invalids. The great desideratum of a Food for Infants, Delicate Children, and Invalids, is easiness of digestion, simplicity of preparation, and power of restoring strength. For these purposes
DIASTASED FARINA
is superior to any other Food.
Sold by all Chemists, 1s. 6d. per Tin.
Manufacturers:
E. BEANES & CO., Falcon Works, Hackney Wick, LONDON, E.

TRADE MARK.

ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT

PURELY VEGETABLE, Perfectly Harmless. Will reduce from two to five pounds per week; acts on the food in the stomach, preventing its conversion into Fat. Sold by Chemists. Send stamp for pamphlet.
Botanic Medicine Co.,
3, New Oxford-street,
London, W.C.

THE LATE EARL OF BEACONSFIELD,
SIR MORELL MACKENZIE,
OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES,
MISS EMILY FAITHFUL,
THE LATE GEN. W. T. SHERMAN, and many other persons of distinction, have testified to the remarkable efficacy of Himrod's Cure for Asthma.

Established nearly a Quarter of a Century.

Prescribed by the Medical Faculty throughout the world. It is used as an Inhalation and without any after bad effects. A free Sample and detailed testimonials free by post. In tins, 4s. 3d. British Depôt—46, Holborn Viaduct, London; also of NEWBERY & SONS, BARCLAY & SONS, LYNCH & CO., J. SANGER & SONS, W. EDWARDS & SON, MAY, ROBERTS & CO., JOHN THOMPSON, Liverpool, and all wholesale Houses.

SPECIAL ADVANTAGES TO PRIVATE INSURERS.
THE IMPERIAL INSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED. FIRE. Est. 1803, 1, Old Broad-st., E.C., & 22, Pall Mall, S.W. Subd Capital, £1,200,000. Paid-up, £300,000. Total funds, over £1,500,000.—E. COZENS SMITH, Gen. Man.

PRUDENTIAL ASSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED.—Holborn Bars, London.

EVERY DESCRIPTION OF LIFE ASSURANCE AND ANNUITY BUSINESS TRANSACTED.
REVERSIONS PURCHASED.
Invested Funds, £25,000,000.
The last Annual Report can be obtained on application to the Secretary.

SUN INSURANCE OFFICE
63, Threadneedle-street, London, E.C.
FOUNDED 1710.
THE OLDEST PURELY FIRE OFFICE IN THE WORLD.
SUM INSURED IN 1895,
£390,775,000.

JOHN SHAW, STOCK & SHARE DEALER.

HEAD OFFICE:—
WARDROBE CHAMBERS, DOCTORS' COMMONS, LONDON, E.C.
BANKERS:—
CAPITAL AND COUNTIES, Ludgate-hill, Long Acre, Piccadilly, and Brighton Branches.
LONDON AND MIDLAND, Newgate-street and Tooley-street Branches.
DIRECT PRIVATE TELEGRAPH WIRE between LONDON and BRIGHTON Offices.
FULL PARTICULARS of SPECIAL ARRANGEMENTS for DEALING sent post free on application.
COVER SYSTEM.—The loss is limited, the profits are unlimited, and there is such an independence in acting that the principle must and does recommend itself to business men—indeed, it is the only method on which they deal—for speculative accounts.
£5 COMMANDS £500 STOCK.
£10 COMMANDS £1,000 STOCK.
£50 COMMANDS £5,000 STOCK.
£500 COMMANDS £50,000 STOCK, and so on in proportion.
NO OTHER LIABILITY WHATEVER.
JOHN SHAW, STOCK AND SHARE DEALER, LONDON, BRIGHTON, MANCHESTER, AND DUBLIN.

W. B. COCHRANE & CO.,
STOCK AND SHARE DEALERS.
13 and 14, CORNHILL, LONDON, E.C.
Telegrams: "Reinvest, London."
Bankers: London and Westminster, Lothbury, E.C.
Accounts opened for the Stock Exchange Fortnightly Settlements, and also upon the usual Cover System. Accounts opened for Three-monthly Settlement without Carrying-over Rates being charged.
Prospectus, Monthly Investment Book, Mining List, and Market Reports, with the latest advices, forwarded gratis upon application.
W. B. COCHRANE & CO., 13 and 14, Cornhill, E.C.

BIRKBECK BANK (Estab. 1851), Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane, London. Two and a-half per cent. interest allowed on deposits, repayable on demand. Two per cent. on current accounts, on the minimum monthly balances when not below £100.
The BIRKBECK ALMANACK with particulars, post free.
FRANCIS RAVENSCROFT, Manager.

LONDON AND COUNTY ADVANCE AND DISCOUNT COMPANY, Limited.—Cash advanced from £10 to £500, without preliminary fees or deductions for interest, for short or long periods, repayable by easy instalments, at moderate rates, upon approved security. Bills Discounted. Forms free. Offices, 57 and 58, Chancery-lane, W.C.—JOHN STONE, Secretary.

JOHANNESBURG CONSOLIDATED INVESTMENT COMPANY, LIMITED.

NOTICE is Hereby Given that a further DIVIDEND of 10 per Cent. (2s. per share) has been DECLARED, making 25 per cent. for the year ending 30th JUNE, 1896. The Dividend will be paid to Shareholders registered on that date, so soon as the Johannesburg and London share registers have been agreed.

By order,
T. HONEY, London Secretary.

7, Lothbury, London, E.C.
1st September, 1896.

JOHANNESBURG CONSOLIDATED INVESTMENT COMPANY, LIMITED.

Notice is Hereby Given that the Transfer Books of this Company will be Closed from the 14th to the 28th September, 1896 (both dates inclusive), for the purpose of balancing the Share Ledgers in connection with the proposed issue of 200,000 new shares. A circular will be sent to the shareholders, with application forms, shortly after the 28th September.

By Order,
THOMAS HONEY, London Secretary.

7, Lothbury, E.C.
7th September, 1896.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

NOTICE.

No Member of the Stock Exchange is allowed to advertise for business purposes, or to issue circulars to persons other than his own principals.

Persons who advertise as Brokers or Share Dealers are not Members of the Stock Exchange, or under the control of the Committee.

A List of Members of the Stock Exchange who are Stock and Share Brokers may be seen at the Bartholomew-lane Entrance to the Bank of England, or obtained on application to

FRANCIS LEVIEN
Secretary to the Committee of the Stock Exchange.
Committee Room, The Stock Exchange, London, E.C.

A Bad Complexion

4d

is often due to a bad soap.

BLOTCHES ARE REPULSIVE, AND WILL MAR THE APPEARANCE OF ANY FACE. YOU CAN'T GET RID OF THEM WITH BAD SOAP.

PREMIER VINOLIA SOAP

Is made specially for delicate, sensitive, irritable skins, and is scented with the most charming and innocent Perfumes.

PREMIER VINOLIA SOAP

yields a profuse, cleansing, demulcent, lather, and tends to keep the skin soft and velvety, and the complexion beautiful and clear. Its use doesn't cost a farthing a day.

4d

Vinolia is a Complexion Soap.

VINOLIA CREAM.—For Itching, Sunburn, Insect Bites, &c., 1/1½ and 1/9.
VINOLIA POWDER.—For Roughness, Chafes, &c., 1/1 and 1/9.

SINGER'S SEWING MACHINES

ARE SO SIMPLE THAT THE YOUNGEST CAN UNDERSTAND THEM.
AND SO EASY THAT THE OLDEST CAN WORK THEM.

106 Years Old. (Taken from Life.) 5 Years Old.

SUCH EASY TERMS THAT ANYBODY CAN PURCHASE ONE.

Very good discount for Cash, and as much as 20s. allowed for an old machine in part exchange.

THE SINGER MANUFACTURING CO.,

Management for the United Kingdom—42 and 43, ST. PAUL'S CHURCHYARD, LONDON, E.C.

BRANCH OFFICES EVERYWHERE.

BUY FROM THE GROWER.

TEA MERCHANT
BY SPECIAL APPOINTMENT

TO HER MAJESTY
THE QUEEN.

LIPTON'S DELICIOUS TEAS

HAVE THE LARGEST SALE IN THE WORLD.

NO HIGHER PRICE. PER 1/7 LB. NO HIGHER PRICE.

APPRECIATED EVERYWHERE FOR THEIR DELICATE FLAVOUR AND EXQUISITE AROMA.

THIS IS THE FINEST TEA THE WORLD PRODUCES.

PER 1/4 LB. RICH, PURE, AND FRAGRANT. PER 1/- LB.

LIPTON, Tea Planter, Ceylon.

Chief Offices, CITY ROAD, LONDON. Branches Everywhere. Agencies Throughout the World.

OUR PUZZLES.

RULES.

1. The sum of £2. 2s. will be given every week for the best EPIGRAM, CONUNDRUM, LIPOGRAM, BOUTS-RIMÉS, or whatever the announced subject of the competition for the week may be.

2. The Puzzle Editor reserves the right, however, of dividing the above sum between two or more competitors, or of withholding the prize, should exceptional circumstances render such a course desirable.

3. The decision and award of the Puzzle Editor must be considered final and irrevocable, and, for obvious reasons, no appeal from his critical judgments can be entertained.

4. In every instance the prize will be given in money, subject to no condition whatever, except the publication of the winner's real name and address in this journal.

5. Competitors will be allowed eleven days for the composition and despatch of their efforts; but all such communications must, at the latest, be received at the TRUTH OFFICE by the first post on the morning of the second Monday succeeding the publication of the subject for competition.

6. Not more than one Prize will be given a Quarter to the same competitor.

7. ALL NEW CONTRIBUTORS ARE REQUIRED TO FORWARD WITH THEIR FIRST ANSWERS THEIR REAL NAMES AND ADDRESSES FOR REGISTRATION; such names and addresses will not be published except in the case of Prize-winners.

8. The nom-de-plume chosen by competitors should not exceed 12, and must under no circumstances consist of more than 14, letters.

9. COMPETITORS MUST ON NO ACCOUNT CHANGE THEIR NOMS-DE-PLUME THEY HAVE ONCE ASSUMED.

10. On the announcement of the Prize-winner's nom-de-plume, the successful competitor must write and make formal application for the Prize, stating the address to which the cheque must be sent. Any competitor failing to do so within three months of winning the Prize will forfeit all claim to the same.

11. No communications can be received on post-cards, by telegraph, or by hand. They must all be sent by the time named above. All post letters addressed—

PUZZLE EDITOR OF "TRUTH," CARTERET-STREET, QUEEN ANNE'S-GATE, S.W.

SPECIAL NOTICE. — THE COMING "TRUTH" TOY AND DOLL SHOW.

As some readers of TRUTH may have failed to notice the announcement which appeared on this page last week, let me repeat that the Dolls have arrived, and are now ready for distribution. Will those kind ladies who intend to assist in dressing these Dolls for the Show at Christmas be good enough, therefore, to make their applications as soon as possible? The Dolls, as in former years, are of two sizes, and ladies in applying should state how many of each they are willing to dress.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 910.

I have delayed making the announcement in this case, as I had hoped to publish a further selection of the lists of names received. As, however, a chance has not been forthcoming, I now publish the name of the prize-winner and the names suggested by him for the yearlings. The subjoined list, I may add, cannot be considered quite satisfactory, but it seems to me, after very long consideration, the best of the hundreds which I received, and the prize is therefore awarded to W. W. P., on condition that none of the following names already belong to horses now in training.

THE PRIZE LIST OF NAMES FOR 12 YEARLINGS.

as particularised in TRUTH for July 23:—

1. Miss Veneering. 2. Macadam. 3. Rhodesia. 4 Divorce. 5. Nostrum. 6. Repartee. 7. Sudden Death. 8. Sword Dance. 9. Golden Pippin. 10. Mr. Streeter. 11. Charley's Aunt. 12. Magda.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 916.

The prize in this competition has been awarded to VOX, whose Epitaph was printed on page 630 of TRUTH, for September 3.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 920.

I am reminded by several correspondents that the time has come to repeat a competition which has on several former occasions proved successful about this time of the year. Holiday-keepers, especially, will appreciate the chance thus given, for the usual prize of Two Guineas is offered for

THE BEST DESCRIPTION, IN TWENTY LINES OF RHYMED DECASYLLABIC VERSE, OF SOME FAVOURITE WATERING PLACE.

I need scarcely explain that by "decasyllabic verse" is meant the ten-syllabled metre, often described as "heroic," in which Pope and Dryden wrote so much of their poetry. In using this metre competitors are at liberty to finish some or all of their lines with a double rhyme, though by so doing they will, of course, increase the number of syllables to eleven in the lines thus ended. Each line must rhyme with some other line in the composition, and all answers must be received by me by the morning of Monday, September 21, at the latest.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

JEFF.—The misprint was an obvious one. The date in your epitaph should have been 1896, and not 1886.

BINKS.—Thanks.

CLEAR.—Your duplicate answer reached me in due course.

L. C. B.—I altogether fail to see the relevancy of your complaint.

THE PUZZLE EDITOR.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 917.—ASSORTED SPECIMENS—GOOD AND OTHERWISE.

QUOTATIONS TENDING TO SUGGEST THAT SHAKESPEARE HAD AN ANTICIPATORY KNOWLEDGE OF THE AUTO-CAR.

He is pure air and fire; and the dull elements of earth and water never appear in him, but only in patient stillness, while his rider mounts him (Henry V., act iii., sc. 7).—Our Dodd, Polly Toodle, and Speedwell.

Hors'd upon the sightless couriers of the air Macbeth, act i., sc. 7).—Gervase.

The want is but to put those powers in motion that long to move.—(Cymbeline, act iv., sc. 3).—Pansy, Six Knobs, and Merle.

The carriages, in faith, are very dear to fancy, very responsive to the hills . . . . and of very liberal conceit." "What call you the carriages?" (Hamlet, act v., sc. 2).—C. M. P., Taurus, Pax, Merle, Econanore.

A horse! a horse! my kingdom for a horse (King Richard III., act v., sc. 4.—Tamarisk, Impéricuse, Cheshire Cat, Jeff, and Utis.

Osrick: Most delicate carriages and of very liberal conceit. Hamlet: What call you the carriages? (Hamlet, act v., sc. 2.)—Denny.

And then it started like a guilty thing, Upon a fearful summons (Hamlet, act i., sc. 1).—A. A. A. A.

Farewell the neighing steed (Othello, act iii., sc. 3).—Thanatopsis, Hobbima, Nitram, Antelope, Taurus, Speedwell.

It is shaped, sir, like itself: and it is as broad as it hath breadth: it is just so high as it is, and moves with its own organs (Antony and Cleopatra, act ii., sc. 7).—Bede.

Then marvel not, thou great and complete man. . . . Since things in motion, sooner catch the eye, than what not stirs (Troilus, and Cressida, act iii., sc. 2)—C.

It is shaped, sir, like itself: and it is as broad as it hath breadth: it is just as it is, and moves with its own organs: it lives by that which nourisheth it: and the elements once out of it, it transmigrates (Anthony and Cleopatra, act ii., sc. 7).—Hesta.

Let go thy hold, when a great wheel runs down a hill, lest it break thy neck with following it; but the great one that goes up the hill, let him draw thee after (King Lear, act ii., sc. 4).—Anon.

Go in with me; and counsel every man the aptest way for safety, and revenge: get posts, and letters, and make friends with speed (King Henry IV., act i., sc. 1).—Gollywog.

And pity like a naked new-born babe striding the blast; or heaven's cherubim, horsed upon the sightless couriers of the air (Macbeth, act i., sc. 7).—H. H.

Moves with its own organs: it lives by that which nourisheth it: and the elements once out of it: it transmigrates (Anthony and Cleopatra, act ii., sc. 7).—Esperanza.

1. She creeps. Her motion and her station are as one; she shows a body, rather than a life (Anthony and Cleopatra, act iii., sc. 3). 2. It is a massy wheel Fixed on the summit of the highest mount To whose huge spokes ten thousand lesser things Are mortised and adjoined (Hamlet, act iii., sc. 3).—Nitram.

Like youthful steers unyok'd they take their course—east, west, north, south—or like a school broke up each hurries towards his home.—2 Henry IV., act iv., sc. 2.—Spencer.

It seems that the first information of locomotion by auto-car was brought to Shakespeare by a correspondent, for he says—"I have heard of riding wagers, Where horses have been nimbler than the sands That run i' the clock's behalf" (Cymbeline, act iii., sc. 2). This evidently aroused his imagination so that he saw the motor-car, either in reality or else in dream, for he says—"I know thee well, though never seen before, Be not amaz'd, there's nothing hid from me" (Henry VI., Part I., act i., sc. 2). And again—"In open market-place produced they one To be a public spectacle to all" (Henry VI., Part I., act i., sc. 4), which evidently refers to the Crystal Palace exhibition. And yet again—"I saw young Harry . . . . Rise from the ground like feather'd Mercury [And vaulted with such ease into his seat] As if an angel dropp'd down from the clouds, To turn and wind a fiery Pegasus" (Henry IV., Part I., act iv., sc. 1).—Initium.

Why, here's a change indeed! (Measure for Measure, act i., sc. 2). What need we any spur? (Julius Cæsar, act ii., sc. 1). Farewell the neighing steed (Othello, act iii., sc. 3).—Pelican.

Let there be some more test made of my metal, Before so noble and so great a figure Be stamp'd upon it (Measure for Measure, act i., sc. 1). You must borrow me Gargantua's mouth first: 'tis a word too great for any mouth of this age's size (As You Like It, act iii., sc. 2). You must not make the full show of this till you may do it without controlment (Much Ado About Nothing, act i., sc. 3). Make not impossible That which but seems unlike: 'tis not impossible (Measure for Measure, act v., sc. 1).—Verbum Sat.

You must live, drawn by your own sweet skill (Sonnet, xvi., 14).—Lemuel.

Moves like an engine . . . . and his hum is a battery (Coriolanus, act v., sc. 4).—Lemuel, Nin Nin.

As true as truest horse that yet would never tire (Midsummer Night's Dream, act iii., sc. 1).—Eleanor Hazle, Light, and Vindex.

O Phœbus hadst thou never given consent, that Phaeton should check thy fiery steeds, thy burning car never had scorched the earth (Henry VI., Part III., act ii., sc. 6.)—Blois and Auntie Ray.

Wilt thou aspire to guide the heavenly car, and with thy daring folly burn the world? (Two Gentlemen of Verona, act iii., sc. 1).—Heurteloup and J. McGrigor Allan.

Beshrew your heart for sending me about, to catch my death with jaunting up and down (Romeo and Juliet, act ii., sc. 5.)—Noel.

When he walks, he moves like an engine, and the ground shrinks before his treading (Coriolanus, act v., sc. 4).—Ivanhoe.

It is a creature that I teach. . . . to stop, to run directly on; his (its) corporal motion governed by my spirit (J. Cæsar, act iv., sc. 1).—Vindex.

For from his metal was his party steel'd; . . . and as the thing that's heavy in itself, upon enforcement, flies with greatest speed (Henry IV., Part II., act i., sc. 1).—Ling-Ling.

Haled thither by most mechanical and dirty hand (2nd Henry IV., act v., sc. 5). In winged speed no motion shall I know: there can no horse with my desire keep pace (Sonnet 51). O you leaden messengers that ride upon the violent speed of fire (All's Well, act iii., sc. 2).—Merle.

Why, Phæton (for thou art Merop's son), wilt thou aspire to guide the heavenly car, and with thy daring folly burn the world? (Two Gentlemen of Verona, act iii., sc. 1).—S. L. and Speedwell.

A chariot of an inestimable value (Pericles, act ii., sc. 4).—Hobbima and Speedwell.

He goes before me and still dares me on: when I come where he calls, then he is gone. The villain is much lighter-wheel'd than I: I follow'd fast, but faster he did fly (Midsummer Night's Dream, act ii., sc. 2).—Theology.

O for a horse with wings! (Cymbeline, act iii., sc. 2). I have heard of riding wagers, where horses have been nimbler than the sands that run i' the clock's behalf. But this is foolery (Ibid).—J. McGrigor Allan.

A piece of work so bravely done, so rich, that it did strive in workmanship and value; which I wonder'd, could be so rarely and exactly wrought, since the true life on 't was (Cymbeline, act ii., sc. 4).—A. E. L.

The thing that's heavy in itself, upon enforcement flies with greater speed (2 Henry IV., act i., sc. 1). It is a creature that I teach to fight, to wind, to stop, to run directly on, his corporal motion governed by my spirit (Julius Cæsar, act iv., sc. 1).—Nin Nin.

And doubt not but success will fashion the event in better shape than I can lay it down in likelihood (Much Ado About Nothing, act iv., sc. 1).—Nemesis.

Nay, keep your way, little gallant; you were wont to be a follower; but now you are a leader (Merry Wives of Windsor, act iii., sc. 2). It goes on I see, as my soul prompts it (The Tempest, act i., sc. 2).—Auntie Ray.

For O, for O, the hobby horse is forgot (Hamlet, act iii., sc. 2).—Mickey-Doodle and Gollywog.

We the globe can compass soon, swifter than the wandering moon (Midsummer Night's Dream act iv., sc. 1).—Light and M. P. B.

For 'tis your thoughts that now must deck your kings, carry them here and there, jumping o'er times, turning the accomplishments of many years into an hour-glass (King Henry V., Prologue).—Fritz.

Why a horse can do no more (Two Gentlemen of Verona, act ii., sc. 1).—E. Culverhouse.

Then can no horse with my desire keep pace (Sonnet 51, line 9).—Antelope.

Their carriage ride, as they did battery to the spheres intend (A Lover's Complaint, stanza 4). Of posting is no need (Sonnet 51).—M. E. W.

Oh for a horse with wings! Hearest thou, Pisanio? He is at Milford Haven: If one of mean affairs May plod it in a week, why may not I Glide thither in a day? (Cymbeline, act iii., sc. 2).—Philomel and Cyclist.

O heaven! That one might read the book of fate and see the revolution of the times (2 Henry IV., act iii., sc. 1).—Dorset.

The ne'er-yet beaten horse of Parthia we have jaded out of the field (Anthony and Cleopatra, act iii., sc. 1).—Pax.

1. Dire combustion. . . . new hatched to the woful time (Macbeth act ii., sc. 2). 2. Double, double toil and trouble, fire burn and cauldron bubble (Macbeth act iv., sc. 1).—Mickey Doodle.

Down, down I come like glistering Phaeton, wanting the manage of unruly jades (K. Richard II., act iii., sc. 3.).—Culpepper.

O for a horse with wings (Cymbeline, act iii., sc. 2).—Pansy.

They sell the pasture now, to buy the horse. . . . With winged heels, as English Mercuries, for now sits Expectation in the air (K. Henry V., chorus).—Francis.

1. Thus the Whirligig (Twelfth Night, act v., sc. 1). 2. Come my coach (Hamlet, act iv., sc. 4). 3. For O, for O the hobby horse (Hamlet, act iii., sc. 2). 4. To turn and wind a fiery Pegasus (Henry IV., Part I., act iv., sc .1).—Hibernian.

Which she with pretty and with swimming gait, would imitate, and sail upon the land, to fetch me trifles and return again as from a voyage, rich with merchandise (Midsummer Night's Dream, act ii., sc. 2).—Lily Hazle.

In this, the antique and well-noted face of plain old form is much disfigured (King John, act iv., sc. 2 21, 22). Diseased nature oftentimes breaks forth in strange eruptions (King Henry IV., Part I., act iii., sc. 1, 26, 27). It is a beast for Perseus: he is pure air and fire (King Henry V., act iii., sc. 7, 20). Service shall with steeled sinews toil (King Henry V., act ii., sc. 2, 36).—Kilwarlin.

To draw with idle spiders' strings most ponderous and substantial things (Measure for Measure, act iii., sc. 2).—Dombey.

I go, I go; look, how I go; swifter than arrow from the Tartar's bow (Midsummer Night's Dream, act iii., sc. 2).—M. P. B.

Then should I spur though mounted on the wind; in winged speed no motion should I know: there can no horse with my desire keep pace (Sonnet 51).—Utis.

Where is the horse? (Merchant of Venice, act ii., sc. 6). Turn and wind a fiery Pegasus (Henry IV., act iv., sc. 1). Wilt thou aspire to drive the heavenly car? (Two Gentlemen of Verona, act iii., sc. 1).—Pax.

(To the horse): And still, as you are weary of the weight, Rest you. . . . (King Richard III., act i, sc. 2.) We do it wrong, being so majestical, To offer it the show of violence; For it is, as the air, invulnerable; And our vain blows malicious mockery. . . . (Hamlet, act i, sc. 1.)—Arch. Gibbs.

1. Why 'tis the rarest argument of wonder that hath shot out in our latter times (All's Well that Ends Well, act ii., sc. 3). 2. For goodness' sake, consider what you do; how you may hurt yourself, ay, utterly. . . . by this carriage (King Henry VIII., act iii., sc. 1).—Polly Toodle.

I saw young Harry . . . . as if an angel dropped down from the clouds to turn and wind a fiery Pegasus, and witch the world with noble horsemanship (King Henry IV., act i., sc. 4).—Francis.

This is a gift that I have. Simple, simple; a foolish extravagant spirit, full of forms, figures, shapes, objects, ideas, apprehensions, motions, revolutions (Love's Labour's Lost, act. iv., sc. 2).—In dubiis.

The sightless couriers of the air (compressed) (Macbeth, act i., sc. 7).—Utis.

That it may please you to give quiet pass through your dominions for this enterprise, on such regards of safety and allowance, as therein are set down (Hamlet, act ii., sc. 2).—Taurus.

I'll put a girdle round about the earth in forty minutes (A Midsummer Night's Dream). It was alway yet the trick of our English nation, if they have a good thing, to make it too common (Henry IV.). Striving to do better, oft we mar what's well (King Lear).—Cheshire Cat.

Or who hath brought the fatal engine in (Titus Andronicus, act v., sc. 3). And their rough carriage so ridiculous (Love's Labour's Lost, act v., sc. 2). Attend me where I wheel (Troilus and Cressida, act v., sc. 7). Then may I set the world on wheels (Two Gentlemen of Verona, act iii., sc. 3).—A. D. R.

With his banners and his well-paid ranks, The ne'er yet beaten horse of Parthia We have jaded out of the field (Antony and Cleopatra, act iii., sc. 1).—Econamore and Ivanhoe.

So service shall with steeled sinews toil (Henry V., act ii., sc. 2). The present eye praises the present object (Troilus and Cressida, act iii., sc. 3). There are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio, than are dreamt of in your philosophy (Hamlet, act i., sc. 5). Mounted upon a hot and fiery steed (Richard II., act v., sc. 2).—Dorset.

Nestor, hatch'd in silver, Should, with a bond of air (strong as the axle-tree on which heaven rides), Knit all the Greekish ears To his experienced tongue* (Troilus and Cressida, act i., sc. 3, line 67.—Speedwell.

* In re the invention.

Dauphin: I will not change my horse with any that treads but on four pasterns (King Henry V., act iii., sc. 7). Constable: Hark, how our steeds for present service neigh (King Henry V., act iv., sc. 2).—Argonaut.

And their rough carriage, so ridiculous, should be presented at our tent to us (Love's Labour's Lost, act v., sc. 2). Since thou, created to be aw'd by man, wast born to bear. I was not made a horse, and yet I bear a burden like an ass (Richard II., act v., sc. 5).—Comet Aster.

We in your motion turn and you may move us (Comedy of Errors, act iii., sc. 2, line 24). That which is now a horse, even with a thought, the rack dislimns (Antony and Cleopatra, act iv., sc. 14, line 9). Then may I set the world on wheels, when she can spin for her living (Two Gentlemen of Verona, act iii., sc. 1).—Pansy.

The extreme part of time extremely forms all causes to the purpose of his speed; and often, at his very loose, decides that which long process could not arbitrate (Love's Labour's Lost, act. v., sc. 2). And here an engine, fit for my proceeding (The Two Gentlemen of Verona, act iii., sc. 1). Then I may set the world on wheels (The Two Gentlemen of Verona, act iii., sc. 1). Why, a horse can do no more (The Two Gentlemen of Verona, act iii., sc. 1). O excellent motion (The Two Gentlemen of Verona, act ii., sc. 1).—A. E. L.

Come here about me, you, my myrmidon. Mark what I say. Attend where I wheel. Strike not a stroke, but keep yourselves in health. Delay leads impotent and snail-pac'd beggary: Then fiery expedition be thy wing (King Richard III., act iv., sc. 3).—E. Culverhouse.

Rumour: I, from the orient to the drooping west, Making the wind* my post-horse, still unfold The acts commenced on this ball of earth (King Henry IV., induction.) Duke: Making practice on the times, Draw with idle spiders' strings Most ponderous and substantial things (Measure for Measure, act iii., sc. 2).—Culpepper.

* Wind=hot air or gas as motor.

I see before me (man) not heere, not heere; Nor what ensues but have a fog in them What I cannot looke through (Cymbeline, act iii., sc. 2). There's no more to say, Accessible is none but Milford way (Cymbeline, act iii., sc. 2). Then comes the time who lives to see it, That going shall be us'd with feet. This prophecée Merlin shall make; for I live before his time (King Lear, act iii). I may truly say it is a noveltie in the world (All's Well, act ii.). O you leaden messengers That ride upon the violent speede of fire (All's Well, act iii.)—Cyclist.

Are these things then necessities, Then let us meet them like necessities (King Henry IV., Part II., act iii., sc. 2). Here's fine revolution, an we had the trick to see't (Hamlet, act v., sc. 1).—Nemesis.

In winged speed no motion shall I know, Then can no horse with my desire keep pace (Sonnet 51). M. E. W.

Striding the blast, or heaven's cherubim, hors'd Upon the sightless couriers of the air (Macbeth, act i., sc. 7).—Macbeth.

Mounted upon a hot and fiery steed, which his aspiring rider seem'd to know, with slow but stately pace kept on his course (King Richard II., act v., sc. 2). Rise from the ground like feather'd Mercury, and vaulted with such ease into his seat, to turn and wind a fiery Pegasus, and witch the world with noble horsemanship (first part Henry IV., act iv., sc. 1). I like the new tire—excellently (Much Ado about Nothing, act iii., sc. 4). Freedom, heyday! freedom, freedom O brave monster! lead the way (The Tempest, act ii., sc. 2).—Auntie Ray.

And here an engine fit for my proceeding (Two Gentlemen of Verona, act iii., sc. 1). The spirit of the time shall teach me speed (King John, act iv., sc. 2). I may truly say 'tis a novelty to the world (All's Well that Ends Well, act ii., sc. 3). They say miracles are past. . . . Why 'tis the rarest argument of wonder that hath shot out in our latter times (All's Well that Ends Well, act ii. sc. 3). "Let me not live," quoth he, "after my frame lacks oil, to be the snuff of younger spirits whose apprehensive senses all but new things disdain (All's Well that Ends Well, act i., sc. 2).—Nin-Niu.

See the wonders of the world (Two Gentlemen of Verona, act i., sc. 1). Not a horse (King Henry IV., act iv., sc. 3) to carry thee (1 Henry VI., act i., sc. 3); a coach doth carry thee (Love's Labour's Lost, act iv., sc. 3). I would my horse had the speed of your (Much Ado About Nothing, act i., sc. 1) car (King Richard III., act v., sc. 2). What is it carries you away? (1 King Henry IV., act ii., sc. 3): A most noble carriage (1 King Henry IV., act ii., sc. 4), a team of horse (Two Gentlemen of Verona, act iii., sc. 1). Can do no more (Two Gentlemen of Verona, act ii., sc. 1). Fashion a carriage to (Much Ado About Nothing, act i., sc. 3) carry (2 King Henry VI., act i., sc. 2) as fast as horse can carry (2 King Henry VI., act i., sc. 4.). Many carriages (King John V., act v. sc. 7) fashioned for the journey (Timon of Athens, act ii., sc. 2). A mighty strength they carry (Anthony and Cleopatra, act ii., sc. 1), worth a thousand (2 King Henry IV., act ii., sc. 1) horse and mares together (Anthony and Cleopatra, act iii., sc. 7).—Ivy Leaves.

You speedy helpers, that are substitutes Under the lordly monarch of the north, Appear, and aid me in this enterprise! (King Henry VI., Part I., act v., sc. 3—La Pucelle). Where is the horse that doth untread again His tedious measures with the unbated fire That he did pace them first? All things that are, Are with more spirit chased than enjoy'd (The Merchant of Venice, act ii., sc. 6—Gratiano).—Hesta.

Come here about me, you, my myrmidons; Mark what I say. Attend me where I wheel (Troilus and Cressida, act v., sc. 7). The wheel is come full circle (King Lear, act v., sc. 3). In an extravagant and wheeling stranger (Othello, act i., sc. 1). Hors'd upon the sightless couriers of the air (Macbeth, act i., sc. 7). The hobby-horse is forgot (Love's Labour's Lost, act iii., sc. 1. Hamlet, act iii., sc. 2).—J. McGrigor Allan.

You draw me, you hard-hearted adamite: But yet you draw not iron, for my heart Is true as steel; leave you your power to draw, And I shall have no power to follow you (Midsummer Night's Dream, act ii., sc. 2).—Theology.

A THIN PAPER EDITION OF "TRUTH"
IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY,
AND CAN BE OBTAINED ON ORDER OF ALL NEWSAGENTS.

CARTER 6A, NEW CAVENDISH ST. PORTLAND PLACE, LONDON.

ONLY ADDRESS OF ORIGINAL CARTER

LITERARY MACHINE.

For holding book, lamp, meals, &c., in any position over an easy chair, bed, or sofa. Deliciously luxurious. A most useful gift. Prices from 17/6

Carrying Chairs from £1.

Breakfast in Bed Tables from 30/-

INVALID FURNITURE.

ADJUSTABLE COUCHES and BEDS from £1. 10/-

Bed Lift £3. 10/- | Bed Rests 7/6
Reclining Boards, 25/- | Leg Rests 10/-
Walking Machines | Crutches 10/6
Portable W.C.'s, Electric Bells, Urinals, &c. | Bed Baths 12/6
Air & Water Beds. | Commodes, £1. 5/-

Self-Propelling Chairs from £2

BATH CHAIRS

FROM £1. 5/-

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUES POST FREE.

JOHN CARTER, 6a, NEW CAVENDISH ST. Portland-pl. London, W.

EPPS'S COCOAINE.

COCOA-NIB EXTRACT.

(TEA-LIKE.)

The choicest roasted nibs (broken-up beans) of the natural Cocoa on being subjected to powerful hydraulic pressure, give forth their excess of oil, leaving for use a finely-flavoured powder—"Cocoaine," a product which, when prepared with boiling water, has the consistence of tea, of which it is now, with many, beneficially taking the place. Its active principle being a gentle nerve stimulant, supplies the needed energy without unduly exciting the system.

FARADAY & SON's

Electric Light Fittings

NEW DESIGNS for SEASON '96.

2 & 3 BERNERS ST. LONDON W

HITCHING'S BABY STORES.

The Premier Manufacturers of HIGH-GRADE BABY CARRIAGES in the World, have extensive Showrooms at 23, 21, & 19, LUDGATE HILL, LONDON, E.C.

(WORKS: LUDGATE SQUARE.)

198, OXFORD STREET, LONDON, W. (NEAR PETER ROBINSON'S.)

28, KNIGHTSBRIDGE, S.W. (ST. GEORGE'S PLACE, NEAR HYDE PARK CORNER.)

Messrs. HITCHING & WYNN have recently had the honour of building the Baby Carriage for the Baby Prince Edward of York, having previously executed orders for H.M. the Queen, H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh, H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, H.R.H. Princess Henry of Battenberg, H.R.H. the Duchess of Fife, H.R.H. Princess Henry of Prussia, &c. Also the Royal and Imperial families of Russia, Germany, Denmark, Portugal, and Sweden.

Hitching's Baby Carriages from 2 to 25 Guineas, and Baby Cars from 15/6 to 10 Guineas, are not only the Best, but also 25 per cent. cheaper than those sold by dealers and stores. A carriage should always be purchased from the actual manufacturer. Enquiries receive prompt and courteous attention. Illustrations free. Correspondence solicited. 300 varieties in stock.

Bankers: CAPITAL & COUNTIES BANK AND CITY BANK. Telegram Address: "HITCHING, LONDON."
Liverpool Agency, 74, BOLD STREET. Boston (U.S.A.) Agency, 92, WASHINGTON STREET.

HITCHING'S "PRINCESS MAY" BABY CARRIAGE IS MOST SUITABLE FOR A CHRISTENING PRESENT, BEING RECHERCHE & UNPROCURABLE ELSEWHERE.

Before going elsewhere send for Hitching's Pictorial Price Book free on mentioning "TRUTH."

THE "TROUVILLE" BABY-CAR.

IS equally adapted for use as a Sleeping Car for a young baby, or a Mail Car for an older child.

1. New registered design.
2. Runs on four silent wheels.
3. Small light front wheels.
4. Very safe, centre of gravity being very low.
5. Hitching's Patent Cee Springs. Very easy.
6. Occupies small space.
7. Has deep well for legs and feet. No cramping.
8. Hitching's Patent "Any Position Hood."
9. Half the weight of a wood body. Fine wicker and grass.
10. Cool in summer.
11. Artistically painted.
12. Beautifully upholstered in pale blue or art green.

Price as drawn £4. 4s. nett.

10/6 THE "PELICAN" SELF-FEEDING PEN 10/6

(PATENTED)

WRITES INSTANTLY AND CONTINUOUSLY.

Has Extra Large Reservoir of Ink. Secure against Leakage in any position. Flow of Ink regulated with the Greatest Nicety.

POLISHED VULCANITE, HANDSOMELY ENCHASED, FITTED WITH SPECIAL BARREL PEN in 14-ct. GOLD, IRIDIUM-POINTED. Also

THE "NOTA BENE" STYLOGRAPH OR FLUID PENCIL

(PATENTED)

5/- 5/-

IS READY FOR INSTANT USE, WITHOUT ANY ADJUSTMENT. MAY BE CARRIED IN ANY POSITION, WITHOUT FEAR OF LEAKAGE.

POLISHED VULCANITE, HANDSOMELY ENCHASED, WITH NEEDLE, SPRING, & NOZZLE, MADE OF THE PRECIOUS METALS.

Sold by all Stationers. Wholesale only by the Sole Manufacturers, THOS. DE LA RUE & CO. Ltd., Bunhill Row, London, E.C.

The Mutual Life Insurance Co. Of New York

Assets . . . exceed . . . 45 Millions Sterling.

INSURES AN INCOME

During Lifetime of Insured.

Life Policies - - - - - -	at 3½ per cent.
Life Option Endowments -	at 4 „
Consols - - - - - - - -	at 6 „

After Death of Insured.

Continuous Instalment - -	at 5 per cent.
Debenture - - - - - -
20 Year Bond - - - - -

Apply for Particulars to any of the Branch Offices, or to Head Office for the United Kingdom—

D. C. HALDEMAN,
GENERAL MANAGER,
17 & 18, CORNHILL, LONDON, E.C.

FOR YOUTHFUL APPEARANCE. BEAUTIFUL HAIR.

IMPERIAL HAIR DYES &c.

ONE LIQUID.

No. 1.—Black.
No. 2.—Dark Brown.
No. 3.—Light Brown.
No. 4.—Golden Brown or Auburn.
No. 5.—Pure Golden.
No. 6.—IMPERIAL HAIR GROWER.

Harmless, Perfect, Permanent, and Odourless.
A Medical Certificate with each bottle.

2/6, 3/6, 5/- & 10/6 (Secretly Packed).

J. BRODIE, 41, Museum-st. London.
ESTABLISHED 1868. ONCE TRIED, ALWAYS USED.

STRAINED VISION.

DISTRESSING HEADACHES, Indigestion, simulated neuralgia, and nervous depression, are frequently caused by some peculiarity of the Vision, which can at once be overcome by the use of proper glasses. See "OUR EYES" (Now in its Sixteenth Edition), price 1s.; by
JOHN BROWNING, F.R.A.S., F.R.M.S., President of the British Optical Association, &c.
Or consult, free of charge—
MR. JOHN BROWNING,
OPHTHALMIC OPTICIAN,
63, STRAND, LONDON. W.C.

ROYAL EXCHANGE
ASSURANCE.

SETTLEMENT POLICIES
Guaranteeing FIVE PER CENT. on the sum assured. No Trustees Required.

DEATH DUTIES
Provided for by a small annual payment through life.

ANNUITIES
Special Terms for Impaired Lives.

For Rates, apply to the Secretary,
Chief Office—ROYAL EXCHANGE, LONDON.

GREAT SOUTHERN AND WESTERN RAILWAY.

LAKES AND FJORDS OF KERRY.

"The south-western part of Kerry is well known as the most beautiful portion of the British Isles."—LORD MACAULAY.

Opening of the New Railways—New Tourist Resorts—Good Hotels—Magnificent Scenery—Good Fishing—Coaching Tours.

Cheap Tourist Tickets issued to Lakes of Killarney, Glengariff, Caragh Lake for Glencar, Valencia, Waterville, Parknasilla, and Kenmare.
THE GRAND ATLANTIC COAST TOUR affords magnificent views of River, Ocean, and Mountain Scenery by Railway and Coach for ONE HUNDRED MILES around the South Kerry Peninsula.
Tickets are also issued to Kilkee, Lahinch, Lisdoonvarna, and places on the County Clare Coast.
For full particulars apply to Messrs. Cook & Son, Messrs. Gaze & Son, the principal stations on the L. & N. W., Midland, or G. W. Railways, or to the Great Southern and Western Railway, Dublin.—Illustrated Guide sent gratis and post-free on Application to Kingsbridge, Dublin. R. G. COLHOUN, Traffic Manager.

RUBINAT. BEST RUBINAT. APERIENT.

Source Dr. Llorach.—SPANISH APERIENT MINERAL WATER. Dr. WEX, Official Chemist to the town of Hamburg, places Rubinat before the most vaunted of the German purgative waters. Is invaluable in all gout and intestinal complaints.

—Has none of the drastic and ofttimes irritating effects of other waters, which chiefly depend for their action upon magnesian salts of which they are largely composed.

E. GALLAIS & CO.,
90, Piccadilly, London, W.

A WONDERFUL MEDICINE!

BEECHAM'S PILLS

Have been before the Public for more than fifty years, and have now the greatest sale of any Proprietary article. This has been achieved without the publication of testimonials, the convincing fact is, that BEECHAM'S PILLS RECOMMEND THEMSELVES.

WORTH A GUINEA A BOX

FOR ALL
Bilious & Nervous Disorders
SUCH AS
Sick Headache, Constipation, Weak Stomach, Impaired Digestion, Disordered Liver and Female Ailments.

Annual Sale, SIX MILLION BOXES.

Sold everywhere in boxes 9½d., 13½d. and 2/9 each.

Printed for the Proprietor by WYMAN & SONS, Limited, Great Queen-st. W.C. and published at 10, Bolt-ct. Fleet-st. E.C. in the Parish of St. Dunstan's-in-the-West, in the City of London. Cheques and Post Office Orders should be made payable to REGINALD E. BOOKER, "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-st. Queen Anne's-gate, S.W.

• TRUTH •

"Cultores Veritatis Fraudis Inimici."—Cicero.

No. 1029. Vol. XL. Thursday, September 17, 1896. Price Sixpence.

NOTICE.

In response to various communications which reach me on the subject, I beg to notify that the terms of Subscription to Truth, which are payable in advance, are as follows:—To any address in the United Kingdom, for 3 months, 7s.; 6 months, 14s.; and for 12 months, 28s. The Thin Paper Edition is forwarded to countries within the Postal Union for 3 months for 7s. 8d.; 6 months, 15s. 4d.; and 12 months, 30s. 8d. Cheques and Post Office Orders should be made payable to the Manager, Truth, "Truth Building," Carteret-street, S.W.

A reprint of the Truth report on the Kilburn Sisterhood can be obtained at the Publishing Offices, Bolt-court, Fleet-street, price 2d.; by post, 2½d.

ENTRE NOUS.

I FIND that I failed to make quite clear the other day the fact that the large as well as the small dolls are now ready for distribution. There has been, in former years, a special run on these large dolls, which form so important a feature in the Truth Show at Christmas, and, therefore, ladies who may wish to take part in dressing them should make their applications with as little delay as possible. It will be impossible, let me add, to secure a further supply of the large dolls when those on hand have been disposed of.

The Queen's party on Deeside to meet the Emperor and Empress of Russia will include the Prince and Princess of Wales and Princess Victoria, the Duke and Duchess of York, the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, Princess Beatrice, Grand Duke Alexis Alexandrovitch, Princess Victoria of Schleswig-Holstein, and Prince Francis Joseph of Battenberg. Princess Louise and Prince and Princess Charles of Denmark will be at Balmoral for a few days during the stay of the Emperor and Empress. The intended visit to Balmoral of the Grand Duke Serge and Grand Duchess Elizabeth and Princess Louise of Battenberg has been given up, and they will meet their Imperial relatives at Darmstadt next month.

The "elaborate preparations" for the Imperial visit to Balmoral which are reported by some romancing journals to be in progress, are purely fictitious. One or two extra pieces of furniture have been placed in the rooms which the Emperor and Empress are to occupy, and a quantity of plate has been sent from Windsor, but this is all that has been done. The stories about theatrical performances, tenants' balls, concerts, and so forth, are all rubbish and nonsense, nothing of the sort being in contemplation. The Imperial visitors desire only to be allowed a continuation of the peace they are now enjoying at Bernstorff.

A statement has been going round the papers that it has become "an unwritten law" that the Queen is always to have the attendance at least of one of her daughters. As a matter of fact, this "unwritten law" has been in existence ever since the death of Prince Albert, the Queen having invariably had the company of a daughter wherever she has been. During the first few years of the Queen's widowhood her favourite companion was her half-sister, the Princess Féodore of Hohenlohe-Langenberg, who died at Baden Baden in 1872.

The Queen is going to expend a considerable sum on improvements at Osborne. Large kitchen gardens are to be formed, and extensive hot-houses are to be built. At present all the fruit and vegetables which are consumed at the Palace are supplied from Frogmore.

An imaginative evening journal, describing the Queen's life at Balmoral, states that the Castle "at first sight looks small." Greater nonsense never was written, and St. Paul's Cathedral might just as well be described as "small." Balmoral is a vast pile of buildings, which really has the appearance of some great public institution. It is very large and very ugly, nor has the house the merit of being well arranged inside, for it is altogether a marvel of discomfort. The former house at Balmoral, which was pulled down to make way for the present hideous structure, was a most picturesque old château, and was considered to be one of the best examples in the Highlands of the true Scottish baronial style.

Balmoral is a hugger-mugger sort of place, and the house is so badly heated and so abounding in draughts that few people go there without catching cold. The rooms are by no means richly furnished, and there are only a few pictures (hardly any good ones) and a small library. Tartan is everywhere to be seen—either the Stuart hunting tartan or the Balmoral, which was designed by Prince Albert for the exclusive use of the Royal family. The Queen is anxious that Balmoral should always be one of the residences of the Sovereign, and she has settled this domain (including the adjoining estate of Abergeldie, which is held by her Majesty on a long lease from Mr. H. M. Gordon) to go with the Crown.

▲

Empress Frederick, who has been residing for several months at Friedrichshof, her place on the Taunus Hills, is coming to England towards the end of next month on a visit to the Queen at Balmoral and at Windsor Castle. The Empress, who will remain in England until she goes to Berlin for the winter, about a week before Christmas, is to pay a visit to the Prince and Princess of Wales at Sandringham during the first week in December, and her Majesty will also be the guest of Lord and Lady Salisbury at Hatfield House for a few days.

The Duke of Cambridge is staying with Sir George Wombwell at Newburgh this week, and the party also includes the Marquis of Londonderry, the Duke and Duchess of Marlborough, Colonel Augustus Fitz-George, Sir Henry Edwards, Lady Sykes, Miss Agnes Keyser, Sir Philip and Lady Gray Egerton, the Hon. Ronald and Mrs. Greville, and Mr. Stephen Wombwell. The present is the twenty-fifth year in succession in which H.R.H. has gone to Newburgh the week after Doncaster for partridge shooting.

The simmering dissatisfaction of the Tory Peers with the Government certainly will not be abated by the appointment of Lord Bagot to be a Lord-in-Waiting, which is likely to excite profound annoyance among certain leaders of the Party. The names of the Tory Peers who have real claims upon the gratitude of the Ministry were privately urged upon Lord Salisbury by some influential supporters, but the Prime Minister, as usual, has disdainfully ignored the representations of his disgusted followers. Lord Beaconsfield has recorded that in 1846 he passed "the musing hours of the Whitsuntide recess" in considering how Sir Robert Peel could be turned out, and I suspect that similar meditations as to Lord Salisbury are now engaging a number of the Tory magnates. Lord Bagot will get £702 a year, and his average of annual duty at Court will be three weeks.

Lord and Lady Cadogan returned to the Viceregal Lodge on Friday after spending nearly a fortnight in the south of Ireland. In the evening of the same day they started for England to fulfil their engagement to take part in the launch of the new steamship of the City of Dublin Company, at Birkenhead. The weather in the Irish Channel was in a very uncourtierlike mood, and made no attempt at tempering the "crossing" for Viceroyalty. The Viceroy after his exertions during the past fortnight will probably have a holiday for some time in England. The Viceregal Lodge is a somewhat dreary abode at this time of the year, being "neither fish nor flesh, nor good red herring." Though it is not in the town, it cannot certainly be called a country house in the usual meaning of the term.

The Archbishop of Canterbury arrives in Ireland this week on a visit to the Archbishop of Dublin, Lord Plunket. Archbishops of Canterbury have been even rarer visitors to Ireland than British Royalties. Dr. Benson will preach in Dublin on Sunday at St. Patrick's Cathedral, and may be expected to draw a crowd that will tax the space within the Cathedral to its utmost. Lord Plunket's episcopal palace is in St. Stephen's Green, Dublin. He usually resides throughout the year at his country residence, Old Connaught, which is picturesquely situated near Bray, on the borders of the County of Wicklow.

As usual at this season, the Duchess of St. Albans is staying at her place, Newtown Anner, near Clonmel. Her stay always produces a stir in the neighbourhood, which has been festive of late. Sir Henry and Lady Blake have been amongst the family party staying at Newtown Anner. Lady Kitty Somerset, with her husband, has been in Switzerland during the summer testing the delights of real Swiss life in a chalet.

A paragraph has appeared in the papers stating that "it is reported" that Lord Salisbury has sold his villa at Puys, near Dieppe. As a matter of fact, Lord Salisbury sold this property more than a year ago.

The following lines come to me from "An Aggrieved Husband," whose digestion, I fear, must be rather out of order:—

ANOTHER INCENTIVE TO SHOPPING.

I observe, Sir, that they've started a new "Dress Advice Bureau,"
And that ladies, bent on shopping, are advised to it to go;
For it's promised that the clients who upon its aid rely
Shall be told by its Directors just what things they ought to buy.

This implies, in other words, Sir—so, at least, it seems to me—
That our wives for spending money now will have another plea.
This confounded institution will, in short, be their excuse
For insisting on an outlay yet more wastefully profuse.

They, advised by it, will hasten, there is too much cause to fear,
To obtain more costly dresses, and new bonnets yet more dear;
And if their too patient husbands should meet irritation show,
They'll refer them—helpless victims!—to the "Dress Advice Bureau"!

So permit me to protest, Sir, 'gainst this institution new,
Which is destined, I feel certain, husbands further to undo.
"Dress Advice Bureau!" What rubbish! What we want is a Bureau
Which, when wives are bent on shopping, will advise them not to go!

A visitor at Dinard writes to me extolling the natural beauties of the place, but mentioning several drawbacks to the pleasure of a sojourn there, one being the niggard-

---

For the Truth Hotel List, see page 740 in the present issue.
For Hospitals and Appeals, see page 738.
For Amusements, see page 739.
For Our Puzzles, see page 749.

liness of the civic authorities in the matter of street-lighting, and another the abominable cruelty to animals which is constantly witnessed. The Bretons who let out carriages and brakes at Dinard seem to make a practice of buying old worn-out horses for next to nothing and running them through the season by dint of hard flogging, after which the wretched beasts are sold to the knacker. The other day a party going in a brake to the golf green four miles off had to get out and walk, owing to one of the horses being utterly unfit for work, and the same animal was sent out the next day with the same result. Dinard is, unfortunately, beyond the jurisdiction of our R.S.P.C.A., or the offenders would soon be called to account. It is a pity, however, that the natives of Dinard cannot be made to understand that, apart from its inhumanity, such treatment of dumb animals is bad business, inasmuch as it helps to drive away many visitors.

In view of recent advertisements and recommendations of the British West Indian Islands as a winter resort, it may be of service to utter a word of warning. There is an idea abroad that yellow fever is a thing of the past, and it is, I believe, quite true that there has been much less of the disease of late years than there used to be. But a medical man who has just returned from one of the islands assures me that this falling off in the number of yellow fever cases is mainly attributable to a falling off in the supply of unacclimatised people for the malady to work its deadly course upon. Last year, however, a considerable number of fatal cases occurred in Antigua, and this year, in St. Kitts also, four Europeans have died of the fever, and one of dysentery, all these victims being, more or less, new comers. Tourists and others will do well, therefore, to consider whether it is worth their while to run the risk of sharing the same fate. Basseterre, the capital of St. Kitts, should at any rate be carefully avoided, for according to my correspondent its abominably insanitary condition is almost certain to make it, sooner or later, the centre of a frightful epidemic.

Although somewhat late this year, the annual record of human life sacrificed to the ambition of scaling inaccessible mountains is beginning to declare itself. From all accounts it may be gathered that bad weather for climbing purposes has prevailed in Switzerland throughout almost the whole of the season, a circumstance which accounts for the fact that the number of accidents has been out of proportion to the number of successful ascents. This legitimate method of committing suicide is conceivable so far as the amateur mountaineer is concerned, but suggests uncomfortable reflections when it is remembered that the old race of guides were wont to consider their lives of greater value than money, and unhesitatingly refused to undertake ascents unless the weather and the general conditions were distinctly favourable. The "excelsior" mania, however, is so powerful that not even the useless sacrifice of human life will inculcate the restraining influences of wisdom and caution.

Having the other day referred to the sufferings of residents on the Thames Embankment from the nightly screeching of the siren on a steam launch belonging to the river authorities, I am now invited to ventilate the grievance of people whose rest is destroyed by the shrill whistling of railway locomotives. My correspondent piles up the agony on this topic to an alarming extent. He draws an awful picture of tens of thousands of people being distracted by a continuous fusillade of ear-piercing shrieks and yells which he asserts have no legitimate connection with the conduct of railway traffic, but which are produced by vicious-minded drivers in a spirit of downright devilry. I fear the writer has allowed his indignation to get the better of his judgment. There is inevitably a good deal of noise from the railway traffic, but the nuisance is not so intolerable as my correspondent represents; nor is it credible that engine-drivers would be allowed, even if they desired, to make night hideous by sounding their whistles merely for the fun of the thing. Besides, householders who are annoyed by the proximity of railway lines generally have the annoyance taken into account in the rent they pay.

The following interesting experience is narrated by a tourist who lately visited Waterford. He had occasion to cross the only bridge in the city, an unsightly wooden structure. Toll being demanded he paid his money, expecting a halfpenny change. The tollman, however, said that he must first weigh the bag the tourist was carrying. He did so, and then intimated that as the weight was more than 14 lb. he must keep the halfpenny for toll on the bag. On inquiry, the tourist discovered that this was a regular and legal fee, and it is evidently only through some oversight in the drafting of the Act that the toll proprietor is debarred from weighing passengers themselves and charging accordingly. My correspondent further learned that one hotel alone pays upwards of £170 in conveying passengers and goods over this bridge to and from the railway station. Some proposal has been made to buy out the rights of the present farmer of the tolls, but he refuses to sell, and no wonder, when he is able to wax rich by such an iniquitous system of exactions.

A lifelong Radical, and one who carried the party standard as a candidate at the last General Election, asks what reply I would suggest to an invitation he has received from Commissary-General Hamley to become a member of the Junior Conservative Club. My friend considers that the Commissary-General has been guilty of a piece of impertinence in sending him this invitation. So he has; but it is an utter waste of stationery and postage to address any remonstrance to him. For years past this Junior Conservative Club has been touting for members among all and sundry, and so long as a man is prepared to pay the subscription it does not matter a scrap what his political opinions are.

A Beautiful Hotel at Bournemouth.—The "Royal Bath." "Hôtel de Luxe of the South." Sea frontage, 1,000 ft.; grounds, 5 acres. Due south. Only Hotel on East Cliff. Moderate fixed tariff.

I have received a communication, though rather late in the day, from the Mr. Henry A. Campbell to whom I referred in an article on August 6 as having been one of the dupes of that arrant rogue Leigh Sampson. Quite unnecessarily, it seems to me, Mr. Campbell imagines that he is bound to make some defence of himself. Still, I am quite willing to give his statements the fullest publicity. "May I state," he writes :—

1. That I gave the order for the picture of Eastwell to Sampson as a charity.
2. That I gave him permission to sell the originals to H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh if he could do so.
3. That I certainly never "insisted that I must have three replicas," although I did not withdraw my order merely because H.R.H. had been kind enough to help a man whom I believed to be in straitened circumstances.
4. That I paid Sampson a price arranged between us when I gave him the commission, and nothing like the absurd sum which you name.
5. That I never was the owner of Eastwell Park, but rented it for some years.

To deal seriatim with the points Mr. Campbell raises, I can only say in regard to (1) that this was the point which I have laboured in all my references to Leigh Sampson, and that I fully credited Mr. Campbell with the most benevolent intentions in commissioning Sampson to make the drawings of Eastwell Park; (2) That I fully appreciate his extraordinary self-sacrifice in granting Sampson "permission" to sell the originals to H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh; and further (3), by not withdrawing his order because H.R.H. had been kind enough to be found as charitably disposed as himself. It is not every day one has an opportunity of being associated with Royalty in the private dispensation of bounty. In regard to (4), Mr. Campbell has unfortunately only managed to excite my curiosity. The sum I mentioned was £150 for the three pictures, and this he characterises as absurd. Perhaps he will be good enough to enlighten me as to the exact amount. (5) I am sorry that I credited Mr. Campbell with the ownership of Eastwell Park; it was purely a slip of the pen, for I was well aware that he was merely a tenant. Of course I can understand that Mr. Campbell feels a little natural annoyance at having been duped by Sampson. I quite sympathise with him. I was humbugged myself.

Among the obituary notices in the Belfast Evening Telegraph appears the announcement of a lady's death "of pneumatic." Is this simply due to the aberration of a cyeling compositor, or has a new disease broken out in Belfast?

In a letter to the Sportsman Mr. G. G. Vertue has made some allegations in reference to one of the races at the recent Southsea Regatta, which the parties responsible for the arrangements cannot afford to leave unanswered. The race in question was that for the Queen's Challenge Cup for boys of her Majesty's training-ships and private training-ships. Mr. Vertue asserts that certain alterations were made in the conditions of the race, with the result, if not with the intention, of unduly favouring the crew from H.M.S. St. Vincent, one of these changes being that all the competing crews were compelled to row in the St. Vincent's boats instead of their own boats, as they had formerly done. Mr. Vertue, furthermore, comments upon the fact that, in the drawing for stations, the outside berth fell each time to the crew from the training-ship Mercury, and that in the drawing for boats for the final the same crew were allotted a yawl which was not suitable for racing, and which virtually handicapped the Mercury boys out of the race. These things, of course, may have been mere coincidences; but what is not so easily explainable is the circumstance that the same crew were placed at an additional disadvantage by being instructed that, contrary to the usual practice, they must, even if in front, leave the inside boats an absolutely clear course in rounding the Spit Fort, thus very considerably lengthening their own course. Finally, Mr. Vertue makes a grave insinuation by remarking that the crew of the St. Vincent was not mustered before the final, "and it was thus quite possible for a different crew to have rowed in the heat and in the final." In the first heat the Mercury crew, notwithstanding the fact that they had the worst station, beat the St. Vincent boys, but in the final the latter won. The whole tenor of the letter is to suggest that advantages were unfairly given to the crew of the St. Vincent, which won the cup this year, at the expense of the crew of the Mercury, which won it last year, and it is to be hoped that some explanation will be at once forthcoming from the authorities of the Regatta.

Many hunting men who have enjoyed good sport with the Wingrave Harriers will be sorry to hear that owing to the state of his health Mr. Stewart Freeman has decided to sell his pack. The sale will take place at Aldridge's on Wednesday next, and the pack comprises 24½ couple of hounds and 4½ couple of puppies.

The Perth show of the Highland and Agricultural Society was not favoured in the matter of weather, but it has nevertheless proved a great success, the receipts amounting to £4,773, as compared with £2,597 at Dumfries last year. The show of 1897 is to be held at Glasgow, and will probably be visited by the Prince of Wales, who is to be the guest of Lord Blytheswood at Blytheswood House, Renfrewshire, where the Queen stayed for several days about eight years ago.

On September 3 I mentioned a complaint that two winners of prizes for contributions to a paper called Sketchy Bits had not been able to obtain the sums due to them, though a notice in the paper asserted that the prizes "had been forwarded to the authors." I am pleased to hear that the prizes have now been sent to the parties referred to. It seems that the money was withheld for the time being simply owing to the fact that doubts had been cast upon the originality of the successful contributions after the awards had been made. The conductors of the paper recognise, however, that it was a mistake to publish the announcement that the prizes had been despatched before this had actually been done, and in future the wording of the notice to competitors will be altered so as to avoid any misunderstanding on the subject.

Every requirement for Furnishing tastefully at least expense is amply illustrated in the Galleries and Catalogues of Hampton & Sons, Furnishers & Decorators, Pall Mall East, S.W.

"Hôtel Burlington," at Sunny Boscombe. (200 rooms.) Every luxury. Delightful grounds. Magnificent golf links. Sea-water baths. Moderate charges.—Bournemouth East Station.

That notorious swindler, James MacVeigh, of 25, Queen-street, Dumfries, is still busily engaged in attempts to dispose of the genealogical and other works which he has obtained by means of the most unscrupulous literary thefts. He has recently been trying to induce the Duke of Hamilton to become a patron and purchaser of one of his pirated books, but his Grace is a reader of Truth, and being, consequently, acquainted with MacVeigh's character, he declined to have anything to do with him. Through the attention I have devoted to him, MacVeigh meets with a good many similar rebuffs nowadays, and so he is adding other pursuits to that of a literary impostor. Not long since I noted that he had come out as an agent for letting fishings and shootings; and now he is advertising for farm hands for a Scotch farming colony in Idaho, U.S.A., "each to be shareholders." Considering the many unprincipled transactions in which this man has been detected and exposed, anybody who parts with any money to him in connection with farms in Idaho, or any other enterprise of his, will be extremely foolish.

Reference was made in Truth the other week to the curious circumstance that a pamphlet of the Bimetallic League was being distributed through the post in the same cover with a certain catalogue of "fine art photographs." I inquired how two productions, so different in character, came to be mixed up in this way. The publishers of the catalogue have now explained. It seems it is because they are bi-maniacs themselves that they "recommend to their friends the study of so abstruse an economic question as international bimetallism." I must point out to this firm, however, that many of the strangers whom they so confidently claim as their "friends" are anything but grateful for their attentions, and that their offers of "fine art photographs" (including "studies from nature") would be better confined to the collectors and artists for whom they profess to cater.

The British Archæological Association is to meet in London on Monday, the 21st, under the presidency of the Lord Mayor, and the session will extend over a week. The evening meetings are to be held in the Council Chamber of the Guildhall, and the days will be devoted to excursions, one being given to the City and another to Westminster. St. Albans and Hatfield House are to be visited, also Rochester and Maidstone, Guildford and Godalming, and the Waltham Abbey district.

A correspondent sends me the following verses apropos of the paper read at the recent Newcastle Sanitary Congress by Mr. Dines, an earnest meteorologist:—

COLD COMFORT.

Folks used to think they must be ill
  When they began to shiver,
And took forthwith a draught or pill
  To stimulate the liver.
A chill, they thought, perforce implied
  Disease would soon afflict 'em;
But this belief is falsified
  By Mr. Dines's dictum;
For by this expert we are told
We're only healthy when we're cold!

If this be so, our way of life,
  'Tis very clear, must alter;
Henceforward we, where draughts are rife,
  Must sit and never falter.
East winds, however cold they be,
  We must no more amiss count;
Whilst fur-lined coats, we must agree,
  Are wholly at a discount.
Who will in wraps his form enfold
When health depends on being cold?

Henceforward, too, if Dines be right,
  The knowing Anglo-Saxon
In Polar outings will delight,
  Like Nansen and like Jackson.
To Egypt he no more will hie,
  Nor any Southern-map land;
Spitzbergen he instead will try,
  Or tickets take for Lapland;
In short, he'll spend his time and gold
In seeking, not for heat, but cold!

Our coal bill will, of course, grow less,
  As, ever waxing bolder,
We shall our faith in Dines express
  By seeking to get colder.
And Fashion's sway will soon be stopp'd,
  Since every sir and madam
Will in their search for health adopt
  The dress of Eve and Adam!
For are we not distinctly told
To healthy be, we must be cold?

The way in which some of the so-called "voluntary" schools are kept going is strikingly illustrated by a circular, which has just been issued by the manager of the Cwmavon Tin Works at Port Talbot, Glamorganshire. It seems that the Cwmavon Works Schools are the property of this Company and another Company, who receive rents for their use, and that hitherto the expenditure has been to a large extent met by the simple process of taking so much in the pound from the wages of the workmen. The latter have been dissatisfied with the management of the schools, and a few weeks since they expressed their objections to the system of deductions from their wages. In consequence, they have now been informed by the manager that they may, if they please, discontinue paying the school poundage, but that if they do so, "it must be distinctly understood that to meet the school expenditure increased house rents will have to be enforced at the rate of one shilling per month per cottage at least."

The Sanitary Engineering Co. (Carter Bros.), 65, Victoria-st., Westminster, for making Sanitary Surveys in London or country.

Water Supply for Mansions, &c.—Artesian Bored and Driven Tube Wells, Wind Engines for pumping, &c.—State your requirements to Alfred Williams & Co., 39, Gt. Eastern-st., London, E.C.

The two Companies on whose behalf this extraordinary notice has been issued own practically all the workmen's dwellings in the place; and it is evident they are determined that the cost of these schools shall be defrayed in some way or other by their employees. This determination is doubtless due to the fact that if a School Board were formed the masters would have to pay a good deal more and the men a good deal less than at present; and I shall be much interested to learn whether the Education Department has anything to say to this monstrous attempt to maintain schools on the "voluntary" basis by the exercise of downright tyranny and coercion.

Some representations have been made to me in the interests of the schoolmaster at Luton, who was recently placed in such a ridiculous position through the vapouring of the local press over the fact that he had received the degree of Doctor of Philosophy from the so-called National University of Illinois. I am told that the thesis which he sent in was the result of much study and thought. I do not doubt it. For aught I know, indeed, it may have been a most valuable and scholarly production; but that does not alter the fact that the diploma which it was supposed to have been instrumental in securing is an utterly worthless distinction, which the Universitas Nationalis Illinoiensis, through the agency of its Commissioner, the "Rev. J. Rogers," alias "G. Elliott," is ready to award to practically anybody misguided enough to pay the fee of £21. I am also informed that the schoolmaster took the precaution of making various inquiries, but as these all seem to have been directed to persons connected with the concern by which he has been gulled, I cannot compliment him upon his sagacity in that respect. If I may venture to say so, the best safeguard against swindles of this kind, or for that matter any kind, is to read Truth. Had he done this, the Luton schoolmaster, like a good many other people, would have been better off in pocket, and he would also have saved himself a good deal of humiliation and annoyance.

A Professorship of Mental Philosophy and Logic is to be established at Cambridge, with a salary of £700 a year. The new Chair was resolved upon several years ago, but the necessary funds have hitherto been wanting.

The Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol has presented the Rev. William Mann, Precentor of Bristol Cathedral, to the vicarage of St. Thomas, Bristol, which is worth about £300 a year, with house, and has become vacant by the preferment of the Rev. C. S. Taylor to the Dean and Chapter living of Banwell, Somersetshire, of which the value is £500 a year, with residence. The first offer of the Vicarage of Banwell was made by the Dean and Chapter to Precentor Mann, but he does not wish to leave Bristol.

It is proposed to restore the fine parish church at Bradford (where there is seating accommodation for 1,300 persons) as a memorial of the late Archdeacon Bardsley, at a cost of £10,000. The Rev. John Robertson, who has been presented to this important and valuable living by the Simeon Trustees, is to be inducted on October 10 by the Bishop of Ripon, and he will preach his first sermon as vicar on the following day.

In commending the recent appointment of the Rev. W. H. Davies to the rectory of Spitalfields, I alluded to him as a clergyman of Evangelical views. My attention has since been directed to an interview in the Church Review, in which Mr. Davies on being asked whether he should be described as an Evangelical with broad sympathies, admitted the broad sympathies, but stated that "though some people would call him an Evangelical, he was not a party man." I reproduce this statement with pleasure, though I do not seem to have been very far wrong in my original reference to the reverend gentleman.

The Rev. J. Dennis Hird, who has been obliged to resign the very comfortable living of Eastnor, Herefordshire, by the joint efforts of Bishop Percival (his diocesan) and Lady Henry Somerset, the patron of this benefice, has also, it is stated, been compelled by his Right Rev. Father in God to renounce the clerical profession altogether, and he is to resume educational work at Oxford. I do not understand by what authority the Bishop of Hereford has been enabled to deal in so drastic a fashion with this ecclesiastic, and it seems to me that the whole transaction requires explanation. Mr. Hird appears to have been bullied and hustled out of both his preferment and his profession.

Several months ago the European members of the Civil Service in Sierra Leone petitioned the Colonial Secretary in favour of a reduction of the term of service from fifteen months to twelve months, the period in force on the Gold Coast. As no answer has yet been given to the application, I have been requested to jog Mr. Chamberlain's memory concerning it. One of the grounds on which the petitioners ask to be put on an equality in this respect with officers on the Gold Coast is that the climatic conditions in the two colonies are the same, and Sierra Leone is only three days nearer England than Accra. What havoc the climate plays with the lives and health of Europeans may be judged from the fact that out of twenty officers continuously resident in Sierra Leone in the first seven months of the present year, no fewer than four have died, while five have been invalided.

Miss Florence Firmstone, of Hyde Abbey, Winchester, about whose appeal on behalf of a pension fund for an old nurse I felt constrained to comment last week, has written me a long defence of her action. In the first place she maintains that having given references in the appeal, the fact must surely convince the public that she is no swindler. Probably, to people who are acquainted with Winchester and its inhabitants, such references would be convincing, but Miss Firmstone's appeal has gone far more widely afield, and I can assure her that a number of my readers have misconstrued her action. Still the point is a minor one, for I expressly stated that I did not question Miss Firmstone's bona fides in the slightest degree. Then, Miss Firmstone, realising that it was the system to which my objection was taken, urges with considerable force that in the particular case in which she is interested, the end justifies the means. I cannot agree with her. Such a plea amounts practically to a justification of begging of any and every description, and to my mind a personal appeal is only justifiable when made to some one who is acquainted with the parties. Finally, Miss Firmstone acknowledges that I have impressed upon her my view that her position is not altogether a desirable one. That was precisely my object in making allusion to the matter, and I shall be glad if my remarks lead her to abandon in the future so undesirable a method of collecting funds for charitable objects.

An appeal that seems to be circulating very widely just now is from the East London Protestant Youths' Mission for funds to enable the Mission to provide its children, aged poor, widows, and convalescents with a day in the country. In reply to those who have inquired of me about this appeal, I can only reiterate the advice I gave some months ago in respect of a similar appeal emanating from the same quarter. The Mission is an enterprise which a Mr. F. W. L. Jones carries on in the intervals of his daily occupation. He publishes no list of subscribers, and is uncontrolled by any committee, and therefore I would advise any one who has not the personal knowledge of Mr. Jones necessary to enable them to entrust him with the dispensation of their bounty to refrain from handing over any cash to him.

As I have once before mentioned, a wealthy and benevolent friend of mine has founded and endowed some almshouses, which are intended, to quote his own words, for "persons of a gentle position who have been brought to distress under circumstances of genuine misfortune." My friend asks me to state that there are now two vacancies in this institution, and that he will be glad to receive through me particulars of any deserving cases which can be recommended to him. Each house, I may explain, accommodates two persons and carries an annuity of £31. 4s. Applicants must be above sixty years of age, and preference is given to a married couple, though brother and sister are eligible. Will parties forwarding particulars of cases in response to this invitation kindly note that the letters must be addressed, "Almshouses, care of Editor of Truth, Carteret-street, Westminster, S.W."?

I have received the following amounts towards the Toy Fund:—Mrs. Snepp, £2; J. D., 10s.; Mr. Milner-Gibson, £10; and for Lady Jeune's Holiday Fund, Mr. C. Green, £1 1s.; L. J. C., £2; Mrs. Snepp, £1.

China and Glass. — Messrs. Goode, Artists and Designers, solicit an inspection of their collection in their recently-extended South Audley-street premises, now by far the largest and most important in Europe. Messrs. Goode guarantee the excellence of all their productions, and invite a comparison of their prices with those of any co-operative stores.

The following two announcements in a Battalion Order of the 1st Dorset Regiment are edifying reading when taken together. Even in death the distinction of military ranks is so carefully marked that military etiquette does not admit of the same expressions of regret being used in regard to the death of a private as in regard to that of an officer:—

1. No. 4,079, Private A. Wooding, "C" Company, having died in the Section Hospital on the 2nd inst., is struck off the strength of the battalion from this day.
2. With the deepest sorrow, which he knows is shared alike by officers, N.C.O.s, and men, Lieut.-Col. J. M. Percy announces to the battalion that Second Lieut. W. Ashburner died at Bangalore this morning.

In view of the terms of these two announcements, may I ask whether it is not customary when an officer dies for him to be struck off the strength of the battalion?

No military regulation appears to be more frequently broken than that which prescribes three years as the maximum period for which an N.C.O. shall be posted to the depot. The latest growl comes from the Royal Highlanders' depot at Perth, where, it is reported, a sergeant is not only being retained beyond his three years' term, and drawing an extra shilling a day as gymnastic instructor, but also getting further extra pay as pay-sergeant to a company. If this is true, he is being doubly favoured at the expense of other men.

The complaint that I published the other day respecting the condition of some bungalows at Poonah would seem to apply equally to those in which certain batteries of artillery are quartered in Rangoon. These structures appear to be defective in ventilation in warm weather, while in the monsoon the rain comes in at the sides and top in such quantities that a stream of water may be frequently seen running the length of a bungalow, and the bed and clothing are constantly wet. One bungalow, in particular, has its condition aggravated by the filthy state of the ground around it, and the absence of any kind of drainage. I understand that the whole of the bungalows occupied by the Royal Artillery were condemned many years ago, and the one mentioned above has been specially condemned more recently by the P.M.O. There can be no excuse for keeping troops quartered in the buildings under such circumstances.

Dublin Barracks are not the only place where, through the supineness of the authorities, enteric fever is allowed to freely run its course. In India the sanitary returns show that this disease is responsible for no less than 36 per cent. of the mortality among the British garrison—a sacrifice of life which might be enormously reduced if proper measures were taken to purify the water supplies for the troops. In an article on this subject the Pioneer remarks that when the Pasteur filters are generally used "there will in all probability be a large decrease in enteric, but it may take two or three years to provide them." If this is the remedy for the mischief, why on earth should there be a delay of two or three years in applying it?

Scott Adie, 115, Regent-st., London, for Shooting Suits, Golf Suits, Travelling Coats, Inverness Capes, Carriage Rugs, Shawls, Mauds, hand-knit Hose, Scotch Cheviots, and Harris Homespuns.

The filter in question was adopted in the French army so far back as 1888, and four years ago the Minister for War declared that "wherever it had been applied to water previously bad, typhoid fever had disappeared." Clearly they order these matters better in France.

In reference to a paragraph in my last issue, I am informed that the bandmaster of the 1st Royal Dragoons did not take his usual fee on the occasion of the outside engagement to which I alluded, and that the band-sergeant did not receive 15s., but only 13s. 6d. This information comes to me in an imposing-looking document signed by thirty-two members of the band, and I trust its publication will suffice to appease their anger, pending the result of the further inquiries into the matter which I am now making.

During the past week or so I have been bombarded with complaints respecting the quality of the beer sold in the garrison canteen at Maryhill Barracks, Glasgow. If the unanimity of the writers' testimony still left any doubt (which it does not) as to the sourness, flatness, and nastiness of the liquor, that doubt would be removed by the fact that the senior medical officers and three other officers, who were last week requested to sample it, unanimously endorsed the men's opinion, and at once condemned the two consignments which were then in the canteen. This was on Tuesday. On Saturday, however, the condemned beer was still being sold, the explanation of the canteen steward being that the stuff could not be returned to the brewers until the authority of the G.O.C. had been obtained. I hope the G.O.C. will hurry up with the necessary authority, for the delay means that poor Tommy must either go without his beer or else be half poisoned with it. While he is about it, too, the G.O.C. might inquire whether the change made some time ago in connection with the contract for beer has been generally satisfactory and advantageous to the men.

In answer to a complaint, noted in my Military Pillory on the 3rd inst., as to the mess arrangements of the detachment of Royal Artillery at Upper Chatham Barracks, certain individuals have sent me a statement to the effect that there is no wish for the establishment of a grocery canteen, that there is no reason for dissatisfaction with the present supply of provisions, and that a little while ago the men were given the option of dealing where they liked, but were soon glad to revert to the old tradesman. The statement concludes with a panegyric on the officer commanding as one who has the comfort of his men ever at heart. This being his reputation, I hope he will act up to it by making some personal inquiries, for, notwithstanding the confident tone adopted by my present correspondents, I fancy he will find that they by no means represent the general feeling of the men on the subject referred to.

Concerning the recent atrocious sentence on a boy named Kavanagh belonging to H.M.S. Blenheim, a naval officer pertinently asks how it came about that the prisoner was able to strike Commander Currey? It will be recollected that this assault, for which a court-martial sentenced Kavanagh to twenty-four strokes with the birch, twelve months' hard labour, and dismissal from the Service, was committed by the youth on the Commander ordering him to be whipped for some previous offence. Presumably the boy was in the charge of an escort when he was taken before the Commander. What, then, were the escort doing to allow him to strike that officer? Is it customary, too, for the Naval Rhadamanthus to have the culprit standing alongside him within striking distance, when meting out punishment? What would be thought of a judge who took a seat in the dock when sentencing prisoners? I notice by the way that a Service journal rebukes me for my comments on the case, and suggests that I do not sufficiently appreciate the gravity of the crime of striking a superior officer. It fears that I "ignore the surely obvious necessity of maintaining strict discipline on board H.M.'s ships." I do nothing of the kind. What I do hold is that the interests of discipline never have been, and never will be, promoted by such savage and outrageously excessive sentences as that which was passed on this boy Kavanagh. Furthermore, when I see a newspaper, in dealing with such an offence as this lad's, solemnly refer to the fact that "not so many years ago the penalty for striking a superior officer was death," I am strongly of opinion that that paper has outlived its time by about a century.

Much amusement has been afforded to the West Australians by a correspondence that has taken place between Captain St. Leger, the private secretary to the Governor, and the Perth Municipal Council. The Captain has had the happiness of marrying the Governor's daughter; and on the occasion of his wedding he had some gravel put down on the roadway near Perth Cathedral, the condition of the road not meeting with his approval. He afterwards asked the Council to pay the bill for this gravel, and remarked that it would be "a pity to make the road in a mess by taking it all up again." The Council replied that they could not pay for the gravel, nor could they permit its removal from the road. Captain St. Leger next suggested that the Council should pay half the amount he had expended, namely, £1. 3s., but this also they declined to do, and he then wound up the correspondence with a nasty reference to the desire of the authorities "to keep their neglected roadways in proper repair at the expense of private individuals." With this experience in his mind, the gallant officer will doubtless remember in future that people who indulge in such luxuries must pay for them.

W. & F. Thorn's Speciality.—Job Carriages.—This is by far the best and cheapest way to keep an establishment, saving all trouble, annoyance, and expense. Carriages kept like new for small annual payments.—19, Gt. Portland-street, W.; Ranelagh House, Lower Grosvenor-place, S.W. London only.

Cycling Suits are a speciality at Ulster House, Conduit-street, London, W., where Ulsters, Overcoats, and Capes are kept ready for immediate use.

SUNDAY BY THE SEA.

The Cleethorpes District Council have announced a new decree
For the future better keeping of the Sabbath by the sea;
So henceforth, say their new by-laws, let the penalty be dire
On the man who dares a carriage or a horse to ply for hire!

Woe, say they, to any urchin who with any kind of cry
Dare invite the Cleethorpes public any Sunday print to buy!
Woe, say they, to any boatman who shall dare a skiff equip!
Woe to any bathing-woman who shall dare a child to dip!

* * * * *

But the Cleethorpes District Council should not be with this content,
There are other Sabbath-breakers they should seek to circumvent:
There's that hardened Sun, for instance, which, in spite of all they say,
Dares to shine away on Sunday as on any other day.

There's the tide, too, which a spirit of great obstinacy shows,
For at Cleethorpes every Sunday it perversely ebbs and flows;
While the waves, despite the precepts which these local Mawworms preach,
Pass the sacred hours of Sunday (Sabbath)-breaking on the beach!

Let the Council, then, be stirring, and as soon as, one by one,
They have tackled with their by-laws wind and waves and tide and sun,
Then, no doubt, they will be ready, on the same egregious ground,
To arraign our world on Sundays for still daring to go round!

But, in sober, serious earnest, what, we wonder, is the way
That these Councillors of Cleethorpes keep, themselves, the Sabbath day?
Have they by-laws for their households, which they never break or shirk,
Framed against the perpetration of all sorts of Sunday work?

Do they never buy a paper and commit a mortal sin?
Are their bath-rooms locked securely so that no one can get in?
Do their coachmen and their horses get that rest which is their right?
Do their cooks abstain from labour Sunday morn, and noon, and night?

And here is one more question: Do these Councillors opine
They have any sacred sanction for their Sabbatarian line?
If they do, we'll undeceive them: it is time that they should know
Christ annulled the Jewish Sabbath nineteen hundred years ago.

Colwyn Bay, too, cannot be an altogether desirable place in which to support existence, since the Urban District Council considers itself bound to protect the morals of the inhabitants by sternly discountenancing frivolity of every description. The puritanical fervour of these bigots found an outlet one day last week while discussing a proposal to find a suitable site for a pavilion. Llandudno, of all places, was cited as an awful example of degeneration, because the pavilion of that unhappy seaside resort had become "almost a theatre." A Rev. Mr. Howarth feared the same fate for Colwyn Bay, as the niggers there were "innocent at first, but they were not so now." Unhappy Colwyn Bay! Miserable niggers! Which is the cause and which the effect? Surely it cannot be that the atmosphere of Colwyn Bay has caused this lamentable moral decadence of its corked visitors.

However much one may sympathise with the object of the Liverpool magistrates in stringently administering the licensing laws in that over-licensed city, it is impossible to approve of the extraordinary, and I should think unprecedented, course which they adopted at the licensing sessions last week. The chairman said the Bench were "determined only to have licences who were fit and proper persons"—a determination which everybody will applaud. But, referring to the proceedings which had been taken against licence-holders during the year, he then went on to make the following remarks:—

> There were two or three cases in which there had been successful appeals, but the Bench felt that, notwithstanding those dismissals, the applicants should be brought before them, so that attention should be called to the conduct which had been going on during the year, and that they should be cautioned. Even where the cases had been dismissed by appeal, the record still stood good, and would have its weight in regard to the house in question.

What does this mean? It means that if a licencee has been convicted by the magistrates, and if on appeal to the Recorder at Quarter Sessions that conviction has been quashed, the original record is nevertheless to "stand good" against him and have its weight in regard to the renewal of his licence—in other words, a man found to be innocent by the Superior Court is still to be treated as guilty by the inferior Court whose decision has been overruled! A more astounding declaration from the Bench, and one more utterly at variance with every principle of law and justice, has never come under my notice.

Many people are in the habit of going for their holidays to the rural districts of Scotland, but the sanitary arrangements at these "country quarters" would appear to be in urgent need of improvement. A leading Scotch journal laments that the laws of health should be "mocked" by many village communities in the Highlands, which it describes as being "a century behind the age" in their ideas of sanitation. A certain seaside village in the popular neighbourhood of Dornoch is mentioned as having no drainage and no scavenging, the result being that the place "is never free from cases of erysipelas and blood-poisoning, and the infant mortality is startling." As a matter of fact, the infantile death-rate at this place has risen to the appalling figure of 202·2 per 1,000. Surely the County Council might take drastic measures to purify this and similar villages, and if that body is somnolent, then the Local Government Board should stimulate it to interference.

If you want to entirely Furnish your House or select any article of Furniture or Carpet, &c., send for HEWETSONS' Illustrated Priced Catalogue.—HEWETSONS, Tottenham Court-road, London.

After the boasts that have so often been heard about the wonderful growth of Belfast and the superiority of its civic management to that of such "mere Irish" towns as Dublin and Cork, it is decidedly startling to read the revelations that have been published during the past two or three weeks in the Northern Whig. Vast numbers of the population of Belfast appear to be living in slums which are a disgrace to a civilised city—indeed, the two principal sanitary officers of the Corporation have just reported that there are no fewer than 19,000 houses, occupied by 100,000 persons, which, if such a radical measure were possible, ought to be forthwith closed as unfit for human habitation, so offensive and injurious to health is their sanitary condition. This state of things has been brought about under the deliberate sanction of the authorities; for "nearly all these houses," says the officers' report, "have been built upon plans passed by the Corporation." The land-jobber and the jerry-builder seem to have been allowed to have things all their own way, and instead of the special inquiry by a Committee of the Corporation into "the health of the city, the present high death-rate, and the causes thereof," which is now being held, what is wanted is a special inquiry by the Local Government Board into the gross negligence and maladministration of the Corporation, and the reasons thereof.

On the burning question of the great gas-meter swindle, I have had an interesting communication from Alderman F. Smith, the Chairman of the Lighting Committee of the Liverpool Corporation. The Committee took the matter in hand in the interests of the consumers, and their expert clearly proved that the startling variations which occur in gas bills are commonly due to corresponding variations in the pressure of the supply, the quantity of gas which the ordinary burner passes being entirely dependent upon the pressure at which it is supplied by the Gas Company. To increase our gas bills, therefore, all the Company has to do is to increase the pressure. In the forefront of the safeguards and economies open to the consumer the Liverpool Committee placed the adoption of suitable governor burners, and such burners officially certified as effective and trustworthy are used by the Corporation itself, and are on sale to private persons at sixpence each. It is claimed that these burners give a better light, and at the same time effect a considerable saving in the amount of gas consumed; and by recommending their adoption and educating the consumer in the use of his gas to the best advantage the Committee appears to have done much good work in Liverpool. Cannot the County Council do something in the same direction for us poor benighted Londoners?

Carpet Beating Season.—The Queen says: "A good place to send carpets to is the Compressed Air Carpet and Tapestry Cleaning Company, Brook Green, Hammersmith, W. Dust blown out. No beaters used." To prevent deception carpets cleaned by this process bear the Trade Mark on the back.

It has been represented to me as a desirable thing that the deaf and dumb alphabet, or some other sign system in general use for conversing with the deaf and dumb, should be taught in public elementary schools, or, at any rate, recommended as a special subject by the Education Department. I have no objection to giving publicity to the suggestion, but I really think it would be possible to teach Board School children other things which would be of more use to them and to the community. The gentleman who presses the matter on my attention is very strong on the uselessness of teaching the deaf and dumb to communicate with their fellow-creatures, unless their fellow creatures, or a considerable proportion of them, are also taught to understand the communication. But really the deaf and dumb among us are happily such a very small minority, that I suppose not one person in a thousand ever has occasion to hold communication with any one so afflicted. So far as the deaf and dumb alphabet goes, I should have thought that it was pretty well understood in schools already. I know that in my schooldays this method of communication was very generally used as a means of conversing behind the back of a master.

A very hard measure of justice seems to have been meted out to a pauper named Harmston at Lincoln Police-court last week. He was charged with disobeying the lawful orders of the workhouse master by refusing to go as a patient into the sick ward of the workhouse; and it was stated that he had been examined by the doctor, who, having found that he was suffering from rheumatism, had recommended that he should undergo a course of treatment in the infirmary. Harmston, however, objected to going into the infirmary, and applied for his discharge from the workhouse, offering to take it at once, but this was refused, and he was forthwith haled before the magistrates, who sentenced him to fourteen days' hard labour. If this man was suffering so badly from rheumatism as to justify his being ordered to the infirmary, he ought not to have been sent to gaol.

The surprise which I felt at the action of the workhouse officials, as well as of the magistrates, in the above case, was removed when I read a day or two later the report of some proceedings of the Lincoln Guardians. Harmston, it appeared, had been making certain complaints to the Local Government Board, one being in reference to the overcrowded condition of the workhouse cemetery, and the horrible state of things which is produced every time a fresh grave is dug. On the man's letter being read, the clerk to the Guardians at once said "he should judge the statements were untrue," while the master stated that, "though the allegations were not absolutely incorrect, yet there was very little truth in them." For once the Guardians do not seem to have been quite convinced by these official denials, and a youthful pauper who had been employed in grave-digging was called into the Board-room and questioned on the subject. His answers practically bore out Harmston's allegations, and eventually a Committee was appointed to deal with the matter. It would be well for the Committee to inquire at the same time how far Harmston's conduct in bringing this scandal to light is accountable for the harsh treatment he has since received.

Boot and Shoe Makers.—Major Howe & Co., 16, Coventry-street, W.; 60, Strand, W.; 13, Queen Victoria-street, City; 81, Gracechurch-street, City. (Klenrusha Polish.)

My request last week for information concerning a Mrs. Sheter, of Staunton Villa, Albany-road, Southsea, has elicited replies from two of her friends. Mrs. Sheter is in the habit of sending out appeals to people to purchase pieces of lace or needlework, which she forwards with her letters. Both her friends assure me that Mrs. Sheter is a lady, and that the statements she makes are correct. This may be; but I venture to suggest that instead of seeking to justify the method which she has adopted for supplementing her income, Mrs. Sheter's friends would render her better service by pointing out in what a very unpleasant position she places herself by addressing such appeals to total strangers. There are many very disreputable characters who resort to precisely the same means for supplying or supplementing their incomes, and if a lady is content to follow in their wake she must not be surprised if strangers make the mistake of classing her with the rest of the begging-letter brigade.

A very similar kind of business is being carried on by Mary L. Eyres, of 97, Newark-road, Lincoln. She is one of those individuals who imagine that the announcement of a man's death is justification sufficient for her to address the widow with offers of mourning collars, cuffs, and sympathy for a cash consideration. "May I ask," she writes, "if you will kindly give my mother an order if you possibly can? My father, who was a son of the late Colonel Eyres, of the Grenadier Guards, and grandson of the late Colonel Rushbrooke, late M.P., of Rushbrooke Hall, Bury St. Edmunds, died through a sad affliction, and has left my mother with four of us young children almost unprovided for——." I have my doubts about this descendant of the "late M.P., of Rushbrooke Hall," for one of her letters that has recently come to hand was addressed to a non-existent person, and has evidently done service on more than one occasion, the date having been altered from May, 1895, to July, 1896. I suppose there are persons who respond to this sort of appeal, but to me a letter of this kind, from its initial "Madam," to the concluding tearfully crocodilian phrase, "Deeply sympathising with you in your sad bereavement," is as offensive as it is impertinent.

"Truth" will be sent weekly to any address in the United Kingdom for 7s. for 3 months; 14s. for 6 months; or 28s. for 12 months. The subscription for all Countries included in the Postal Union is, 3 months, 7s. 8d.; 6 months, 15s. 4d.; 12 months, £1 10s. 8d. All subscriptions are payable in advance, and cheques and P.O.O.'s should be made payable to the Manager, "Truth": Buildings, Carteret-street, S.W.

Is it good form or a desirable thing for an M.P. to preside at a Licensing Session where applications for new licences are to be granted or refused to parties belonging to his own constituency? A Norwich correspondent asks the question owing to the fact that at the recent Brewster Sessions at Cromer the Chairman of the Bench was Mr. S. Hoare, one of the Members for Norwich, and two new licences were granted to brewery companies at Norwich for hotels at Sheringham and Mundesley. For my own part, I feel confident that the Chairman's vote was not influenced one way or the other in the slightest degree by the fact that the applications were made on behalf of Norwich brewers; but, at the same time, his position was one calculated to provoke criticism, more especially as the licences in question appear to have been granted in direct opposition to the general wish of the inhabitants of the two villages.

How have the mighty fallen! John James Jones has, I know, been engaged in a variety of occupations, but it is with considerable surprise that I find that he is now desirous of enrolling himself amongst the publicans. I see that he is applying, in the person of his son, for a full licence for his boarding establishment adjoining the Beach Rocks Convalescent Home at Sandgate. Of course, I cannot know what view the licensing magistrates may take of the application, but in the event of success I foresee a little conflict between John James Jones, publican, and John James Jones director of the London Samaritan Society, whose rules for the patients entertained at Beach Rocks, I understand, lay an embargo upon their entering any of the licensed victuallers' establishments of the neighbourhood.

There were some remarkable revelations in the course of an Inland Revenue prosecution at Preston on Friday last. It appears that in that borough there are five hundred small dealers engaged in the sale of "temperance drinks," while there are twenty manufacturers of these beverages, which have been found to contain precisely the same ingredients as beer—sugar, hops, and yeast. One of these drinks, for which there is a great demand, is nothing more or less than disguised beer, and it contains nearly as much alcohol as a good deal of "genuine" beer. Of course the revenue is being seriously defrauded by the sale of these decoctions, and, what is worse—at least, I presume so—many teetotallers are gradually becoming "habitual drinkers."

Solicitors are cheap to-day. Here is a country practitioner advertising in the Law Times for "admitted man as clerk;" he must be a "good advocate and conveyancer," and the salary offered is £75 a year. I am not surprised at the contempt for the advertiser to which a legal correspondent has given expression in sending me this precious announcement. But I suppose it may be taken for granted that the advertiser would not have named this miserable stipend unless he had been pretty sure that men would be found ready to accept it, and while this is, of course, no excuse for such disgraceful sweating, the fact that the services of a full-blown solicitor can be secured for less than 30s. a week throws a lurid light on the condition of the profession. The lamentations one often hears about its overcrowded state would appear to be abundantly justified, and advertisements like this in the legal journals may well give pause to parents who contemplate putting their sons into the profession. The money required to article a youth and qualify him as a solicitor might just as well be saved if by the time he has become a good advocate and conveyancer he will only be able to command the wage of a copying clerk.

From a circular which has been forwarded to me, I learn that the publication of a book entitled "The Charitable Ten Thousand," and announced to contain the names and addresses of upwards of ten thousand of the largest donors to charitable objects, is an accomplished fact. I can find no words of condemnation strong enough to characterise this production of what is in point of fact a Beggar's Vade-Mecum. Every begging-letter writer who learns of its existence will forthwith expend the next guinea which his specious story succeeds in luring from the pocket of some credulous person in the purchase of a copy. Meanwhile, what do the ten thousand who are sold in this egregious fashion propose to do? I know that if my name and address figured in such a list without my knowledge and consent I should consider that I had good cause to look for a considerable recompense from the publishers. Individually, however, I can gain comfort from the thought that Truth will become even more essential to at least ten thousand of my fellow creatures.

A gentleman who chanced to come across the pamphlet published by the man Miller of 14, Holborn, E.C., has been at the pains to point out to me the utter absurdity of the pretensions this worthy makes for his "perfection system of investment"—the alluring title he gives to his "system" of betting on horse races. The rottenness of the "systems" run by Miller and others in the same line has been proved often enough, however, and if people will be such egregious greenhorns as to go in for this sort of "investment," all I can say is that they thoroughly deserve to lose their money, which in the long run they invariably do.

More specious than Miller's method of trading upon the credulity and cupidity of the public is that adopted by an individual named W. Nolan at Clapham. Nolan does not ask to be entrusted with money for investment according to his "secret" system. All he wants is a trifle of 10s. for a month's telegrams, and your undertaking to pay him 25 per cent. of the profits you make from following the information he wires you as to what horse to back and how much to put on at starting price. How can the tipster gain by this, it may be asked, unless his tips are right? Easily enough. The telegrams, of course, cost him nothing, even if the 10s. does not leave some profit. In sending his tips to different addresses all he has to do is to ring the changes on the names of the horses for each race, and in that way he is absolutely certain to spot the winners for some of his clients, who at the end of the week will be only too delighted to hand over his share of their winnings. It is, in fact, a game of "heads I win, tails you lose," and anybody can calculate for himself how lucrative it must be if there are any considerable number of clients. Yet I suppose there are scores and hundreds of infatuated noodles who never see through it.

Wanted: the present address of a young woman of ladylike appearance and manners, age about twenty-five, medium height, very pale complexion, black eyes, and very short black hair, known under various names, of which the latest are Miss Brookes, Miss Lane, and Mrs. Lyle. The individual who answers to this description has recently been engaged in a swindle of the most barefaced character, and it seems to have been planned and executed with so much boldness that I am convinced she can be no novice at the game. Her method was simplicity itself. Under the name of Miss Lane she engaged, towards the end of June, a bed-sitting room in a house at Acacia-place, St. John's Wood, at a moderate rental. From this address she sent to a number of ladies a printed document purporting to be the prospectus of "The Kensington Association." In this document she figured as a Miss Brookes, and described herself as secretary. The object of the Association as set out in the prospectus was to assist members in bringing their work before the public by offering prizes and giving them assistance in the sale of their work. The work, for which weekly prizes were offered was to consist of needlework and fancy articles of all descriptions, paintings in oil or water colours, wood carving, and so forth.

Naturally, an essential part of the scheme was the membership fee, and this was fixed at 10s. for an annual subscription, 6s. for the half year, and 3s. 6d. for the quarter. A leaflet which accompanied the prospectus gave a lengthy list of prizes open to the competition of members, and stated that the results would be forwarded on August 5, and the prizes sent on to the winners on that date. There seems to have been a considerable response from those who were circularised, for a large number of letters and parcels were received by "Miss Brookes." However, a day or two previous to August 5, Miss Lane went for a walk and did not return to her lodging, much to the distress of her landlady, who, duped by her appearance and manner, had boarded and lodged her free during the whole of her stay at Acacia-place. I have been able to trace her to Fitzroy-street, where she lived for a short time under the name of Mrs. Lyle; but from this address she has also disappeared. I learn now that she is engaged in applying under the original name of Lane for various advertised vacancies as domestic servant, and, with the plea that she has travelled a distance, she endeavours to obtain small sums of money to recoup her for travelling expenses. There is no doubt that this individual, in spite of her engaging manners and lady-like appearance, is a past-mistress in the gentle art of swindling. Hence this warning.

At the head of the present instalment of my Legal Pillory I place two cases which constitute a most effective answer to persons who seek, like my correspondent of last week, to extenuate the action of the Grimsby Bench in sending fishing apprentices to gaol on the ground of the seriousness of the offence of delaying a smack about to proceed to sea. Here are two defendants, one a fisherman, the other an apprentice, charged with precisely the same offence. It is the man's fifteenth appearance before the court for "neglecting to go to sea," and he is let off with a fine of 40s. The youth has been up on one previous occasion, and he is sent to gaol for a fortnight. There could scarcely be a more striking proof of the monstrous severity with which these unfortunate apprentices are punished. Possibly, I may be told that the fisherman was not committed to gaol because the law would not permit that course in the case of an adult; but if that is the explanation, I can only say that the fact makes it all the more scandalous that the law should allow imprisonment to be inflicted in the case of boys. The other items in the following list are of the usual type, contrasting the lenity with which the magistracy treat offences of violence and cruelty with their severity towards persons guilty of petty thefts, poaching, or sleeping out:—

Grimsby Borough Police-court. Before the Mayor (Alderman E. Palmer), Messrs. E. Bannister, J. C. Wright, and J. M. Dennis. Walter Clayton, fisherman, charged with disobedience by neglecting to go to sea in his employer's smack. This was his 29th appearance, and the 15th time he had been before the Court for "stopping ships." Fined £2 or one month.

Grimsby Borough Police-court. Before the same magistrates. Francis Holt, fishing apprentice, charged with disobedience by neglecting to go to sea in his employer's smack. This was his second offence. Fourteen days' hard labour.

Warwick Borough Police-court. William Cook, convicted of assaulting Mary Ann Kelly. Complainant had befriended the defendant by giving him employment as he was out of work. He showed his gratitude by violently assaulting her, her eye still being badly disfigured a fortnight afterwards. Fined £1. 19s., including costs.

Warwick Borough Police-court. George Davis and Robert Crane, charged under the Poaching Prevention Act with being found in possession of forty-one rabbits. Fined £5 each or two months.

Doncaster Police-court. Joe Carroll, a well-known wrestler, charged with assaulting William Grogan. Defendant was creating a disturbance outside complainant's house, and, on being asked to go away, he threw complainant twice over his head and kicked him each time he fell on the ground. A police witness said complainant was smothered with blood. Fined £2 and costs.

Retford County Police-court. Before Messrs. E. E. Harcourt-Vernon, W. T. Gent, W. Chapman, and Colonel Denison. William Elliott and Walter Whitlam, charged with trespassing in pursuit of game, and being in possession of a gun for which they had no licence. Fined £2 each for the trespass, and 19s. each for the second offence.

Warminster Police-court. Before Mr. T. H. Cookson and Mr. W. F. Morgan. Harry Holton, convicted of assaulting his wife. He went home drunk, and on his wife running out of doors to escape his violence he dragged her back, and struck her in the side with such violence as to fracture her ribs. He threatened to kill her. The woman was granted a separation. There were two previous convictions against defendant. Seven days.

Newark County Police-court. Before Mr. W. N. Nicholson and Rev. R. Washington. William Hall, charged with stealing four pecks of apples from an orchard. Three months.

Arundel County Police-court. Before Mr. John Whitehead and Captain Hills. John Millward, charged with stealing two bottles of ginger-beer from a publican's premises. A previous conviction was proved. Three weeks.

Abergele and Colwyn Bay Petty Sessions. Before Mr. J. H. Roberts and other magistrates. William Arthur Roberts, charged with being disorderly and refusing to quit a public-house, and John Edwards and William Edwards with assaulting the landlord. Roberts behaved in an outrageous way, and, on the landlord trying to eject him, he was attacked by the other defendants, who kicked him and bit his hand so seriously that it was useless for days. Roberts fined £1. 4s. 4d., the other defendants £1. 4s. 10d. each.

Aberdeen Police-court. Before Bailie Farquharson. George MacRay and George Conn pleaded guilty to having assaulted James Mitchell in a railway carriage by beating him, seizing him by the throat, and forcing him down upon the seat. They attacked him on his asking them to close a window while going through a tunnel. Fined 10s. 6d. each.

Devonport Police-court. Before Messrs. J. W. Ryder and W. Hawkes. William Lovell, stoker R.N., charged with being drunk and disorderly and with assaulting James Thompson. Owing to prisoner's violence, a constable called upon Thompson to assist in conveying him to the lock-up. Prisoner thereupon threw Thompson to the ground and bit his lip, causing a wound which had to be dressed at the hospital. Fined 6s. for the first offence, and 10s. 6d. and costs for the assault.

St. Helens Police-court. Before Mr. Walmsley-Cotham and Mr. Dromgoole. William Beddons, charged with assaulting his baby, four months old. Defendant struck the infant on the face several times with his open hand, and also held it up by the legs and smacked it. His wife went for a neighbour, and on returning found the defendant with the child face downwards on the rug and beating it. A police witness said the side of the baby's face was black and swollen. Fined 5s. and 4s. 6d. costs.

Chesterfield Borough Police-court. Benjamin Barley, charged with cruelty by working a horse while in an unfit state. The animal was lame, it had sores on its back and sides, and it was in a most emaciated condition, one witness describing it as a complete wreck. Fined £1 and costs.

Swindon Petty Sessions. Before Messrs. A. D. Hussey-Freke (Chairman), C. Wykeham-Martin, L. L. Morse, and W. Reynolds. William Garland, labourer, charged with stealing six eggs and some apples, value 7d., belonging to his employer. It appeared to be his first offence. He had been in custody for several days, and was now sentenced to a week's hard labour.

East Grinstead Police-court. Before the Rev. C. W. Payne-Crawford. Samuel Weeks charged with trespassing in search of conies. He was in Buckhurst Park, and went into the brakes and got a rabbit which another man had shot. Fined £2. 2s. 8d.; in default fourteen days.

Plymouth Police-court. Before Professor Anthony and Mr. R. Woolland. William Howell, porter, charged with stealing six eggs. Six weeks.

Norman Cross Police-court. Before Captain Vipan, Messrs. J. Herbert and T. C. Ratcliffe, Revs. G. H. Woodhouse and H. H. Wyatt. Edward Leach, charged with lodging in the open air and being without visible means of subsistence. Seven days.

Buxton Petty Sessions. Philip Hooper, charged under the Poaching Prevention Act with having in his possession a net used for taking game. Fined £2 and costs.

Horsham Police-court. Before Colonel Lyon. John Norris and Richard Botting, charged with sleeping out. Seven days each.

Mansfield Police-court. Before Mr. J. Paget and other magistrates. Benjamin Hill and Charles Sargison, charged with poaching. Three months each, and a further term in default of finding sureties for their future good behaviour.

A case at Burton Police-court the other day, in which Princess Duleep Singh was fined for having an unmuzzled dog in a public place, is commended to my attention by a correspondent who apparently regards it as a reductio ad absurdum of muzzling-order prosecutions and convictions. It appeared that a vigilant policeman detected the Princess riding in a carriage with the unmuzzled dog on her knee, and being desirous, no doubt, of proving that whether an offender was a Princess or a peasant

Prince of Wales Hotel, Harrogate.—Finest position, facing the Stray. Redecorated and sumptuously refurnished. New management. Excellent stabling. Electric light throughout.

Gratis and post free, very elaborately-illustrated Price Lists, showing exact sizes of Havana Cigars issued by the Havana Trading Association, 177, Piccadilly.—C. A. Carlin, Gen. Manager was immaterial to him, he forthwith applied for the usual summons, and the magistrates in due course inflicted the usual fine. As my correspondent suggests, it does seem to be carrying the law to an absurd point when a lady is fined for taking a lapdog out in a carriage without a muzzle. But, on the other hand, if the order were to be relaxed in such cases as that, it would also have to be relaxed in others, and in the long run the authorities would probably find a difficulty in knowing where to draw the line.

A remarkably cool method of procuring a supply of water was disclosed at the Bury County Police-court the other day, the defendants in the case being Samuel Knowles & Co., Limited, calico printers. The water at their mills having run short, the company took the delightfully simple course of making up the deficiency by connecting a 2½ in. stand-pipe with one of the Bury Corporation's mains, and diverting the supply from the main into the mill lodge for a period of about forty hours, the result being that the inhabitants of three districts were deprived of water from a Saturday afternoon until the Monday morning. This was done without even asking the permission of the authorities, and the magistrates showed their sense of the defendant's "irregularity," as their solicitor euphemistically called it, by imposing a fine of £5 and costs—the maximum penalty allowed by the law, but, at the same time, a totally inadequate one in such a case as this. I am told that in his character of a county magistrate the gentleman at the head of the delinquent firm is fond of expatiating upon the evils which arise from the drink traffic. He now has an opportunity of pointing out that an unbridled appetite for water may also get people into trouble.

At Brentford Police-court last week a soldier was charged with extinguishing a street lamp at Hounslow, and the Chairman (Mr. P. Watson) having commented in severe terms upon the gravity of the offence, inflicted a small fine. While it is necessary that this idiotic form of practical joking should be punished, it would, perhaps, be better if the infliction of the punishment were left to some other magistrate than the gentleman who is Chairman of the local street-lighting authority. The penalty imposed in this instance was suitable enough, but that does not alter the fact that, no matter how trivial the charge may be, it is always undesirable for the same person to be practically prosecutor and judge.

In vindication of a sentence of a month's hard labour for stealing two-pennyworth of apples from an orchard, which was passed on a man at Banbury Petty Sessions, and mentioned in my Legal Pillory last week, one of the magistrates writes to tell me that there were five previous convictions against the prisoner and that "he had done no work for eight years." I willingly give publicity to this information, though it does not affect my point in pillorying the case. Magistrates, I know, differ from me; but I contend that a man who steals a few apples, even if he has five previous convictions, is far less deserving of a month's hard labour than a brute who half murders his wife, or wantonly tortures a dumb animal, and, as I show every week, offenders of the latter class are continually let off with mere paltry pecuniary penalties.

There must be a boom in the Spanish buried treasure business, judging from the activity with which the enterprising prisoners are distributing copies of their romantic narrative. These gentry are getting decidedly bolder as time goes on. No doubt they have always looked upon the people of this country as mostly fools, and it would seem that the longer they know us the bigger fools they take us to be. Only on this hypothesis can one account for the audacity they now show in sending out their story on lithographed circulars, seeking to lure to their net not merely individual farmers or tradesmen, but actually a large firm of manufacturers. This latest departure has occurred in a case at Belfast; a limited liability company there having been favoured with the usual letter, and having, of course, forwarded it on to me. It is, indeed, a national humiliation that this transparent swindle should still be successfully carried on—and successful it evidently is—after so many years of constant exposure.

An elderly, but sturdy, beggar is Richard Gray, of 50, Grosvenor-park, Tunbridge Wells. He was, it appears, according to his own account, formerly an Australian merchant and shipper, who was thrown into poverty by the Australian bank failures, and to enable him to meet his serious difficulties and to preserve a home for himself and children, he found it necessary to appeal broadcast by sending total strangers a begging-letter, accompanied by a petition, which bears some sixty signatures of those who have assisted him. I have made some inquiries into the truth of his statements, and find that they are in the main correct. There are, however, one or two points which Gray has omitted to mention—points which, even were his method desirable, remove him from the list of deserving cases. First, the children to whom he refers are aged respectively 24 and 16, and consequently cannot be dependent upon him for support. Secondly, when he first started upon his career, £75 was the total sum necessary to enable him to meet the whole of his difficulties, and he has already received considerably more than this amount. Thirdly, he has been already warned to discontinue his operations by a gentleman who at first acted as a reference, and who considers, as I do, that begging is a reprehensible method of existing. Under these circumstances, I think it advisable to give Richard Gray a warning on my own account. The police have already thought fit to make inquiries about him, and I am afraid that if he does not desist, it will not be in my power to prevent his grey hairs from being brought down with sorrow to the grave.

Hewetsons, Tottenham Court-road, London, send their Illustrated Catalogue post free, and it is acknowledged to be the best Furnishing Guide extant.

The only Palatable Natural Aperient to take is "Franz Josef" Water, generally admitted to be the best. Ten gold medals at World's Exhibitions. No household should be without it.

I have received a number of requests for information about a firm of rubber-stamp merchants, of 92, Gracechurch-street, calling themselves Messrs. Ireton & Co. I am sorry to say that I have been able to ascertain very little about these people, owing to their having disappeared from that address, and the landlord would, I am informed, be as pleased as my correspondents to ascertain the whereabouts of the firm. At one period of their existence they appear to have done some genuine business, but for some time before their disappearance they seemed satisfied to accept the cash for orders without troubling themselves to execute the same. I am not surprised, therefore, that they have found it convenient to disappear.

The singular thing about this, as about many similar cases, is that the police decline to take any action in regard to the matter. One of my correspondents having failed to get any response to repeated requests for the return of his money or the execution of his order, made application to Scotland Yard, only to receive the stereotyped reply that the police could do nothing. I must say that I entirely fail to appreciate the subtle distinctions which the official mind is able to draw between the theft direct and the theft indirect. If anything, the public require infinitely more protection against the latter than against the former.

Another instance of the unscrupulous methods employed by the individuals who make it their business to supply servant girls with wholly unnecessary articles has just been brought under my notice. The firm in question, Messrs. A. Pritchard & Co., of Grosvenor-buildings, Richmond and Feltham, Middlesex, sold a silver watch to a domestic servant for £2. 8s. 6d., to be paid for by monthly instalments of 4s. Ten of these had been duly paid, but when the eleventh became due the girl happened to be away on a holiday, and consequently she delayed sending the instalment. Upon her return she received the following printed memorandum enclosed in an open envelope:—

Madam,—Not having replied to our previous applications for subscriptions, we beg to inform you that unless we receive same per return of post we shall be compelled to make unpleasant inquiries at your business address.—We are, madam, yours faithfully, A. Pritchard & Co.

This specimen of Messrs. Pritchard's business methods strikes me as a peculiarly impertinent method of extracting money from an easily terrorised class.

Sufferers from all liver and gouty complaints, unable to visit the Spa, reap great benefit from taking the Carlsbad Waters or Sprüdel Salts (Löbel Schottländer, Carlsbad, on wrapper). Of all Chemists, and Ingram & Royle, Ltd., 52, Farringdon-street.

As I expected, the advertising swindle set on foot by Messrs. Mason, or Smith, of 145, Fleet-street, to which I referred last week, is producing a fine crop of dupes. Thus nearly every day of late the following advertisement has appeared in the Daily Telegraph:—

A.—A Home Employment, for either sex, in spare time. No canvassing whatever; 5s. to 30s. weekly. Addressed envelope, in own writing, for particulars.—Letters only, B. Groves, 31, Palace-terrace, Fulham.

An application to B. Groves brings in response a circular almost identical with that published in my columns last week, and offering the same dubious advantages. Really the agents who lend themselves to the propagation of the swindle are very little better than the originators. Is it too much to ask that the Daily Telegraph should refuse to lend its advertising columns for the purpose?

Another advertisement in one of the Sunday papers promises "a handsome gold watch" to "the person" who correctly solves a so-called enigma, which obviously consists of a slight derangement of the letters forming the name of a well-known food for infants. There is always a countless herd of greedy noodles ready to jump at an offer of this kind, and as two penny stamps have to be sent with every solution, and only one watch is given each week, the advertiser is probably making a very good thing out of the business. I have no sympathy whatever for the fools who part with their twopences so easily. At the same time, they are entitled to any protection the law affords, and why the Wilkinson Advertisement Company, 33, Osborne-terrace, S.W., is permitted to carry on this game while missing-word competitions are stopped is an enigma which it is difficult to solve.

There is no shadow of doubt that the Mrs. Fielding of "The Limes," Great Yarmouth, whose offer of a "powerful six-guinea binocular", under the nom-de-plume of Mrs. B., 38, Willes-road, Kentish Town, I dealt with last week, is very extensively engaged under a variety of aliases in disposing of all kinds of goods as duplicate wedding presents, &c. Quite recently she was getting rid of an afternoon tea-set and kettle as a Mrs. North, of Surrey-gardens, and in another instance brought under my notice she actually made a proposal of partnership to one of her customers. The fact is, as I have frequently pointed out, that the whole of this business is more or less fraudulent, and I am surprised that, after my repeated exposures of it, reputable newspapers still continue to assist the operators.

I am sorry the Chemist and Druggist should have jumped to the conclusion that I expected it to reply to my paragraph concerning chemists' charges. I am always sorry when I see an esteemed contemporary making itself ridiculous. This is what has happened on the present occasion. My readers will remember that I referred to the fact of three different chemists having charged three different prices for making up the same prescription, the price in the first case being 10d., in the second 1s. 3d., and in the third 1s. 9d. I asked why there should be such variations in the price for the same stuff. The Chemist and Druggist says it cannot answer the question because I gave "such vague information," and failed to describe precisely "the character of the medicine." This, of course, completely misses the point, which was the vast discrepancy in the charges of the three chemists for making up exactly the same prescription. Seeing that the same medicine was supplied by each tradesman, its "character" is wholly immaterial. My contemporary goes on to say that there are also variations in the prices of newspapers. How anybody could come to make such an absurdly irrelevant, such a childishly feeble retort passes my comprehension. There might have been something in it if different prices were charged for the same newspaper; but as it is the remark is perfectly meaningless. The Chemist and Druggist should really see whether it cannot make some better defence of its clients, and I will give it a further chance by citing another out of the numerous cases that have been brought to my notice. A week or so ago a lady bought a bottle of Sulphate of Quinine at a chemist's at Dover and had to pay 2s. for it. A few days later she bought a precisely similar bottle of the same drug at some stores in London, and was only charged 6½d. for it. Is there any reasonable explanation of this difference of 1s. 5½d. in the price of the same article; and if so, what is it?

The Hernia Institute, 489, Oxford-st., London, W., absolutely cures rupture in from three to six weeks. Highest testimonials. Pamphlets and consultations free.

My thanks are due to several correspondents at Constantinople for sending me private accounts of the recent atrocities. It is noteworthy that they all agree that the wholesale slaughter of the Armenians was either instigated and arranged, or else connived at, by the Turkish Government. Some of the London papers have stated that the mob were led by fanatical Softas, but this appears to be a mistake. According to one of the letters I have received, none of the Softas took part in the massacres. They held entirely aloof, and issued a "Fetva" (ordinance), which was verbally circulated, condemning the massacres as against the precepts of the Koran. As to the manner in which the fiendish work was carried out, these notes may be of interest:—

The mob was led by police in uniform and members of the organisation known officially as the Secret Police, but vulgarly called spies and informers. The mob was under complete control, and worked methodically. The so-called riot broke out simultaneously in twenty different parts of the city, and there were one or two rules governing the rioters' conduct, which they observed to the letter, and which could not have been the result of accident, i.e., they killed male Armenians only; they did not touch a single female. They avoided foreigners, and the very few who were killed were mistaken for Armenians through running away. They left crowded thoroughfares and went into by-streets and attacked Hans which were known to contain Armenians in numbers. The massacres stopped by magic without any display of authority or a single rioter being arrested.

The mobs were not composed of Constantinople Turks, but Turks from the provinces—Lazes, Kurds, and a few Albanians, riff-raff of the very lowest type. There are many cases known where Turks sheltered and hid Armenians, and some of these have been reported by the Secret Police to the clique at Yildiz as having protected members of the Armenian Revolutionary Society.

As the term Han will be made use of pretty often I may as well explain that it is a large building, solidly built, with iron doors and shutters, and occupied by many tenants either as offices or warehouses. The modus operandi was for the mob to proceed and batter the door down with picks or axes, and, in one or two cases, improvised battering rams. If the inmates offered no resistance they would be butchered. If any resistance was offered, such as firing a shot at the mob, then the police would report to the military that the place was occupied by revolutionaries, who were firing on the lawful officers of his Majesty, whereupon the military would open a sharp fusillade on the windows of the building, whilst the mob broke into the building under the cover of their fire.

SCRUTATOR.

BOARD SCHOOLS FOR THE MIDDLE CLASSES.

In reply to a question asked just before the end of last Session, Sir John Gorst facetiously remarked that he should not fail to think a great deal about the next Education Bill during the recess. No doubt that subject will furnish him with plenty to think of, especially if it causes him to think of the last Bill at the same time; but as Sir John is a man who—although nominally a Conservative—takes kindly to new ideas, and has shown himself prepared to turn the whole educational system of the country upside down at a moment's notice, and apparently merely for the fun of the thing, it has occurred to me that this will be an excellent opportunity to make him a present of a little idea of my own, which may afford him some additional matter for cogitation during his holidays. My idea is this. The only real objection to Board schools which is generally felt by the public at the present time, is the objection to pay rates to support them. I know that religious considerations are pressed into the service of the "Down with the Board Schools" movement, but this is such transparent humbug that no reasonable man is deceived by it. If the School Board rate had never risen above a penny in the pound, we should never have heard jeremiads over the impending destruction of our National Morals and National Religion through the sinister influence of the Board Schools. It is the shilling in the pound levied by the London School Board that has pricked so many tender consciences, and raised misgivings about the danger to all that we hold sacred with which such a rate is fraught.

Now, the School Board rate would never have had such a sting as it now possesses if it were not for the fact that the majority of the people who pay it feel that they are getting nothing in return. The bulk of the School Board rate is paid by the middle classes, and the bulk of the School Board population belongs to the working classes; and what touches up your average middle-class man in his tenderest spot is the feeling that his shilling in the pound is paid for the exclusive benefit of that (from the British ratepayer's point of view)

Brighton.—Norfolk Hotel.—This old-established Country and Family Hotel is in the best situation, and replete with comfort, style, and luxury.—Jules A. Creighton, Manager.

Savoy Hotel, Savoy Restaurant, London. Large reception-rooms for fashionable réunions. Orchestra plays daily during dinner and opera supper.

ungrateful, not to say undeserving, character, the British workman. It is no use arguing against this feeling. If a man will think the matter out for himself, he will see, what was far more clearly perceived before the first Education Act was passed than it is to-day, that to allow the greater part of the rising generation in our large towns to grow up in ignorance and savagery must eventually produce results disastrous to the whole community. But if a man cannot, or will not, recognise this palpable truth for himself, it is not much use trying to enlighten him by argument; and I am afraid that as long as School Board rates have to be paid, a considerable proportion of those who have to pay them will look upon them as a dole, which is extorted from them by compulsion for the purpose of doing for other members of the community what those other members ought to be doing for themselves.

The first merit of my scheme is that it will go a long way towards removing this unreasonable notion. My scheme is that the School Boards should open paying schools for the middle classes. I do not mean elementary schools. The present elementary Board schools are open to all, and though the middle classes, for reasons of their own (I dare say very good reasons), do not care to send their children to them, that is their own look-out. All have a right to use the schools if they choose. It would never do, at any rate in a Democratic age, to run side by side two classes of public elementary schools, one for paying pupils and one for children whose parents cannot afford to pay. If such an attempt were made there would speedily be a demand for three classes, and after that for four, five, and six. Once introduce a purely social distinction into the schools, and you will never be able to stop until you have as many classes of schools as there are gradations of Society. But I cannot see why Board Schools should not be started for paying pupils on a higher educational standard than is reached by the elementary schools. The working classes would not use these schools (unless in the very limited way which I will refer to presently) because attendance would be voluntary, and the children would have reached an age at which the working-class parent expects them to begin to shift for themselves. They will, therefore, be Board schools for the middle classes; and this is what it seems to me we want, in order to make the Board school system acceptable to all, because useful to all.

In order to extend their usefulness, I would make the fees in such schools progressive. The payment should be so much per week or per term for each standard; and the standards should be graduated up to the point of preparing a youth for the University. In fact, each such school would be very much on the pattern of such endowed schools as St. Paul's or Dulwich College, the chief difference being that the longer a boy stopped in the school, the more he would have to pay. The actual amount of the fees I would base on the principle that the school should be just self-supporting in the lower standards, and should yield a profit in the higher, this profit to be carried to the general fund of the School Board, and to be applied in reduction of the rates. Thus, not only would cheap and efficient schools be provided for the middle classes through the agency of the School Board, but the present rates would be reduced in effecting this result.

I put forward this little idea of mine on a financial basis, because, as I have said, I believe that the general public looks at all educational questions chiefly from the point of view of £. s. d. But I hope there may be many who will see that there are other reasons than these for a measure of this kind. The end which I should most hope to see achieved by the middle-class Board schools would be, not so much the saving of the middle-class pocket, as the improvement of middle-class education. Looking at it as a whole, and making allowance for numerous notable exceptions, there probably never was anything worse of its kind devised than the average small proprietary day school, whether for girls or boys. As regards girls, there have lately been certain attempts made on an organised plan to supply first-class and cheap day schools in London and the provinces; but these attempts make no pretence at covering the whole of the ground—to say nothing of the fact of their being on a sectarian basis—and we cannot look to private enterprise to supply in every district a thoroughly efficient and trustworthy system of public education. There is hardly a parish in the United Kingdom where schools cannot be found at the present moment, which are conducted by private speculators possessing no qualifications whatever for their task, and assisted by young men and women whose educational attainments are most limited. Every year thousands of boys and girls of the middle-class leave such schools knowing little or nothing, and that little often of a useless character. It is in middle-class education, far more than in that provided at the Universities or the public elementary schools, that the superiority of the Germans to ourselves is most apparent; and this superiority has had much to do with the progress of Germany during the last quarter of a century. We are at this moment in one of our periodical fits of panic over the rapid advance of German commerce and industry. We hear a great deal about the superior education of the German mechanic and craftsman, but Germany has far less advantage over us in the matter of skilled labour than in the better education of her clerks, her commercial travellers, and her business men generally. In the German educational system provision is made for training boys in foreign languages, book-keeping, commercial correspondence, and all the technicalities of office life, and boys leave these schools knowing as much about all branches of business as many English clerks learn in a lifetime. The first aim of our educational reformers should be to provide England—Scotland is far less behind-hand in this matter — with public schools which will place a young middle-class Englishman on a footing of equality with his German rival. Nor does this apply merely to commercial technicalities. It is equally true in regard to all forms of natural science, more especially those sciences which are applied in manufactures, agriculture, and engineering. A German boy can acquire a knowledge of chemistry, electricity, mechanics, and all similar branches of science before he is out of his teens, which an English boy rarely has an opportunity of obtaining at the same age. If we are permanently to hold our own, not only in commerce, but in manufactures and the industrial arts, schools thoroughly equipped in all respects for education in all these subjects must be within the reach of the rising generation; and we shall never get such schools if we wait for private enterprise to provide them.

Depend upon it, this is the great educational need of the day. It is no use to dole out a few thousand pounds to County Councils to be expended here and there upon technical education by means of lectures, evening schools, and continuation classes at the present Board schools. Much useful work can be done, and is being done, in this way, but it reaches only a limited section of a single class. The public secondary and technical schools which I want to see established will be open to all classes, and if only they are efficient, all classes will speedily fill them. Undoubtedly, in such schools a certain proportion of free education should be given. Scholarships admitting the holder to education in such schools for a certain period free of charge should be open to competition among pupils at the elementary schools. Other scholarships should be given in each grade or standard of the secondary school, entitling the holder to a further period of free education in the standard above. In this way the "educational ladder" between the elementary school and the university, of which we have heard so much, will be completed in every rung; so easy, indeed, of ascent will it be that it will be more like an inclined plane than a ladder. But the bulk of the pupils at these schools—nineteen out of every twenty, at least—will pay their own expenses, and a considerable proportion of them will pay enough to make the whole undertaking a source of financial profit to the Board and the ratepayers. That the scheme is perfect as I have sketched it out, I do not suppose for a minute; but that the development of public education in some such direction as this is better worth consideration than the kind of Education Questions with which the public has been occupied of late, I entertain no doubt whatever.

THE ABUSE OF THE CONFIDENTIAL REPORT.

I have lately come across a case which throws further interesting light upon the abuses of the confidential report system. The officer concerned is Major Acheson, late of the Army Service Corps, who resigned his commission under compulsion about a year ago. Major Acheson's case is an example both of the laxity with which the Regulations respecting confidential reports are carried out, and also of the deadliness of the weapon which is thus placed in the hands of the War Office, in the event of an officer who has been unfavourably reported upon giving offence to his military superiors. At the time of his resignation Major Acheson had served about sixteen years in the Army without incurring a reprimand of any kind until the last six months of his career. He served in Egypt during two campaigns, and was mentioned in despatches by the General in command. In 1889 he was specially selected to command the depot company at Aldershot, and from that appointment he was selected for the adjutancy of the same station, so that he may be regarded as an officer of exceptionally good record.

In April, 1893, Major Acheson returned from foreign service, and about a year later he was selected to proceed to Cork, as assistant to Lieut.-Colonel Cook, D.A.A.G., an appointment which generally precedes selection for the General Staff. In this appointment he seems for some time to have given every satisfaction. On about three occasions the Lieut.-Colonel was absent on leave, in all for about two months, and no fault of any kind was ever found with the way in which Major Acheson discharged the duties of the post during his chief's absence. Then, however, a little personal difference seems to have arisen between the two officers. Major Acheson himself asked for a few days' leave, and Lieut.-Colonel Cook, without assigning any reason, objected to his going. Major Acheson pressed the point, and requested that his application might be forwarded to the General. Lieut.-Colonel Cook complied, but at the same time made a remark of a somewhat threatening character. The leave was granted by the General, and very shortly afterwards Lieut.-Colonel Cook made an unfavourable entry in his confidential report on Major Acheson, to the effect that the Major "possessed ability without stability and perseverance," did not take kindly to the work of the General Staff, and was not, in Lieut.-Colonel Cook's opinion, "fitted for further-continued employment as such." This report in itself was not, perhaps, of a very damaging character, and apparently it was not taken very seriously at the War Office. The report was communicated to Major Acheson, as required by the Regulations, and feeling himself strongly aggrieved by it, the Major wrote a protest, which was forwarded through the usual channels to the War Office. His letter, however, was not answered, and he received no communication from the War Office, as provided for by the Regulations. It is worth while to note what the Regulations really say on this point:—

> If the result of the report is considered by the Commander-in-Chief to disqualify the officer from further promotion, he will be so informed, but if reported for reasons which may be removed by amendment or study, he will be cautioned, and when more favourably reported on his claims may be considered (sec. 5, par. 35).

As Major Acheson was not even cautioned under this section, it might be taken that what had been said about him was not deemed worthy of serious notice, in view of his previous record. But see now the use which was subsequently made of this report.

On his return to England in 1893, Major Acheson had been, in the first instance, desirous of obtaining an appointment at Aldershot. He failed, however, in this, and was informed at the War Office that it was due to some objection on the part of Lieut.-Colonel Bridge, then commanding the Army Service Corps at that station. As might be expected, this did not produce a very friendly feeling on the part of Major Acheson towards Lieut.-Colonel Bridge. Being in England in April, 1895, Major Acheson went on a visit to Aldershot, and dined at the Army Service Corps mess, to which he was a subscriber. In the ordinary course of things he there met Lieut.-Colonel Bridge, and, on being greeted by that officer, he responded in a way which was probably not unduly polite. This was, of course, indefensible, and it was an obvious indiscretion on Major Acheson's part to have gone to the Army Service Corps mess at all under the circumstances. He seems to have seen directly afterwards that he had behaved wrongly, for he tendered an apology to Lieut.-Colonel Bridge, which he understood was accepted. The incident, however, evidently rankled in the breast of the superior officer, and after nursing his wrath for two or three weeks, he made a report on the subject to the War Office. Major Acheson was called to account, and in the end was required by the Commander-in-Chief (H.R.H. the Duke of Cambridge) to send in his resignation, the letter in which this was done expressly stating that the decision had been arrived at after taking into consideration the previous unfavourable report of Lieutenant-Colonel Cook. Major Acheson protested and appealed, interviewed the Quartermaster-General, and did all that he could in his own defence, but the Commander-in-Chief was immovable, and the Major's military career came to an end.

The significance of this case lies, as I have said, in its bearing upon the confidential report system. No one can suppose that an officer, who had served in the Army for sixteen years with every possible credit, would have been turned out of the Service simply on the strength of a little act of discourtesy to a superior officer, such as that of which Major Acheson was guilty on his visit to Aldershot. Even the late Commander-in-Chief hardly had the courage to commit such an act of injustice as this; and accordingly, when calling for Major Acheson's resignation, he fortified himself, by falling back upon a passage in a confidential report which had previously been considered of so trivial a character that it had lain at the War Office for six months without any notice whatever being taken of it. Now how does this passage in the confidential report of Lieutenant-Colonel Cook aggravate the complaint made by Lieutenant-Colonel Bridge? Grant that under ordinary circumstances an officer ought not to be kicked out of the Service for an isolated act of discourtesy to a superior officer on the occasion of a private meeting at a club, and it certainly does not afford any stronger reason for kicking him out that he has previously been pronounced by another officer to be unsuited for Staff employment. The act of which Lieut.-Colonel Bridge complained was an isolated offence, which ought to have been judged upon its merits; and its merits are in no way affected by the professional qualifications of the offender or his suitability for promotion. To couple the two incidents together is so obviously illogical and unjust as to strongly suggest that there must have been some further reason, which was deemed at headquarters to make it desirable to get rid of Major Acheson. It so happens that a clue can be found as to what this reason really was.

In 1884 certain correspondence with reference to the Army Service Corps had appeared in the Army and Navy Gazette. Major Acheson was suspected at the War Office of being one of the writers, and of having spoken unfavourably of his Corps. This is proved by a private letter which Major Acheson received from an officer holding a high position at the War Office. In this letter occurred the following passage:—

> I take this opportunity of writing to you to ask you to clear up a certain matter which is causing comment.
>
> A number of letters have from time to time appeared in the papers, crabbing the Corps for varied reasons, and have done, and will yet do, immense harm to it. Some are believed, rightly or wrongly, to have been written by you, and your name has accordingly been mentioned as their author.
>
> It is necessary that we should be in a position to deny this if you have been maligned in the matter, and I am to ask you what is the truth. Please do so as early as you can.

In point of fact Major Acheson had written one letter to the Army and Navy Gazette, and it had reference to the subject of promotion in the Army Service Corps. But it was an inoffensive production, and was certainly not of the character suggested in the above letter from the War Office; nor was there any ground for imputing any of the other letters complained of to Major Acheson. The truth seems to be, however, that this officer was suspected, without any adequate cause, of entertaining views about the Army Service Corps which were not acceptable to his superiors, and of uttering these views in the Press; and there can be very little doubt that this was the ground for the hostility towards him, which culminated in his enforced resignation.

Thus we have a confidential report, produced under circumstances which are suggestive of personal feeling, raked up after having passed for six months unnoticed, in order to be used as the means for getting rid of an officer personally distasteful at the headquarters of his Department. It is only one instance of a danger which always exists, and which has been exemplified in innumerable instances. The confidential report is a weapon which constantly threatens the reputation and happiness of every officer, and often his commission itself. The safeguards by which it is at present surrounded are not sufficient to prevent it being abused; and, even if they were, they are often disregarded. In the very case described above, it would seem that after the confidential report had been communicated to Major Acheson it was altered in one particular unfavourably to him before its final transmission to the War Office; and the War Office itself seems to have failed in complying with the Regulations, inasmuch as no caution of any kind was administered, before action was taken upon the report, as the Regulations, in spirit at least, require to be done. In theory, the confidential report system is all very well, and if the officers entrusted with the making of such reports were free from ordinary human infirmity, and capable of laying aside all personal predilection and bias when forming judgments on their fellow men, the system would be as good in practice as it is in theory. But unfortunately it has to be worked by ordinary human beings, and nothing is more rare than to find a human being capable of forming and expressing a good opinion of a subordinate who has manifested a disinclination to bow down and worship him. The consequence is that there is always a danger of the confidential report becoming a mere expression of personal antipathy, or even an instrument of personal spite.

Maignen's Filter is the only one adopted after public competition by the City of Paris (10th July, 1896) see Bulletin Municipal Officiel, 30th July, 1896.—Full particulars from Maignen's Filtre Rapide & Anti-Calcaire Co., Ltd., 255, Regent-street, London, W.

"DR." FOLEY—BEHIND THE SCENES.

Outside the entrance to 21, High-street, Kensington, there is to be found a boy clad in an attractive uniform. Under the lad's arm is a bundle of pamphlets which he distributes to the passers-by in the street. The title to be found on the cover of each of these pamphlets is "Behind the Scenes," and each contains some sixteen pages of laudatory matter concerning a Mr. or Dr. Foley, one of whose establishments is situated at this particular address, and who also carries on business as a dentist at 113, Westbourne-grove, 32, Tavern-street, Ipswich, 150, High-street, Colchester, and 95, North End, Croydon. I have been perusing this pamphlet with considerable interest, and I find the introductory passages admirably, if somewhat ornately, descriptive of my present purpose. Thus, referring to its title, the author writes :—

> We must not be understood to mean that we are about to take the reader behind the scenes of an ordinary playhouse, but rather that it is our intention to conduct him behind the scenes of that vast theatre in which is being enacted the great drama of life, and especially so far as the scenes of that drama are connected with the exercise of the precious science which deals with the most important agents of human nutrition, viz., the Teeth. We propose in this connection to bring to light some valuable truths and facts that, for the public benefit, ought to be widely known.

The italics are mine, and I also propose in this connection to bring to light some facts that, for the public benefit, ought to be widely known. Following closely upon this introduction, the author gives a hint of his real purpose by the enunciation of the following "Eastern Proverbs" :—

> Who has not teeth and no money to buy teeth, is poor indeed.
>
> Who hath money and no teeth, yet seeketh not the aid of an experienced dentist, might as well be poor.
>
> Who has money and no teeth, and useth the money to buy teeth, proveth that right to wealth which consisteth in knowing how to use it.

Having added to these singular aphorisms a long catalogue of the evils attendant upon neglect of the teeth, the author proceeds to give a warning to the public in the choice of a dentist in the following terms :—

> Beware of the man who, because of his great expenses in rent and advertising, the insignificant number of his patients, and the imperative necessity of eating, is compelled to make those patients who come to him pay for those who stay away; who, in other words, charges from ten to forty guineas for a set of teeth which, if his business were larger, he could afford to supply to his patients at less than one-third of the price. To avoid an overcharge of this kind the only plan is to go to an acknowledged
>
> MEMBER OF THE DENTAL PROFESSION.
>
> At the very head of those dental notabilities who deserve to be so classed universal admission places
>
> Mr. Foley, the American Dental Specialist.

So much for Mr. Foley's professions. I have gone into them at such length because they are exceptional even amongst advertisements of self-advertising quacks, and because they throw into particularly vivid relief the treatment which has been the recent experience of a poor patient who entrusted herself to Mr. Foley's hands. The patient in question, whom I will call Mrs. P., is a cook, and although she has attained to mature years, yet there is evident in her manner that astonishing simplicity in relation to the facts of life outside the immediate sphere of her daily duties not infrequently found in her class. In November last Mrs. P. found herself in the position of having money but no teeth, and accordingly she went to Mr. Foley's establishment at Westbourne-grove. She was at that time out of a situation, but could afford to view the prospect with equanimity owing to the fact that she had been thrifty enough to save something over a hundred pounds out of her earnings. As a result of her visit to Mr. Foley, however, within nine months Mrs. P. found herself with two unsatisfactory cases of teeth, mounted in vulcanite and thinly cased in gold, but minus her savings—£110 in all—and still owing a balance of £16 to the dentist. She had meanwhile obtained a situation, and the matter coming to the notice of her employer, that gentleman at once set about rectifying it, so far as he was able. His first step was to demand an account from Foley. The immediate effect of this letter was the abandonment of the claim for the £16 owing, a long reply in defence of the charge of £110, and an offer to make any alteration in the cases, or even to make new cases if desired. To this the gentleman in question replied with a peremptory demand for a detailed account, with the result that the following extraordinary statement was forwarded to him :—

113, Westbourne-grove, Bayswater, W.

Mrs. P. To S. Foley.

1895.
Nov.	15.	To professional attendance.
,,	16.	Do.
,,	18.	Do.
,,	22.	To Professional attendance, when £110 was agreed upon to include all operations, temporary Gold and Vulcanite cases to be supplied from time to time until mouth was in condition to have permanent Cases made. The two full Sets, Gold and Vulcanite, with Gold Springs.
,,	28.	Gold Cases made and fitted.
Dec.	19.	To Professional attendance at residence, Enfield.
1896.
Jan.	22.	Fresh cases supplied, as Gums had receded.
Feb.	19.	Re-making Same.
Mar.	2.	New Case.
,,	7.	To Professional attendance.
June	25.	Do.
July	22.	New Permanent Case. To complete agreement permanent case to be attended to if required, and to supply a second complete set.

A more ridiculous attempt to justify the large sum charged can scarcely be conceived, and it is especially worthy of notice that the sum already paid by Mrs. P. is set down as the amount agreed upon to be paid by her, in spite of the fact that a month or two previous to the furnishing of the account Mr. Foley was claiming an additional £16 from her. Consequently no sooner was Mrs. P.'s employer in possession of this document than he wrote to Mr. Foley to the following effect :—

> Sir,—I have taken advice on your transactions with Mrs. P., with the result that I am satisfied that you have received money from her to which you are not entitled on the most liberal scale of charge. I cannot overlook the fact that this poor woman is an illiterate servant, as you knew, and that the savings of years of hard work accumulated to provide some small comfort in old age now close on her have been parted with in ignorance of the ways of the world. Before taking proceedings to bring the facts before a jury, I write to give you an opportunity of returning some portion of this money. If you were to return £75 you would then be very handsomely paid for all you have done, and I hope you will see your way to do this if not more. This is written without prejudice.—Yours, &c.

Gout and Rheumatism permanently cured by Post's C.B.Q. Certificate of Analysis proves it absolutely free from Colchicum, Calomel, or Mercury, or ingredients equally injurious.—Full particulars and testimonials free on application to A. M. Post, 98, Leadenhall-street, London, E.C.

The result was just what might have been expected. A representative of Foley appeared hot-foot upon the scene, and eventually, rather than face the exposure entailed by bringing the facts before a jury, agreed to refund £40. This sum Mrs. P.'s employer thought well to accept on her behalf rather than be put to the inconvenience and expense which would have been entailed by an appeal to the law, and in due course a cheque for that amount was forwarded to Mrs. P. through Mr. Foley's solicitor.

About this transaction there can be no two opinions. From the quotations which I have made from his pamphlet, and I have by no means exhausted the verbal inducements contained therein, it is evident that Foley stops at no artifice to secure customers. Upon his note-paper, but not in the pamphlet, he assumes the title of "Dr.," though what his qualifications are I have been unable to discern. His exposition of the "precious science" is worthy of being used as a manual by professors of quackery. And, throughout, the one point upon which he insists more than any other is the moderation of his charges. It is true he admits that money is not wholly unnecessary for the acquirement of the necessary aids to dentition. According to his "Eastern Proverbs," the right to wealth can only properly be claimed by those who part with their money to buy teeth. His interpretation of the proverb is obvious; for in spite of the specious pretences of moderate charges in the pamphlet from which I have quoted, Foley no sooner gets an illiterate woman into his hands than he proceeds to fleece her of the whole of her hardly-earned savings, and when brought to book by some one better versed in the ways of the world than his victim, practically admits the justice of the charge against him by refunding a portion of the plunder rather than face the well-deserved publicity of the Courts. Really it seems as if "Dr." Foley were in the position of those dentists against whom he is so profuse in his warnings. I do not know whether it is "because of his great expenses in advertising," the boy in livery, and the printer's bill for the "Peep behind the Scenes," or "the insignificant number of his patients and the imperative necessity of eating," which leads him to charge £126 for teeth which no dentist who valued his reputation as an honourable man would have priced at more than twenty guineas, nor do I care. The man stands revealed as a charlatan whom it is a pleasure to unmask. There is a flavour of undisguised rascality about the whole procedure, and I trust that this glance "behind the scenes" which I have been enabled to give will be sufficient warning to prevent any of my readers who might at any time contemplate so doing from entrusting themselves to the mercies of this eminent American Specialist.

Mortlock's China and Glass Business, Oxford-st., has entered its 150th year, being founded by John Mortlock in 1746. It is carried on by John George Mortlock, the great-great grandson of the founder, who solicits patronage and recommendation.

SANITATION AT THE SEASIDE.

Every summer brings forth some fresh proof of the short-sightedness of seaside municipal bodies in matters of sanitary administration. It is a characteristic of such bodies which has always amazed me, and which becomes the more amazing as time goes on. There is no difficulty in understanding, however much one may deplore, the tendency of ratepayers and their representatives in the ordinary country town to shut their eyes to unpleasant facts and put up with an imperfect system of drainage, or an unsatisfactory supply of water, in order to avoid as long as possible any addition to their financial burdens. If they suffer from such procrastination, that is their own look out, and they are in a position to be more or less indifferent to the views of outsiders. But in a place which is first and foremost a health and pleasure resort, the case is altogether different. Its prosperity is bound up with its reputation for good sanitation, and the policy of glossing over defects that come to light, and staving off the necessary remedial measures, is certain to end, sooner or later, in disaster. Experience has shown this over and over again; yet, in spite of all warnings, that is the policy which the local authorities of watering places almost invariably pursue. Something is found amiss with the drains or the water, and the fact leaks out in the Press. At once the statement is met with official prevarications and denials, and torrents of abuse are discharged at the newspaper which has dared to speak the truth. (On this point I speak feelingly, for probably no journalist has had to brave more such storms than I have.) Then when the evil becomes too palpable to be wholly disavowed, more precious time is wasted in silly attempts to minimise it or make it appear something accidental and temporary, and it is only after untold mischief has been caused to the town that the difficulty is fully and properly grappled with. That this is no exaggeration is proved by what happened at Worthing in 1893. For months the authorities maintained that their water supply was perfectly pure, and descended to all sorts of disingenuous and misleading devices to explain away the outbreaks of typhoid that were occurring in the town. Not until these outbreaks had grown to the proportions of an appalling epidemic, and hundreds of persons had been stricken down by the disease, scores fatally, did the Worthing Corporation show itself alive to the gravity of the situation and take the necessary steps to put its house in order. This it has since effectively done, and Worthing is now, I hope, enjoying all its former prosperity. But the frightful sacrifice of life and health that took place, to say nothing of the heavy pecuniary loss that fell upon the town in 1893 and the following season or two, would have been averted if the authorities had had the courage to face the truth at the outset.

Take, again, the treatment of the water question at Eastbourne. Just about twelve months ago I gave publicity to the complaints residents and visitors were making respecting the extreme hardness and saltness of the water. In reply I received from some quarters the usual assurances that the complaints were totally unfounded, while from others, with a nicer regard for veracity, came grudging admissions that the water was a trifle hard and salt, but strong assertions that it was not injurious to health. Organically pure the liquid might be, but that it was highly unpalatable was evident from the fact that, rather than use it, people were paying sixpence a gallon for distilled water. At Eastbourne the water supply is the monopoly of a Company, not of the Corporation, and it is only fair to the latter body to say that, the moment the question arose, they recognised its importance to the town, and within a few weeks passed a resolution in favour of promoting a Bill which would transfer the water supply to their own hands. The Waterworks Company, however, were profuse in their promises that anything which was wrong with the water would be speedily set right—their explanation was that a salt spring had been accidentally tapped, but could easily be "blocked out"—and owing, if I remember aright, to an adverse vote by the ratepayers, the Council's proposal was dropped. Eastbourne is now bitterly repenting the trust it reposed in the promises of the Waterworks Company. Again this season, as my readers are aware, the water has been excessively salt; again visitors have been buying distilled water at sixpence a gallon; and again the Company have trotted out an eminent analyst's report that the beverage they supply is "organically pure," as though that disposed of the objection that it is so salt as to be undrinkable. Half way through the season the Company, as a gracious concession to the prejudices of consumers, erected six stand pipes, from which they could obtain water free from the presence of salts. But this is only a temporary, and at that a most inadequate arrangement, and the ratepayers are confronted now, as they were a year back, with the necessity of securing a permanent water supply of unexceptional quality. Are they going to run the risk of being befooled a second time by the Waterworks Company? So far as the Council are concerned I am glad to see that at their meeting last week the speakers were unanimously in favour of applying to Parliament for power to take over the water supply, and it is to be hoped that they will now be backed up by the ratepayers. Certain it is that any repetition of the state of things which has existed this season and last year will most seriously imperil the popularity of the town. Eastbourne has many advantages and attractions, and its healthiness is unquestioned; but it cannot afford to go on disgusting visitors with water which, though it may not be injurious, is undoubtedly distasteful.

Deal is another town which needs to be reminded of the dangers of apathy and delay in regard to its sanitary condition. About eighteen months ago I directed attention to the question of the drainage of middle and upper Deal, and shortly afterwards the Corporation gave some signs of an awakening to their responsibilities in this and other matters. The Notification of Infectious Diseases Act was adopted, and it was decided to join with Walmer in providing an Isolation Hospital. For the fact that the Hospital is not yet built the Local Government Board is mainly to blame. The Corporation also appointed a special Inspection Committee to deal with the grosser cases of insanitary dwellings and nuisances in the town, and I am told that it has done much good work. But the drainage question, the most important of all, is still in practically the same position as in the early part of 1895. It is true that a committee was directed to report on the subject; that a deputation was appointed to examine the systems in operation at Hastings and Eastbourne, and that, finally, the Surveyor was ordered to prepare plans and estimates for carrying out the work. But at this point the zeal of the Council seems to have been exhausted, and to all appearance the actual commencement of the work is as far off as ever. No doubt it is something to be thankful for that a majority of the Council have formally recognised the necessity of draining upper and middle Deal, but when month after month passes without any further progress being made, the sincerity of their declarations is naturally suspected. All this time the undrained district referred to remains a standing menace to the health and popularity of the town. Its sewage is disposed of on the most primitive cesspool system, or, rather, by means of cesspools without any system, for they are emptied when and practically where the inhabitants please, the results in the way of sights and smells being admirably calculated to drive away visitors. Apart, moreover, from the question of the genuineness of their desire to remedy this state of things, the Council have somewhat shaken public confidence in their competence and sagacity. One of their achievements has been to construct a new road, the Marina, without a drain, while in another street where there is some drainage, it is so inadequate that a heavy storm of rain, such as occurred only last week, soon floods the road to a considerable depth with a delectable mixture of storm-water, sea-water, and sewage. But the most astonishing performance of the Deal Council has been in connection with the decision of the South Eastern Railway Company to build a new hotel—a project which cannot fail to be of great benefit to the town. The Company made it a condition that the Corporation should lower and extend the southern sewage outfall which enters the sea opposite Deal Castle and the site of the proposed hotel. They advertised for tenders for this work, but the lowest sent in (£650) was about £200 above the surveyor's estimate, and it came from a firm which had had a difference with the Council as to whether a Councillor, who is a builder, should be allowed (as alleged) to break the building by-laws while builders who are not Councillors are compelled to observe them. The Council rejected this tender, and instructed the surveyor, much against his will, to carry out the work himself. The contractors were to have been bound under a penalty to complete the job by the beginning of June. In the hands of municipal workmen only about a third of it had been finished by the middle of July, though no less than £500 had been spent. It was then decided to suspend operations till next February, and, as a consequence, about half the amount already expended will be absolutely thrown away. Undoubtedly the blame for this miserable fiasco rests, not so much upon the surveyor as upon the parties who imposed the task upon him; for common sense ought to have told them that a job of this kind was not likely to be carried out so economically and expeditiously by an official without the requisite organisation and equipment as by an experienced firm of contractors. Such incidents are not encouraging to the ratepayers of Deal; but it is of no use to cry over spilt milk or wasted funds. What they have to do now is to see that the Corporation set to work immediately and effectively upon the drainage scheme, which is indispensable if Deal is to take the flourishing position as a seaside resort which lies before it. A scheme to place the drainage of Deal beyond reproach will, I understand, involve an expenditure of £20,000, and the sooner it is executed the better it will be for the town. Westgate-on-Sea has lately had impressed upon it the desirability of a similar undertaking, and it has promptly resolved to incur the necessary outlay. Deal will be well advised to follow this example.

Whenever I allude to the shortcomings of a watering-place, I am forthwith credited with a sinister desire to spoil its season, or, if that is over, to damage its prospects for the next year. Hotel proprietors and lodging-house keepers overwhelm me with reproaches and protests. I quite expect that this will happen again on the present occasion. But really no accusation could be more unjust. I have no wish—why should I have?—to damage this, that, or the other town. On the contrary, I consider that a little plain speaking in these matters is the most valuable service that can be rendered to any place afflicted with somnolent or crass-headed civic rulers. Such criticism by an outsider is, too, all the more useful when, as often happens, local journalists are afraid to say a word which will affront the powers that be. There was a good instance of the general attitude of the local papers in these cases at Eastbourne a few weeks back. A visitor chanced to see in the Sussex Daily News two or three lines recording the fact that the Ratepayers' Association had been in correspondence with the Waterworks Company respecting the quality of the water. This correspondence had been read at a meeting of the Association, and the Eastbourne papers were turned to for full particulars. But not even a word did they contain on this subject, though the other business of the meeting was reported at length. Again, within the past few days I have received a letter from a resident at Southport in reference to the condition of the Marine Lake, which has to compensate visitors for the coyness of the ocean in keeping at a very respectable distance from the Promenade. My informant asserts that the sea water in this lake is positively rank and green from putrescence, and he complains that on this and other subjects requiring the attention of the Corporation, the local Press is dumb. Wherever it is adopted, this policy of veiling over defects and hushing up scandals affecting the health and amenities of a holiday resort is doomed to failure. The idea that any fault in the water supply or danger from the drainage can be hidden is, on the face of it, absurd, for over and above the fact that all journals are, fortunately, not disposed to join in a conspiracy of silence, the news is spread everywhere by dissatisfied visitors—and visitors, it must be borne in mind, are a good deal more exacting nowadays than they were a few years ago. It is, therefore, the height of folly for seaside municipalities to palter with questions of this kind; and I venture to repeat to them, in all friendliness, the advice I have given before—Remember Worthing.

NOTES FROM PARIS.

CONTINENTAL v. ENGLISH BEAUTIES.

I FEAR that England's fame as the mother of incomparably fair daughters must go down now that it is tested by Continental competition. Was it given to her by Englishmen, unused to any but English faces, and bigoted to the type to which they were accustomed? The English, doubtless, are a motley nation, and offer a vast number of types. But the best types bear a family likeness to the most ordinary. What first strikes me on landing in England is the prevalence of small, expressionless eyes—most of them wanting in perception. The mouths are also unfinished, and made more for eating than for sweet social converse or eloquence. The teeth are too much shown. It may be objected that one chiefly sees railway porters and newspaper boys on landing-piers. True. But one also sees the well-dressed idlers who have come to see the steamer arrive.

One very much notices the difference between English and French physiognomies in the different British settlements dotted over France. The English eye, when sunny and straightforward, is very beautiful. But it is generally a man's eye. The best eyes that I saw in English heads in Brittany were sailors'. I have seen there charming English girls, and many who would have been pretty were it not for the stereotyped smile they cultivate. The smile should be fleeting as a pleasant impression. Once it gets fixed it disfigures.

It has been remarked to me that the most successful hostesses in London are of motley race. If one inquires into their ancestry one finds there were Irish or Welsh or Scotch or French or Jews in their family tree. The pure Anglo-Saxon is, on week-days as well as Sundays, too apt to dissent to be amiable or accommodating. He or she is apt to take fads for principles. Sometimes she may deem a touch of rudeness the proof of sterling virtues, in herself of course. I fancy the loveliest girls England can boast of are, like the nice hostesses, of motley race. Those are whom I have come across here. I never saw a rarer beauty than one who dropped down a few Sundays back at Saint Servan. She turned out to be the daughter of a Bristol Crœsus and a Scotch lady. Here were her points—a faultless figure, a face perfect in outline, and the finish of nostrils, eyelids, lips, and chin. The skin was of the rose-petal texture, and had a delicate bloom, and as to the eyes, they had a pensive cast and were beautifully set. Their colour was light blue with a tinge of violet that came and went. A poet might be pardoned for expatiating on the lashes, the lids, the pencilled brows, and a forehead that looked intellectual. There was clustering hair of the frank nut-brown tinge that showed innocence of dye. This vision of loveliness turned the congregation from their devotions. The dress of some of the gentlemen with her pointed to a yachting excursion. In point, of fact they had all crossed over in a yacht from Cowes to enjoy sea-coolness.

Talking of motley blood as conducive to beauty, are not the Jersey Lily, the Princess of Pless, the newly-married Mrs. Allhusen, Lady Edward Cecil, the Misses Agar, of Highworth, Wiltshire, examples? Most of the supremely triumphant beauties who have shone in Paris since it has become a cosmopolis were or are of mixed race.

One of those flowers of miscegenation, Mme. Burdeau, has just died. She was a native of Chili, but had an Irish grandmother. The power of her face to light up was infinite. She had good features, but too wide a mouth. It, however, expanded into gracious, good-natured smiles that afforded glimpses of snowy teeth. The skin was dark and bilious; but one did not see this at night, when the eyes gleamed, blazed, languished, and gave point, or feeling, to her most insignificant words. Not that she played with her eyes, for the whole face was reposeful. Mme. Burdeau was the link that united the Panamist and South Railway parties, after power departed from them, to the Left Centre or Moderate. Twined together, they both made a strong combination. Burdeau became President of the Chamber, and Casimir Perier President of the Republic. Her salon became the happy hunting-ground of politicians and place-hunters when Burdeau was Minister of Marine. She dressed with taste, had a flexible, harmonious figure that did credit to her dress-maker, and liked to crowd on diamonds. Somehow she never seemed in crowding them on to overstep the limits of good taste. Her life was, in some respects, a romance. She married in Chili the eldest son of a Lyons seamstress. He had gone there as a commercial traveller. In his journeys from Lyons to Paris and back he had sometimes travelled with M. Pierre Casimir Perier, who also went out to Chili, but as a diplomat. The Burdeau ménage and M. Perier became intimate friends. French are so glad to meet French abroad. M. Pierre Casimir Perier died, and so did M. Burdeau, the commercial traveller. Madame Burdeau came to France with a son. She seemed to her brother-in-law and to M. Casimir Perier, to whom she brought news of his brother, interesting as Andromache. The former was bound in law and honour to support her, for she was destitute. He provided for her by making her his wife. He was then a professor in a lyceum. Her friendship with the Periers opened wide horizons on one side. On the other side Burdeau was related to old Grippo, a Deputy for Lyons, who, from being a Revolutionist, had crystallised into a prosperous bourgeois. It was Grippo who, when an exile, wove at Spitalfields the Queen's coronation robes and wedding dress. Burdeau was a man of great talent, and felt he had a fortune in his brains, so he threw up his professorship, became the editor of a morning and of an evening paper—the Globe and Soir—and distinguished himself by his campaign against the Bank of France. He continued it, after he became a Deputy, to make a sudden change of front. Setting out to denounce, he ended, like Balaam, by blessing. Drumont accused him of attacking to obtain blackmail. Burdeau brought an action for libel, which ended in a sensational trial. The jury were talked round in their private room by the judge. He promised a nominal sentence, but gave one year. The judgment was lengthy, and to be published in extenso in an endless number of papers at advertisement rates. Between publication, fine, and damages, the convict had £4,000 to pay.

Honour was preserved. Burdeau, as champion of the Bank of France's endangered monopoly, went on rising by leaps and bounds. He controlled all exchequer bills in the Chamber. Almighty financial barons were glad to attend Mme. Burdeau's soirées. Politics, art, literature, war, the Navy, crowded in after them. Royalists were glad to pay homage to a Chilian lady who knew nothing of French politics, and was très femme. She was of the Directory type, and a fin de siècle Empress Josephine. At the Marine Ministry, the naval officers pressed round her to declare Chili a Heaven upon earth and the habitation of angels. She saw they wanted promotion, and pleaded for them with her husband. The greatest height was the Presidency of the Chamber of Deputies. Mme. Burdeau surpassed at the Petit Bourbon in elegance and suave gracefulness the semi-Creole Mme. Henri Schneider, who reigned there after the Duchesse de Morny. The reign of Mme. Burdeau was marked by the revival of chinchilla as a fashionable fur. Burdeau died from the effects of nervous tension and obligatory dinners of trent-six plats. He breathed his last breath in the arms of Casimir Perier, then President of the Republic, whose grief was overpowering. He attended the State funeral voted to his friend, and insisted on the settlement of an annuity on the widow and her family. The conditions were startling. Mme. Burdeau was to get 12,000 francs a year for life. On her death that income was to go in equal shares to her three children. When any child died, the others were to inherit his or her share, and the last survivor was to come into all. One of the children was only five years old. The eldest, a son of Burdeau's brother, was aged 18. The upshot of the wrangle in Committee was that Burdeau's mother—the old dressmaker, in whom nobody had been interested—was to get 3,000 francs a year, and Mme. Burdeau 9,000 francs; and if she died while her sons were minors they were to have 3,000 francs a year each to the age of 21. The daughter was to have 3,000 francs also until her marriage. Mme. Burdeau had not a Frenchwoman's energy. She collapsed under disaster; fretted, moped, pined, repined, and showed signs of liver complaint. The world does not want our sighs or tears. The best thing one can do in affliction is to bury one's sorrow in one's own breast. The fair-weather friends deserted her; the fast friends were too few to afford her company. Her last illness was most painful. The newspaper announcement of an operation did not bring callers to her door. Her children only were in attendance. On her death a paid nurse was fetched to watch beside the body. An agent de la préfecture, says a daily paper, is en permanence in the death chamber.

Why? Some surmise to watch the diamonds, and others to get hold of the papers left by Burdeau. If they got into the wrong hands, a fatal blow might be given to some who now fill tip-top places and are about to see the Czar and Czarina face to face. M. Brisson called to leave a card at the mortuary house. M. and Mme. Casimir Perier have also been there, and written their names in the visitors' book.

LETTER FROM THE LINKMAN.

A GLASS-HOUSE under water, dear Lady Betty, is the latest luxury. A rich man, who has a large lake upon his estate, recently caused it to be drained, and in the deepest part he has had a house built which contains three rooms—a smoking-room, a dining-room, and a servant's waiting-room. The framework of the house is of iron, and the floor is stone resting upon a foundation of concrete. The sides and the roof, however, are entirely composed of very thick plate-glass. There is a passage under the water from the boat-house to the glass-house, and air is obtained through large clumps of artificial water-lilies which rest upon the surface of the lake. It is indescribably pleasant to sit in one of the rooms upon a warm day; the air is very cool, there is no sound to be heard, and it is especially interesting to watch the fish swimming around, attracted by the glare of the electric lights. This is decidedly a new luxury. The house and the passage, moreover, cost comparatively little to build.

The millionaire to whom this belongs now contemplates carrying out a more ambitious scheme. He has upon his estate almost two square miles of forest. This tract of land he intends to enclose from the inside—first, by a wide and deep trench; second, by a strong iron railing; and third, by a high and massive stone wall. He will then turn loose into this enclosure every sort of wild animal that he can procure—lions, tigers, elephants, and every other kind of beast—in order to ascertain if they can live at large in this climate, and without unduly interfering with each other. There is to be a network of underground passages leading to numerous stone towers which are to be erected at different places in the forest, and from these he intends to watch in safety the animals, and to study their habits when in a comparatively wild state. This, too, appears to be a new idea.

* * * * *

It has for some years been generally imagined that Mr. Henry Austin Lee was destined to succeed the late Sir Joseph Crowe as British Commercial Attaché to Europe—with the exception of Russia—to reside in Paris. Mr. Lee has been appointed to the post. Sir Joseph received £1,300 a year as salary, with an allowance of £200 a year for house rent, making a total of £1,500 per annum. As Mr. Austin Lee already receives £500 a year as Resident Director, in Paris, of the Suez Canal Company, the Treasury has cut the salary down to £1,000 a year, which, considering the magnitude of the duties he will have to perform, and the importance of the post, appears to be an altogether inadequate sum.

Mr. Henry Austin Lee has considerable experience of commercial affairs, is acquainted with a large number of useful people throughout Europe, and speaks several languages. He has, morever, been training himself for the post for some years. The appointment is considered to be a judicious one by those who are the best qualified to pronounce an opinion upon the matter.

There seems, however, to be an impression that there should be more than one British Commercial Attaché to Europe in consequence of the enormous interests that this country has at stake there. The German Government has appointed a diplomatist as commercial representative to reside at Milan, and considering the success of German competition during recent years, it might be a wise course were our Government to improve upon this new departure.

. . . . .

A report has reached London from Paris that Mr. Henry Howard has been appointed to succeed Sir Horace Rumbold as British Minister at the Hague. It was generally supposed that the Hague would be given either to Mr. Edmund Phipps or to Sir Charles Scott. Mr. Howard is a diplomatist who can be relied upon with absolute confidence. A man possessed of a strong character, very popular, respected by all, a hard, an intelligent, and an experienced worker, he is one of the best men we have in the Service.

. . . . .

A well-known Austrian Ambassador recently described the qualities which a diplomatist should possess to attain success as follows:—"Il faut avoir des pensées sérieuses avec des manières frivoles."

. . . . .

The authorities at home are beginning to appreciate the wisdom of the old adage, that he gives twice who gives quickly. It is only a few days ago that Mr. Michael Herbert, who was then Chargé d'Affaires at Constantinople in the absence of Sir Philip Currie, distinguished himself at the time of the riots. The Queen has created Mr. Herbert a Companion of the Bath—a recognition of his decisive and courageous conduct to which he is fully entitled. On the other hand, many officers and men who fought for their country some years ago have not yet received the rewards which they expect the War Office to distribute.—Believe me to be, very truly yours,

MARMADUKE.

SPORTING NOTES.

IT is an undeniable fact that many of the acting members of the Jockey Club are among the most determined and bigoted enemies of every species of change, however obviously desirable. The most salutary reforms have always been forced upon the Newmarket authorities, who show no zeal except in manufacturing devices for increasing the Jockey Club revenue at the expense of the owners, who are regarded there as veritable milch cows in breeches. When the conditions of the Cesarewitch and the Cambridgeshire were originally published, I pointed out the folly and absurdity of the arrangement by which a penalty is inflicted for winning any trumpery handicap, whereas half-a-dozen weight-for-age stakes can be carried off without any extra weight being incurred. Can anything be more extravagantly ridiculous than to make the winner of a handicap value £450 carry 10 lb. extra, whereas there is no penalty for the winner of the Jockey Club Stakes of £10,000? We see the result of this fatuity in the case of Laodamia, who, on Friday, cantered away with the Doncaster Cup; and, in my opinion, the Cesarewitch is a mere question of health for Mr. Fulton's mare, with 8 st. 8 lb. to carry. The one doubt was whether or not Laodamia can stay, and as her stamina has been most palpably demonstrated in a fast-run race over a Cup course, she ought to win the Cesarewitch. It is impossible for any one to frame an accurate estimate of this mare's true form, but when well she is probably a very much better animal than even the majority of her admirers suspect. Laodamia gave the public a taste of her quality at Derby last November, when she won the Cup very easily indeed, having 8 st. 9 lb. on her back, from a good field of twenty-one. It must never be forgotten, moreover, that as a three-year-old, with 8 st. 9 lb., Laodamia ran so forward in the Cambridgeshire (when Molly Morgan won) that she would have been placed if she had been ridden out. Some idea of her prospects of success may be gained from a consideration of the fact that at Doncaster she gave 2 lb. and a hollow beating to Dinna Forget, who in the Cesarewitch is made to give her 4 lb., and he has accepted with this weight. If Major Egerton's estimate is correct, Laodamia in the Cesarewitch means Dinna

Forget at about 8 st. 1 lb. I have no idea of Count Schomberg having any chance with Laodamia at 4 lb., and she ought to hold Portmarnock perfectly safe. Arlequin will probably be the best of the French lot. I hear that Portmarnock may not stand a thorough preparation.

There are thirty-five acceptances for the Duke of York Handicap, but Thais has paid forfeit, although the Prince of Wales's filly appeared to have a much better chance in that race than in the Cambridgeshire. This handicap ought to be a real good thing for Ghislaine, who could not stay the course when she was so heavily backed for the Manchester Cup, but here the distance will just suit her. Lord William Beresford's mare should win at Kempton if she is all right.

If Laodamia misses the Cesarewitch she will very likely make amends by winning the Cambridgeshire in which she has 8 st. 9 lb. to carry, the same weight which she bore so well three years ago. Shaddock will be the Duke of Westminster's best for this handicap, and whatever beats him will win. I have no fancy for Thais, who certainly will not beat Shaddock at even weights, and there are half-a-dozen others which hold her safe. The French are sure to have a dangerous candidate for this race.

Persimmon defeated Labrador cleverly enough, and the best judges thought that the winner had 7 lb. in hand. In estimating the value of a beating in a long race it must always be remembered (as Admiral Rous used to say) that the weight would have to be given away from start to finish, but this consideration is usually overlooked, and the same allowance is made for a length beating in a mile and a half race as in a T.Y.C. scramble. Persimmon might appear to have 10 lb. in hand (as some people assert) when he passed the winning post, but then where would he have been if he had been carrying that 10 lb. throughout the race? St. Frusquin would no doubt have won the Leger easily enough if he had come to the post all right, and it is very lucky for Persimmon that Shaddock was not engaged in the race.

Lord Rosebery, who was mentioned in some of the papers as having been at Doncaster last week, was really in the remote wilds of Sutherlandshire. Velasquez cantered away from Berzak for the Champagne Stakes, and it was a good performance, as the American colt has been going remarkably well of late, and he is believed to have made a vast improvement. He had been galloped with Sandia, who won the Clumber Plate in a trot. Velasquez is a grand colt, and it is about two years since his high promise when a foal was first mentioned in Truth. After Velasquez, the best two-year-old that ran at Doncaster was Galtee More, who won the Rous Plate very easily, and Monterey had no chance with him.

It was pleasant to see Roquebrune come out after her long retirement and win the Zetland Stakes (literally "losing" East Sheen), as she had been again stopped in her work. This was her first appearance since her successful début in last year's New Stakes. If Roquebrune stands a winding-up preparation she is well in for the Cambridgeshire with 7 st. 9 lb., as she is at present capable of great improvement; but it would be idiotic to venture a farthing on the filly until she is seen at the post, as she might any day have again to be stopped.

Persimmon's next race will be the Jockey Club Stakes of £10,000 on October 1, and he seems to hold the four-year-olds (Sir Visto, Troon, Kirkconnel, and Laveno) all safe enough. Regret cannot beat Persimmon on the running at Newmarket in July, and the Prince of Wales's colt will now meet him on 6 lb. better terms. The Leger showed that Persimmon is quite 6 lb. in front of Labrador, who will probably represent the Duke of Westminster in the Jockey Club Stakes. If Persimmon should be beaten, his conqueror will be either Knight of the Thistle or Bay Ronald, as he has to give 17 lb. to the former and 20 lb. to Mr. Brassey's colt. Persimmon is afterwards in the Lowther Stakes and in the Limekiln Stakes, but he will not run for either race, and I hear that after October 1 his next apppearance will be in the Ascot Cup, and he will afterwards run for the Eclipse Stakes of £10,000 at Sandown Park. The writers who have been jargoning about the probability of Persimmon winning all next year's £10,000 stakes (like Isinglass in 1894) would have done well to verify their references, and, having taken that precaution, they would have discovered that the Prince of Wales's colt is not entered for either the Princess of Wales Stakes or the Jockey Club Stakes—a most inexplicable oversight, considering how highly he was estimated as a yearling.

I hear that Lord Rosebery intends to run Chelandry for the £3,000 Stakes at Kempton Park on October 9, and Velasquez will be reserved for the Middle Park Plate. Velasquez has incurred the extreme penalty of 10 lb. for the Kempton Park race, and so also has Chelandry, but the filly will have only 5 lb. extra to carry, as she is entitled to a breeding allowance of 5 lb. It is said that Mr. Houldsworth's Rapallo (own brother to Orvieto and Laveno) is in reserve for this race, and so also is Lord Cadogan's Lowly, who ran Blue Water to a head at Goodwood with 6 lb. the best of the weights, while Lord Alington is reported to have a smart colt in Vesuvian, by Royal Hampton out of Fuse.

There will be racing next week at Kempton Park (one day), Hurst Park (one day), Pontefract and Windsor (each two days), and at Manchester, where the meeting is absurdly dragged over three days, although two days would be amply sufficient for it. All the best horses are now in reserve for Kempton Park October Meeting, Newmarket, and the "back end" fixtures. There are seventy-three acceptances for the Autumn Breeders' Foal Plate of £1,000 at Manchester, and I shall plump for the representative of Prince Soltykoff.

T. Brown, who died suddenly the other day, was one of the leading trainers at Newmarket for some years. Brown won the Middle Park Plate three times—with Newry in 1873, Plebeian in 1874, and Beaudesert in 1879. The odd thing was that neither horse ever won a race afterwards, to which it may be added that they were also very lucky winners. Newry never would have won the Middle Park Plate if Ecossais had started, and Plebeian's race ought unquestionably to have been secured by Galopin, who was execrably ridden. Brown was the owner of Marden, and for several years that horse must have brought him in a comfortable income. Brown's most successful time was about 1873, when he trained a large stud belonging to the late Mr. Graham, the owner of Formosa, Sabinus, and other good horses. He afterwards trained for the late Lord Anglesey, who was so lucky as to sell Beaudesert for 5,000 gs. after the Middle Park Plate, and the horse never ran again!

There was a tremendous plunge on Americus for the Portland Plate, as this horse had been well tried with Sandia, who on Tuesday had defeated Ugly for the Clumber Plate, so it really did seem a good thing. Americus looked like winning easily until Grig caught him. Twelve months ago, when St. Frusquin was tried for the Kempton Park race and the Middle Park Plate, he was equal to Grig at even weights.

Drip won the Great Yorkshire Handicap very easily for Lord Durham, and this was really the good thing of the week. I do not see Chit Chat's chance for the Autumn Handicaps after her defeat in this race. Drip is a useful and improving filly, and she ought to win some races at Newmarket during the autumn meetings, notably the St. Leger on October 2, and she seems to have a good chance of carrying off the Newmarket Stakes, as Canterbury Pilgrim is not entered, and Helm could not give Lord Durham's filly 5 lb. over such a course as the T.M.M.

Bournemouth is very much fancied for the Cesarewitch and Cambridgeshire, and he is remarkably well in when his spring form at Liverpool is considered in connection with the recent performances of Drip, Melange, and Symington. He, however, is a very awkward horse, for a boy to ride, and I cannot recommend any one to back him with such a light weight. Troon has been an early popular fancy for the Autumn Handicaps, and he has accepted for the Kempton Park race, but the Duke of Portland's horse will probably run at Ayr this week, and he is fairly well in for the principal handicap at that meeting. His Reverence has also been left in for the Duke of York Handicap, but putting aside Ghislane, I am disposed to regard Kirkconnel as being the pick of the lot in that race, and he will win for a certainty on his best form, but he cannot now be trusted if it comes to a severe finish.

The withdrawal of Sir Visto from the Cesarewitch has caused much surprise, as he was generally thought to be very well in. Sir Visto has accepted both for the Duke of York Handicap and for the Cambridgeshire, but he certainly lacks the speed for the shorter race, in which a good start is essential, as I fancy that Lord Rosebery's horse is not a ready beginner. Sir Visto might run well for the Cambridgeshire, particularly if the ground is heavy.

King Hampton was sent last week from Newmarket to Doncaster, where he had several engagements, but he returned without having run. This colt is sure to win a good handicap in the course of the autumn, and he will carry off the £2,000 race at Manchester on the 26th, if that event is his "journey." As to King Hampton's expensive stable companion, Red Heart, he has accepted for the Cambridgeshire, but the horse has been doing no work for some time past, and I hear that it is very doubtful whether he will stand a preparation.

Many of last week's yearling sales were simply farcical, being at once melancholy, ludicrous, and most tiresome. The idiotic and pernicious practice of buying in stock is becoming much more general, and Messrs. Tattersall really ought to make it a condition that the reserve price is always to be announced as each lot comes into the ring, which would save a great deal of time and trouble, and it would really be a far better arrangement for the breeders themselves. Many of the yearlings had been fattened up for sale in a preposterous fashion, and might have been intended for market like prize bullocks. An enormous number were sent back, and many which did change hands were sold at a considerable loss to their breeders. The success of the week was achieved by Mr. Platt, of the Bruntwood Stud, who sold his lot of twelve for 16,940 gs. being an average of 1,410 gs. each. The satisfactory result of the sale proves clearly enough the advantage of sending mares only to the most fashionable and successful sires, as five of the lot were by Kendal, three by St. Simon, and three by St. Serf. The yearlings by Orme were much admired, and realised high prices, and another of the Duke of Westminster's horses, Blue Green (now at Mr. Sneyd's Keele Stud), is evidently going to be a most successful sire. The sale of the Sledmere yearlings was a grievous failure, as out of the nine which were offered only three changed hands, and they realised only 1,580 gs. altogether.

This was a doleful contrast to last year, when Sir Tatton Sykes obtained 14,650 gs. for eight. The reserves were extravagantly high, for it is simply fantastical to ask 5,000 gs. for any yearling that ever was foaled, and when buying in once begins on such occasions there is a general blight, and people simply cease to bid. Lord William Bentinck was said to have refused a private offer of 1,500 gs. for his filly by St. Simon out of Lady Superior, but the highest bid at the sale was 1,350 gs., and he would have done well to let her go at that remunerative price, but no doubt the Duke of Portland will take her off his brother's hands, as he is always ready to treat for St. Simon's stock; he has just arranged to lease from his neighbour at Rufford, Lord Savile, that horse's filly foal out of Cissy. The wise breeders are those who get rid of their yearlings on any terms sooner than be at the expense of taking them home again, for they must inevitably in the end be either sold for whatever they will fetch, or else put into training, which is ruinous work.

The outcome of the recent quoit match at Cheltenham between England and Wales renders it probable that an association will be organised to foster the game. Some such body is needed both for quoits and bowls. Both are excellent games, and they are too little appreciated by the majority of people. The consequence is one has only the vagnest notion of what the maximum or minimum weight of a quoit should be. Then, too, the length of the pitch varies in different places. Some of the players in the recent game were handicapped by having a pitch of a length different to that to which they were as a rule accustomed. Bowls are more generally dallied with than quoits. They do not cut up the lawn. But one shudders to think of the miserable spheres that are sold as bowls. There is no uniformity either in weight or bias, and it would as often as not be possible to play just as exciting a game with croquet balls as with some bowls. The rules are contained in a box, and certainly do not tend to make the game exciting. Most men know how to pick a bat or a lawn-tennis racquet, but they choose a set of bowls that are utter impossibilities to play with. The fact that such things can so easily be put on the market shows how little the game is really understood.

The Southern Committee of the Amateur Athletic Association has practically suspended Crossland, and so another good runner has been relegated to the limbo of professionalism. At the same time, no inkling is given of the clubs who paid these moneys and made the men professionals. It would be just as well if Bradley and others were to take the matter in their own hands and publish the names of the persons who gave them moneys. The conduct of the Southern Committee of the A.A.A. does not reflect credit on that body. It makes a perfect fetish of amateurism. It seeks vainly to make men run for the sake of sport alone. It is utterly ridiculous to suppose that men do this when a ten-pound prize is awarded for a handicap, and the value of the prize for a scratch race is practically unlimited. The articles given are of such a character as to be utterly useless to the class of persons who are the recipients. The consequence is the prize goes to the pawnbroker. The runners themselves cannot afford out of their own pockets the amounts required for entrance fees, travelling expenses and training. They must therefore pawn and bet or have their expenses paid. It is impossible to expect anything else, and inasmuch as these practices obtain surreptitiously, they cannot have anything but a bad influence on athletics. The old idea of an amateur was one who took part in sport for sport's sake and paid all his expenses. The advent of gate-money has changed all that. In cricket and in football the amateur receives his expenses, but he is not paid for his time. In athletics the prize was a memento of success, and nothing more. Originally a cup or medal, it is now silver plate, a dressing bag, or a clock. Something useful was required. This was the first step down from the old ideal. The next step is payment in cash. But then, it is said, you do away with amateurism. That may be so, and one would not be sorry to see the present impossible definition done away with. The only true distinction between an amateur and professional at the present time is that the one does and the other does not make sport his livelihood, and does not take part in it for the purposes of gain, while at the same time he cannot afford to be out of pocket over it. It would be obviously impossible for the amateur to compete in athletics with the professional. An organisation is necessary to look after the interests of the former. This has been the function of the A.A.A. Now, it is hard to understand the difference between giving an article which can be pawned for two or three pounds and giving that amount in cash. There certainly appears to be a prospect of a healthier condition of athletics if cash prizes of an amount not larger than three pounds were permitted. A great deal of subterfuge and humbug would be done away with. I cannot see that a man would be running less for the sake of sport than he is at present. It is no more derogatory to take money for winning a race than it is to be paid for handicapping a race event or reporting an athletic meeting. The premium on pot-hunting would not be any greater than it is at present. The reform is essentially a radical one and the natural outcome of the change in the class of prizes offered at athletic meetings. The obstacle in the way is a big one, and it is the conservative clinging to an impossible definition of amateurism, which is itself only the creation of recent years. The late Sir John Astley was avowedly a professional runner. But he was not one whit the less respected for having been so, and I am under the impression that the president of the A.A.A., Sir Richard Webster, A.G., himself took prizes in hard cash when he started athletics at Cambridge.

With regard to the London Football Association and its repudiation of professional football, a correspondent is very angry because the action it has decided on has received the approval of my football correspondent. He considers that Southern professionalism has been snubbed, and he says a lot of hard things about Old Boys' Clubs and their tours and expenses. I have already dealt with what I conceive to be the present distinction between an amateur and a professional, and some governing body required to look after amateur interests. No one can deny that the general standard of professional football is considerably higher than that shown by amateurs, but professionalism is not the be-all and end-all of football. Commercial football is quite able to look after its own interests. Its advocates assert that the amateurs cannot meet them on equal terms. Surely they are too good sportsmen to suggest that those who are not paid for playing should not have an organisation in London to look after their own interests and to raise the standard of play amongst the great unpaid as far as possible.

Considering the weather, those in authority at Eastbourne did remarkably well to get through their annual lawn tennis tournament as well as they did. The entries were in point of quality excellent, and the play was in many cases better than that seen at Wimbledon. In the ladies' singles there were some very interesting encounters. Miss Cooper who as lady champion had to owe fifteen, after a great fight with Miss Pickering succumbed to Miss Austin, who just pulled the second set out of the fire. In the gentlemen's singles Barlow and Greville had a hard game, although the wet ground spoiled the play to a great extent. In the next round Barlow had nearly as hard a fight with H. Baddeley, who was left in to fight his brother, the holder. The winner was very fortunate in that Hillyard, his opponent in the previous round, retired. But he and Smith beat the Allens in the doubles.

Without taking upon myself to answer cycling questions, in reply to a correspondent I may say that single tube tires are not satisfactory. They are a trouble to mend, and in country lanes a thorn is very fatal to them.

MAMMON.

From MOSES MOSS to BENJAMIN BOSS.

Sunday.

MY DEAR BEN,—After all, the old Stock Exchange superstition, that a nineteen day account is generally unlucky, has received some kind of confirmation, as the mid-September account is ending under the influence of two scares which have caused an important setback throughout the markets. It is true that the movement has been altogether exaggerated, and that the various rumours which have been utilised to depress quotations proved false; but as the scares came so close to the fortnightly settlement the "bears" had it, for a time, all their own way.

Exaggerated Scares.

The advance in the Bank rate gave a shock to the markets, as it was not generally expected, and hardly were quotations recovering again when a crop of political and other rumours caused a fresh slump. Most of the reports which were so assiduously set about by the syndicate of liars were unfounded. To begin with, it was stated that a very large sum in gold would be withdrawn from the Bank on Saturday for the States. That further amounts will be shipped for that destination is more than probable; but on Saturday at least only £100,000 was so withdrawn. It is more than likely that certain measures will be taken to exercise pressure upon the Sultan in connection with the recent massacres in Constantinople; but as the Collective Note addressed by the European Powers to the Sultan shows, the various Governments are acting in concert. At all events, there is no reason for the extraordinary nervousness which has been displayed by the Stock Exchange, while the fall in prices, especially in Home Rails, is altogether excessive. That Consols and other high-class investments would temporarily be affected by the rise in the value of money is obvious; in fact, such is still the dearth of this kind of security that I have for some time felt indisposed to advise my readers to invest at the present level. It seems to me that if we are going to have dearer money, the decline should in the first instance occur in such securities as yield a small return. Why, of all others, the South African mining market should be affected, in which the account is shown to be a very moderate one, while prices are at a low level and the industry is flourishing again, it is difficult to understand; and I quite anticipate a strong recovery as soon as the political cobwebs are brushed aside. The West Australian market has not, so far, suffered to any extent, and such is the strength of the undercurrent in this department, and so favourable is the outlook on the goldfields, that I still consider the position very hopeful. Yankee Rails have fluctuated. There has been a strong disposition in Wall-street to put up prices, counteracted on this side by the recent spasms. Political developments in the States have, however, of late been more favourable, and the large influx of gold from this country has improved the financial position. A moderate advance in Argentines, engineered on speculative grounds, has partly been lost again; but South Americans, on the whole, have displayed a firm front. The Dunlop settlement has passed off very satisfactorily, the only disappointed persons being apparently the "Bears."

The Spasm in Home Rails.

Although sales have preponderated during the past account, so that the amounts of stock carried speculatively must have been considerably reduced, the monetary and political scares have caused a further fall in quotations, which is undoubtedly exaggerated. I am not surprised at some of the Prior Charges having given way, as these had been hoisted to quite an impossible level, as I have frequently explained, and the first breath of a rise in the Money Market would naturally have this effect. The stocks of the Heavy lines, too, might be considered a little top-heavy, although the traffics continue on a most satisfactory scale, and there is no doubt that a general improvement in trade is in progress. With a settlement of the troubles in the Clyde shipbuilding yards, moreover, labour troubles have for the time being disappeared from the scene. As regards last week's traffics, they show again an increase of £54,602 on the leading British lines, and this satisfactory result comes in most instances on the top of considerable increases in 1895 as against 1894. The fall in the stocks of the Southern Passenger lines seems to be much less justified than that in the Heavies. Not only are the traffics of both the Brighton and South-Eastern lines excellent, but the South-Eastern revenue statement just issued shows that the gross increase of £9,000 has worked out to £8,000 net, thus showing a large and continued saving in expenses. I have already explained that Brighton "A" is the best-yielding stock in the active list, and that the South-Eastern is the most progressive. Under the circumstances, I anticipate a sharp recovery both in Brighton "A" and Dover "A." The latter had, in fact, already risen to over 105, when the money scare came over the market, causing a general reaction. The Scotch stocks have also been knocked down in the slump, although the settlement of the Scotch labour troubles is more particularly in their favour, and the announcement of a dividend at the rate of 1 per cent. on North British Deferred, with a larger carry-forward, against no dividend last year, was quite as satisfactory as had been anticipated. Then again, look at the splendid traffics of these lines. The Caledonian traffic return for the past week showed an increase of £3,721, that of the North British an increase of £5,029 over the corresponding week of 1895, which had already shown increases of £20,300 and £8,700 respectively over 1894. The total increase of the Caledonian for the first six weeks of the current half-year already reaches £13,000, and that of the North British £15,000. Under all these circumstances, Caledonian Deferred Ordinary ("Coras") and North British Deferred cannot fail to mark a sharp recovery the moment the market recovers from the unreasonable scare.

The Prospects of Districts.

An important advance in Metropolitan Districts calls for special notice. All kinds of explanations have been vouchsafed with reference to the cause of the large purchases which have been made apparently for influential and well-informed quarters; and, while there may be something in the report of certain proposed extensions, I have reason for stating that the chief feature is the practical adoption of a scheme under which a new line is to be constructed underneath the present District Railway between the Mansion House station and Earl's-court, which would be chiefly available for an express service between the City and the West End. In this way the journey from the Mansion House station to Earl's-court should be made in about eight minutes, while Charing Cross, the only intermediate station at which it is proposed to stop, could be reached from the City in a couple of minutes. Electric traction would, of course, be adopted, and in view of the improvements which have been recently devised in this, and of the fact that no houses or land need be appropriated, the actual cost of the work is estimated at only £800,000, a sum which must be considered trifling as compared with the large accession of traffic which an express service would undoubtedly command. Respecting the history of the present development, I may state that some two years ago a well-known reorganiser was deputed by important shareholders to approach the Board of the District Railway, with the view to carrying out certain reforms. The Board's answer was, "We have already discussed these reforms (which included cheap mid-day fares), and know their possibilities; but we cannot move until we have relieved the traffic between Earl's Court and the Mansion House, which is now strained to its utmost capacity, and leaves no scope for development. You must first show us how this can be done!" This statement was straightforward, and remained unanswerable until this new electric express train scheme made its appearance. Its advantages are obvious, for it is estimated by trustworthy railway authorities that an additional tenth of the capital will double the earning capacity of the District Company. Engineers, Directors, and financiers have been consulted, and no difficulties have manifested themselves. It is estimated that 2½ years will be required for the completion of the work, which is not long considering the great possibilities that are opened up. For example, it is calculated that, if the new electric express train is only used by one-fifth of the passengers it can accommodate, the increased gain in the traffic to the railway would be £4,000 per week, or one-half of the present weekly takings. Deducting £34,000 as arrears of interest on the Preference stock, and £32,000 more interest at the rate of 4 per cent. on the amount of new capital required, viz., £800,000, a balance would be available sufficient to pay an easy 6 per cent. to the long-suffering investors in Districts, many of whom are represented by the Metropolitan District Railway Shareholders' Association, which has been formed for the purpose of financing and carrying out the new scheme. There is thus great hope for shareholders in the District, who will probably refuse to part with their stock at anything like present prices, once they realise the importance of the change which is coming about. Already the buying movement during the last few days showed that there was very little stock in the market, as the price rose sharply to 30⅞, while on Friday several of the jobbers were unable to balance their books even at the higher prices. On Saturday, of course, the general scare came to their rescue; but I have said enough to show that we may have some very sensational developments in Districts in the near future; and selling "Bears" of this stock should prove a very dangerous pastime, some of the insiders talking of the stock doubling its price.

Yankee Rails Fluctuating.

There has been a good deal of animation in Yankee Rails during the past week, and while the success of the Democrats in the Arkansas State elections was ignored as having been a foregone conclusion, favourable developments, both in politics and otherwise, have not been wanting. Many of the most influential Democrats are joining the "gold plank" section, and the brutal frankness of Bryan's utterances is alienating from him the sympathies of most of those who have something to lose in the States. Can there be anything more stupid than his remark, "That he believed the gold standard to be a conspiracy against the human race, and that he would as soon join the ranks of the goldites as enlist in an army marching to attack his home and destroy his family!" This kind of rant can only injure his own prospects. Favourable events were the publication of the Milwaukee Directors' report and accounts, showing very favourable results. The surplus on June 30, after payment of the dividends, was 2,173,000 dols., against a deficit of 402,000 dols. in the previous year. The usual dividend of 2 dols. on the Ordinary stock has since been announced, and Milwaukee at one time touched 73¼, from which there has been a reaction to 72, the New York market being, of course, indirectly affected by the spasms in London. Louisville at one time rose to 43¼, but fresh attacks have since caused a relapse to 41⅝. It seems that the "Bear" account in Louisville is growing very unwieldly now, and, on the other hand, the American Courts have ordered the restoration of rates amongst the Southern Roads, thus removing, at least temporarily, the chief source of weakness. More gold will, undoubtedly, have to be shipped to New York, as large exports of produce are being made to Europe, and the indiscriminate sales of American stocks on this side have ceased. There has, on the contrary, been a moderate buying movement for European account. It is, of course, still impossible to say how the November elections for the Presidency will pass off, but Bryan's chances are evidently lessening, a fact which will probably be brought into prominence in the near future by the result of the coming Maine State Elections. Those of my readers who have, on my advice, bought Milwaukee, Louisville, Denver Prefs., &c., at the recent low level, and sold on the important advances which were at one time established, will have done well; and in the present state of affairs satisfactory results may still be obtained by purchases on distinct reactions, if followed up by sales on recoveries. Investors should certainly stick to their stocks, and also to American Railroad Gold Bonds, some of which are already marking important improvements. Canadian Pacifics and Grand Trunks have fluctuated with the Yankee market, and are likely to do so in the near future. Both lines must depend so much upon the prosperity or otherwise of the United States, that the Presidential election is for them also a most important influence.

Foreigners and South Americans.

The Continental Bourses have upon the whole taken the rise in the English Bank-rate and the political rumours which have been set about here with a good deal of equanimity. Personally, I should think that such stocks as Spanish and Italians are the most dangerous of all, considering the impecuniosity of these states, and the insurrections in Cuba and the Philippine Islands which Spain has to face; but Paris is expecting the Czar next month, and the Paris Bourse will do its best to put on a smiling countenance for the present. The Czar's journey, moreover, is a guarantee of peace for the immediate future, and might lead to satisfactory results, especially if, as is rumoured, he is to meet the Marquis of Salisbury on his visit to the Queen. That sooner or later an end must be put to Turkish misrule is undoubted, and the recent Constantinople massacres should prove another nail in the Sultan's coffin. Probably the matter will end in another puppet being put in his place; and the strong tone of the last Collective Note of the Powers seems to show that they are at last united in their action against the Porte. It may be necessary to make a naval demonstration in Turkish waters, but even that would by no means presage an European war such as the Stock Exchange anticipates with every little fresh development in Constantinople. The fact is that none of the Powers, and Russia least of all, desire such a struggle. The wonder to me is that Turks keep up as well as they do, although Ottoman Banks have dropped to 11½, partly, perhaps, owing to the fall in South Africans, in which this institution is heavily engaged. A sharp rally in Argentine Government stocks has been nipped in the bud by the recent spasms. Although the position in Argentina is, upon the whole, satisfactory, the gold premium in Buenos Ayres has rebounded sharply to 181. In the present unsettled state of affairs, it may be advisable to go slowly even in speculation in South Americans. Uruguay bonds have eased off, owing to the dismal surroundings. The rumour which had been mentioned in the Financial News of an impending fresh Chilian loan, and which had been set afloat by a Paris financial paper, has been contradicted by Messrs. Rothschild, who state that the loan of four millions issued by them four months ago for railway works has furnished Chili with ample funds, and that no fresh application to the European market is in contemplation. On the other hand, another instalment of the Chinese Goverment Loan of six millions, being the balance of a total amount of sixteen millions, has just been offered for public subscription in England and Germany; but it has not come out at an opportune moment. After a temporary reaction, Mexican Sixes are recovering again, the Old Loan being quoted at 93. In Peruvian Corporation stocks the recent rise has been pretty well maintained, more especially in the Debentures. There have been a number of advances in Argentine Railway stocks, but these have also eased off again in sympathy with the other markets.

Champagne.—Périnet & Fils' Cuvée Réservée. Vintages 1884, 1887, and 1889, are of unrivalled quality and highly recommended for present consumption. Of all Wine Merchants.

Depression in the Kaffir Circus.

It should matter very little in the case of South African Gold Mining shares whether the Bank rate is 2 or 3 per cent., and the set-back which ensued on the rise in the Bank rate was therefore absurd, as was the further slump caused by the political rumours on Saturday, which unfortunately came just on the first day of the mining carry-over, when everybody was busy with the account, and no one wanted to do business. The rates, however, were no higher than at the last settlement, ranging from 7 to 8 per cent., and the amount of stock to be arranged proved very moderate, as was in fact to be expected, considering the realisations on a large scale which have of late taken place. The only really unfavourable feature was the wretched result of the Geldenhuis Deep crushing for August. That, however, had only a bearing on the Deep Levels, the prospects of which I have always criticised; and it was absurd to put down the shares of the outcrop mines on the Geldenhuis disappointment. On the other hand, there was the splendid output of the Witwatersrand mines for August, which established a fresh record, the total yield being 212,429 oz., against 203,873 oz. for July, an increase of 8,556 oz. over the previous record figure, which was that for July. Only one new mine fell into line, viz., the Bonanza, with a yield of 3,800 oz., so that an increase of 4,750 oz. was shown on the mines which were already producing. It is curious that this excellent result should have been altogether disregarded by the market. Sooner or later, however, the increasing output must tell, especially if a few doubtful points should be disposed of. To begin with, the pacification of Charterland is not proceeding so quickly as we had been led to suppose, and it will evidently take some time before the Matabele will give in. This, of course, ought only to affect Chartered shares and other Rhodesian ventures; but, unfortunately, it has an indirect bearing upon Transvaal stocks, which are in many cases in the hands of the same holders. An active interchange of opinions is also going on between the men largely interested in the South African mining industry and the Transvaal Government concerning the proposed Sunday Closing Bill. The Volksraad and even President Kruger are in favour of it under the influence of the Puritan spirit which animates them; but in the case of the mines, the stoppage of the batteries on Sundays would by no means abolish Sunday labour, while increasing the difficulties of working. It would be necessary to employ a special staff to guard the gold on the plates. To my personal knowledge strong representations are being made by Mr. J. B. Robinson and other South African magnates, and it is hoped that the objectionable Bill will be withdrawn. Another drawback, viz., that of the inadequate service of the Netherlands Railway, more especially with regard to the carriage of coal, is being gradually remedied; but it had an effect upon some of the August crushings. Once these few points are settled, we may expect the mining industry on the Witwatersrand to mark a further important improvement. The effects of the Liquor Bill are already proving most beneficial, and will greatly cheapen native labour; while, on the other hand, relations between the Boers and the Uitlanders are becoming more amicable from week to week. Whenever the mining market gets over the unreasonable scare, I shall look for an important rally in all the sound Transvaal gold mining and land shares. It is unnecessary for me to again single out the various shares which may be considered most suitable for investment. By consulting last week's remarks my readers will be able to make suitable purchases of the leading Barnato, Robinson, and other mines. It is curious that Randfontein should have fallen as low as 2$\frac{13}{16}$, but I have not the slightest doubt that they will promptly recover from this setback. With reference to the amalgamation of the Barnato Bank and other properties with the Johannesburg Consolidated Investment Corporation, I have received a good many inquiries as to why Mr. B. I. Barnato does not make some sort of public statement of the position and prospects. As he has only recently returned from the Transvaal he is fully posted with reference to his various properties, and it is to my personal knowledge that he would indeed be able to give some most encouraging information both concerning his financial enterprises and the condition of his mines. The shareholders in the various undertakings with which his firm are associated would undoubtedly appreciate some such public statement, and I put it to Mr. Barnato that he should accede to the wish of the investors who have placed such large sums into these enterprises. A statement which I made in last week's issue with regard to the Woodstock (Transvaal)—viz., that Mr. Roberts, the manager of the Woodstock, had also taken over the management of the Sheba Hill—has brought me a communication conveying an absolute contradiction, so that my informant was evidently wrong in his assertion. The services of Mr. Roberts are exclusively secured for the management of the Woodstock Mine, and all he has done with reference to the Sheba Hill has been to make a report on it. I have received further communications with reference to the Abercorn Reefs, Limited, and the Umtoli Gold Reefs, Limited; but I have done all in my power to help the shareholders, and it is now for them to appoint a Committee to act for them. Barberton Consolidated Goldfields, to which I drew attention last week, have been in fair demand at from 1½ to 1¾, which shows a slight advance. Transvaal Exploring shares have been steady throughout the slump at 1. Advices from the mines of the African Gold Properties are stated to be satisfactory, with the exception of the information from the Apollo Mine, which appears to be somewhat disappointing. The danger of speculating in such gambling counters as East Rands and Rand Mines, Limited, is shown by the important declines which have taken place since last settlement, the making-up price of East Rands being only $7\frac{1}{4}$ as against $8\frac{1}{8}$ a fortnight ago. Rand Mines stood at $31\frac{1}{2}$ a fortnight ago, and now are $30\frac{1}{2}$. From the unfortunate Lisbon-Berlyn Company the news is to hand that transport is unobtainable, and that the cyanide process is stopped. This again points to the correctness of the view which I have taken, that these shares should be left alone. Diamond shares have also participated in the general set-back, De Beers having fallen to $29\frac{3}{4}$, New Jagersfontein to $10\frac{1}{16}$; but this relapse will probably be recovered again. Consolidated Leicester Diamond shares have remained firm at $1\frac{15}{16}$, and New Bultfontein are quoted $1\frac{3}{4}$.

Golden West Australia.

The event of the week in matters West Australian has been the opening of the railway from Coolgardie to Kalgoorlie, which was celebrated by a banquet at Kalgoorlie, at which some very important statements were made. Sir Gerard Smith, the Governor, openly admitted on this occasion that he had been a strong opponent of the Bill for providing water on the Coolgardie goldfields; but he had changed his views, and was now fully convinced that the scheme was necessary. Sir John Forrest, the Premier, again mentioned the water scheme, which will now receive the Governor's assent, and therefore become law. In this connection, and in view of the strong criticisms which have been passed upon the scheme, it will be useful to refer to the debate on the second reading of the Bill, the proceedings of which are to hand by the last mail. The more detailed statements made on that occasion by Sir John Forrest clearly showed that the proposals were both feasible and reasonable; and the very fact that the Legislative Assembly endorsed the Government Bill without even a division goes a long way to show that the recent criticisms were ill-founded. The fact is that for household purposes, and for the growing wants of the mining industry, enormous quantities of water will have to be provided; and the scheme which is now to be carried out is applicable to the future rather than to the present. In three years' time, when it is to be completed, there will probably be thousands of stamps at work, when it will be most important to have an adequate water supply. The extension of the railway to Kalgoorlie marks, of course, another important step in advance, and Sir John Forrest stated at Kalgoorlie that the Government intended to introduce Bills authorising extensions of the line to Menzies and White Feather in a few days' time. Thus the iron horse will in future assist in the development of the great Coolgardie goldfield. Mr. George Gray, who has certainly a very extensive experience of gold mining in various parts of the world, appears to have made the enthusiastic statement on that occasion "that Kalgoorlie was the greatest goldfield in the world." As Mr. Gray's chief interests centre in that field, it is perhaps natural that he should say so, but the excellent results obtained at Hannan's certainly back his opinion up. The London market has shown a good deal of irregularity, but upon the whole the West Australian department has displayed much greater strength than the Kaffir Circus. I stated last week that one of the first groups to show a revival would be the Whitaker Wright group, and so it has happened. It is true that Lake View Consols shares have reacted to $7\frac{3}{4}$, but this is due merely to the fact that a block of shares held in Colonial hands came upon the market, for which insiders did not propose to pay the top price. This block is being gradually absorbed, and directly the balance has found a resting-place in strong hands, we shall see a sharp rebound. Developments at the mine are so favourable in every respect, and the future is so thoroughly assured, that shareholders may safely hold tight to this mine. In Hannan's Golden Group and Golden Treasure the movement which I predicted is already in progress. Groups are quoted $1\frac{5}{8}$, and Treasures $1\frac{3}{4}$, and I shall expect to see them at 2 in a very short time. Most of the other mining shares of the Whitaker Wright group are also firmer, and I fully confirm my remarks of a week ago with reference to Wealth of Nations, which will doubtless recover from the effects of the "Bear" raid which has been directed against them. There is absolutely no truth in the rumours that developments as regards the reef were unsatisfactory. These reports are mere efforts of imagination of the syndicate of liars, which has been rather active in the West Australian market of late, as is also shown by the utterly unfounded rumours which have recently been current regarding Hampton Plains. The only difficulty as regards the Wealth of Nations is the water trouble, and that is being got over. Shareholders should not allow themselves to be frightened out of their holdings. Mainland Consols are quoted 3, Paddington Consols $1\frac{13}{16}$, and both West Australian Exploring and Finance and London and Globe Finance shares are preparing for an important upward movement. They have already advanced to $4\frac{9}{16}$—$4\frac{5}{8}$, and I am informed on the best authority that in view of the enormous profits which have been made by these Companies, and of further flotations the success of which has already been ensured, we may look for a rise of a pound or two in these shares. Many of my readers have bought these shares at half the present price, and still I say to them, buy more! From information which I have recently gathered, greater activity may be looked for in the Stoneham group. It is true that West Australian Goldfields are quoted only at $8\frac{3}{4}$, and Hampton Plains at $4\frac{5}{16}$; but the low price of the latter shares is entirely due to false rumours which have been circulated that this Company would not make any distribution. I think the men who are responsible for these "Bear" rumours will be very much surprised when they see the Directors' report and accounts. Not only will a cash dividend be paid, but a further large distribution may be looked for. I am not at liberty to disclose the exact nature of this distribution, but it will be such as to warrant a very important rise in the shares, and holders should on no account part with any. On the contrary, if they are able to take the shares up, they should buy more to average. The meeting of shareholders will take place on October 1. I hear, by the way, that the Hampton Plains Company will very generously grant a site for a hospital to contain some thirty-six beds, which is about to be erected by the West Australian Trading Corporation at the initiation of Mr. L. H. Goodman. This West Australian Gold District Trading Corporation, I may mention, appears to be doing an excellent business, the Ordinary shares standing close to 2, while the Founders' shares, after touching 100, are quoted at 90. This improvement appears to be chiefly justified by the trading results, but if the new Ore Atomic Reduction Process, in which the Company is interested, should prove the success it is reported to be, one might look for some sensational developments. The Hannan's King (Brownhill) is a promising mine, and considerable inquiry has been noticeable for the shares of late. Burbanks have very fairly maintained the recent advance to $2\frac{3}{8}$, the developments at the mine fully justifying the rise. Burbank's North at one time rose to $\frac{3}{8}$ premium, and are still quoted $\frac{1}{4}$ premium; while Burbank's Consols stand at $\frac{1}{8}$ to $\frac{1}{4}$ premium. I explained last week the promising position of these mines. The special settlement of Burbank's North shares takes place this time, and it is found that the market is short of the stock. This mine will commence crushing on the 21st inst., and a further improvement in the shares is anticipated when the results of the crushings are made known. A considerable business has been transacted in Explorers' Syndicate shares at $\frac{1}{4}$ to $\frac{3}{8}$ premium, and some demand has also been experienced for Explorers' Finance Founders' shares at £20 to £25. The favourable position of the Gladiator mine has already been referred to by me, and these shares are a good purchase at about 1. I am informed that Professor Nicholas has left for the Gladiator mine, and that important cable news may be received any day. The statement made by the chairman of the Great Reef at the meeting held during the week was of a satisfactory character, and the promise that this Company will be winning gold before Christmas will, if fulfilled, be the best proof of the energy of the management. With reference to Sherlaw's Gold Mine, locally known as the Perseverance, it is stated that the rock drills are the first on the Field, and that they will save considerable expense, more than repaying their cost in a few months. The stamps of the Company were hung up for a time owing to want of water; but there is now at least 100,000 gallons in the main reservoir, and crushing has recommenced. King of the West shares show an exceptionally strong market, and the property is opening out well. The group of the West Australian Joint-Stock Trust has shown great strength, and the Ordinary shares of the Trust have advanced to $3\frac{15}{16}$ premium on rumours of a coming very favourable interim report. It is stated by the Secretary of the West Australian Minerals and Finance Company and the Lady Montefiore United Gold Mines, Limited, that Sir John W. Campbell is no longer a Director of these concerns. I should think that the Secretary should also state what was the reason of this resignation. At Wednesday's meeting of the Hannan's Kalgoorlie Proprietary Company very favourable statements were made by Mr. Herbert Moir, who recently had an opportunity of inspecting the mine. The railway is now close to the properties owned by the Company, concerning which very satisfactory news has been received. I should like to know what Mr. T. H. Myring and Lord Fingall have to say about the Londonderry. It is really time that the long-promised Exploration Company was started, and this extraordinary delay is most trying for the shareholders. An opportunity is at present being afforded to subscribe privately for the Brownhill Great Southern, Limited, a Company which has been formed with a capital of £160,000 to acquire a property in a very rich part of the Hannan's Goldfield, immediately adjoining the celebrated Hannan's Brownhill Mine, and surrounded by other valuable properties. The area is about twenty-four acres, and, according to the reports of the experts, a reef has been struck which, although only 4 ft. wide at first, soon opened out to a great body 18 ft. thick; while the mine generally is described as altogether similar to the famous Hannan's Brownhill Mine. It is expected that these shares will come into active request in the near future. A sharp recovery in Jokers of $\frac{5}{16}$ to $2\frac{7}{16}$ has also been a feature. Under the circumstances, Joker Proprietary, now quoted from $\frac{1}{8}$ to $\frac{1}{4}$ premium, should, too, come into notice. The West Australian Venture Syndicate has issued a detailed report concerning several of its properties, notably those at Mount Sir Samuel (East Murchison), Crœsus Consols (Hannan's), Good Luck (Hannan's), Carlisle and Cumberland Group (Yalgoo), Craig-y-Nos (Menzies), Victoria United Block (Melville), and Warparilla (Bardoc). The news, especially from Mount Sir Samuel, seems very satisfactory. Western Australia will soon be the rendezvous of a further number of eminent engineers. That distinguished expert, Mr. James Mactear, is leaving for the colony in order to study and advise upon the application of the cyanide and other processes for the most judicious treatment of West Australian ores. Mr. George Leake, the leader of the West Australian Opposition, is returning by this week's mail steamer to Perth. Having made a very intelligent study of matters over here as far as they have a bearing upon Western Australia, the knowledge which he has acquired should prove of great service in his political sphere. The British Dominions, Limited, has been registered with a capital of £250,000 in £1 shares. Its programme is apparently wider than I have noticed in the case of any similar Company, covering everything from the purchase of mines to the leasing and settling of land in any part of the British possessions or in any other part of the world. The construction of rail and tram roads, piers, wharves, docks, gas, water, electric and hydraulic works, &c., are also included in its programme, and one of my correspondents ventures the remark that "though apparently comprehensive and proposing to ransack the earth and its industries, the prospectus provides for the return of nothing into the soil, and that no power is taken as to thunderstorms and tombstones." The Directors of this gigantic Corporation, moreover, whose qualification is to be £200, will receive only £220 a year as salary, and the Chairman only £500 per annum for superintending what is practically the exploitation of the whole world. This is indeed modest! With reference to my remarks concerning the efforts made by a Mr. W. Hunt, of 116, Earlsfield-road, Wandsworth, London, S.W., to unload privately the shares of the Transvaal-Westralian Gold Concessions, Limited, I have received the following communication from the Secretary of that Company:—

> The attention of my Board has been drawn to the remarks made by you in your last issue under the head of "Golden West Australia," and I am instructed to inform you that my Directors became aware of Mr. Hunt's efforts to sell the shares of this Company in July last when they deemed it their duty to send a circular with regard thereto (which I now enclose for your perusal) to each shareholder. You will see by the terms of the circular that the Directors were not then, and, I may add, they are not now, in any way connected with Mr. Hunt, neither have they sold nor attempted to sell directly or indirectly a single share in this Company. This can be proved by the Register of Shareholders, which is open to your inspection.

I am glad to hear that the Directors of the Transvaal-Westralian Gold Concessions, Limited, are not in any way connected with Mr. Hunt, and that they have not sold any shares in their Company. It would now be interesting to know the motive of Mr. Hunt's action, especially if, as the Directors state in their circular, he has been securing the Company's shares in considerable quantities. I should like to know why Ivanhoe dropped suddenly from $9\frac{3}{8}$ to $8\frac{1}{2}$. Does this mean that the next crushing will be bad?

Indian, New Zealand, and Other Mines.

The Indian section has also shared in the general depression; but the downward movements have not been by any means important, and very excellent dividend estimates are current with reference to Mysore, some going for as much as 7s. per share. Coromandel are easier, which is not surprising, after the recent rise; and I hope that my readers who had handsome profits took my hint to clear them. They could with advantage put the money into Goldfields of Mysore, or some cheap share such as Kadur Mysore, concerning which some favourable statements have recently been made. These shares are now quoted 7s. 6d. In Australian mines other than West Australians, Aladdin's Lamp have declared another dividend of 2s. per share, and the price is quoted $2\frac{13}{16}$, which is very low considering the splendid return in dividends. In Charters Towers mines, New Queen have improved; but Mount Lyell have lost as much as $\frac{5}{8}$, and New Chum (Bendigo) 3s. Wentworth and Mount Morgan are also easier, and so are Broken Hill Proprietary at $2\frac{7}{16}$. Amongst Croydon mines a better tone has prevailed, in consequence of the splendid results yielded by the Croydon Consols. I say again that if this were a West Australian or South African mine the shares would stand at least at 15s., and not at 7s. 3d.; and I take much credit to myself for having been able to advise investment in these shares from 4s. upwards. I am receiving a great many inquiries from shareholders as to whether they should sell now and take their profit or not. I must leave this decision entirely to them. They must know themselves how splendid the developments at the mine have been of late, and that a much higher price would be justified. There is, moreover, the circumstance that the Australian vendors have sold out the balance of their shares, so that the market is ready for a rise. They would, in fact, have advanced long ago, had it not been for these blocks of shares. Australian vendors are an uncomfortable lot to deal with, as has been frequently illustrated in the West Australian market. They are only happy if they can get hold of the cash, and most of the strong West Australian groups are now making a point of buying properties only for cash, as the tying-up of shares does not seem to answer in these cases. And so it has been with the Croydon Consols. Some other Croydon mines are now coming to the fore, concerning which I shall have more to say next week. Amongst New Zealand mines there have been very irregular dealings. Consolidated Goldfields of New Zealand and Woodstock are firmer; while Komata Reefs, Royal Oak, and Kathleen Crown are lower. In the general foreign sections business is at low ebb. De Lamar, La Yesca, and Montana are lower; while Linares and Santa Anna have improved. The feature in this market is still the Grand Central, the rich Mexican mine to which I have already referred, and the shares in which readers of TRUTH who acted on my first advice were able to acquire at $1\frac{5}{8}$. They have now risen to $2\frac{11}{16}$, on the statement that the rich discovery has also been made at the lower level. The Cripple Creek Exploitation Syndicate announce that warrants for a dividend of 25 per cent. have been posted. This enterprise has apparently been doing exceedingly well.

New Enterprises and Issues.

The prospectuses of the following new Companies and Issues have been placed before the public during the past week:—

The Dumont Coffee Company, Limited.—This Company has been formed for the purpose of acquiring, carrying on, and further developing the Coffee Estates of the Companhia Agricola Fazenda Dumont, situate in the districts of Ribeirao Preto and Parapa Panema, in the State of Sao Paolo, United States of Brazil. The capital is fixed at £800,000.

The property acquired by this Company consists of 110,000 acres, of which 13,000 are now under coffee cultivation, returning good profits. There are about 20,000 acres available for extending coffee fields, and the remainder is suitable for the cultivation of sugar, tobacco, &c. The estate is well equipped with everything necessary to carry on a large business, and seems to be a promising industrial venture.

The Golden Leases Mining Company, Limited.—This Company has been formed for the purpose of acquiring and working two gold mining properties known as the Golden Ridge and Golden Ridge Extended, of about twenty-four acres in extent, situated one mile from the Railway Station at Coolgardie. The capital is £120,000 in shares of £1 each.

This Company is issued under the auspices of The Mining, Transport, and General Finance Company, who have guaranteed the whole of the present issue. The property has been favourably reported upon by several mining experts, and from its situation should prove a fair Mining venture.

Lindsay's Find Proprietary, Limited.—This Company is formed to acquire and develop eight gold-mining leases, having an area of 173 acres, with a water area of 5 acres additional, known as Lindsay's Find, about 82 miles from Kalgoorlie, Western Australia. The capital is £200,000 in £1 shares, of which amount £50,000 is to be reserved as working capital.

Robinson and Price, Limited.—This Company has been formed to acquire the undertaking and assets of Robinson and Price, Limited, cycle manufacturers, Liverpool. The share capital is £50,000.

For high-falutin' this prospectus takes the cake, more especially the paragraph relating to the quality of the cycles manufactured by this (in London) comparatively unknown firm. The capital is excessive, and the issue had better be left to those who appreciate and can see the "exquisite finish unseen in any other make."

Lavington Evans & Co., Limited.—This Company is formed with a capital of £120,000 in shares, and 300 Four and a Half per Cent. First Morgage Debentures of £10 each, to acquire the Chalkwell Tannery, Sittingbourne, Kent, carried on under the style of Lavington, Evans, & Co.

The promoters of this issue are evidently believers in the adage "There is nothing like leather," but whether this belief will extend to the investing public, who are asked to subscribe an excessive amount for a business in which there is keen competition, I very much doubt. There is little in the prospectus to recommend it.

The New Options Company, Limited.—This Company has been formed to take over the assets (except uncalled capital, gold, and cash in hand) of the New Options Syndicate, Limited, in liquidation. The capital asked is £50,000 in £1 shares.

This is a very curious Finance Company. They ask for £50,000 to take over the assets of a Company in liquidation, which appear to be very speculative. Forty thousand fully-paid shares are to be handed over to the vendors—viz., the Company in liquidation—leaving only £10,000 to work and develop the properties. This is very much like asking Peter to pay Paul.

My Letter Box.

The following are replies to inquiries from various correspondents:—

Government, &c., Bonds.

A. W. B.—No, these City bonds are not included in the Argentine Unification Scheme. G.G.—No option but to hold. After all, there may be a chance of partial resumption of payments.

Banks, Trusts, and Financial.

Imprudent.—Syndicate touts, whose system is pernicious. Have nothing to do with them. You cannot be a regular reader of TRUTH, or else you would know better. North Lowestoft.—With reference to your proposed investment of £15,000 trust money, don't you think that now money is hardening it would be wise to wait a little in case gilt-edged investments give way? As regards the other £5,000, you would have to tell me just what kind of security you require. L. H.—You must tell me what class of investment you require. Inquirer, Ipswich.—1. I do not advise dealings with this outside concern. You should deal through a member of the Stock Exchange. 2. No, you cannot deal with a jobber direct. 3. Undoubtedly in your case cash payments would be advisable. A. E., Great Malvern.—Have nothing to do with these Syndicate touts. K. B. A.—1. You cannot get this return at present in high-class stocks, and it might be advisable to wait for a possible decline on the rise in the value of money. 2. Try the Scottish Widows' Fund. Anxious.—I advise you to have nothing to do with the "Perfection" system of H. Miller, 14, Holborn, E.C. Vectis.—Syndicate trusts, whose system I have frequently condemned. Give them a wide berth. Anonymous.—It is to be regretted that you do not read TRUTH regularly, or else you would not have sent the money to F. Tarrant & Co. Hogarth Road.—I do not think very favourably of the Colonial concern, but the Debentures should be fairly secured. No reason why you should not leave the money on deposit at Harrod's Stores.

Home Rails.

R. N. O.—I maintain my favourable opinion of Dover "A." There is no reason why the rise in the Bank rate should interfere with them. At their present rate of progress they will yield $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. for the whole year on the investment at to-day's price. Cosmos.—3s. 9d. per cent.; £2 new on every £100 stock.

American and Foreign Rails.

W. T. H.—I have already expressed my opinion on the unfounded rumours concerning the Louisville and Nashville in last week's issue. R. F.—Amongst the better class American stocks, Milwaukee, Louisville and Denver Prefs. are the most promising. E. F., Basingstoke.—Keep your American Railroad Gold Bonds. There is no such fear. Page.—Hold these bonds for a recovery.

Mining Shares.

Kangaroo.—1. The Glencairn and Glenluce amalgamation is very promising. 2. Yes, but I have already said so a fortnight ago. 3. Yes, as to the first named, but I do not like the African Coal concern at all, and have always said so. C. M. R.—1. It is quite correct that the London and Globe Finance Company has made a lot of money. 2. I do not care for Deccans or the other stock. Sekondi.—1 and 2. The Financial News. 3. No good publication available. 4. None lately. R. L.—A fair mining risk. I cannot reply by letter. Cambria.—Some of the Sydney papers write in an absurdly hostile manner on the West Australian Goldfields. It is pure and stupid jealousy. Hold your Mining shares, they are well selected. Firby.—The new "Johnnies" should be taken. The Transvaal Company in question has not yet paid a dividend this year. Langlaagte Estate and Glencairns should suit you. Markato.—Not yet, but both West Australian Exploring and Finance and London and Globe Finance should be held for an important rise. Polonius.—No, you are not entitled to the bonus. Randfontein were ex-rights long ago. Bert.—No option but to hold. They will recover. Nollive.—Good West Australian Companies. Hold. Glenlyn.—In the case of such reconstructions, it is generally wisest to join rather than to forfeit your shares, and you had better do so in this instance, if you can afford it. Nag.—Yes, I look for an early rise in Hannan's Golden Treasure and Hannan's Golden Group. Nos. 1 to 3 are fair mining risks. Sly-go.—I almost think you had better do so. Frederick.—It is a moot point and as your liability was not stated to be limited to the cover, I do not think you would win. But why do you deal with such outside men? Linen.—Hardly any value. Write to the Secretary. Aline Chaletson.—There is nothing against the West Australian Share Corporation, as far as I know. Perplexity.—1. Hold London and Continental Investment shares. 2. No reason to sell. 3. Yes. Sophocles.—Hold. I have not heard anything about the dividend prospects yet. Acti.—No, leave them alone. Weh.—Hold Lake View Consols. Naval Gunner.—No option but to hold all your mining shares Nos. 1-6. This is not the time to sell. W. S. J.—Hold Golden River Quesnelle for a rise. Advices are favourable. Rover.—Certainly hold Hannan's King (Brownhill) for a further rise. F. A. M.—Hold Nos. 1-3. News concerning No. 1 is looked for shortly. J. P.—Good profits should generally be taken, although the mine is doing exceedingly well. Why not close half? 3. North Croydon

Consols are a fair purchase. Dennis, Glasgow.—(a). Hold. (b). No option but to hold these and (c), (d), and (e), but do not buy any more. A. Y. J.—No, I do not advise purchase of East Rand Extension. A. B.—Hold for a recovery. Ernest.—I do not think much of this Mexican mine. Hopeful.—1. You must take your own decision. 2. Hold Holcomb Valley Prefs. E. L.—Most of them are doubtful and badly selected. No option but to hold at present on the chance of a recovery. Greenhorn.—A mixed lot of mines, but hold at present. Anxious, Cork.—1. Both. 2. Yes, hold Hannan's King (Brownhill), for a further rise. 3. Not stated yet. 4. No. 5. No. Penny.—A. No. B. Hold Barnato Banks for a further rise. C. Yes. 4. At a good profit. Erne.—I should say that it would be advisable to join the reconstruction. G. A. W.—Hold for a recovery which is probable. Jess.—No reason to sell No. 1. No option but to hold Nos. 2 and 3. Dubio.—1. Hold for a further recovery. 2. Yes. 3. You have done right. Joseph.—A recovery in all these is probable. Q.—I dealt with No. 1 in last week's issue. 2. Yes. 3. Perhaps also as to No. 4. The shares No. 5 are recovering somewhat. 6. Yes. Cantab.—A fair mining risk. N. W.—1. Not yet. 2. Probably. Manor.—No option but to hold No. 1 for a rise. 2. Yes. Widow.—Certainly hold Nos. 1-4 for a rise. John G.—No option but to hold Nos. 1 to 4; do not, however, buy more. 5. These should recover. 6. I do not know. 7. A good investment. G. J. M.—Explorers Syndicate shares are promising, but I do not advise the sale of the other shares for the purpose of an exchange. G. L.—I must refer you to my letter which gives all the information you want. Mount Lyell seem high enough. A. Z., Guernsey.—Your best course will be to hold all your mining shares, Nos. 1 to 8, for an improvement, which is probable. Vecta.—Your mining shares, Nos. 1 to 4, should be held for a rise. I do not think so well of No. 6, but it would be better under present circumstances to keep these. The Argentine bonds (5) are likely to improve. Diamond.—You have a fair selection of West Australian mining shares, Nos. 1 to 11, and you should keep these. It is of no use making too many exchanges. Ceres.—You should act in accordance with the advice of the shareholders' committee. Sorry Yankee.—I maintain my favourable opinion of Barnato Banks and of the amalgamation scheme. G. C. Y.—You had better hold all your mining shares, Nos. 1-10, they will recover. W.A. Exploring and Finance and London and Globe are on the eve of a big rise. Traveller.—Yes, you should take up the new shares in the Barnato amalgamation. A. E. D.—Hold both Nos. 1 and 2. The new property of the Mackenzie looks well. W. J.—You are entitled to the Randfontein bonus. It is expected in London at the end of this month. Hold Buffelsdoorn for a further rise. Right.—Uruguay Government bonds should suit you. They yield upwards of 7 per cent. per annum, and the new loan is also secured on the Customs revenue. D. M. B.—1. No. 2. Yes. 3. I do not know anything special of the British Colonial Mining Corporation. It has evidently still its way to make. The other two Companies are said to be doing well. Veritas, Cork.—I do not like the Hall Mines. You can do better in the shares mentioned in my letter under "Golden West Australia." Tyke.—I do not agree with your view, but it is the Englishman's privilege to grumble. I think, however, that Mr. Barnato should now make a public statement of the position of his enterprises. Snapper.—Yes, the investment is admirable. Beginner, Lancashire.—Nos. 1 and 2 are fair mining risks. The Princess Royal is a promising West Australian mine. Dart.—1. You should communicate with the other shareholders. 2. I do not like Otto's Kopje, neither do I approve of the Coal Company. W. C. L. L.—The Lake View and Boulder Junction is a different mine. The other two are identical. 2. The Glencairn-Glenluce amalgamation is considered by the best authorities as favourable to the Glencairn. If you are a shareholder, the London agents will give you all the information you require. Gairloch.—No. 1 is very doubtful; Nos. 2-6 should be held for a recovery. Wellington.—I have already expressed a favourable opinion of the amalgamation in last week's issue. Hold "Johnnies." Certainly keep Langlaagte Star. W. A. M.—A fair mining risk, but no catch. Skelligs.—No option but to hold Torva Exploration, but I should not buy more. Nimrod.—An irresponsible outside broker's sheet. You should disregard such rubbish. W. W.—Central Exploration of W. A. should be held. They are temporarily neglected. Hold the other shares. The Wonderfontein water scheme is not taken au sérieux in Johannesburg Waterworks circles. East Fifer.—1. A fair mining risk. 2. Yes. See remarks concerning Lake View under "Golden West Australia." 3. Yes, take your handsome profit on Coromandel and buy Mysore Goldfields instead. 4. Not yet. Rhymney.—I have added your name to the list. I do not like Nuggets. They are quite high enough. The West Australia Mine is a fair mining risk. Rhoda.—You had better buy West Australian Exploring and Finance shares with the money at once. Verbena.—1. Yes. 2. Yes. 3. Hold Wealth of Nations. 4. Yes; this so-called Diamond mine is hopeless. 5. Yes, hold. E. D. P., Manchester.—I cannot reply by letter. You can easily make your selection of Gold Mining shares from my remarks under "Golden West Australia." C. B. T.—Have no anxiety concerning Lake View. The reaction is merely temporary. See remarks under "Golden West Australia." I cannot reply by letter. Navarino.—No option but to hold. Oyster.—No option but to hold the first-named shares, also Holcomb Valley. Croydon Consols are a first-rate investment. W. J. Swindon.—No option but to hold. The management is bad, but the mine is good. F. S., Teddington.—You are an unreasonable grumbler. Croydon Consols quite recently advanced to 7s. 6d., and it is a splendid mine, paying large dividends. What more do you want? Wealth of Nations should be held. You have not bought Lady Loch at that price on my advice. Halifax.—You need not join the reconstruction, but in that case your shares will be forfeited. Austral.—A fair mining risk. E. T. G.—I see no reason to sell your mining shares Nos. 1-5. The affairs of the Finance Corporation in question look better now. Zenopton.—1. Hold, but do not average yet. Hold Croydon Consols, they are worth much more than the present price. 3. No option but to hold. 4. Yes, especially Preece's Point. 5. Yes. Alpha, Galway.—The dividend was 2s. per share for the half-year ended June 31. R. L., Reading.—Yes, Hannan's King (Brownhill) are a good purchase. I cannot reply by letter. R. M., Townsend, A. R. A., W. M. C., C. W. H., Urgent.—See remarks in this week's issue concerning Abercorn Reefs and Umtoli Gold Reefs under the "Kaffir Circus."

Industrial Investments.

F. F. L.—I do not like Singer Cycle shares. There is, of course, no talk of a dividend yet. The special settlement is about to take place. Hew.—Yes, prospects of the French Dunlop Tyre Company are good. W. C. W.—Gordon Hotel and Spiers & Pond shares are good investments, but all these industrial stocks are already high up. Duped.—I do not like the Boudard Peveril Cycle Company at all. Why did you go into it? Josephine.—There is no such paper. You will have to take the official list of the Stock Exchange. K. H. C.—1. Some day. 2. Why did you go into such doubtful concerns as Pegamoid and Laverton? There is no market here for the shares. St. Helens.—I do not think much of the Brewery mentioned by you. Cycle.—1. I do not think much of them. 2. Possibly. 3. You must decide yourself. I never advised investment in Singer Cycle. Stirlingshire.—1. I do not like the Great Horseless Carriage Company at all, and have said so already ad nauseam. 2. Fair prospects if the capital subscribed proves sufficient. A. W. W.—No doubt the meeting of the Company will be fully attended. Nemo, Torquay.—I do not think much of this concern. The debentures are not gilt-edged. O. P.—I. My views are as follows:—1. No catch. 2. A fair investment. 3. Speculative. 4 and 5. Fair investments. II. You must decide yourself. III. The official list of the London Stock Exchange. IV. There is no useful book of the kind. Kew.—A promising Company. Dooars.—A fair investment. Somercotes.—No. H. E. T.—No market for the shares, which are no catch. G. M.—Nos. 1, 2, 5, and 6 are fair industrial investments. I do not care for the others. M. D.—I do not think much of this concern. It is very speculative. T. S. B.—I must confess that the Independent Theatre Society, which you say was turned into a Limited Liability Company, and has been declining ever since, has not yet come under my notice. You say that there has not been a single performance for more than a year, and I personally am surprised that you put money into such a scheme. C. W. H., Rotherham.—I cannot reply by letter. The document is returned. These Preference shares are a fair investment, but seem to be quite high enough for a colonial stock.

Mixed Investments.

A. C., Tirol.—1. I do not quite see that the provisions of your trust apply. Is the word Debentures mentioned? 2. Yes, you should apply for the new Johnnies shares. Bolive.—1. I do not advise the investment. 2. My opinion of French Dunlops is still favourable. Rex.—No reason to sell Chilians. 2. No fresh news available. 3. No reason to sell. 4. Not affected by the Unification scheme, but promising. G. F.—1. No, I do not advise purchase of St. John del Rey. 2. Hold Langlaagte Block B and Star. 3. I do not care for this share. Senorous.—Your broker's charge is not excessive. The investments are fairly promising. Montrose.—1. Sell Westralia, London, and Johannesburg shares if you can. 2. Randfontein should be held for an important advance. 3. Mynpacht. 4. Both are fair mining risks. 5. Hold. 6. No. Trojan.—A. Hold the Brewery shares. B. Yes. C. They are likely to recover. T. E. C.—1. You can buy the Barron Cigarette Machine Company's shares on the London Stock Exchange. 2. Hardly. 3. Hold the Argentine Railway Bonds. 4. No special reason to sell. Abergavenny.—Your investments No. 1—8 are well selected. Hold. Philatolus. 1. Yes, a first-class American Brewery. 2. A high-class institution. With the advance in the Bank rate, Bank shares look more promising. Clarendon—I do not advise selling a "Bear" of such stocks. H. M.—1. No. 2. It is, however, a promising mine. 3, Write to the secretary. 5. No. Roach.—You have done right to buy the new Uruguay bonds. Both No. 1 and 2 are promising investments. Lancastrian.—1. Yes, I still am in favour of North British. 2. Leave the Bulawayo Syndicate alone, notwithstanding the puffing Manchester circular. 3. A recovery is probable. C. J. W.—I. Your investments No. 1-7 are promising and should be held. You might easily avail yourself of an opportunity to get out of No. 8. II. Yes. III. No catch. IV. Hannans Golden Treasure is a most promising mine. V. Yes. Worry.—Sound investments of their kind. Hants.—There can be no objection to your selection under the circumstances. Leonidas.—Your selection of No. 1-4 is a very suitable one.

To Overcome Weakness.—Pepper's Quinine and Iron Tonic gives New Life, Appetite, Health, Strength, Energy. Cures Neuralgia, Indigestion, Pepper's Nerve Tonic. Debility. Kept everywhere.

Albert.—1. High enough. 2, You can find these mines under "Golden West Australia." 3, I cannot as a matter of principle, recommend stock brokers. 4, No. Vesta.—Hold No. 1. Every prospect of No. 2 and 3 recovering. I do not like the Campania mine, or the Beeston Tyre Rims (5). Do not hold No. 6 too long. H. W. Chester.—Yes. Gold.—1. A fair mining risk. 2. Promising. C. J. A.—1. No option. but to hold. 2. Hold. Saple.—1. I still hold a very favourable opinion of Langlaagte Building and Exploration shares. 2 and 3. Yes, hold these; also Urugnay. Kirckaldy.—Very promising American Railroad Bonds. G. H.—1. Hold Barnato Banks. 2. Yes. 3. Yes. 4. Decidedly. 5. Take an opportunity to sell. 6. I do not like these concerns at all. Hardup.—I explained the position of Wealth of Nations last week. You should try London and Globe Finance shares again. An important advance is expected. The Crown United is a fair mining risk. Some very favourable developments are taking place in Metropolitan Districts, as stated under "Home Rails," and these make this a very promising speculation. F. U.—The Croydon Consols Mine is doing splendidly and the shares are suitable for permanent investment. Yes, the other shares are promising, also Cycle Tubes. I do not think much of the last-mentioned shares. W. H. W.—1. Hold for the present. 2. Not particularly. 3. Yes, a promising speculation.

Various Investments.

The rise in the Bank rate has brought great comfort to the "Bears" of Consols, and a fall has now to be recorded of nearly 3 points, the lowest quotation having been 109⅝, from which a recovery to 110⅛ has since taken place. The advance in the Bank rate was distinctly a precautionary measure, which will ensure a large reserve being retained by the Bank of England, provided only that the present rate is made effective. I say distinctly that the Bank ought to adopt some measure, such as borrowing on Consols, in order to raise the rate in the outside market, as two and three months' bills are only quoted 1⅞, and short loans remain at 1 per cent. If this policy is not adopted, it may be necessary to raise the Bank rate to 3 per cent. Not that that would be anything to be dreaded, as we should probably have discount in the open market at about 2¼ to 2½ per cent., and that is not a rate to be feared by any legitimate operator or speculator. Some of the weak operators, in fact, have already been scared out by the last spasm in the market. What will be the future of Consols it is impossible to foretell. Some of the large sales were undoubtedly again made as a hedge against commitments in other stocks, and others were "Bear" sales on the absurd political rumours. A higher rate of discount would in itself justify a fall in Consols, but against this has to be set the Government purchases for the Sinking Fund and for the Savings' Bank. Silver has also relapsed in the general flurry, being ⅞ lower for the week at 30d., while Rupee paper has given way 1 to 63⅛. Colonial Government stocks have commenced to ease off, and if money should further rise in value, we must certainly look for a reaction in these and in Corporation stocks, as well as in the Prior Charges of Home Railways, which are at extreme prices. A 3 per cent. Bank rate, on the other hand, should not affect the more speculative and progressive Home Railway stocks or the Mining markets, and generally it is quite time that the second and third-class stocks should approach a little more to the quotations of the first-class securities. Nitrate Rails have again reacted to 6⅞, but Nitrate-producing shares have been steady. In the Cycle share market, Dunlop Deferred have displayed a strong tone, and have only eased off during the last day or two to 1 9/16, probably on the rumours of litigation against the promoters of the new Company—which appear to be, however, very far-fetched. Cycles Tubes are firm at 1, Humber Extensions at 1⅜, Beestons at 4½, Grapplers at 1 1/16. In Mexican Rails a distinct rally has taken place on the report, which seems to be well founded, that a pooling arrangement will again be brought about between the different lines. The First Prefs. have thereupon advanced to 70½. Who are Clarke, Richardson, & Co., Stock and Share Dealers, 3, Copthall-buildings, London, E.C.? I see from circulars which have been sent to me that those of this firm are almost identical with those drawn up by F. Hemming Custance. Take, for instance, the introductions to these remarkable syndicate-touting prospectuses:—

Clarke, Richardson & Co., Stock and Share Dealers, 3, Copthall-buildings, London, E.C. Telegrams: "Offaveo, London."	F. Hemming Custance, Investment Broker and Stock and Share Dealer, 50 and 51, Lime-street, London, E.C. Telegrams: "Bicuspid, London."
Prospectus. "Special Investments." In introducing our "Special Investment" System to your notice we would state that the plan on which we conduct our "Special Investments" has stood the test of trial and long experience; a loss to subscribers thereto is almost impossible.	"Mutual" Investments. In introducing my System of Mutual Investments to your notice I would state that the System on which I conduct my "Mutuals" being practically perfect, and having stood the test of long experience, a loss of subscribers thereto is almost impossible.

The similarity does not end with the introduction, as it continues throughout the circulars; and I should like to know if Clarke, Richardson & Co. know anything of F. Hemming Custance, who has recently levanted, leaving a number of clients in the lurch? Frank Tarrant & Co., of 70 and 71, Bishopsgate-street, London, E.C., are always with us. I have received another batch of circulars, sent out by them, in which extraordinary profits are boasted of. I have also received a letter from a reader of Truth, who sent them two £5 notes on August 3, but has not got the big profits promised, and cannot obtain any satisfactory answer from them. This is a fresh development which Frank Tarrant & Company should be made to explain. J. Edwards & Co., Stock and Share Dealers, of Talbot House, Arundel-street, London, W.C., are also boasting of tremendous profits which they say they have made for their clients. They sent out polite invitations for an "operation" in London and North-Western, which was to commence on September 10, when North-Western fell from 203½ to 202. This stock has now declined further to 199¼. I wonder whether the clients of Edwards & Co. will lose all that money, or whether Edwards & Co. are philanthropists who guarantee profits to clients when a loss is made? I see that a person who has repeatedly been mentioned in Truth for the promising "deals" which he recommended to his clients is appearing in the Bankruptcy Court. This is James P. Law, of Clock House, Arundel-street, London, W.C. That I should say would be the fate of all the syndicate touts, provided anybody takes the trouble to make them bankrupt. In the majority of instances they take French leave, so that their creditors cannot find them.—I remain, your affectionate Uncle, MOSES.

Notice to Connoisseurs of Fine Dry Champagne.—Périnet & Fils' Cuvée Réservée, Extra Sec, is in magnificent condition, at Hotel Cecil, Hotel Savoy, Midland Grand Hotel, Spiers & Pond's Hotels and Buffets, and most leading Hotels & Restaurants.

All Rights Reserved.]

QUEER STORY;

GIFFEN AND GREGORY.

Now that our Australian visitors have departed, I may, without raising awkward questions, relate an amusing incident which happened in connection with a previous team of Antipodean cricketers, in a match upon the Hastings ground, now some five years ago. This incident—to the best of the present writer's knowledge—has never been made public; few persons, except those actually concerned, having even heard of it. But as it is one which will very well bear recounting, it is now written down at this seasonable date, with as much accuracy of detail as a five years' memory can be expected to display. If there are any little points in which the present recital departs from the real facts of history, those who are "in the know" will kindly ascribe it to the interval which has since elapsed, and will probably recognise that these departures are so slight as to be quite immaterial. The leading features, at any rate, have been adhered to throughout.

It has often been the case that these end of the season matches at fashionable watering places have rather degenerated into picnics; the players, on both sides, being a trifle lax both in keenness and punctuality, and the public showing them an unusual indulgence in the matter. The match to which we allude was one of this description. It so happened that a certain resident in Hastings, and a member of the local cricket club, had a relative playing in the Australian eleven. Of this he was no little proud, and he did not omit to introduce several of his particular pals, also local cricketers, to his distinguished Australian cousin. The latter introduced his cousin and his cousin's friends to other members of the Cornstalk team. And when, on the first day of the match, some of the colonial heroes came out early for a little desultory practice at the nets, they good-naturedly allowed these three or four local W. G.'s (who had turned out in flannels to fag the big hits for their illustrious visitors) to take an occasional spell both with bat and ball; a distinction which, it is needless to say, fairly entranced them.

While one of the Sussex gentlemen—a poor, though enthusiastic, performer—was wielding the willow, quite in a style of his own, a stoutish, elderly man, in a top-hat and frock-coat, came up at the back of the net and began to watch the batsman very interestedly. The elderly onlooker's face was so extremely eager, and he was following every stroke with such evident keenness, as to render himself quite conspicuous, and several of the bystanders regarded him with a half-amused curiosity.

Now it so fell out that a local cricketer (whom we will call Brown, and who was indeed the above-mentioned cousin of one of the Australian Eleven) was standing at the back of the net, near to the elderly gentleman. Both he and a pal of his—Robinson by name—who was then talking to him, wore flannels, having only just themselves left off taking part in the practice. And these two eyed the old gentleman with particular attention.

Brown was a young man, of athletic build, tall and well-proportioned. But his face was sallow and cadaverous, and had a sober, melancholy air. As a matter of fact, this entirely belied his nature; for Brown was the wag of the local club, an incorrigible joker, practical and otherwise; never happy unless he had some fun on hand. At times his jests contained strokes of genuine humour; but, for the most part, they were somewhat feeble in themselves, relying chiefly for their point upon the sober, serious air with which he carried them off. Robinson was his bosom friend, and a warm admirer of his genius. In appearance, he was short, rotund, florid—Brown's physical antithesis. But in everything else he had, by sedulous imitation, made himself resemble him as nearly as possible. It was his one desire to be a great wag like Brown, and in all that he did he kept this object before him. Brown patronised and encouraged him. He was useful to Brown, as the jackal is to the lion. A joker, especially a practical joker, can scarcely do without a confederate to play into his hands. Robinson was always ready to play into Brown's hands. He was even proud to share the kicks which sometimes resulted, when some choleric victim of Brown's jokes was moved to a by no means jocular retaliation. To do Brown justice, he was always ready to let Robinson enjoy his full share of this fruit of his humorous escapades.

On the present occasion, Brown watched the old gentleman thoughtfully for several minutes. Then he nudged Robinson.

"See that old johnny?" he whispered.

"Yes," replied Robinson. "What about him?"

"Just keep your eye on his face for a moment or two. . . . . Now, what do you make of him?"

"Make of him? How do you mean?"

"Well, do you think that Bulger's batting is class enough to excite all that keenness in the old boy, eh?"

"I shouldn't have thought so."

"Nor should I. What's more I don't think so. And I believe I twig the true explanation."

"What's that?"

"Why, it's my conviction that the old chap is a bit of a greenhorn, who don't know much about cricket, and that he imagines Bulger to be an Australian. What do you say to taking him on about it—eh?"

"By Jove! Not a bad idea. But we'd better make sure that he really is mistaken first."

"Not much doubt on that score. Look at his face, man. However, we can easily settle it by a few judicious remarks as a preliminary. Come along. We'll just get the old boy into conversation. And I say—bright idea—we'll be Australians, too! Hist! You're Gregory; I'm Giffen. Twig?"

They strolled carelessly towards the old gentleman, and, with an indifferent, nonchalant air, as though heedless of his very existence, came to a standstill at his side. Brown, looking out of the corner of one eye, noted with satisfaction that his prospective victim was regarding him with an intensely interested and admiring gaze. He saw at once that his part would be an easy one to play, for it was evident that the old gentleman already took him for an Australian.

"Hem!" said Brown, with a patronising air, such as a famous cricketer might be supposed to adopt towards an ordinary member of the public; "Nice day!"

"Very," assented the old gentleman.

"Haw—pretty decent wicket this, though a trifle slow."

"Excellent, as far as I can see," was the reply. The old gentleman's tone was distinctly respectful. He evidently realised that he was talking to a great man. Brown chuckled inwardly; though his face was sober and serious as usual.

"Fond of cricket?" he inquired, carelessly.

"I'm very fond of watching it," answered the old gentleman, with humility, "Though I really know very little about it."

"Seen us play before this season?"

There was a lordly indifference in Brown's way of asking the question, which was very excellently assumed. The old gentleman regarded him with increased respect.

"No, I am sorry to say I have not," he replied, quite apologetically; and then he added, "I suppose you find English wickets very different from what you have been accustomed to?"

"Devilish different" (Brown was now in the full swing and enjoyment of his little joke, and, as his manner was, grew more impressively serious with every word he uttered). "Although we've now had several weeks' play on these wet wickets, some of us are not a bit at home with them yet. Look at Trott there" (indicating Bulger), "he hasn't learned the pace—or rather want of pace—of the ground in the least."

"God bless my soul!" gasped the old gentleman, "is that really the great Trott? And they've bowled him out a good many times, too."

"Turner would bowl out most men on this wicket," remarked Brown, with a patronising smile.

"W-w-hich is Turner?" inquired the old gentleman, in an awe-struck voice.

"Oh, don't you know him by sight? There! That one just starting to bowl now. Keeps a grand length, doesn't he?"

"Grand!" assented the other, in enthusiastic admiration; as the trundler (who was, in fact, one of the forlorn hopes of the local eleven) sent down a full pitch which scarcely missed Bulger's head.

"And the left-hand bowler—who is the left-hand bowler?"

"Oh! That's Jimmy Ferris."

"God bless my soul! This is deeply interesting. He, Mr.—Trott—seems to find him very difficult, too."

"Yes—on this wicket. Ah! beautiful stroke that—wasn't it?"

"Beautiful," ejaculated the old gentleman, ardently. Bulger had called forth this encomium by deftly, and quite unintentionally, placing a leg-ball into the slips.

"Out in Australia," said Brown, with a judicial nod of his head, "they think Trott about our most stylish batsman. And even now, though he is quite at sea on this wicket, you can't help remarking the grace and elegance of his play, can you?"

"It—it—is—grand!" cried the old gentleman, as Bulger, after nimbly skipping out of the way of a short one from "Turner," proceeded to play back at a half-volley from "Ferris." "I—I—never saw anything like it."

"I say, Giffen," Robinson inquired of his friend at this point, "who's in after Trott?"

"Beg pardon, Gregory; what did you say?" replied Brown, feigning abstraction.

"I said, who's in next?"

On hearing these two distinguished persons address one another by name, the old gentleman's expression, hitherto respectful and admiring enough in all conscience, suddenly developed into one of positive awe. He gasped. He could hardly speak; so overwhelming did he find the situation. An average citizen suddenly realising that he was in converse with the Prince of Wales could scarcely have been more overcome.

"I—I—beg—your—your—pardon," he managed to ejaculate, at last, "but I—I—are you—really—the Giffen."

"Well, I'm the only Giffen in this team," answered Brown, smiling affably, and speaking with the true humility of a great man.

"And you—are you the Gregory?" continued the old gentleman. "The cover-point!"

"Really, you are too flattering," responded Robinson, choking down an almost irresistible impulse to scream with laughter. "But my name is Gregory; and I do generally field at cover."

The old gentleman stared at the two heroes, with eyes that were riveted upon them in reverential worship. He looked half inclined to fall upon his knees then and there, and offer his devotions to them.

"I—I—I'm sure," he gasped, "I—I—feel d-deeply honoured by—by—making your acquaintance. I—I—think it a—a—greater distinction to—to—have conversed with—with you, than with—with—W. G. himself. . . I—I—" added the old gentleman, speaking abjectly, yet eagerly. "I—I—would you think I was t-t-taking an unpardonable l-l-liberty, if I was to—to—ask——"

He broke off, afraid to continue, and evidently overwhelmed by the consciousness of his own temerity.

"My dear sir, don't stand on ceremony. Ask whatever you please," the Giffen reassured him, with perfect affability.

"By all means," added the Cover-point, graciously.

"Well—well—gentlemen, I—I—was—going to ask," he stammered, partly taking heart again, "whether you—you—would—honour me by—by—permitting me to—to—offer you some—some refreshment."

The Giffen and the Gregory exchanged glances. Neither was at all averse to a drink, nor yet to a good cigar. And the old gentleman was evidently a man who would "do" them well. Still, they had to sustain the character of demigods, and they must not appear too eager.

"Thank you, very much; but I seldom take anything so early in the day," said Giffen.

"Nor I, thank you," added Gregory.

"Still, just this once—just this once," pressed the old gentleman, with positive entreaty in his voice.

"Well," replied Giffen, relenting, "Well, as it's a hot day, perhaps——"

"Yes, as it's a hot day," struck in the Cover-point, wiping his forehead.

"Oh, thank you, gentlemen—thank you," he exclaimed, trembling with pleasure and elation. "This is good of you. Come along! Come along!"

And he turned and led the way towards the entrance of the ground, and through it to an adjacent tavern beyond.

The old gentleman took his two distinguished guests into the bar parlour of the hotel; then, summoning the waiter, ordered various drinks and smokes, the best of their kind that the house could produce.

"Do you like cold punch?" he asked them. "I have a most excellent recipe for mixing cold brandy punch. I should like you to taste it; I am sure you will pronounce it good. Shall it be that, gentlemen; or would you like anything else better?"

Giffen was kind enough to say that he would try the punch; so was Gregory. Both, also, condescended to help themselves to Havannahs from the box which the old gentleman had ordered to be brought in. When the necessary ingredients and the bowl for the punch had been set upon the table, their host proceeded to mix them together with great care and skill. At the end, he took a small bottle, containing white powder, from his waistcoat pocket, and shook some of its contents into the bowl.

"This is a very particular spice," he explained. "A friend of mind sends it me from the West Indies. It gives brandy punch a peculiarly delicious flavour. Now, gentlemen," filling their glasses and handing them across to them. "Tell me what you think of that?"

Giffen soon emptied his tumbler and pronounced it excellent; as indeed it was. So did Gregory. The old gentleman was obviously delighted. He pressed them to take more. Giffen did not refuse. Nor did Gregory. It was a hot day; and the cold punch was delightfully grateful and stimulating.

"But don't neglect yourself, I beg," said the Giffen, affably, to the old gentleman, who, intent upon his guests, had not yet helped himself.

The old gentleman did not seem to hear. His eyes had fallen upon the small glass bottle, which lay upon the table at his elbow, and seemed riveted upon it. He caught it up, and started from his chair, with an expression of the deepest dismay. Giffen and Gregory saw that his face now wore a look of the utmost horror and alarm.

He seized the bell, and tingled it frantically; "Quick! quick!" he gasped to the waiter, who answered the summons. "Warm water—a jug of warm water—quick! quick! There has been an—an—awful mistake."

The waiter hurried away to execute his order, frightened and flabbergasted by his tone and his words.

"What's the matter?" asked Giffen and Gregory in one breath, and in a voice of sudden anxiety.

"I—I've made a—a—terrible m-mistake," cried the old gentleman: "I've—I've——Oh, here's the warm water. Thank God!"

And as he spoke, he rushed to the sideboard, seized the mustard-pot from the casters, ladled spoonful after spoonful of mustard into the warm water, and stirred it hurriedly together.

"Here!" he cried, handing Giffen the jug. "Here, man! Drink some of this, quick! quick! And then pass it on to your friend. Oh, quick! quick! Or it may be too late!"

"Drink this?" ejaculated the Giffen, turning pale, "You don't mean to say—that—that——"

"Yes! yes! I've made a—a—dreadful mistake. I—I—forgot that I—I—had the two bottles with me. I am an entomologist, my friend, and this morning I bought some poison for killing beetles, and instead of spice I've—I've—given you——arsenic.

"Arsenic?" cried both Australians, simply livid with horror.

"Yes, arsenic! And enough to kill an elephant! Drink that quick—for God's sake!"

There was no need now to urge them. Giffen emptied half the jug at a gulp. Gregory finished it to the last drain. Then both rushed from the hotel round into the stable yard.

* * * * *

Ten minutes later, when the worst of it was over, and they were leaning against the wall, nursing their bodies with their arms, their faces a greyish green, and their whole bearing utterly limp and miserable—who would have recognised in these pitiable and feeble creatures the Giffen and the Gregory?

The old gentleman himself had forgotten his respect for them in his amusement at their—yes there was no denying it—their ludicrously limp appearance, and stood regarding them with a broad grin upon his face.

"Hang you!" groaned Brown, indignantly, as soon as he could speak. "What are you grinning at? When it's all your infernal fault, too!"

The old gentleman only grinned the more.

"Damn you," said Brown, as much incensed as his sufferings would permit. "If anybody has the laugh, it's us, you Cheshire Cheese! We took you on nicely. We're not Australians at all!"

"No," struck in Robinson, in the middle of a series of spasms. "We're not—oh, lor'!—Au—oh, lor', lor'!—stralians at all—oh, lor', lor', lor'!"

"I know that," said the old gentleman. "I also know something else. What I put into your punch wasn't arsenic."

"Not arsenic?"

"No," replied the old gentleman, with a huge chuckle—"saccharine!"

MUSIC.

A FESTIVAL FIASCO.

MANY more festivals like that at Worcester last week, and the Three Choirs celebrations may, after an unbroken career of nearly a century and three quarters, become extinct. Everything here now seems to be subordinated to the whims of the clergy and to the itching palm of the Church of England. Owing to some superstitious nonsense that people should not turn their backs on the Chancel, the seats last week were arranged longitudinally down the nave and aisles, so that ticket holders faced the wall, instead of, as at Hereford and Gloucester Cathedrals, and in our chief concert halls, facing the artists. There seems to be a sort of West Country ecclesiastical idea that oratorios are wicked in a Cathedral, but that a merciful Providence may be mollified if the auditor is permitted to hear with only one ear. It may be that the punishment fits the crime when the sinner has been mulcted in fifteen shillings for his uncomfortable seat, plus a contribution to the hat—I mean the plate—which is so conspicuously held out at the Cathedral doors. I do not, however, wonder that under such out-of-date conditions the inhabitants of the "Faithful City" are gradually taking less and less interest in their Festival, and that both attendance and receipts triennially show a falling off. The preliminary prayers, to indicate that the people have paid their money for a church service instead of for a concert, are perhaps an amiable weakness which the average Englishman will excuse. The intelligent foreigner, who knows perfectly well that the audience have planked down their fifteen shillings to hear the music, to listen to Mr. Lloyd (never in more glorious voice than last week), and to see the latest fashions in costumes sported by Madame Albani, may rightly put the prefatory collects down to British hypocrisy; although even he might be amused at the varying efforts at true intonation made by the officiating Canon, an official who, if he were singing in public, would inevitably be requested by the gallery boys to go off.

It is more to the purpose that the Established Church has long ago dishonestly purloined the whole of the proceeds of the Festival, and now starves the music. When the Festival was first established, the poor choristers shared the proceeds with fat Deans and Chapters. This is the circular issued at the first Festival, in 1724, by Dr. Bisse, Chancellor of Hereford:—

> These are to give notice that to-morrow, Thursday, the 10th inst. (September), there will be a collection made after morning service at the Cathedral door for placing out, or assisting to the education and maintenance of the orphans of the poorer clergy belonging to the dioceses of Gloucester, Worcester, and Hereford, or of the members of the three respective choirs, to be disposed of by six stewards, members of the Society, a clergyman, and a gentleman respectively belonging to the said dioceses.

But the clergy now confiscate the entire amount, the unfortunate choir singers not benefiting in the charity to the extent of a sixpence. Even last Wednesday, when they had a night off, and went for a picnic, the Clergy had the incredible meaness to allow Lord Beauchamp, the Mayor, to pay the expenses out of his own pocket.

It is a more serious matter that, under the specious plea of saving expense, the Worcester Committee limit the rehearsals to a few hours on Saturday and from 10 to 5 on Monday. Bach's "Christmas Oratorio" had a bare three-quarters of a hour devoted to it, and the choral performance was, I think, one of the worst I ever heard at a Festival. "Elijah," "Messiah," and part of "St Paul" were not rehearsed at all; while the performance of "Elijah" would have been laughed at by the audience of the Mile End Assembly Rooms or of Shoreditch Town Hall. It was not, of course, at all the fault of Mr. Hugh Blair. That clever young organist may not be a conductor of any great experience; but a Richter could have done little with such a choral lot without adequate rehearsal. And it would be easy enough to give the Tuesday to extra preparation. All that is necessary is to abolish the Wednesday evening secular concert, which draws a handful of six or seven hundred people, and to finish the Festival on Friday night with an oratorio performance instead of a religious service. There would be no extra expense, the same number of oratorios could be given, and it would afford the Festival forces a better chance.

The two novelties were both promising works, though that they should have found their way into a Festival programme at all suggests the problem presented to King George III. of the fly in amber. His Majesty, it may be recollected, wondered how the deuce it got there. Mr. Blair's Advent cantata is, at any rate, unpretentious, and the composer undoubtedly has the gift of melody. I should imagine, however, that the work would be more effective in its original form; that is to say, for ordinary church service, and interspersed with well-known hymns to be sung by the congregation. Mr. Elgar, in his oratorio "The Light of Life," is at present violently coquetting with Wagner. But the Bayreuth musician never used representative themes in the manner which his English disciples affect, and Mr. Elgar, moreover, is more at home in the dramatic choruses than in some of the solos, which are duller even than is usual in British oratorio. He is best of all in his orchestration, and otherwise he shows plenty of promise. Madame Albani and Mr. Plunket Greene, unfortunately, were both suffering from severe indisposition. Madame Albani, it seems, had tried a Continental health cure which had weakened her both vocally and physically. Mr. Plunket Greene, too, was decidedly hoarse, and as he did not spare his voice, he became worse towards the end of the week. But much could be forgiven on account of the intelligence and dramatic force shown by this excellent vocalist. Mr. Hirwen Jones took a long step in advance as an oratorio tenor; but Mr. Lloyd was fairly the king of the Festival, and I have never heard him in more magnificent voice. To listen to Mr. Lloyd in Verdi's "Requiem" was a treat to those who recalled Masini under Verdi's own conductorship at the Albert Hall I forget how many years ago.

The opera season which, as I mentioned last week, Signor Leoncavallo has in view at Covent Garden is mainly in order to give a London hearing to "I Medici" and "Chatterton." Most of the artists will, I believe, afterwards take part in the winter season in Italy, but, except as to Signor Tamagno, who may come here, although he is at present in Montevideo, and as to one lady who, I am told, sang some years ago with the Harris troupe in the provinces, they are all unknown in London. Some of them, I hope, will shorten their names for the English market. My printers are longsuffering; but they are already looking a little askance at Signorina Carmen de Bonapatabau.

Should he come to Covent Garden this autumn, Signor Tamagno's chief effort will be in Leoncavallo's "I Medici," the opera in which he created the part of Giuliano at Milan three years ago. Giuliano is a Medici, and is quite characteristic of that family. He is a lady-killer in more senses of the term than one, for the woman he has ruined faints in the middle of a dance when she overhears him making love to her particular lady friend, and subsequently dies. Giuliano himself is ultimately stabbed in mistake for his brother Lorenzo the Magnificent. "Chatterton," which will also be one of the novelties of the season, is in the style of "Pagliacci," and contains some very dramatic situations, although the story is filtered through de Vigny's drama for Italian operatic use

The official démenti is a wonderful and a beautiful thing. This is the latest, though rather belated, effort in that direction of Mr. Hoile, secretary of the Carl Rosa company, who last Thursday sent round a type-written circular :—

There has not been the slightest foundation for the statements that have appeared that the company were contemplating a season at Drury Lane Theatre this autumn. The subject has not even been thought of by the directors.

What really was said in TRUTH was that the "Company are fully prepared to take Drury Lane from early next month for an autumn season, unless somebody else speedily secures the house for an autumn drama." Mr. Coleman now has the house for drama, and the operatic idea is of course at an end. My authority for the original statement was one of the Carl Rosa directors, who is certainly not given to falsehood. He spoke openly, in the presence of one of the Covent Garden officials, and immediately afterwards crossed the street to ask Mr. Cecil Raleigh if that gentleman had withdrawn his drama from Drury Lane. The director perhaps committed a terrible breach of company etiquette by taking a pressman into his confidence before he had consulted the company's excellent secretary.

The death of young Gillie Betjemann was inexpressibly sad. He was in the full flush of life and in the best of spirits when he started that luckless journey on the Grindelwald Glacier. His father, leader at the opera, had re-married a few weeks ago, and was travelling elsewhere in Switzerland, where his only son was to join him. Young Betjemann was killed on the glacier, and a promising life was thus cut short. He was an ex-student at the Royal Academy of Music, a violinist at the Opera and at our leading concerts, and was also a capital viola player, pianist, and baritone vocalist.

Mr. Robert Newman has again been compelled to increase his orchestra. The same thing happened last year, and it is doubtless attributable to the French pitch, particularly while English players refuse to adopt the thick strings used on the Continent, so that the tone of the violins in the lower pitch is dull and weak, and their number has to be increased at a considerable cost to the enterprise. Mr. Newman, I am glad to hear, is having a successful Promenade Concert season.

We all know that in the police reports the tipsy diner-out is "described as a journalist," and that the damsel who wears vine leaves in her hair is "described as an actress." But "Suicide of an Opera-Singer" is a step upwards. The luckless girl who concealed her identity under the name of "L'Estrange" never, of course, was an opera-singer, and she was a good deal too young even to have sung in an operatic chorus, the first qualification for which is full sixty years.

LETTERS ON BOOKS.

MY DEAR MR. WYNDHAM,—It may seem in itself a silly thing to make imminent risk of your life to climb a mountain peak, barren under eternal snow, or get another degree nearer the Pole, but where would England be but for the spirit to which it seems

An easy leap
To pluck bright honour from the pale-faced moon?

The nerve, energy, self-reliance, endurance, and pluck needed to achieve these barren conquests of high latitudes or high altitudes are but the excess steam of the motive power that has won our fruitful conquests on every continent. At the same time, in reading books like Mr. Traill's admirable "Life of Sir John Franklin" (1) you cannot help again and again regretting that such heroic energy, enterprise, pluck, patience, and perseverance were wasted. By the way, this excellent biography records something no less English than the heroism of Franklin, of his mates, and of his seekers and successors—the commercial scoundrelism which "in all probability led to the disastrous fate of Franklin's expedition." Truly "Honour sinks where commerce long prevails." The padding of life-belts with straw was an English industry; and a scoundrel named "Goldner"—whose name deserves to live as long and infamously as that of Herostratus—ensured the failure of the Franklin expedition and the slow death of its heroes by provisioning the ships with putrid meat. Isn't it odd that the intensely practical Englishman should be so fascinated by the mirage of the North Pole? An eminent man of science assured me not so long since that its discovery would be of comparatively small scientific value; of as slight value scientifically, perhaps, as the discovery of the North-West Passage has been practically.

"That North-West Passage," says Mr. Traill, "on which the hearts of our Arctic voyagers were so long set, was at last discovered; and its discovery was wholly useless to the commerce of the world. Half a century has nearly passed since then, yet this shadowy channel remains and will remain untried."

Another enterprise at once essentially unpractical and English is mountaineering, and the current hero of feats in this kind is unquestionably Mr. E. A. FitzGerald. Mr. FitzGerald's account of his thrilling exploits is so modest that you almost resent the sumptuous get-up and sensational illustrations of "The New Zealand Alps" (2), as suggestive of either a carpet-knight or of a Bobadil. But that Mr. FitzGerald is made of other metal may be inferred from the gallant way in which he held fast the ice-axes in the following thrilling adventure :—

Suddenly as I was coming up a steepish bit, while Zurbriggen waited for me a little way above, a large boulder that I touched with my right hand gave way with a great crash and fell, striking my chest. I had just been on the point of passing up the two ice-axes to Zurbriggen, that he might place them in a cleft of rock a little higher up, and thus leave me both hands free for my climb. He was in the act of stooping and stretching out his arm to take them from my uplifted hand, the slack rope between us lying coiled at his feet. The falling boulder hurled me down head foremost, and I fell about eight feet, turning a complete somersault in the air. Suddenly I felt the rope jerk and I struck against the side of the mountain with great force. I feared I should be stunned and drop the two ice-axes on which our lives depended. After the rope had jerked me up I felt it again slip and give way, and I came down slowly for a couple of yards. I took this to mean that Zurbriggen was being wrenched from his foothold, and I was just contemplating how I should feel dashing down the 6,000 ft. below, and wondering vaguely how many times I should strike the rocks on the way. I saw the very block that I had dislodged going down in huge bounds; it struck the side three or four times, and then, taking an enormous plunge of about 2,000 ft., embedded itself on the Tuckett Glacier.

As a matter of fact it was touch and go. Two strands of the rope had been cut through by the falling rock, and but a single strand remained to support the weight of Mr. FitzGerald; while the ledge on which Zurbriggen stood was literally crumbling away beneath his feet, and he was inevitably being dragged down.

"Turn round!" he cried, "I cannot hold you much longer." I gave a kick at the rocks with one foot, and with great exertion managed to swing myself round, get hand-hold of a ledge and ease the strain on the rope.

All through he stuck to the ice-axes. I was delighted to see an old and dear favourite of mine. "Walton's Lives" (3) appear in Mr. Henley's excellently selected and edited "English Classics Series." Walton treats his subjects as a preacher treats Biblical characters, dwelling only on such actions, incidents, and aspects of their lives as tended to edification. That happy motto on a Venetian sun-dial, "Horas non numero nisi serenas," might aptly be prefixed to these Arcadian biographies, understanding "serenas" to mean bathed in the "lux benigna" of the saints. Who would gather from Walton that Donne, or Herbert, or Wotton had ever been the reverse of saintly? Surely Mariana's philosophy is truer to life and nature, and more also to the credit of religion.

They say best men are moulded out of faults;
And for the most, become much more the better
For being a little bad.

—Believe me, my dear Mr. Wyndham, ever yours very sincerely,

DESMOND B. O'BRIEN.

(1) "The Life of Sir John Franklin, R.N." By H. D. Traill. With Maps, Portraits, and Facsimiles. London: John Murray. Price 16s.

(2) "Climbs in the New Zealand Alps." Being an Account of Travel and Discovery. By E. A. Fitzgerald, F.R.G.S. And with contributions by Sir Martin Conway, Professor T. G. Bonney, D.Sc., F.R.S., C. L. Barrow, F.R.G.S., F.Z.S. With many Illustrations from Original Drawings by Joseph Pennell. H. G. Willink, A. D. McCormack, Photographs by the Author, together with a New Map. London: T. Fisher Unwin. Price 31s. 6d.

(3) "The Lives of Dr. John Donne, Sir Henry Wotton, Mr. Richard Hooker, Mr. George Herbert, and Dr. Robert Saunderson." By Izaak Walton. (English Classics Series. Edited by W. E Henley.) London: Methuen & Co. Price 3s. 6d.

GIRLS' GOSSIP.

DEAREST AMY,—I am writing you this week from Paris-Plage, the new watering-place, about half an hour's rail from Boulogne, which has sprung up in the last four or five years. It is approached from Etaples by a lovely drive through a pine wood; not a great gloomy one like some of which we wot, but diversified by young birches, beeches, oaks, and elms, and made still brighter by the sand that forms the soil. Noting the lovely green glades of this wood as we passed, we promised ourselves many a drive in it during our stay at Paris-Plage, where we soon found the friends we had come to join. They took us to their chalet—a highly-picturesque one, with blue walls picked out with brown, and with ever so many gables. Three snails, carved in wood, and many times larger than life, occupy commanding positions on the roof. They are probably emblematic of something agreeable, but we have not yet got to the bottom of those snails.

Everything is new and bright at Paris-Plage, which lies at the north-east corner of a promontory formed by the river Canche running up far into the mainland and forming a natural boundary between Artois and beautiful Picardy. A wooden bridge, close to Etaples, crosses the Canche, which in the time of Napoleon was wide enough at this point to admit of a fleet of frigates and sloops getting up as far as the town. It is now greatly filled in with sand; but Richard heard with joy that very large salmon trout are caught in it. He is a devoted angler, Amy! The one amusement above all others that is a penance and a punishment to me. Fancy sitting still for hours, perfectly silent, with no other interruption to the monotony than playing and landing a wretched, wriggling fish! However, it promotes the cultivation of the quality of patience, an excellent thing in husbands.

Our friends, the Whites, are very much interested in the new enterprise, Mayville, which is to be a big Anglo-French watering place at no distant date. They took us next morning to see it from a high point in the woods, where a platform, reached by a ladder, has been built, those standing on it gaining a bird's-eye view of the whole surrounding country. We loved the drive through the wood and the scramble up the hill. We were not quite so fond of the ladder, but the view from the platform well repaid us for the difficulties of the ascent. Just get your map of Europe and look out a point immediately below Boulogne, and imagine your Madge standing there with glorious sunshine overhead, and before her lying the blue waters of the English Channel, with no land between her and America, so that the air comes fresh across the great Atlantic; for Mayville faces due west. Combined with this purest of ozone is the odorous breath of the pines, and withal the air was like velvet, so soft and zephyrous. We were all enchanted with it, and took in deep breaths of it, wishing most heartily that we could bottle some and have it sent to London for use during the winter.

We amused ourselves by trying to imagine ourselves in a "London particular," making believe like children, and thereby enhancing our enjoyment of the exquisite air and the wonderful scene that lay spread out at our feet. Ten miles of sands, hard and firm, girdle the land with a golden zone as far as we could see to the left. To the right lay the Canche and little Paris-Plage nestled cozily in the corner. Stretching away from our feet downwards towards the sea lay the woods, two thousand acres in extent, with their endless tones of green, from the palest through infinite gradations down to the deep bass of the pines. Here and there the stems of a group of silver birches made a touch of silver, and again, the brown of the rugged pine stems added its note to the chord of woodland colour. The immensely tall twin lighthouses of Le Touquet, snowy white, and placed at the corner of land between the Canche and the sea, were most effective items in the picture.

Mr. White pointed out to us the line through the woods where the railway from Etaples will run down to the casino and pier, having between these and the terminus a spacious street, which is to be devoted to shops, the wide paths in front of them to be covered in with an arcade. On the right of the railway line is to be the vélodrome, and on the left are planned the race course, polo ground, golf links, tennis courts, and cricket field.

Richard soon became intensely interested in the whole scheme, and button-holed Mr. White in the most inexorable fashion. How far is Mayville from London? Four hours and a half. From Paris? Two and a half? And so on through an unconscionable catechism, of which the girls soon tired. In the midst of it we descended that wonderful ladder and wandered back to the carriages through the lovely wood, the girls gathering an exquisite bouquet of thistle flowers in tones of mauve and purple, lovely against their silver-grey, almost white leaves, with here and there a few just deepening into green. These thistle blossoms were not hard and prickly, but soft and feathery, and you can't think what a perfect bouquet they made.

Mrs. White, who is one of the sweetest of women, and an old friend of mine, told me, as we wandered on, that in spring and the earlier summer the woods are full of nightingales, thrushes, linnets, and blackbirds, and that the variety of wild flowers is quite marvellous. And oh! what appetites our woodland wanderings gave us.

The girls, who soon foregathered with the three pretty daughters of the house, set out before breakfast next morning on a biking expedition. Richard and I strolled about, and for some time heard their clear, fresh voices in the stillness of the morning air. I longed for a gallop on the sands, but even if there had been what the newspaper people call "a steed" at hand, I could scarcely have mounted it without a habit.

The Whites gave us a delightful drive that afternoon to the Château d'Hardelot, a beautiful and picturesque bit of antiquity, with battlemented ramparts and a high tower, recently restored. The moat that once surrounded the Château is now turned into a kitchen-garden, the water having long been drained away in these blessed times of peace. The ramparts are clothed with ivy, and here and there a bright green hart's-tongue fern has set up its dwelling-place in a cleft of the old grey stone walls. A very fine old gateway, of which I should like to send you a sketch, is also mantled with ivy. Henry VIII. besieged and took this Château, so that it is historic.

The young and pretty châtelaine received us, gave us tea under a spreading tree on the historic lawn, and introduced us to two new acquaintances—her dear little baby and a magnificent St. Bernard, with a dash of the bloodhound in him. This gentleman's voice had greeted us on our arrival with that deep bay which, in a less kindly canine creature, might have meant menace. As it was, I felt decidedly anxious not to offend him or hurt his feelings in any way. I would not have annoyed him for the world! He carefully inspected us, however, and fortunately came to the conclusion that we were fit and proper persons to be admitted into the beautiful home of which he made such a stately guardian. He superintended our introduction to the baby, and afterwards became quite friendly, escorting us on our tour round the ivied ramparts, but declining the narrow winding stair up which we went to the tower.

Leo also drew the line at accompanying us into the cellars beneath the Château, most wonderful places, with oubliettes amidst them, where skeletons had been found with chains about them when the workmen were restoring the old tower.

The scenery around was perfectly beautiful, with pine woods crowning and clothing the hills, and a lake

John Busvine & Co., Tailors to the Royal Family and the Courts of Europe. Ladies requiring Riding Habits for the coming hunting season are begged to order early, as, the pressure of business being so great during October, it is frequently impossible to complete late orders in time.

glittering like silver about two miles away. We shall long remember our excursion to the Château d'Hardelot.

At dinner that evening the talk turned on dress, and as I know you consider my letters very incomplete if they contain no mention of chiffons, I must tell you of the latest on-dits from Paris as retailed by one of the company.

Capes are to be worn as much as ever. There is a decided tendency towards tightly-fitting coats. Basques are longer, and not so full. Skirts are narrower and more clinging. Sleeves are not so tight as they have been, but still are quite free from the huge absurdities of a year ago. The new felt and velvet hats are high crowned and not too heavily brimmed. A sort of raspberry red is a favourite colour for rough straws in both bonnets and hats, and with this black is the only trimming.

We saw a light blue felt hat at Dieppe, Tyrolese shape, with a brown ribbon round it and an eagle's feather. The dress it was worn with was a brown and pale blue check of very large proportions.

Ursula forwards me the following interesting account of her visit to Doncaster:—

Dearest Madge,—I remember reading some time ago that Talleyrand once said, "Those who were not living in and about the year 1789 know little of the enjoyments of life," and I should like to add to this that those who have never attended a race meeting know little of its excitements! From this you will very probably, and rightly, infer that we are fresh from the delights of Doncaster week—a week on which we had entered with the gloomiest apprehensions, since for the preceding fortnight the rain had rained more or less steadily, not only every day, but generally every night, and the country was so soaked that we had visions of the Leger runners floundering through a morass past a submerged judge's box. As a consequence, on the first day we all went so heavily laden with thick waterproofs and large umbrellas that the weather for once seemed ashamed of itself, and broke out into bright sunshine. The Leger Day was not so fine, and I believe that only the babel of the ring below prevented us from hearing various growls of thunder which would otherwise have materially interfered with my peace of mind, already sufficiently disturbed by the difficulty of finding the winners. By the way, I am sure that some of the nervous exhaustion, to which we are all fain to confess after a race meeting, would be dispelled if only there existed a ready guide to the identity of the different horses. It is all very well to describe their colours on the card, but when eight or ten quadrupeds, with jockeys clad in every possible mixture of colour, file in rapid succession out of the paddock and dash out of sight, one has to make an agonising effort to distinguish between "green, red cross-belts, red and green halved cap," and "white, black and white hooped sleeves, red cap," and "cream, olive green sleeves, red cap," &c., and the result is generally a hopeless muddle. It is almost as bad in the paddock itself, unless one happens to be near an intelligent native who knows all about everything; and if the horses are merely being exercised the grooms are reticent, and the saddlecloths noncommitting, except in one or two cases—Sir Blundell Maple, for instance, being considerate enough to have his horses' names embroidered in full on their clothing. It was worth going to Doncaster to see the scene of enthusiasm when Persimmon swept an easy first past the winning-post. The lucky steed and his rider were escorted back to the paddock by a posse of mounted police and a shouting crowd; and when the Prince of Wales, who is looking very well after his visit to Homburg, came down to bestow an approving pat on his beautiful colt, the excitement was tremendous. All sorts and conditions of men crowded round the Heir Apparent trying to shake hands, and it needed a strong bodyguard of police closely surrounding him before a passage could be forced through the crush. Ned says he saw three females, who planted themselves obstinately in the Prince's path, and insisted on shaking hands with him, while one said, "Eh, mister, I'm glad thee's won!" Instead of appearing in the regulation Leger and Cup day uniform of tall hat and frock coat, the Prince wore a dark blue serge suit with a low brown hat on both occasions, and this will probably create a sensible revolution.

Dress was really very smart this year, and the number of pretty glacé silks was simply legion. Among the most successful I saw were a pink, spotted black, with a pink chiffon vest and slightly trimmed with narrow black lace; a black and white worn with a large black velvet hat; a pinky heliotrope rather spoilt, however, by very uncompromising scarlet in the high crowned hat, and a lovely white which had a few light frills of green velvet, edged with silver on the bodice. A yellow silk was covered with black chiffon, the sleeves softly ruffled and the vest pale yellow, and a black satin had a broad band of lively creamy brocade round the foot of the skirt, the same material forming sleeves and yoke. Lady Astley was in black every day. Once she had a short sealskin cape, with a toque much adorned with black sequins, and another time she wore black silk with a bodice of Persian lamb and a high feather collar. The Dowager Lady Rossmore was also in black, and the Ladies Hastings came one day in blue and white. One elderly lady of somewhat matronly proportions interested us much with the magnificence of her attire. On the first day she wore a peach-coloured brocade which was a perfect dream, and would make a lovely evening gown, and a black and white silk in very large stripes was her choice on another occasion. Other striking costumes were a red; a pink silk, very plainly made, and with nothing but a little drapery of black chiffon round the neck; a creamy muslin with bands of black lace insertion over green brocade and a green belt; and I admired a grey canvas with a white chiffon vest and white satin belt, the sleeves and basque being trimmed with guipure. This was worn by a lady with very fair hair, which suited the cream serge gown she donned on Leger Day. I saw Mrs. Arthur Wilson in black, and her daughter looked very charming in grey embroidered in silver, a white chiffon vest, and large hat with black and grey feathers. Another day she wore dark blue and had red cherries in her hat. A purple covert coating with revers of white corduroy velvet, white vest, and mauve hat with sprays of lilac and white wings looked well; and Miss Peel, dame d'honneur to Lady Tweeddale when she holds court at Holyrood, had brightened her dark blue serge costume with a vivid red hat. I noticed several crépons, and remember one of fawn colour with a pattern of cherries running through it—belt, revers, and straps of green velvet edged with sequins and red collar band, while another of pink had chiffon ruffles and narrow panels on the skirt of bead embroidery over pink. A diamond necklace was a further adornment to this costume. Lady Elena Wickham generally wore a dark coat and skirt with smart vest and a buttonhole, and she seemed much interested in the proceedings, as did many others of the fair sex. Two nice-looking girls in pink were with Lord Lindsey's party, and I once caught a fleeting glimpse of one of the prettiest girls I ever saw. She was a lovely blonde, with large blue eyes, and had wisely chosen a soft creamy coloured gown. A tall woman looked stately in grey covert coating with wide outstanding collar and high crowned hat of pink satin covered with black tulle and sequins. I hope that white canvas over white silk trimmed with satin ribbon and worn with a red hat adorned by black feathers and red tulle sounds as nice as it looked. A lady with Sir R. Waldie Griffith's party had a pretty gown of white canvas over satin striped with white satin ribbon with a brocaded pink pattern, and there was a regular symphony in the paddock of black and white, silver and magenta. A dark blue canvas trimmed with creamy lace looked well, and so did a lovely white and black striped silk with a flowered design in pink running through it, a high folded black satin belt with paste buttons and white chiffon vest. To the same lady belonged a most covetable cloak of purple velvet lined with white brocade and trimmed with sable. I must not conclude without a hearty word of commendation for the delightful little new tea-tent in the paddock, where delicious tea was very daintily served, and every one was unanimous and loud in its praise.

Clare sends me the following from Dublin:—

Dearest Madge,—The weather we, no doubt, have always with us, but in what different degrees in the country and in town! In the latter there are many escapes from it; its existence when going through a disagreeable phase may easily be ignored. Not so in the country. There, it surrounds and circumvents us, presenting itself as a prominent, dominant, and most aggressive fact in life. Our daily doings are "by permission of the weather." Every pastime and occupation are at the mercy of this tyrant, than whom none was ever more arbitrary and fickle, more cruelly indifferent to our wishes and prayers, more callous in inflicting disappointments on us. Never did we feel this more acutely than last week in the country, to which we returned after the Dublin Horse Show. It was not that the weather was so bad; worse weather—if you will allow the paradox—would have been better. It was malignantly thwarting. Like the oratory described by the Irishman: first it buttered us up and then it slithered us down. We had sunshine to lure us into hopes and plans, rain and wind to prevent their fulfilment. However the men might defy the weather, we women could do nothing; cycles, mallets, racquets, golf sticks, all were laid up in enforced idleness. The whole week was paved with abandoned intentions with regard to amusement. Led on by short spells of delusive morning sunshine, or by sunsets of supposed favourable aspect, we made stupendous biking plans of campaign, including luncheons and teas out; we arranged croquet, tennis, and golf tournaments. Not one of these arrangements came to a good end, and very few even to a beginning. Finally we had to take to books, and some even retrograded to the extent of needlework. We were indeed driven to extremes.

The newspapers and magazines came nobly to the rescue of the readers. They saved the situation for the increasing number to whom anything beyond ordinary paragraphs, or fiction of a few pages is a severe strain on the mind. By the way, have you taken to croquet? Cycling is, I suppose, responsible for its revival. The quieter game is so much more suitable than tennis at a party to which one cycles many miles. Quiet and eminently respectable though croquet is, it, too, has its drawbacks. Try a couple of hours' play in wet grass—the difficulty in any croquet-playing district will be to avoid this trial—and you will soon find that rheumatism is just as certain to discover all your bones as the Röntgen rays, unless, indeed, you have a skeleton as special in its way as Trilby's.

Now Ready.—Costumes for all kinds of Sports and Pastimes. Redfern makes a special feature of Costumes for all out-door pursuits, and is constantly introducing novelties. Everything practical, correct, up-to-date, and smart.—26, Conduit-st., London.

All through the week Lord and Lady Cadogan pursued their tour in the south of Ireland, not under the most favourable aspects as regards weather. One can only hope that they enjoyed, like average mortals, the fine spells, and with regard to the rain, an artistic appreciation of its grey and blurring effects. The Duke and Duchess of Devonshire, who, with a family party including Lord and Lady Gosfort—she is the daughter of the Duchess—and their son and daughter, arrived only a day or two before the Viceregal party, can hardly have felt more at home at Lismore Castle than their visitors. Lord Cadogan, as usual, had a busy time, visiting every institution for miles around in the country, seeing every sight, and receiving all who wished to be presented, within limits, of course. Dinner parties were given every evening by the Duke and Duchess of Devonshire, and a very large garden party on one afternoon. Besides these, there were luncheon and tea parties at which the Viceregal party were present at various houses in the neighbourhood—at Dromona and Ballinatray, amongst others, where Captain Villiers Stuart and Colonel and Lady H. Holroyd Smith respectively reside. The big garden-party at Lismore Castle created quite an excitement in the neighbourhood. No place in Ireland is more suited for such an entertainment than the Castle, which rises so picturesquely from the banks of the Blackwater. How different Irish country neighbourhoods would be if there were less absenteeism! A big establishment in working order is like a big business in the matter of giving employment and circulating money. What a pity that one family should have more houses than they can possibly live in. Public spirit ought to make people in that condition have a locum tenens in each big place to keep it up as a permanent "going" concern.

The Chief Secretary and Lady Betty Balfour are still on their Irish tour, which combines an enormous amount of instruction with—one hopes—amusement. They are taking quite a grand tour, almost a circuit of the whole melancholy island. After Donegal they were in Clare, where Mr. Balfour had an opportunity of trying the merits of the golf links near Lahinch.—Yours ever,

CLARE.

Did you ever hear of beetroot bread? It has medicinal properties of which I am ignorant. They are, however, of little account, as it is so delicious I am sure you will enjoy it:—

Grate 1 lb. of raw beetroot, and put it into a basin with 1 lb. of Hungarian flour. Mix it into a batter with a pint of warm milk, in which 1½ oz. of German yeast and 1 oz. of salt have been dissolved. Allow the sponge to stand for nearly two hours in a warm place to ferment, then mix in sufficient flour to make a soft dough. It must again stand in a warm place to rise, after which beat it down and half fill four small buttered tins, and place them on the rack. When the dough has proved to the top of the tins, bake the loaves nearly an hour in a moderate oven. Turn them on to a pastry rack to cool, and use for bread and butter for afternoon tea.

I can also recommend this new dish of tomatoes and oysters:—

Blanch, strain, and beard about 18 plump oysters, reduce the liquor, and thicken it with an ounce of butter and a tablespoonful of flour, previously kneaded together on a plate, stir until quite smooth, and boil five minutes, season with salt and pepper, a pinch of cayenne pepper, a squeeze of lemon juice, a little cream, and the yolks of 2 eggs; add the oysters, which must be nicely minced. Cut the stem part from 6 or 7 ripe tomatoes, and, with the handle of a teaspoon, scoop out all the seeds. Fill them with the oyster preparation, and turn each one, cut side downwards, on to a small round of fried bread, and bake them in a moderate oven until the tomatoes are done. Warm the sauce, diluting it with a little milk, and pour round the tomatoes when dished up.

I feel so far from you in France, dear coz! Till next week good-bye.—Your loving cousin,

MADGE.

With the Japanese Troops.

JAMES CREELMAN, the American War Correspondent, in his dispatch to New York, dated PORT ARTHUR, Nov. 24, 1894, writes:—

In the camp, on the march, under the trying conditions of active warfare, Mariani Wine enabled me to resist fatigue & defy exhaustion.

Mariani Wine fortifies, nourishes, and stimulates the Body and Brain. It restores Health, Strength, Energy, and Vitality: notably after INFLUENZA. Bottles, 4s.; dozen, 45s., of Chemists and Stores, or carriage paid from Wilcox & Co., 239, Oxford Street, London.

WHY DRINK INFERIOR TEA?
UNITED KINGDOM TEA COMPANY'S TEAS
DIRECT FROM THE GROWERS.
1/-, 1/3, 1/4, 1/6, 1/7, 1/9, & 2/- per lb., DELIVERED CARRIAGE PAID.
Write for Samples sent free, taste them, and judge for yourselves. Amazing superiority in Quality! Great Economy in prices.
Offices: 21, MINCING LANE, LONDON, E.C.

THE NEW CROWN VIOLET.

AN EXQUISITE PERFUME.
In Crown Stoppered Bottles only.

"The Delicious Essence of the Violet itself, distilled from the fragrant Violet Gardens of the sunny Riviera."

SOLD EVERYWHERE.
The Crown Perfumery Co.,
177, NEW BOND STREET, W.

ACCIDENTS OF TRAVEL.
ACCIDENTS RIDING, DRIVING, SHOOTING, CYCLING, FISHING, SKATING, &c.
ACCIDENTS OF ALL KINDS.
INSURED AGAINST BY THE
RAILWAY PASSENGERS' ASSURANCE CO.
64, CORNHILL, LONDON. A. VIAN, Secretary

"TRUTH"
THE GALIGNANI LIBRARY,
224, RUE DE RIVOLI, PARIS.

NATIONAL PROVIDENT INSTITUTION.
For Mutual Life Assurance.
Paid in Claims ... £9,500,000
Accumulated Fund ... £4,800,000
Profits already divided £4,600,000
Established 1835.

Profits.—At the last (1892) Division, £651,000 Cash Profit was apportioned amongst the members, being more than 37 per cent. of the amount paid in premiums during the previous five years. There were then nearly 800 Policies, in respect of which not only were the premiums entirely extinguished, but also annuities were granted, or Cash Bonuses paid, whilst in the case of many policies the original sums assured are now more than doubled by the Bonus additions.

The Next Division will be made as at November 20th, 1897, and all existing policies will participate according to the time they shall then have been in force.

Endowment-Assurance Policies are issued combining Life Assurance at Minimum Cost, with Provision for Old Age.

48, Gracechurch Street, London, E.C. Applications for Agencies invited.

GAIETY RESTAURANT, STRAND.

LUNCHEONS (HOT and COLD)—At Popular Prices, in BUFFET and RESTAURANT (on 1st floor). Also Chops, Steaks, Joints, Entrées, etc., in the GRILL ROOM.

AFTERNOON TEA—Consisting of Tea or Coffee, Cut Bread and Butter, Jam, Cake, Pastry, ad lib., at 1/- per head; served from 4 till 6 in RESTAURANT (1st floor).

DINNERS IN RESTAURANT—From 5.30 till 9 at Fixed Prices (3/6 and 5/-) and à la Carte. In this room the Viennese Band performs from 6 till 8. Smoking after 7.45.

Private Dining Room for Large and Small Parties.

American Bar. The GRILL ROOM is open till 12.30.

SPIERS & POND, Ltd., Proprietors.

"Deeds not Words."

In all cases of Dyspepsia—Salivary, Stomachic, Nervous, or Intestinal—whether Acute or Chronic, no Remedy has been so eminently and uniformly successful as Guy's Tonic. This has been demonstrated by the Unsolicited Testimonials received and constantly being received from people of good standing from all parts of the Three Kingdoms and Abroad.

The following Letter from one who suffered severely from Acute Dyspepsia in its worst possible form will show the Beneficial Power exercised by Guy's Tonic in this formidable Disease.

"19, Shaftesbury Avenue, W.

"Dear Sirs,—I beg to enclose a Letter which has "reached me in connection with my work on 'Woman,' "which I am sure will gratify you.—I am, Dear Sirs, "yours, "MEDICA."

Enclosure.

"Dear Medica,—I thought perhaps you might "like to know how much Benefit I have derived from "your Recommendation of Guy's Tonic to one of "your Correspondents. For Years I have suffered "from Acute Indigestion. I tried Four Doctors, "but obtained no permanent Relief until I took "Guy's Tonic. It is now Four Months since I left "off taking it, and having had no Attack in that "period, I take it I am permanently cured.

"NIOBE" (Nom de Plume).

Guy's Tonic is sold by Chemists and Stores throughout the World. Guy's Tonic is now employed in Hospital Practice, and is widely recommended by Medical Men.

MELLIN'S FOOD

For INFANTS and INVALIDS.

MELLIN'S FOOD

is similar to Breast Milk chemically and as beneficial physiologically.

Samples post free from

Mellin's Food Works, Peckham, S.E.

Established 1670.

GOLDSMITHS.
DIAMOND MOUNTERS

Streeter & Co. Limited

18, NEW BOND STREET, LONDON, W.

Established 1670.

JEWELLERS.
LAPIDARIES.

GOLF MODELS
to order from £5

POMERANIAN BROOCH.
In Diamonds from £15.
In Gold from £5.

COLLIE BROOCH.
In Diamonds from £15.
In Gold from £5.

MODELS IN DIAMONDS OF "VALKYRIE" AND OTHER YACHTS from £30.

POLO PONY BROOCH.
In Diamonds from £15
In Gold from £5.

PUG BROOCH,
In Diamonds from £15.
In Gold from £5.

POLO MODELS
to order from £5.

POLO PONY BROOCH from £15.

DIAMOND JOCKEY BROOCH, from £25.
(Owners Colours to order.)

DONKEY BROOCH from £15.

CHATTO & WINDUS'S NEW BOOKS

Mrs. LYNN LINTON'S New Novel, DULCIE EVERTON, is now ready, in 2 vols., 10s. net; and at every Circulating Library.

The New American Novel, JERRY THE DREAMER, by WILL PAYNE, is now ready, crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

SONGS OF TRAVEL. By ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON. Crown 8vo, buckram, gilt top, 5s.

"Except his 'Songs for Children,' I know of no work of Stevenson's that more endears him to his readers than this delightful volume."—JAMES PAYN in the Illustrated London News.

DR. RUMSEY'S PATIENT. By Mrs. L. T. MEADE and CLIFFORD HALIFAX, M.D. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, gilt top, 6s.

"The story has elements of high interest."—Scotsman.

NOW FIRST COLLECTED IN ONE VOLUME.

DEVIL'S FORD, &c. By BRET HARTE. With Frontispiece by W. H. OVEREND. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

TWO MASTERS. By B. M. CROKER, Author of "Pretty Miss Neville," &c. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

"The richness and variety of character that spring up on every other page of 'Two Masters' would of themselves make Mrs. Croker's book an entertaining romance; but she has also a story to tell of crime and mystery that makes her book doubly delightful."—Morning Leader.

THE PROFESSOR'S EXPERIMENT. By Mrs. HUNGERFORD, Author of "The Three Graces." With a Frontispiece by E. J. Wheeler. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

"Beyond all doubt or question one of the most mirthful and most wholesome books of the year. The author of this exhilarating story is gifted with the rare faculty of creating humorous dialogue that bristles with repartee and sparkles with bandinage. . . . . Such a fictional tonic cannot but be regarded as 'a boon and a blessing to men' by every novel reader of a cheerful mind."—Daily Telegraph.

MR. MUDDOCK'S NEW HISTORICAL ROMANCE.

YOUNG LOCHINVAR. By J. E. MUDDOCK, Author of "Basile the Jester," &c. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d. [Immediately.

CHEAP ILLUSTRATED EDITION.

A TRAMP ABROAD. By MARK TWAIN. New and Cheaper Edition. With 314 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d. [Immediately.

JOHN COLEMAN'S THEATRICAL STORY.

CURLY: AN ACTOR'S STORY. Told by JOHN COLEMAN. With 21 Illustrations by C. J. Dollman. Crown 8vo, 1s.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 110 & 111, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

NEW NOVELS AT ALL LIBRARIES
And BOOKSELLERS.

NOW READY.

THE TOWER OF GHILZAN. By SERGEANT-MAJOR H. M. GREENHOW, Author of "Brenda's Experiment." "The Bow of Fate," &c. In 1 vol., crown 8vo, 6s.

NOW READY.

ANTHONY BLAKE'S EXPERIMENT. In 2 vols., crown 8vo, 12s.

NOW READY.

GODDESSES THREE. By D. HUGH PRYCE. In 2 vols., crown 8vo, 12s.

NOW READY.

OUT OF THE WORKHOUSE. By Mrs. HERBERT MARTIN, Author of "Britomart," &c. In 1 vol., crown 8vo, 6s.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON, New Burlington-street.

Sampson Low, Marston & Co.'s New Books.

NEW NOVEL AT ALL LIBRARIES.

Stonewall's Scout. A STORY OF THE AMERICAN CIVIL WAR. By REGINALD HORSLEY, Author of "The Yellow God," &c. 1 vol., crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

FOURTH EDITION NOW READY AT ALL LIBRARIES.

Briseis. By WILLIAM BLACK. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

"In 'Briseis' Mr. William Black gives me my ideal of a novel."—Vanity Fair.

"'Briseis' is a perfect work of art."—Punch.

"The perfectly delightful heroine of his latest, simplest, most captivating novel, 'Briseis,' will, we think, be adjudged a high place of honour among his pictures of young womanhood. . . . Georgie Lestrange is a delightful creature, an inveterate flirt, and an unconscious humourist of the first distinction."—World.

NEW ADDITIONS TO LOW'S STANDARD 2s. 6d. NOVELS.

Perlycross: A TALE OF THE WESTERN HILLS. By R. D. BLACKMORE, Author of "Lorna Doone," &c. Crown 8vo, cloth, 2s. 6d.

"A noteworthy book. . . In essence a study of rural life in south-western England."—Spectator.

The Honour of Savelli: A HISTORICAL ROMANCE. By S. LEVETT YEATS. Crown 8vo, cloth 2s. 6d.

"'The Honour of Savelli' is a story of adventure pure and simple, the hero being an Italian soldier of fortune of the early sixteenth century; and although the author modestly disclaims all comparisons with the most popular contemporary exponent of this school of fiction, he has little to learn from Mr. Weyman or any one else in the art of vivid straightforward narrative. . . . The book is a first-rate piece of work, and holds the reader enchained from the sensational outset to the very last page."—Athenæum.

Health and Condition in the ACTIVE and the SEDENTARY. By N. E. YORKE-DAVIES, Licentiate of the Royal College of Physicians of London, M.R.C.S., Author of "Foods for the Fat." Fourth Edition (Sixth Thousand). Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

"Those who desire a long and healthy life will perhaps find their best means of obtaining it in the study and observance of such rules as are laid down here. . . . The book is a rational and practical guide to 'Health and Condition.'"—Morning Post.

London: SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & COMPANY, Ltd., St. Dunstan's House, Fetter-lane, E.C.

MRS. HUMPHRY WARD'S NEW NOVEL.

On September 25th will be Published, crown 8vo, 6s.,

SIR GEORGE TRESSADY

By Mrs. HUMPHRY WARD,

Author of "Robert Elsmere," "The History of David Grieve," "Marcella," &c.

London: SMITH, ELDER, & CO., 15, Waterloo-place.

SIX NEW NOVELS.

A LONELY GIRL. By the Author of "Molly Bawn." Crown 8vo, cloth gilt, 6s.

THE BISHOP'S AMAZEMENT. By D. CHRISTIE MURRAY, Author of "Aunt Rachel." Crown 8vo, cloth gilt, 3s. 6d.

"Rattles along in a merry exhilarating vein."—Lady.

"Bright and readable from cover to cover."—Liverpool Mercury.

A FOOL OF NATURE. By JULIAN HAWTHORNE, Author of "Sebastian Strome," &c. Crown 8vo, cloth gilt, 3s. 6d. [Third Edition.

"We do not hesitate to call it an extremely fine book."—Spectator.

JENNY'S BAWBEE. By M. W. PAXTON. 6s.

"One of the most unconventional stories recently published." — Dundee Advertiser.

EPICURES. By LUCAS CLEEVE. 3s. 6d.

"'Epicures' will have endurance as well as celebrity. . . . . Will take its rank among the novels of the year."—Pall Mall Gazette.

AN UNDESERVING WOMAN By F. C. PHILIPS. 6s.

"The most pleasing collection of short stories that Mr. Philips has yet given us."—Daily Chronicle.

DOWNEY & CO., Limited, 12, York-street, Covent Garden.

Messrs. METHUEN'S NEW BOOKS.

Marie Corelli's Romances.

FIRST COMPLETE AND UNIFORM EDITION. Large crown 8vo, 6s.
Messrs. Methuen have commenced the publication of a New and Uniform Edition of Marie Corelli's Romances. This Edition is revised by the Author, and contains new Prefaces. The following volumes are now ready:
1. A ROMANCE OF TWO WORLDS.
2. VENDETTA.
3. THELMA.
The 25th Edition of BARABBAS being nearly exhausted, the 26th Edition is in the Press. The 29th Edition of THE SORROWS OF SATAN is in preparation.

Dartmoor Idylls. By S. BARING-GOULD. Crown 8vo, 6s.

The Pennycomequicks. By S. BARING-GOULD. New Edition. With Frontispiece. Crown 8vo, 6s. A New Edition, uniform with the Author's other novels.

The Seats of the Mighty.
The Fourth Edition of Mr. GILBERT PARKER'S Romance being exhausted a Fifth Edition is now ready,

In the Great Deep: TALES OF THE SEA. By J. A. BARRY, Author of "Steve Brown's Bunyip." Crown 8vo, 6s.

The Daughter of Alouette.
By MARY A. OWEN. Crown 8vo, 6s. A story of life among the American Indians.

GENERAL LITERATURE.

A History of Egypt, from the Earliest Times to the Present Day. Edited by W. M. FLINDERS PETRIE, D.C.L., LL.D., Professor of Egyptology at University College. Fully Illustrated. In Six Volumes. Crown 8vo, 6s. each.
Vol. II.—XVII.-XVIII. Dynasties. W. M. F. PETRIE.

Christianity and the Labour Question. By C. F. ANDREWS, B.A. Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

The Greek View of Life. By G. L. DICKINSON, Fellow of King's College, Cambridge. Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d. [University Extension Series.

The Problem of the Unemployed.
By J. A. HOBSON, B.A., Author of "Problems of Poverty." Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d. [Social Questions Series.

Thomas Chalmers. By Mrs. OLIPHANT. 2nd Edition. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d. [Leaders of Religion.

METHUEN & CO., 36, Essex-street, W.C.

MESSRS. HURST & BLACKETT'S
NEW AND POPULAR NOVELS.

Now ready, at all Booksellers and Libraries, in 1 vol., crown 8vo, 6s.

A FAIR PALMIST. By AMYOT SAGON.

Now Ready, at all the Libraries, in 2 vols., crown 8vo.

VAL: A STORY OF THE TIVY-SIDE.
By JUDITH VANDELEUR.
"Judith Vandeleur displays all the felicitous qualities the possession of which enables a few gifted romancists of the day to produce bright and entertaining stories. 'Val' is emphatically a clever novel."—Daily Telegraph.

LORD HARBOROUGH. By ANNE ELLIOT, Author of "Dr. Edith Romney," "Michael Daunt," &c. 3 vols., crown 8vo.
"The author writes excellent English, and we part with 'Lord Harborough' on very good terms."—The World.

HURST & BLACKETT, LIMITED, 13, Great Marlborough-street.

NEW BOOK BY ANTHONY HOPE.

On Tuesday next. Crown 8vo, 6s.

THE HEART OF PRINCESS OSRA.

By ANTHONY HOPE.
With 9 Illustrations by JOHN WILLIAMSON.
 This Volume consists of a series of short stories dealing with the many adventures of the Princess Osra, of the House of Elphberg. The scene of the stories is Strelsau, familiar to the readers of "The Prisoner of Zenda."

London: LONGMANS, GREEN, & CO.

MESSRS. HUTCHINSON & CO.'S
NEW BOOKS.

"When Miss Montrésor published her last novel, 'The One who Looked On,' it was generally acknowledged that she had attained to the front rank of novelists, and great things were to be expected of her. This expectation so universally expressed has been amply verified by the book before us, and those who have found delight and pleasure in reading her former works will find that pleasure intensified by the perusal of the gifted authoress's latest volume, 'False Coin or True.'"—FREE PRESS.

FALSE COIN OR TRUE. By F. F. MONTRÉSOR. In cloth, gilt, 3s. 6d.

BY THE SAME AUTHOR.
INTO THE HIGHWAYS AND HEDGES. Eighth Edition. In cloth, gilt, 6s.
THE ONE WHO LOOKED ON. Fifth Edition. In cloth, gilt, 3s. 6d.

"The story will win favour on both sides of the Border."
NEW NOVEL BY E. CRAWFORD.

JO OF AUCHENDORASS. In art linen, gilt, 6s.
FIRST REVIEW.
"A powerful, healthy, and winning love story which no one will regret reading. The novel is a clever one, the scheme is original, and the treatment it receives is much above the average."—Dundee Advertiser.

THE TURK AND EUROPE.
Read
A NEW ROMANCE BY ROBERT CROMIE.

THE NEXT CRUSADE. By the Author of "The Crack of Doom," "A Plunge into Space," &c. In cloth, gilt, 3s. 6d.

A NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF "A YELLOW ASTER."

A QUAKER GRANDMOTHER. By IOTA, Author of "A Comedy in Spasms," "Children of Circumstance," &c. In cloth, gilt, 6s.
The large first edition having been much oversubscribed before publication, a second edition is in the press.

NEW NOVEL BY NORA VYNNE.

THE STORY OF A FOOL AND HIS FOLLY. By the Author of "A Man and his Womankind," &c. In cloth, gilt, 2s. 6d.; in artistic paper, 2s., with illustrations, being the new volume of "The Leisure Library."
The British Weekly says:—
"She has grasped a plot and handled it with striking skill. Her characters are well imagined and her style at once graceful and easy. This little book may be widely read, for no one who begins it will fail to finish it."

On Thursday next.
A NEW NOVEL BY MRS. HARCOURT ROE.

THE ROMANCE OF MRS. WODEHOUSE. By the Author of "A Man of Mystery," "The Silent Room," &c. In cloth, gilt, 6s.

London: HUTCHINSON & CO., Paternoster-row.

THE BOOKS OF THE YEAR.
By MARIE CORELLI.

Five Large Editions having been exhausted of "Cameos," a Sixth Edition is in the press, completing 32,000 copies. In handsome cloth, gilt, with title-page and frontispiece by G. H. Edwards, 6s.

A TENTH EDITION OF

THE MIGHTY ATOM. By MARIE CORELLI. In cloth, gilt, 2s. 6d. Completing 73,000 copies.

London: HUTCHINSON & CO., Paternoster-row.

Seventh Edition, Revised, Cloth, 1s. 6d.; Paper, 1s.
THE DIETETIC CURE OF OBESITY (FOODS FOR THE FAT). By N. E. YORKE-DAVIES, L.R.Coll.Phys.Lond., &c.
CONTENTS:—Part I.—What Constitutes Robust Health? Evils of Corpulency; The Cause of Weak Heart; Diet—A safe and permanent cure; Quack Medicines or Drugs, permanently injurious or fatal in; Food Required, Amount of; Food, Its Use and Ultimate Elimination; Fat, Its Use in the Body; Over-eating, Evils of; Food in its relation to Work; Exercise; Stimulants in Corpulency; Water, Aërated Drinks, &c. Part II.—Dietetics of Obesity.
OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.
"This work deserves careful study."—Queen.
"The only safe and permanent cure of obesity."—Western Gazette.
"The best work on corpulency that has ever been written."—Evening News.
LONDON: CHATTO & WINDUS, 214, PICCADILLY.

1/- BY POST, 1s. 2d. 1/-

QUEER STORIES FROM "TRUTH."
Reprint of 6th Series (Violet).
"Truth" Publishing Office, 10, Bolt-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

Price 2s. 6d.

A KENTUCKY COLONEL.

A NOVEL

By OPIE READ.

"Allowing for certain national characteristics, the hero, indeed, is very much after the pattern of another Colonel dear to every English reader. Remington Osbury has the same tenderness and generosity, but by no means the same simplicity. He is played upon, and lived upon, and made the prey of many worthless and designing persons, but he is never taken in; he is quite aware of the tricks that are being played upon him, but forgives the rascals in the most delightful manner. Though the novel is full of adventure and brightly written throughout, it is the Colonel to whom it will justly owe its success."—The Times.

"He (the Colonel) is not the least like the vast army of 'military officers' of that rank in the United States, but more resembles in the sweetness and lovableness of his character (though, of course, with the difference produced by bringing up and environment) our own Colonel Newcombe. There is plenty of 'story' in the novel, and not less than the usual amount of 'shooting at sight' which we expect in a description of Kentucky life; but the character of the Colonel is so striking and altogether delightful that it dominates the reader and makes him grudge the time spent over other matters."—JAMES PAYN in the Illustrated London News.

A. & C. BLACK, SOHO SQUARE, LONDON.

ON THE STŒCHIOLOGICAL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION,

ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, AND LUNG COMPLAINTS.

By JOHN FRANCIS CHURCHILL, M.D.

One Shilling, Post Free.

T. BURLEIGH, LATE DAVID STOTT, 370, OXFORD STREET.

STERILITY IN WOMEN: Its Causes and Curative Treatment. By J. B. RYLEY, M.D., M.R.C.S., London. An Illustrated Edition of this Work is now ready. Price 3s. 6d.; post free, 3s. 8d.
London: HENRY RENSHAW, 356, Strand.

THE COLONIAL COLLEGE, HOLLESLEY BAY, SUFFOLK.

Training for Colonial Life, &c.
Fine Sea Air. Dry Soil.
1,800 Acres of Land.
Farming in all its Branches.
Dairy School. Veterinary Science.
Land Surveying. Horticulture.
Laboratory. Workshops, &c., &c.
Full information from the Director at
The Colonial College, or from
The London Secretary at
6, Victoria Street, Westminster Abbey.

PRINCE LINE.—EGYPT and the HOLY LAND.
CHEAP ROUND TOURS a Speciality. Fare £35. The only direct Line calling at Gibraltar, Tunis, and Malta en route.
MADEIRA and the CANARY ISLANDS.—Single fare £10. 10s. Return £15. 15s.
RIVER PLATE DIRECT (not calling at Brazilian Ports), the most direct and fastest Line. Fare 22 guineas.
Luxurious saloons and cabins and promenade decks, all amidships.
Head office:—JAMES KNOTT, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

CORALLINE Keeps the Teeth WHITE and SOUND.
A Delicious DENTIFRICE. TOOTH PASTE.
ROBERTS & CO.,
Foreign and English Chemists,
LONDON— Post Free, PARIS—
76, NEW BOND STREET, W. 2/6 RUE DE LA PAIX, 5.
Sample Box sent free on receipt of post card.

REAL GERMAN HOLLOW GROUND
KROPP RAZOR
ALWAYS READY FOR USE.
NEVER REQUIRES GRINDING
WARRANTED PERFECT
Black Handle 5/6 | Kropp's Duplex Strop 7/6 | Pair, Ivory Handles, in
Ivory Handle 7/6 | Kropp's Strop Paste ...6d. | Russia Leather Case, 21/-
From all PERFUMERS & DEALERS.—Wholesale: OSBORNE, GARRETT, & CO., LONDON, W.

ESTATES, AUCTIONS, &c.

ALDRIDGE'S.—Wingrave Harriers.—Owing to Mr. Stewart Freeman's health not allowing him to hunt as much as usual, his entire pack, in one lot of

24½ COUPLE of HARRIERS,

and 4½ couple of PUPPIES will be SOLD by AUCTION, without reserve, at Aldridge's, St. Martin's-lane, London, on WEDNESDAY next, SEPT. 23.

The above are a capital pack of hounds, all sound and good workers, height from 20 in. to 21 in., and comprise 9½ couple of the Woodnorton Harriers, purchased as puppies from the late Comte de Paris, also the late Eastbourne Harriers, and other well-known valuable strains.

In the event of their not selling as a pack, they will be sold in couples.

On the same day will be offered, in separate lots, three HUNTERS, which have been carrying the huntsman and whip.

The hounds can be treated for privately as a pack, and seen prior to sale, by appointment with Tom Enever, The Kennels, Wingrave, Aylesbury, Bucks, and will be on view at Aldridge's, Monday, Sept. 21, until sale.

Mr. STEWART FREEMAN will be glad to RECOMMEND Tom Enever to any one requiring a thoroughly competent HUNTSMAN, and his boy Dunn, who is a first-class lad in the Kennels and a good Whip.

Catalogue forwarded.

ALDRIDGE'S. — The "PERSEVERANCE" 35 DORKING COACH HORSES will be SOLD by Messrs. W. & S. FREEMAN, at ALDRIDGE'S, St. Martin's-lane, on WEDNESDAY next, SEPTEMBER 23rd.—Catalogue forwarded. On view Monday.

ALDRIDGE'S. — The "DEFIANCE" MATLOCK and DERBY COACH HORSES will be SOLD at ALDRIDGE'S, St. Martin's-lane, London, on WEDNESDAY next, SEPTEMBER 23rd. — Catalogue forwarded. On view Monday.

W. and S. FREEMAN.

TO INVALIDS.—A LIST of MEDICAL MEN, in all parts, willing to RECEIVE RESIDENT PATIENTS, giving full particulars and terms, sent Gratis. The List includes Private Asylums, &c. Schools also recommended—Address, Mr. G. B. STOCKER, 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C.

GROSVENOR GARDENS.—A MANSION TO BE LET or SOLD. Unexceptionable position, lately most tastefully re-decorated throughout. The spacious reception rooms, consisting of drawing-room (panelled in silk), boudoir, dining-room and library, large room on ground floor, suitable for billiard or ball-room, eleven bedrooms, two dressing-rooms, two bath-rooms, splendid offices, hot and cold water, speaking tubes and bells fitted throughout. Sanitary arrangement under the latest improvements.—Apply for full particulars and orders to view, THE LADIES' AGENCY for Apartments and Houses, 83, Ebury-street, S.W.

BELGRAVE LADIES' AGENCY FOR THOROUGHLY RELIABLE SERVANTS can highly recommend an excellent BUTLER VALET. Height 6ft. 2in. Five years' personal character. Accustomed to four or five men. Wages £80. Town or country.

AS FIRST-RATE LADY'S MAID. French. Good character and hairdresser. Accustomed to travel. Wages £30 to £35. Country preferred. Thorough needle-woman.

NURSE. Accustomed to take baby from month. Can have entire charge of one or more children. Excellent character. Aged 34. Wages £30.

FIRST-RATE COOK. Wages £45. First-rate character. Town or country. Aged 35. Kitchen and scullery maid.—Apply, BELGRAVE LADIES' AGENCY, 83, Ebury-street, S.W.

TO LET, FIRST FLOOR FLAT, Ennismore-gardens, for Winter months or longer. Five bedrooms, three reception rooms, large hall, excellent kitchen, offices. Beautifully furnished. Rent 12 Guineas per week. Bath room.—Apply for full particulars, BELGRAVE LADIES' AGENCY, 83, Ebury-street, S.W.

EXCEPTIONALLY nice HOUSE in Lowndes-street TO BE LET for Winter at 8 Guineas per week. Six bedrooms, three reception rooms. Newly done up; also bath-room.—Apply, BELGRAVE LADIES' AGENCY, 83, Ebury-street, S.W.

PRINCE OF WALES TERRACE, exceptional opportunity. TO BE LET, furnished: nine or ten bedrooms. One minute's walk from Kensington Gardens. Four reception rooms, bath rooms. Drains perfect. Rent 8 to 10 Guineas per week, according to length of let.—83, Ebury-street.

FLAT in Victoria-street TO LET from October until May. Two excellent servants left: H. Parlour Maid and Cook. Five bedrooms, two reception rooms, bath room, lift. 5 Guineas per week.—Apply, BELGRAVE LADIES' AGENCY, 83, Ebury-street.

£20 TOBACCONISTS COMMENCING. Illd. guide (259 pages), 3d., "How to open respectably £20 to £2,000." Tobacconists' Outfitting Co., 186, Euston-rd., London. Mngr. H. MYERS, Est. 1866

HOSPITALS & APPEALS.

LONDON FEVER HOSPITAL, Liverpool-road, Islington, N. ADDITIONAL HELP is urgently needed.

Scarlet fever and diphtheria are very prevalent. Subscriptions and donations will be thankfully received by the Secretary at the Hospital.

MAJOR W. CHRISTIE.

Bankers—Prescott & Co., 50, Cornhill, E.C.

CANCER WARDS of the MIDDLESEX HOSPITAL.—35 beds devoted to Hopeless Incurable Cases.

A FUND of £12,000 is being raised for the purpose of erecting a separate BUILDING for the accommodation of the FEMALE CANCER PATIENTS hitherto located in the hospital, an improvement which is urgently demanded on the ground of the health, comfort, and convenience of the patients. Towards the cost of the new building the sum of £9,000 has been paid or promised, and an URGENT APPEAL is now made for the balance of £3,000 still required. Patients are admitted without letters or any recommendation, save that of necessity, and are permitted to remain until "relieved by art or released by death."—F. CLARE MELHADO, Secretary-Superintendent.

THE EARLSWOOD ASYLUM FOR IDIOTS.

About 150 AFFLICTED CASES, from all parts of the United Kingdom, are now seeking admission.

FUNDS URGENTLY NEEDED to maintain the Elected Patients now under care and training in the Institution.

Cases on payments regulated by the Board received as soon as approved.

JAMES DOWNING, Secretary.

Offices—36, King William-street, London Bridge, E.C.

GREAT NORTHERN CENTRAL HOSPITAL.

VERY POOR, FREE, and UNENDOWED.

The only Hospital available for a population of one million.

An urgent APPEAL is made for FUNDS to support the work of relieving 1,200 In-patients and 30,000 Out-patients annually.

L. H. GLENTON KERR, Secretary.

Holloway, N.

THE CAPE COLONISATION COMPANY, LIMITED.

HOW TO MAKE AN INCOME-PAYING HOME.

The object of the above Company is to develop the resources of their estate, consisting of about 12,000 acres, situated in the far-famed Tulbagh district in the Western Province of Cape Colony, about 75 miles distant by rail from Cape Town. They are promoting the establishment of a successful colony. The estate has been surveyed and laid out in blocks of about 40 acres each, a number of which have already been sold. The purchase price of this land this year (with all water facilities) is £12 per acre, threequarters of which can remain bearing interest at six per cent. per annum.

In order to provide for the success of every colonist who has sufficient capital at command to be able to enter into this business, but has no practical knowledge of the work, the company have engaged the services of an efficient manager and a skilled horticulturist; and who will, if desired, plant, cultivate, and attend to the development of each client's farm for one year or more.

Thus any settler, provided he gives ordinary attention to the details of the work this company have undertaken for him, can obtain, under the guidance of a skilled specialist, that practical knowledge which is essential in the working to the best advantage of dairy and fruit farms.

THE CAPE COLONISATION COMPANY, LIMITED.

The Company undertake, if desired, to clear, plant, fence, supervise, and generally manage any holding. They guarantee that 90 per cent. of the trees and vines planted under the supervision of their staff grow to maturity, as specified in the agreement, a copy of which can be obtained on application. The company will manage the estate of any absentee at a charge of £1 a year per acre, and will also undertake to erect on the estate any houses for the residence of a settler, which can be chosen in London before sailing, with estimates given. They further undertake to purchase from a settler, at marketable prices, any approved dairy, farm, and orchard produce.

At the company's headquarters, at Seven Fountains, are the orchard and vineyard belonging to the company, and extensive creameries, packing houses, &c., will be erected as soon as necessary.

Steps are already being taken for the erection of a sugar beet factory, &c., and it is the intention of the company to promote milling and other industries.

THE CAPE COLONISATION COMPANY, LIMITED.

The Company solicit enquiries from families who are seeking a fresh start in life.

Young gentlemen who are looking for an opening in which to make their way.

Farmers who for years have been losing money in this country and would like to start afresh.

Retired members of the Military, Naval, and Civil Services, desiring to increase their incomes.

The delicate (those inclined to bronchial and pulmonary troubles) who need an avenue for making an income in a congenial climate.

The General Manager of the Company is going out at the beginning of October, and will be pleased to have the Company of any one who desires to avail himself of this opportunity of a fresh start in life in a new field.

All are requested to be good enough to place themselves in communication with the Secretary of the Company—from whom full particulars and papers on all points can be obtained. Also the illustrated book on the subject, price 2s., together with a Manual of Practical Orchard Work at the Cape. Published by the Department of Agriculture of the Cape of Good Hope.

3, PANCRAS LANE, QUEEN STREET, LONDON, E.C.,

HOW MR. HALL CAINE WROTE THE 'MANXMAN.'

"Yes, if the fact is of any consequence, you are very welcome to say that I wrote the 'MANXMAN,' with the SWAN FOUNTAIN PEN It has become quite indispensable to me. I can use it with ease and certainty anywhere and at any time, even in the dark, in bed, and on horseback."

We only require your steel pen to select a pen to suit you.

Complete Illustrated Catalogue sent post free on application to

MABIE, TODD, & BARD,

93, CHEAPSIDE, E.C., or 95a, REGENT-STREET, LONDON, W.

NEW BRANCH, 21, High-street, Kensington, W.

REVERSIONS and LIFE INTERESTS in LANDED or FUNDED PROPERTY or other Securities and Annuities PURCHASED, or Loans or Annuities thereon granted, by the EQUITABLE REVERSIONARY INTEREST SOCIETY, LIMITED, 10, Lancaster-place, Waterloo Bridge, Strand, Established 1835. Capital £500,000. Interest on Loans may be capitalised.

AMUSEMENTS.

LYCEUM.—On and after Tuesday next, Sept. 22, Shakespeare's CYMBELINE.
Iachimo..... Henry Irving.
Imogen ..... Miss Ellen Terry.
Mr. Frank Cooper. Miss Genevieve Ward.
Mr. L. Alma Tadema, R.A., has kindly acted as adviser in the setting of the play.
Box-office (Mr. J. Hurst) open daily, 10 to 5. Seats also booked by letter or telegram.

GAIETY.—Lessee and Manager, GEORGE EDWARDES.—ANOTHER GAIETY SUCCESS.—EVERY EVENING, at 8.15, a New Musical Play, in Two Acts, entitled MY GIRL, by James T. Tanner, Music by Osmond Carr, Lyrics by Adrian Ross. Box-office open daily from 10 till 6. MATINEE Saturday Next, at 2.30.

SAVOY.—Every Evening, at 8.30, and Every Saturday Afternoon, at 2.30, THE MIKADO, by W. S. Gilbert and Arthur Sullivan. At 7.50, WEATHER OR NO. Box-office 9 a.m. to 11 p.m.—R. D'OYLY CARTE, Proprietor and Manager.

VAUDEVILLE.—A. & S. GATTI, Sole Lessees and Managers. EVERY EVENING, at 9, a Farcical Comedy, in Three Acts, by Georges Feydeau and Maurice Desvallières, entitled A NIGHT OUT. Preceded, at 8.15, by PAPA'S WIFE, by Seymour Hicks and F. C. Phillips. Music by Ellaline Terriss. MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY, at 3. Doors open 7.45. Box office open 10 to 10.

DALY'S THEATRE.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. AUGUSTIN DALY.—EVERY EVENING, and SATURDAY MATINEE Mr. George Edwardes's Company in THE GEISHA. The book by Owen Hall, Lyrics by Harry Greenbank. Music by Sydney Jones.

AVENUE THEATRE.—Licensee, Mr. CHARLES HAWTREY. Managers, Messrs. HENRY DANA and H. J. WILDE. EVERY EVENING, at 8.15, the Musical Comedy, MONTE CARLO. THE GENUINE SUCCESS OF THE DAY. Box-office (Mr. Fry) open 10 to 10. Seats at all Libraries. MATINEE EVERY SATURDAY, at 2.30.

ALHAMBRA.—TO-NIGHT, Two New Grand Ballets, RIP VAN WINKLE and DONNYBROOK. Grand VARIETIES. Prices, 6d. to £3. 3s. Open 7.30. ALFRED MOUL, General Manager.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—EVERY EVENING, Two Grand Ballets, FAUST and LA DANSE. Great success. LUMIERE'S CINEMATOGRAPHE. GRAND VARIETY ENTERTAINMENT. Doors open at 7.30.

PALACE, Shaftesbury-avenue. — The HANDSOMEST THEATRE in EUROPE. The finest Variety Entertainment in London, including the NEW SERIES OF TABLEAUX VIVANTS. Full Licence. Prices from 6d. Doors open 7.40.—Manager, Mr. CHARLES MORTON.

LONDON PAVILION.—TREMENDOUS PROGRAMME. Dan Leno, Vesta Tilley, Lucy Clarke, Fannie Leslie, James Fawn, Bessie Wentworth, Jolly John Nash, Tom White's Arabs, Jenny Valmore, Mdlle. Lalo, Nellie Navette, Ada Lundberg, The Musical Avolos, Major Newell, Passmore Brothers, Joe Elvin and Company, Walter Kino, Jenny Lynn, Northern Troupe, Constance Moxon, Albert Christian. The Sliding Roof off every evening. Prices from 1s. to £3. 3s. Doors open at 7.30. Box-office open from 11 to 5.

TIVOLI, Strand, London.—Cool and Well Ventilated.—Open EVERY EVENING, at 7.45, and SATURDAY MATINEE, at 2.30, with a STAR PROGRAMME, embracing every Artiste of note now in London.—Manager, Mr. VERNON DOWSETT.

MADAME TUSSAUD'S EXHIBITION, Baker-street Station.—Grand Historical Tableaux representing the Announcement to Her Majesty Queen Victoria of her Accession to the Throne, &c., &c. Portrait Models of Fowler and Milsom, Mrs. Dyer, &c., &c. The Actual Confession of Mrs. Dyer. Admission, 1s.; Extra Rooms, 6d. Open from 9 a.m. till 10 p.m.

INDIA & CEYLON EXHIBITION,
EARL'S COURT.
Main Entrance:—LILLIE ROAD, WEST BROMPTON.
Indian, Cingalese, and Burmese Palaces and Shops.
Colonnades, Lakes, Jungle, Gardens, and Streets.
Artisans, Performers, and Illusionists.
Five BANDS.
Grenadiers. Coldstreams.
Venanzi's Orchestra and others.
Mr. Imre Kiralfy's Great Spectacle
"India."
1,500 Performers; 200 Chorus.
Two Performances daily, at 3.30 & 8 p.m.
IMRE KIRALFY, Director-General.
Open 11 a.m. to 11.15 p.m. One Shilling.

GIGANTIC WHEEL running daily.
Two 20-guinea Waverley Bicycles
Given weekly to passengers.

QUEEN'S HALL.
PROMENADE CONCERTS.
Conductor, Mr. HENRY J. WOOD.
EVERY NIGHT, at 8.
Admission 1s.; Balcony, 2s.; Grand Circle (Reserved), 3s. and 5s.
Robert Newman's Box-office, Queen's Hall, Langham-place, W.

"TRUTH" HOTEL LIST.

BONCHURCH HOTEL, Bonchurch, Isle of Wight, one mile from Ventnor Station.
A comfortable, quiet, and most beautifully-situated Hotel. Pretty garden. Good sea view.
H. RIBBANDS, Proprietor.

BOSCOMBE, Bournemouth.—THE CHINE HOTEL. Under new management.
Magnificent sea views. Moderate charges. Book East Station.
Miss BARNETT (late of the Inns of Court Hotel), Manageress.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HIGHCLIFFE HOTEL (first-class). Unrivalled position, West Cliff, full south. Splendid sea view. Most comfortable. Electric light. Table d'hôte (separate tables). Supplies from own Alderney Dairy Farm. Telephone 27.
JOHN KILNER, Proprietor.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HOTEL MONT DORE.—South aspect, 150 rooms, electric light throughout, passenger lift, first-class cuisine, winter garden and lounge, covered tennis court. Turkish, sea-water, and medicated Baths. The Hotel is within two minutes' walk of the Golf Links.—For tariff, address W. KNEESE, Manager.

BRIGHTON.—BEDFORD HOTEL.—Old-established. Unequalled in situation; opposite West Pier. Spacious coffee and reading rooms; sea-water service; unequalled cuisine; great variety of excellent wines. Moderate tariff. Electric light in all rooms.
GEO. HECKFORD, Manager.

BRIGHTON.—GRAND HOTEL.
Centre of Sea Front. Electric Light throughout.
NEW LIFT TO ALL FLOORS.
Inclusive terms if desired from 10s. 6d. per day.
For Illustrated Tariff apply to A. D. HOOK, Manager.

CARBIS BAY HOTEL, CORNWALL. The very spot to obtain rest and quietude. Overlooking the finest bay in England. Mild yet bracing climate. Within easy distance of London by G.W.R. Splendid Golf Links. "A more beautiful spot for residence could hardly be imagined."—Truth.

FOLKESTONE.—ROYAL PAVILION HOTEL, facing Sea. 200 Apartments. Near landing-stage for Continent. Large winter garden. Table d'hôte at 7 p.m.
G. SPURGEN, Proprietor.

FOLKESTONE.—BATES' HOTEL, West Cliff Gardens, and LONGFORD PRIVATE HOTEL, The Lees. Oldest established and most select Family Hotels in Folkestone. Reduced terms during Winter and Spring months. Pension (new Coffee-room) at Bates' Hotel.—G. L. HART, Proprietor
Sanitation Certified.

GRAND CANARY.—THE METROPOLE.
Newest and best Hotel.
Delightful position, fronting the sea.
Terms most moderate.

JERSEY.—The GRAND HOTEL is charmingly situated, facing the sea, with full south aspect, and sheltered from the north and easterly winds. Every home comfort and liberal management.—For terms apply to D. DE LEIDI, Manager.

MALVERN—One of the most charming places for the Holidays.—The IMPERIAL HOTEL occupies the best position, and receives visitors en pension. The golf-links (18 holes) are one of the best in England. Capital stabling for hunters. Droitwich Brine, Turkish and large Swimming Bath in separate buildings. For tariff, apply to the Proprietor and Manager.
F. MOERSCHELL.

TORQUAY.—IMPERIAL HOTEL.—Under entirely New Management. New sanitary arrangements throughout. It is the largest and best-situated Hotel in Torquay, and the best winter residence on the South Coast. Visitors received en pension or à la carte. Terms moderate.
F. FISCHER, Manager.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.—WELLINGTON HOTEL, Mount Ephraim. Under the distinguished patronage of his Grace the late Duke of Wellington, K.G., the leading nobility and gentry, &c. 422 ft. above sea level, south aspect; elegantly furnished; piano in every sitting-room. Cuisine English and French. Electric light throughout.—BRABY, Proprietor,

THE GROSVENOR HOTEL,
BELGRAVIA, LONDON, S.W.
Well known for Wedding Breakfasts and Dinner Parties.
TABLE D'HÔTE OPEN TO NON-RESIDENTS.
Covered Communication to three Railway Stations.
The only Terminus Hotel of the Brighton Railway Company in London.
Pure Water from an Artesian Well on the premises.
Electric Light throughout. Address, MANAGER.

For COMFORT and CONVENIENCE.
THE LANGHAM HOTEL,
PORTLAND-PLACE, LONDON, W.
Situated in the most fashionable, convenient, and healthy locality. Artesian Well Water. Electric Light throughout. Moderate Tariff.
Table d'Hote 6.30 until 8.15. WALTER GOSDEN, Manager.

HOTEL BELGRAVIA,
VICTORIA STREET, S.W.
(Quite close to Victoria Station.)
This is an Hotel in name only. In reality it is a REFINED HOME, replete with every convenience, every comfort, every luxury. Large and small Suites by the day, week, month or year. Also single Bedrooms.
TABLE D'HOTE, at separate tables, open to non-residents.
FIRST-CLASS CUISINE. CHOICE WINES.
For tariff and all particulars apply to MANAGER.

THE WESTMINSTER PALACE HOTEL, facing the Abbey and Houses of Parliament. Every modern comfort and convenience. Reasonable tariff, and no charge for attendance. Telegrams "Hostelry, London."

INNS OF COURT HOTEL, Holborn.—A first-class Family Hotel, with 200 bedrooms, all modern conveniences. Electric lights, lifts, &c. Banquets arranged. The Central Hall is the finest and the Dining-room the pleasantest in London. Masonic lodge, public meeting rooms, &c. Table d'hôte, 6 to 8, 3s. 6d.—FRANK BLACKLEY, Manager. Inclusive terms from 10s. 6d. per day.

A COMPLETE LIST OF
HOTELS OF THE MIDLAND RAILWAY.

London	MIDLAND GRAND (St. Pancras).	Leeds ...	QUEEN'S.
Liverpool...	ADELPHI.	Derby ...	MIDLAND.
Bradford ...	MIDLAND.	Morecambe	MIDLAND.
		Normanton	STATION.

The Favourite Hotels for Tourists, Cyclists, and Pedestrians.
Specialities—Comfort, Good Cuisine, Moderate Charges.
WILLIAM TOWLE, Manager, Chief Office, St. Pancras, N.W.

ILFRACOMBE.
ILFRACOMBE HOTEL,
The PRINCIPAL and ONLY HOTEL facing the Sea.
Unrivalled sea frontage and open surroundings. Grounds five acres. Lawn Tennis Courts. Croquet Lawn. Large Swimming Bath. Elegant Lounge hall. 250 rooms.
H. R. GROVER, Manager.

HASTINGS. Due South, Facing Sea.
QUEEN'S HOTEL,
LARGEST AND BEST APPOINTED.
Sunny, and most sheltered position in Hastings and St. Leonards.
ELECTRIC LIGHT. PASSENGER ELEVATOR.
Moderate Tariff. Hotel Flys attend the trains.
WILLIAM GLADE, Manager.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE.—Charming health resort for this season.—ROYAL HOTEL, aristocratic and old established, facing sea and standing in its own grounds of 8 acres. Every home comfort and attention, with unrivalled cuisine. Dairy produce and vegetables from home farm. Four tennis courts. Near golf links and beautiful woods. Extensive view of Welsh coast. Terms strictly moderate.—Proprietors, ROGERS BROS.

HANS CRESCENT HOTEL
HANS CRESCENT, BELGRAVIA, LONDON, S.W.
Within three minutes' walk of the Albert Gate Entrance to Hyde Park.

THIS FAMILY HOTEL, sumptuously Furnished and Appointed, is now
Open for the reception of Visitors.
It is luxuriously complete in every detail. There are many self-contained Suites of Apartments, ensuring the utmost privacy (each having a Bathroom), as well as Single Bedrooms. A HIGH-CLASS RESTAURANT (à la carte and at fixed prices) is attached to the Hotel for Non-Residents.

RECHERCHÉ CUISINE.

One of the many attractions of this Hotel is the unique WINTER GARDEN, splendidly proportioned, and occupying an area of 2,500 square feet.

Manager, MONS. C. DIETTE.

HOTELS, &c.

HOTEL DE PUYS, Dieppe, NOW OPEN. Beautifully placed on the edge of Cæsar's Camp, with spacious verandahs overlooking the sea. Magnificent Salons. No back bedrooms. English sanitation and furniture. Electric light, and refrigerating chamber. Good bathing and cycling, lovely drives and walks, delicious cooking, moderate charges, and all the comforts of an English country house.—J. PELLETIER, Manager.

DIEPPE.
HOTEL ROYAL.

Hotel of the Best Class. Established 50 Years.

200 Bedrooms (130 facing the sea). 24 Private Sitting Rooms facing the sea.
Public Drawing and Reading Rooms.
Within 40 yards of Casino and Etablissement des Bains.
THE ONLY HOTEL IN DIEPPE WITH A LIFT TO EVERY FLOOR.
Electric Light. Telephone. Perfect Sanitation.
HIGH-CLASS CUISINE. MODERATE TARIFF. Season, June 15 to Oct. 15.
For Terms, address, MADAME LARSONNEUX, Propriétaire.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE.—"The healthiest, most bracing watering-place in the world."—Vide report, Lancet. The GRAND ATLANTIC is the principal and leading Hotel, facing the sea. 130 sumptuously appointed rooms, delightful public rooms, hydraulic lift, every modern comfort. Nearest to Golf Links and Railway Station. "Own model farm."—Apply, Manager. Telegraphic address, "Atlantic." Telephone No. 11.

LOWESTOFT
GRAND HOTEL.

The finest Situation on the East Coast; 300 ft. sea frontage, facing the German Ocean. Stands in its own beautifully wooded grounds, within easy distance of Oulton Broad.

Connected with the ROYAL HOTEL, LOWESTOFT; also RIDLER'S HOTEL, HOLBORN, where Tariff may also be obtained.

BUXTON, DERBYSHIRE.
THE PALACE HOTEL.

Large and high-class Hotel. Upwards of 200 rooms. Finest position in Buxton. Surrounded by own grounds of six acres. Ground-floor sitting-rooms and bed-rooms. Magnificent public rooms. American elevator. Table d'hôte at separate tables. Tariff, with plan of rooms and sketch map of Buxton, on application. A. CROSS, Manager.

PITLOCHRY.
THE ATHOLL HYDROPATHIC (MACDONALD'S).
The ORIGINAL and very much the LARGEST. Every window commands a view of the MOST MAGNIFICENT SCENERY in SCOTLAND. 500 feet above sea level. Pure, dry, bracing air. Extensive Pleasure Grounds.
TENNIS—CROQUET—GOLF—ARCHERY—FISHING.
To prevent disappointment, address all communications—
"THE ATHOLL, PITLOCHRY." Telegraphic Address, "ATHOLL."

CARTER 6A, NEW CAVENDISH ST. PORTLAND PLACE, LONDON.

ONLY ADDRESS OF ORIGINAL CARTER
LITERARY MACHINE.

For holding book, lamp, meals, &c., in any position over an easy chair, bed, or sofa.
Deliciously luxurious. A most useful gift. Prices from 17/6

Carrying Chairs from £1.
Breakfast in Bed Tables from 30/-

INVALID FURNITURE.
ADJUSTABLE COUCHES and BEDS from £1. 10/-

Bed Lift £3. 10/-	Bed Rests 7/6
Reclining Boards, 25/-	Leg Rests 10/-
Walking Machines	Crutches 10/6
Portable W.C.'s.	Bed Baths 12 6
Electric Bells, Urinals, &c.	Commodes, £1. 5/-
Air & Water Beds.

Self-Propelling Chairs from £2

BATH CHAIRS FROM £1. 5/-

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUES POST FREE.

JOHN CARTER, 6a, NEW CAVENDISH ST. Portland-pl. London, W.

FARADAY & SON's

Electric Light Fittings

NEW DESIGNS for SEASON '96

2 & 3 BERNERS ST.
LONDON W

Mülhens' "Rhine Violets"

DISTILLED FROM FRESHLY GATHERED RHINE VIOLETS.
A SCENT OF RARE FRAGRANCE.
A VERY ECHO OF NATURE.

CAUTION.
Owing to the phenomenal success of this popular Scent, some perfumers are offering essences of their own manufacture under the name of "RHINE VIOLETS." The public must not be deceived, but insist upon "MULHENS'" brand, which is distilled from the flower itself. Don't accept any bottle not bearing Ferd. Mülhens' name. This alone ensures genuineness. Ferd. Mülhens, of Cologne, is the originator of this exquisite perfume, and was the first to introduce it into England.

The Fashionable Press of London are unanimous in praise of it.

3/-, 5/6, 9/-, 20/- per bottle.

"Rhine Violet" Sachets, 2/6 each.
"Rhine Violet" Soap, 2/6 per tablet, or 7/- per box of 3 tablets.

Of most dealers in first-class Perfumes, or from 4711 Depot, 62, NEW BOND STREET, W.

Highest Award at Food and Cookery Exhibition, London, May, 1895.

BREAD
HOVIS
Regd
BISCUITS

CURE FOR INDIGESTION.

SUPPLIED TO H.M. THE QUEEN AND ROYAL FAMILY.

Imitation is the Sincerest Form of Flattery.

The public are cautioned against accepting from Bakers spurious imitations of "Hovis," which, having met with such unprecedented success, is being copied in many instances as closely as can be done without risk.

If any difficulty be experienced in obtaining "Hovis," or if what is supplied as "Hovis" is not satisfactory, please write, sending sample (the cost of which will be defrayed) to

S. FITTON & SON, Millers, Macclesfield.

BAKERS RECOMMENDING ANY BREAD IN PLACE OF "HOVIS" DO SO FOR THEIR OWN PROFIT. BEWARE!

The complete Furniture of a comfortable Bedroom: Wardrobe, Dressing Chest, Washstand, 2 Cane-seat Arm Chairs, Chamber Service, Bed, Bedding, &c., folds into one small case measuring 6ft. by 2ft. 6in. by 2ft. Rigidity and appearance of glued-up Furniture. Patented all over the World. Invaluable to Colonists, Hotels, Officers' Quarters, Spare Bedrooms, Shooting Boxes, &c., &c. Suites at all prices, separate parts can be had. Obtainable at all Dealers' or direct from

THE
V.P. FOLDING BEDROOM SUITE & FURNITURE CO., LIM.
330, OLD STREET, LONDON, E.C.

LATEST AWARDS—

Geneva, 1896	(Hors Concours)	HIGHEST HONOURS
Frankfort o/M, 1896	(Gold Medal)	HIGHEST HONOURS
Chicago, 1893	(Medal and Diploma)	HIGHEST HONOURS

Hunyadi János

BEST AND SAFEST NATURAL APERIENT.

25 Years Success in the United Kingdom.

Recommended and Prescribed by Medical Men Everywhere.

"HUNYADI JÁNOS has established itself in favour with leading physicians and therapeutists of every country, whose testimonies bear witness to its action as a speedy, sure, and gentle Aperient for ordinary use; it is remarkably and exceptionally uniform in its composition, and free from defects incidental to many other Hungarian Bitter Waters." —British Medical Journal, Aug 30th, 1884.

PROFESSOR VIRCHOW, the celebrated Berlin Physician, says that "HUNYADI JÁNOS" has always given him prompt and satisfactory results, and he considers it to be "one of the most valuable of the Curative Agents at our disposal."

CAUTION.—Every Bottle bears the Signature of the Proprietor, ANDREAS SAXLEHNER.

BREAKFAST—SUPPER
EPPS'S
GRATEFUL—COMFORTING.
COCOA
BOILING WATER OR MILK.

FLORILINE

FOR THE TEETH AND BREATH

Is the BEST LIQUID DENTIFRICE in the WORLD.

PREVENTS THE DECAY OF THE TEETH.

Renders the Teeth Pearly White.

IS PERFECTLY HARMLESS AND DELICIOUS TO THE TASTE.

Is Partly Composed of Honey, and Extracts from Sweet Herbs and Plants.

Of all Chemists and Perfumers throughout the World.

2s. 6d. per Bottle.

FLORILINE TOOTH POWDER,
Only put in Glass Jars, Price 1s.

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER

Prevents the Hair from Falling off.

Restores Grey or White Hair to its ORIGINAL COLOUR.

Being delicately perfumed, it leaves no Unpleasant Odour.

IS NOT A DYE.

Should be in every House where a HAIR RENEWER is needed.

ASK YOUR CHEMIST OR HAIRDRESSER FOR

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

Price 3s. 6d. per bottle.

A Bad Complexion

is often due to a bad soap.

BLOTCHES ARE REPULSIVE, AND WILL MAR THE APPEARANCE OF ANY FACE. YOU CAN'T GET RID OF THEM WITH BAD SOAP.

PREMIER VINOLIA SOAP

Is made specially for delicate, sensitive, irritable skins, and is scented with the most charming and innocent Perfumes.

PREMIER VINOLIA SOAP

yields a profuse, cleansing, demulcent, lather, and tends to keep the skin soft and velvety, and the complexion beautiful and clear. Its use doesn't cost a farthing a day.

Vinolia is a Complexion Soap.

VINOLIA CREAM.—For Itching, Sunburn, Insect Bites, &c., 1/1½ and 1/9.
VINOLIA POWDER.—For Roughness, Chafes, &c., 1/1 and 1/9.

A PROPRIETARY COMPANY. 173 ACRES. 15 GOLD-BEARING REEFS.

DAVID LINDSAY, F.R.G.S., reports:—"One of the richest surface shows yet found." LESLIE A. NORMAN, M.A.I.M.E., reports:—"One of the finest properties on the Goldfields."

SCOTTISH WESTRALIA (Limited) INVITES SUBSCRIPTIONS of the UNDERMENTIONED ISSUE.

£50,000, being the whole of the necessary cash for working capital and purchase consideration to be provided out of the present issue, having been guaranteed, the Directors will proceed to allotment on the closing of the Lists.

The LISTS will be OPENED on TUESDAY, 15th September, 1896, and CLOSED on FRIDAY, 18th September, 1896, at 10 a.m., for both Town and Country.

LINDSAY'S FIND PROPRIETARY, Limited.

Incorporated under the Companies Acts, 1862 to 1890.

CAPITAL, £200,000, in 200,000 Shares of £1 each. SHARE WORKING CAPITAL, £50,000.—£30,000 Cash Working Capital will be secured by the present issue, the balance of 20,000 Shares being held in reserve. Present Issue, £180,000 Shares, of which 80,000 are to be allotted as fully paid to the Vendors, being part of the purchase consideration. The remaining 100,000 SHARES are NOW OFFERED for SUBSCRIPTION. Payable 2s. 6d. on Application, 5s. on Allotment, and the balance, as required, in calls not exceeding 5s. each, at intervals of not less than two months.

DIRECTORS.

Robert Thomson, Chairman of Scottish Westralia, Limited (Chairman).
Robert Crawford, J.P. (of Messrs. Burns, Crawford, & Co.), 84, Miller-street, Glasgow.
David Lindsay, F.R.G.S., Coolgardie, W.A.
Edmund Mitchell, 50, New Broad-street, London, E.C.
John Morty, Tudor Lodge, Hornsey-lane, London, N.

MANAGING ENGINEERS.—Kyle & Norman, Coolgardie, W.A.
COLONIAL SECRETARY.—John Telfer, Coolgardie, W.A.

BANKERS.

Bank of Scotland, London, Edinburgh, and Branches.
Bank of Australasia, Coolgardie, W.A.

SOLICITORS.—Ashurst, Morris, Crisp, & Co., 17, Throgmorton-avenue, London, E.C.
AUDITORS.—Brown, Fleming, & Murray, Chartered Accountants, 163, West George-street, Glasgow.
SECRETARY AND OFFICES.—Walter Maclachan, Chartered Accountant, 50, New Broad-street, London, E.C.

ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.

This Company is formed for the purpose of acquiring and developing eight gold mining leaseholds, having a total area of 173 acres, together with a water area of 5 acres additional, known collectively as "Lindsay's Find," lying about 32 miles N.E. of Kalgoorlie, about 10 miles due north of the famous General Gordon Mine, and 12 miles E. of the Hit or Miss Gold Mine in the Kanowna district of the North-East Coolgardie Goldfield, Western Australia, and for the other purposes specified in the Memorandum of Association.

It is the intention of the Directors to develop each block, and, as results justify, to form subsidiary Companies for working sections of the property, and equipping them with machinery; and large profits, in cash and shares, should be earned for the Proprietary Company's shareholders from these flotations. The present provision of £30,000 of working capital is considered ample for these purposes.

Timber for all mining purposes and for fuel is reported to be abundant on and around the property.

Water has been struck on the water rights area, and there are also extensive catchments for conserving the rainfall, and excellent sites for tanks for storage of water.

The railway now nearly completed to Kalgoorlie is proposed to be extended a further 12 miles to Kanowna, whence there is a good level road to the property, a distance of only 20 miles.

The reports accompanying the Prospectus show that no fewer than fifteen reefs outcrop on the property, varying in width from 12 in. to 18 ft., and all showing visible gold.

The reports show that all the reefs carry gold. From two of the reefs stone in which no gold was visible gave by mortar and dish test 3 oz. to the ton, while in other parts samples taken from the reefs assayed at the rate of 5 oz. to the ton. Large blocks of dollying stone, carrying heavy pieces of gold, were broken from different parts of the reefs.

Special attention is directed to the reports which accompany the Prospectus, from which it will be seen that the property is one of great extent, and quite exceptional promise.

The geological formation of the country indicates permanence. The workings on the Hit or Miss Gold Mine prove that the reefs in this district continue in depth and improve in gold value.

The development of this large and valuable property will be under the immediate supervision of Mr. David Lindsay, F.R.G.S., Colonial Manager of Scottish Westralia, Limited, who is one of the Directors of this Company.

Prospectuses, containing full particulars of Contracts, &c., and Forms of Application may be obtained from the Auditors, and at the Offices of the Company.

London, 14th September, 1896.

This Form of Application may be used, and should be sent either to the Bankers, or to the Secretary of the Company.

No.....

LINDSAY'S FIND PROPRIETARY, LIMITED.

Capital ... ... £200,000, in Shares of £1 each.
ISSUE of 180,000 SHARES, being those numbered 1 to 100,000 inclusive.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR SHARES.

To the Directors of LINDSAY'S FIND PROPRIETARY, LIMITED.

Gentlemen,—Having paid the sum of £....., being a deposit of 2s. 6d. per Share payable on application for .....Shares of £1 each in Lindsay's Find Proprietary, Limited, I hereby request you to allot me that number of Shares, and I agree to accept the same, or any less number that may be allotted to me, upon the terms of the Prospectus, as advertised, and the Memorandum and Articles of Association of the Company; and I agree to pay the further instalments upon such allotted Shares as required in the terms of the said Prospectus, and I authorise you to place my name on the Register of Members in respect thereof, and I declare that I waive any fuller compliance with Section 38 of the Companies Act, 1867, than that contained in the Prospectus.

Usual Signature .....
Name (in full) .....
Address .....
Description .....
Date .....1896.

PRUDENTIAL ASSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED.—Holborn Bars, London.

EVERY DESCRIPTION OF LIFE ASSURANCE AND ANNUITY BUSINESS TRANSACTED.
REVERSIONS PURCHASED.

Invested Funds, £25,000,000.

The last Annual Report can be obtained on application to the Secretary.

SPECIAL ADVANTAGES TO PRIVATE INSURERS.

THE IMPERIAL INSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED. FIRE. Est. 1803, 1, Old Broad-st., E.C., & 22, Pall Mall, S.W. Subd Capital, £1,200,000. Paid-up, £300,000. Total funds, over £1,500,000.—E. COZENS SMITH, Gen. Man.

BIRKBECK BANK (Estab. 1851), Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane, London. Two and a-half per cent. interest allowed on deposits, repayable on demand. Two per cent. on current accounts, on the minimum monthly balances when not below £100.

The BIRKBECK ALMANACK with particulars, post free.
FRANCIS RAVENSCROFT, Manager.

LANGLAAGTE ROYAL GOLD MINING COMPANY, LIMITED.

NOTICE is HEREBY GIVEN that the GENERAL MEETING of this Company will be held at JOHANNESBURG, on the 13th OCTOBER, 1896.

Transfer Books wil be closed from the 22nd September to the 13th October, both days inclusive.

By order,
Johannesburg Consolidated Investment Company, Limited.
T. HONEY,
London Secretary.

7, Lothbury, E.C.
September 11th, 1896.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

NOTICE.

No Member of the Stock Exchange is allowed to advertise for business purposes, or to issue circulars to persons other than his own principals.

Persons who advertise as Brokers or Share Dealers are not Members of the Stock Exchange, or under the control of the Committee.

A List of Members of the Stock Exchange who are Stock and Share Brokers may be seen at the Bartholomew-lane Entrance to the Bank of England, or obtained on application to

FRANCIS LEVIEN
Secretary to the Committee of the Stock Exchange.

Committee Room, The Stock Exchange, London, E.C.

FOR COMPLAINTS of the STOMACH, LIVER, etc., DRINK

VICHY CELESTINS Spring

Sold by all Chemists, Druggists, and Grocers throughout the Kingdom.

Sole Importers: INGRAM & ROYLE, Ltd., 52, Farringdon Street, LONDON, E.C.

JOHN SHAW, STOCK & SHARE DEALER.

HEAD OFFICE:—
WARDROBE CHAMBERS, DOCTORS' COMMONS, LONDON, E.C.

BANKERS:—
CAPITAL AND COUNTIES, Ludgate-hill, Long Acre, Piccadilly, and Brighton Branches.
LONDON AND MIDLAND, Newgate-street and Tooley-street Branches.

DIRECT PRIVATE TELEGRAPH WIRE between LONDON and BRIGHTON Offices.

FULL PARTICULARS of SPECIAL ARRANGEMENTS for DEALING sent post free on application.

COVER SYSTEM.—The loss is limited, the profits are unlimited, and there is such an independence in acting that the principle must and does recommend itself to business men—indeed, it is the only method on which they deal—for speculative accounts.

£5 COMMANDS £500 STOCK.
£10 COMMANDS £1,000 STOCK.
£50 COMMANDS £5,000 STOCK.
£500 COMMANDS £50,000 STOCK, and so on in proportion.

NO OTHER LIABILITY WHATEVER.

JOHN SHAW, STOCK AND SHARE DEALER, LONDON, BRIGHTON, MANCHESTER, AND DUBLIN.

W. B. COCHRANE & CO.,
STOCK AND SHARE DEALERS.
13 and 14, CORNHILL, LONDON, E.C.
Telegrams: "Reinvest, London."
Bankers: London and Westminster, Lothbury, E.C.

Accounts opened for the Stock Exchange Fortnightly Settlements, and also upon the usual Cover System. Accounts opened for Three-monthly Settlement without Carrying-over Rates being charged.

Prospectus, Monthly Investment Book, Mining List, and Market Reports, with the latest advices, forwarded gratis upon application.

W. B. COCHRANE & CO., 13 and 14, Cornhill, E.C.

LONDON AND COUNTY ADVANCE AND DISCOUNT COMPANY, Limited.—Cash advanced from £10 to £500, without preliminary fees or deductions for interest, for short or long periods, repayable by easy instalments, at moderate rates, upon approved security. Bills Discounted. Forms free. Offices, 57 and 58, Chancery-lane, W.C.—JOHN STONE, Secretary

The whole of the present issue, viz., £23,500 having been privately guaranteed and subscribed, this notice is only intended for the purpose of giving public information, no Shares being offered for public subscription.

The Leases to be acquired by the Company are, and have hitherto been known as THE GOLDEN RIDGE and THE GOLDEN RIDGE EXTENDED. As however another Company has been recently registered, bearing the title of THE GOLDEN RIDGE PROPRIETARY COMPANY, Ltd., it has been found necessary, and is also obviously advisable, in order to prevent confusion, to register this Company under a different title. The name, THE GOLDEN LEASES MINING COMPANY, Ltd., has therefore been adopted.

The Subscription List will be opened at Messrs. Brown, Janson, & Co., Bankers, Abchurch-lane, London, E.C., on Thursday, the 17th day of September, 1896, and will be closed at 4 p.m. the same day, for both Town and Country applications.

The Mining, Transport, and General Finance Company, Limited, and others, having guaranteed the subscription of the whole of the Present Issue, the Directors will proceed to allotment on Thursday, the 17th September, 1896.

The Golden Leases Mining Company

(Coolgardie, Western Australia.) LIMITED.

Incorporated under the Companies Acts, 1862 to 1890.

CAPITAL, £120,000, divided into 120,000 Shares of £1 each.

WORKING CAPITAL - - £30,000.

Of which £20,500 has been guaranteed, leaving 9,500 Shares for future issue, as and when the Directors may deem fit.

The Mining, Transport, and General Finance Company, Ltd., offers for subscription 23,500 Shares at par, payable—2s. 6d. on Application, 7s. 6d. on Allotment, and the balance in calls of 2s. 6d. each, at intervals of not less than two months.

DIRECTORS.

James Blackwood, Esq. (Chairman Champion Reef (Nanninc, W.A.) Gold Mining Company, Limited), Messrs. Blackwood Bryson & Co., East India Merchants, 12, Great Tower-street, E.C., Chairman.

Henry J. Hadrill, Esq. (Director Victoria Reef Gold Minc, Limited), Millfield, Chislehurst.

Charles Milman Mainwaring, Esq. (Director Menzies Golden Age, Limited), 30, Grosvenor-place, S.W.

Henry McDowell, Esq. (Director Mining Transport and General Finance Company, Limited), Oatlands Park, Weybridge, and 31, Aldford-street, Park-lane, W.

The Right Honourable Lord Waterpark (Chairman, The British North Borneo Development Corporation, Ltd.), Doveridge, Derby.

LOCAL CONSULTATIVE BOARD.

John Wilson, Esq., J.P., Mayor of Kalgoorlie, Kalgoorlie, W.A.

Phillip Hargan, Esq., Messrs. Hargan & Gorrie, Coolgardie, W.A.

BANKERS.

Messrs. Brown, Janson, & Co., Abchurch-lane, London, E.C.

Western Australian Bank, Perth, Western Australia, and Branches.

SOLICITORS.

Messrs. Morten Cutler & Co., 99, Newgate-street, E.C.

Messrs. Pilkington & Hall, Kalgoorlie, Western Australia.

BROKERS.

London—Messrs. Dean Swift & Co., 18 and 19, Old Broad-street, and Stock Exchange.

Bristol—Messrs. Betton, Sayce, Vaughan, & Co., 10, Clare-street and Stock Exchange.

Glasgow—Alfred Muir, Esq., 104, West George-street, and Stock Exchange.

Bradford—Messrs. Middleton & Fraser, 206, Swan Arcade, and Stock Exchange.

AUDITORS.

Messrs. E. Layton Bennett & Co., Chartered Accountants, 55 and 56, Bishopsgate-street Within, London, E.C.

MINE MANAGER.

John Ryan, Esq. (Present Mining Manager Golden Ridge Leases), Coolgardie, Western Australia.

SECRETARY AND OFFICES (pro tem.).

John Richardson, Esq., Throgmorton House, Copthall-avenue, London, E.C.

ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.

The Golden Leases Mining Company, Limited, has been formed for the purpose of acquiring and working two Gold Mining properties, one known as the Golden Ridge, Lease No. 2,596, and the other as the Golden Ridge Extended, Lease No. 2,392, containing together about 24 acres. The property is distant about one mile from the Railway Station at Coolgardie, and is situated in the heart of one of the rich gold-bearing districts of the Coolgardie Goldfield.

The Golden Ridge claims have been extensively developed, and as soon as the necessary crushing machinery is erected, the mine should commence to give returns. There appears to be an ample supply of water on the property. The services of Mr. John Ryan, the present Manager of the Golden Ridge properties, and who is one of the original Vendors, under whose supervision all the development work has been carried out, have been secured to this Company, an arrangement which the Directors consider of an advantageous character.

The properties have been reported on by the following gentlemen :—

R. Webster, Esq., Manager, the Golden Bar Gold Mining Co.	Under date April 6th, 1895.
T. Bower, Esq., Messrs. Lindsay & Bower ...	,, ,, 8th, ,,
A. Netherwood, Esq., Manager, Lindsay's Gold Mine, Ltd.	,, ,, 8th, ,,
Duncan Henderson, Esq., Late Proprietor, Mainland Consols, Ltd.	,, Aug. 19th, ,,
Uriah Dudley, Esq., M.E., Golden Bar Mine, Secretary Australasian Institute Mining Engineers	,, March 2nd, 1896.

Copies of the foregoing reports, printed in full, together with copies of extracts from Mr. John Ryan's letters, are enclosed with Prospectus.

The following are extracts from the report :—

Mr. Uriah Dudley, M.E., F.G.S., Secretary Australasian Institute Mining Engineers, who, under date March 2nd, 1896, says :—

"The whole of this Main Reef outcrop is auriferous for a distance of about 15 chains, as also some portions of the very easy contact surface country, on or near both sides of it for the whole distance, but to what extent is not yet proved. The Main Reef proper, however, has been prospected to sundry depths, which tends to show that the lode is uniform in strike, running almost due north and dipping east with some usual irregularities in thickness. The greatest visible width is about 15 feet—even wider if the gold impregnated decomposed country rock is taken into consideration. There are some very narrow parts in the Main Reef, but these do not prevent an average, estimating roughly, of at least 12 feet width being maintained. The north shaft, 110 feet deep at the boundary of the property, is the deepest on the reef, and it shows the reef by cross-cut, at that depth, to be as thick, viz., 15 ft., there, as at any part of the surface. Other shafts, each 40 ft. deep, distributed southward along the Main Reef, also show its persistence and uniform character, carrying gold to the southern boundary, which adjoins the BIG BLOW. The gold contents of the reef are highly variable, and in small parcels, and to the prospectors gave returns in all grades, even as high as the best dollying stone. The gold is mainly in a very fine condition, and much of the reef looks over 1 ounce stone. To the east of the main reef, and running near north-east from the southern boundary, are a number of quartz leaders, small veins which, in places, are exceedingly rich in gold."

The following extracts are from letters written to England by Mr. John Ryan, the Manager at the Mine.

April 7th, 1896.—

"We have cut a large formation at 15 ft. which is about 30 ft. wide carrying nice gold ; it is a lode formation intermixed with quartz leaders and vistained bands and have cross-cut fully 20 ft., but have not reached hanging wall ; it is near the leaders (see plan); it goes 1 oz. 4 dwt. by rough test, which is most satisfactory. The shafts near Northern are all full of water, and there is an immense catchment here which will make, without doubt, the best dam (or tank) site in Coolgardie. All the gullies from Big Blow, Sherlaws, run into this corner. The adjoining claim, the Austral, are making a dam on their property to catch the immense quantities of water running through our N.W. corner. A dam on our N.W. corner would conserve millions of gallons.

May 13th, 1896.—

"GOLDEN RIDGE.—The property is looking better and better every day. I sampled the formation—which is felspar, quartz, &c.—and assays as high as 4 oz. 18 dwt. 5 gr. Silver, 5 dwt. 5 gr., and giving an average assay of 2 oz. 15 dwt. which is excellent. I have now thoroughly proved the large formation, which is now over 60 ft."

May 20th, 1896.

"We have opened up a new reef on 2,392 GOLDEN RIDGE EXTENDED. It is over 10 ft. wide, and shews fine and coarse gold on the surface. I intend to sink about 50 ft., and then cross-cut to see what it is like. The formation is still looking splendid. Can get prospects anywhere."

The following Assays have been made from four samples showing very little gold, and they are stated by the Australian Vendors to be fair average samples taken from four different Shafts. The sample from Shaft No. 2, giving the Assay of 59 oz. 14 dwt., is stated to have been taken at 30 feet right in the centre of the "Ridge" or "Blow" which rises up to 20 feet in height.

CERTIFICATE OF ASSAY.

Assay Offices,
41 and 42, New Broad-street, London, E.C.
August 24th, 1895.

We have examined the four samples of mineral received, and report the following to be the result :—

			oz.	dwt.	grs.
Sample weighing 6,470 grains ...	No. 1	Gold	2	18	19	per ton.
		Silver	0	13	0	,,
,, ,, 8,728 ,, ...	No. 2	Gold	59	14	0	,,
		Silver	0	18	0	,,
,, ,, 4,526 ,, ...	No. 3	Gold	18	13	22	,,
		Silver	0	13	0	,,
,, ,, 7,860 ,, ...	No. 4	Gold	5	11	1	,,
		Silver	0	13	0	,,

DANIEL C. GRIFFITH & CO.

Unlike most gold mining properties situated at Kalgurlie, the water difficulty does not appear to exist, as the reports and letters from the Mining Manager indicate there is an ample supply of water which can be rendered available for all mining purposes. The recent opening of the Railway from the coast to Coolgardie will be of great advantage to the Company, and largely reduce the cost of getting up the necessary machinery, and of working the Mine.

The Vendors to the Company, who pay all expenses attending the formation of the Company up to allotment, have fixed the price to be paid for the property at Ninety Thousand Pounds (£90,000), payable as to Three Thousand Pounds in cash, and the balance in fully-paid Shares, thus leaving Thirty Thousand Shares (30,000) available for providing working capital.

The statements in the Prospectus are based upon the reports and certificate of assay referred to, all of which can be inspected by intending applicants for shares at the offices of the Solicitors to the Company.

Mr. H. McDowell, being a Director of the Vendor Company, will join the Board after allotment and transfer of property.

Contracts have been entered into between John Ryan, by his attorney, W. H. Elphinstone Stone, and The Mining Transport and General Finance Company, Limited, dated the 30th day of July, 1896, and between The Mining, Transport and General Finance Company, Limited, and John Richardson, dated the 14th day of September, 1896, copies of such contracts, as well as the Memorandum and Articles of Association of the Company, and the original reports above referred to, may be seen at the offices of the Solicitors of the Company until the first allotment of Shares.

Agreements and other arrangements have been or may be entered into relating to the property sold, or the purchase thereof, and for the payment of the charges and expenses attending the formation and registration of the Company, and also underwriting, brokerage, commission, and other expenses attending the issue of the Company's Capital, to none of which agreements or arrangements is the Company a party, though they may technically be contracts within the meaning of Section 38 of the Companies Act, 1867. Applicants for Shares shall be deemed to have notice thereof, and to waive their rights (if any) to any further particulars as to the dates and names of the parties thereto or otherwise, and shall accept same as a sufficient compliance with the said Section, and to have agreed with the Company (as Trustees for the Directors and other persons liable) to waive all claims (if any) against them for not more fully complying with the requirements of the said Section, and allotments will only be made on this express condition.

Applications for Shares must be made on the form accompanying the prospectus, and forwarded to the Company's Bankers, together with a remittance for the amount payable on application. In cases where no allotment is made the amount deposited on application will be returned in full. If the number of Shares allotted be less than applied for, the surplus will be credited in reduction or payment of the amount due on allotment, and the balance (if any) will be returned.

Prospectuses and Forms of Application may be obtained from the Bankers and Brokers, and the Offices of the Company.

London, September 10th, 1896.

The Subscription List will be closed both for Town and Country, on or before Wednesday, the 16th September.

THE DUMONT COFFEE COMPANY, LTD.

Incorporated under the Companies Acts, 1862 to 1890.

SHARE CAPITAL ... ... £800,000.
5½ PER CENT. FIRST MORTGAGE DEBENTURES £400,000.

The Share Capital will be divided into

40,000 7½ per Cent. Cumulative Preference Shares of £10 each ...	£400,000 and 40,000 Ordinary Shares of £10 each	£400,000
	£800,000

One-third of each class of security (being the largest proportion allowed by the rules of the Stock Exchange) will be taken by the Vendors in part payment of the purchase consideration.

The Directors and their friends will apply for £50,000 of Debentures, £50,000 of Preference Shares, and £50,000 of Ordinary Shares, in the terms of the Prospectus, which will be allotted to them in full. They have also underwritten the whole of the Shares and Debentures now offered.

The Mortgage Debentures will be a first charge on the land, buildings, and fixed plant of the Company, and a floating charge on all other assets of the Company, and will be secured by a Trust deed in favour of the Trustees for the Debenture-holders, viz.:—EDWARD F. COATES, Esq., 99, Gresham-street, E.C., and ARTHUR BRYANS, Esq., 45, Leadenhall-street, E.C.

Interest on the Debentures will be paid half-yearly on the 1st day of January and the 1st day of July in each year, the first half-yearly payment on the amounts as paid up being made on the 1st day of January, 1897.

The Debentures are repayable at part on 1st January, 1920, or may be redeemed by the Company prior to that date by drawings, on giving six months' previous notice, and with a bonus of £15 per cent., or by purchase in the market.

The Preference Shares will be entitled to a cumulative preferential dividend of 7½ per cent. per annum, payable out of the profits of the Company, and will also be preferential as to capital.

There are now offered for subscription at par:—

26,665 Preference Shares of £10 each	£266,650
26,665 Ordinary Shares of £10 each	£266,650
and 2,667 5½ per cent. First Mortgage Debentures of £100 each	£266,700

Payable as follows:—

	Preference.	Ordinary.	Debenture.
On Application ..	£1 ..	£1 ..	£10
On Allotment ..	£2 ..	£2 ..	£40
On 20th October ..	£3 ..	£3 ..	£25
On 15th December ..	£4 ..	£4 ..	£25

The Shares and Debentures may be paid up in full on the date on which any instalment falls due, and interest will be allowed at the rate of 3 per cent. per annum, on instalments paid in advance.

Interest and Dividends will accrue as from date of payment of Instalments.

Messrs. GLYN, MILLS, CURRIE, & Co. will act as Registrars for the Company's Debentures, which will be Registered at their Banking House, and they will issue the Interest Warrants on behalf of the Company when due.

Scrip Certificates will be issued after payment of the amount due on allotment on the Debentures to be exchanged for the Debentures when ready, at the Banking House of Messrs. GLYN, MILLS, CURRIE, & Co., after payment in full of all instalments.

DIRECTORS.

P. R. Buchanan, Esq., Chairman (Chairman of the East India and Ceylon Tea Company, Limited, and Director of the Consolidated Tea and Lands Company, Limited).
H. K. Rutherford, Esq. (Chairman of The Ceylon Tea Plantations Company, Limited).
Major F. B. McCrea (Director Army and Navy Co-Operative Society, Limited).
Hon. H. A. Lawrence (Director of the Imperial Ottoman Bank).
G. A. Talbot, Esq. (Director of the Selangor Coffee Company, Limited).
Robert Hart, Esq. (Chairman of the Baraoora Tea Company, Limited).
Signor Cornelio Procopio, Managing Director on the Estates.
John Buchanan, Esq., Managing Director at Sao Paulo and Visiting Agent.
Signor Rudolfo Miranda, Managing Director at Sao Paulo.
Forming the Local Board at Sao Paulo.

BANKERS IN LONDON.—Messrs. Glyn, Mills, Currie, & Co., 30, Lombard-street, E.C.

BANKERS IN BRAZIL.—The British Bank of South America.

SOLICITORS.—Messrs. Ashurst, Morris, Crisp, & Co., 17, Throgmorton-avenue, London.

BROKERS.—Messrs. Coates, Son, & Co., 99, Gresham-street, London.

AUDITORS.—Messrs. Jackson, Pixley, Browning, Husey & Co., 58, Coleman-street, London.

SECRETARIES AND MANAGING AGENTS.—Messrs. P. R. Buchanan & Co., 45, Leadedhall-street, London.

ESTATE AUDITOR AND ACCOUNTANT IN BRAZIL.—J. Hussey Robertson, Esq., C.A.

ESTATE SECRETARY AND BOOKKEEPER IN BRAZIL.—C. K. T. Burrowes, Esq.

REGISTERED OFFICES.—45, Leadenhall-street, London.

PROSPECTUS.

This Company is formed for the purpose of acquiring, carrying on, and developing the celebrated Coffee Estates of the Companhia Agricola Fazenda Dumont, situate in the districts of Ribeirao Preto and Parapa Panema, in the State of Sao Paolo, United States of Brazil.

In order in no way to disturb the local and trade relations of the existing Brazilian Dumont Company, this Company will take a transfer of the whole of the Brazilian Company's Capital stock, and will not, unless it is otherwise advised, take a direct conveyance of the property itself.

The estates are freehold, and comprise about 110,000 acres of land, of which 13,000 acres are planted with Coffee, 20,000 acres are estimated to be still available for Coffee extension, and the balance is suitable for the culture of Tobacco, Sugar, Maize, &c.

The properties have an ample labour force, and are well equipped, having fine stores, workshops, drying floors, shops, substantial dwelling houses, &c. The Company also possesses a light railway of 35 miles, the main line of which connects the estate with the neighbouring town of Ribeirao Preto, an important station on the Mogyana Company's line.

The method of calculating the area of Coffee estates in Brazil is by the number of trees, and not by measurement. The average number of trees per acre is about 300.

The following certificate is the result of a survey made by independent experts on behalf of the Company:—

[Certificate.]

The undersigned, Coffee Planters in the Municipality of Ribeirão Preto, having proceeded to ascertain the number of Coffee Trees which exist on the "Companhia Agricola Fazenda Dumont," at the request of the Chairman of the said Company do certify by these presents and for all purposes, that they have found 4,426,604 (four millions, four hundred and twenty-six thousand, six hundred and four) Coffee Trees of various ages, including 194,000 (one hundred and ninety-four thousand) planted in October and November, 1895.

FRANCISCO SCHMIDT.
ARTHUR DIEDERICHSEN.

Ribeirão Preto, 23rd June, 1896.

I certify the above signatures.
In witness whereof,
MANSEL JOSE D'OLIVEIRA,
Notary Public.

S. PAULO, 27th June, 1896.

Taking the maximum number of trees per acre at 330 this gives a cultivated area of at least 13,000 acres.

In November, 1895, the estates were offered by the vendors to Messrs. P. R. Buchanan & Co., and preliminary enquiries having proved satisfactory, Mr. P. R. Buchanan, the senior partner of that firm, proceeded to Sao Paolo for the purpose of making the necessary investigations on the spot. A copy of his report is enclosed with this prospectus, in which the following valuation of the estates will be found:—

"7,000 acres coffee in bearing, giving a profit of £130,000 in 1895, at seven years' purchase	£910,000"
"6,000 acres young coffee of various ages, at £40 per acre	240,000"
"Railway, machinery, and buildings ...	100,000"
"Land, suitable for coffee, say	50,000"
"Other lands	"
	£1,300,000"

"I think if a Company were formed to buy the property for £1,200,000 such a company would prove to be a sound and remunerative investment."

On Mr. P. R. Buchanan's return to England, arrangements were made for the careful inspection of the Vendor's books, and a capable bookkeeper and an accountant were sent out for this purpose, and to prepare the accounts for audit by Messrs. Jackson, Pixley, Browning, Husey, & Co.

Two experienced planters were also sent out to inspect the estates during crop time, and Mr. Robert Hart, Chairman of the Baraoora Tea Company, Limited, and Mr. John Buchanan, Superintendent of the East India and Ceylon Tea Company, Limited, were selected for this duty, and a copy of their report also accompanies this prospectus. Regarding the valuation of the property, Mr. Hart writes:—

"I concur in the valuation of £1,300,000 of the Dumont Coffee Estates, stated by Mr. P. R. Buchanan in his report. The appearance of the area already planted with coffee, the increasingly good results realised by its working, as well as the rich character of the lands not yet cultivated, all indicate that the capital value he puts on it is a moderate one, and well within safe limits."

Mr. John Buchanan, who has been appointed one of the resident Directors at Sao Paolo, and visiting Agent of the Company, confirms the above opinion and writes on the 29th June, 1896, as follows:—

"I cannot close this letter without expressing to you my very great admiration of the Dumont Coffee Plantation. Although Mr. P. R. Buchanan gave me a good idea of what to expect, I never realised I would see such luxuriant and heavy yielding coffee; and it is satisfactory to note that although the coffee is yielding so well, it is still in splendid heart and vigour, and not suffering in any way (except in the case of a few individual trees) from the large crop of this year."

The two reports enclosed, on which the statements in this Prospectus are based, give full particulars of the property, and show that the Dumont Company's estates are certainly the largest and finest coffee property in Brazil, and probably in the world.

The following is a statement of the coffee trees in bearing, and of the yield and profits from 1892 to 1895, and estimated profit for 1896.

	Coffee Trees in Bearing.	Yield lb.	Profit.
1892 ...	1,300,000 ...	3,897,600 ...	£53,978 19 0
1893 ...	1,400,000 ...	4,200,000 ...	£68,128 19 0
1894 ...	1,500,000 ...	5,107,000 ...	£86,589 4 3
1895 ...	2,069,700 ...	8,400,000 ...	£127,453 3 6
1896 ...	2,476,500 ...	9,000,000 ...	£142,226 12 6 (Estimated.)

CERTIFICATE.

The following is a copy of the Certificate of the Auditors, Messrs. Jackson, Pixley, Browning, Husey, & Co., of 58, Coleman-street, London:—

"We have personally examined at Sao Paulo, Brazil, the books of the Companhia Agricola Fazenda Dumont, of Ribeirão Preto, for the years ending 31st December, 1892, 1893, 1894, and 1895, and after making necessary readjustments and without allowing anything for depreciation, we assess the profits respectively at £53,978 19s., £68,128 19s., £86,589 4s. 3d., and £127,453 3s. 6d., the exchange being taken at the average rate ruling during the coffee season of each year under review.

"We have also examined in detail an estimated Profit and Loss Account prepared for the current year, showing a profit of £142,226 12s. 6d., which appears to us to be carefully made up.

"The profits shown above have been earned from a comparatively small area of the present cultivation. The annual advance is due to the increase, year by year, of coffee plants in bearing.

"(Signed) Jackson, Pixley, Browning, Husey, & Co.,
"Chartered Accountants."

"No. 58, Coleman-street, City,
"August, 1896."

The above estimate of £142,226. 12s. 6d. for the profits of 1896 is based on an exchange of 10d. per milreis. Nearly the whole of the estimated crop has now been gathered, and more than one-third has been sold at a price exceeding that at which the estimate is calculated. As an additional security the Vendors have guaranteed that the actual profits for 1896 will not be less than £120,000.

It will be seen that only 56 per cent. of the coffee plants are in bearing and these are all comparatively young (ranging from 5 to 17 years). When all are mature, it is estimated they will yield an average crop of 15 million pounds or 6 million pounds increase on the crop of the present year. By the gradual development of the extensive reserves of unplanted land this increased output should be maintained if not exceeded, thereby rendering the future of the Company very promising and of a permanent character.

	£ s. d.	£ s. d.
Taking the profits of 1895 as a basis, although not half the planted area was then yielding crop		127,453 3 6
There would be sufficient to provide for interest on the Debentures	22,000 0 0
For dividend on the Preference shares	30,000 0 0
		52,000 0 0
And leave a balance of		£75,453 3 6

for the payment of a handsome dividend to the ordinary shareholders, and for the formation of a reserve.

The Company take over the estates as from January 1st, 1896, and are entitled to the profits earned during the current year. These are estimated at about £142,000, and will be used for providing working capital, for forming a Reserve Account, and for the payment of interest on the Debentures, and a dividend to the Preference and Ordinary Shareholders from the dates of payment of the instalments up to December 31st, 1896. It will be noted that the average profit of 1894 and 1895 is sufficient to pay the Debenture interest and Preference dividends more than twice over.

Signor Cornelio Procopio, who has so successfully held the direction of the Estates in the past, and Mr. John Buchanan, a Coffee and Tea planter of 30 years' experience, will be the resident Managing Directors of the Company, and the present Managers and Assistants will continue in the service of the Company, so that the business will be conducted without break of any kind.

Mr. J. Hussey Robertson, C.A., will act as Estate Auditor and Chief Accountant, and Mr. C. K. T. Burrowes as Secretary and Book-keeper.

The purchase-price has been fixed at £1,200,000, payable as to two-thirds in cash, and one-third in Debentures, Preference Shares, and Ordinary Shares in equal proportions.

The following Agreements have been entered into:—

1. A Contract dated 17th April, 1896, between Messrs. Cornelio Procopio de Aranjo Carvalho, Barao Bananal, Antonio Ribeiro dos Santos, and Luiz de

Continued on next page.

DUMONT COFFEE CO., LIM.—Continued.

Rocha Miranda, and Patrick Robertson Buchanan, under which, in consideration of a commission payable entirely in shares of the Company, Mr. Buchanan undertook to assist the Vendors at their own expense in the investigation of the value of the properties and the formation of the Company.

2. A Contract dated 26th August, 1896, between the said Messrs. Cornelio Procopio de Aranjo Carvalho, Barao Bananal, Antonio Ribeiro dos Santos, and Luiz de Rocha Miranda, and Mr. Buchanan, as Trustee for the Company, under which the Company acquires the above properties.

During the negotiations for the purchase of the property, and the formation of the Company, agreements to which the Company is not a party have been entered into with various persons in connection therewith, including agreements relating to the Subscription of the Capital now offered. Applicants for Shares must be deemed to have had notice of these agreements, and to have waived all right to any particulars thereof, whether under Section 38 of the Companies Act, 1867, or otherwise.

An early application will be made to the Committee of the London Stock Exchange for a quotation.

Copies of the accounts for the current year and for the years 1892, 1893, 1894, and 1895, may be seen at the offices of the Auditors.

Copies of the Memorandum and Articles of Association, the above-named contracts, and the within-mentioned reports, certificates, Messrs. Hart & John Buchanan's confirmation of the valuation of the property, and the draft trust deed securing the first mortgage debentures, can be seen at the office of the Company's solicitors.

Applications for Shares must be made on the form accompanying Prospectus, and forwarded to the Bankers of the Company, with the amount of the deposit. In cases where no allotment is made, the amount deposited on application will be returned in full. When the number of Shares allotted is less than that applied for, the balance will be applied towards the payment due on allotment, and any excess returned to the applicant.

Prospectuses and Forms of Application can be obtained at the offices of the Company, of Messrs. Coates, Son, & Co., 99, Gresham-street, or at the Bankers and Solicitors of the Company.

11th September, 1896.

TOWN WATER SUPPLIES.

PURIFICATION BY

MAIGNEN'S FILTRE RAPIDE

MAIGNEN'S FILTER is the only one adopted after public competition by the City of Paris (10th July, 1896).—See "Bulletin Municipal Officiel," 30th July, 1896.—Full particulars from

Maignen's Filtre Rapide & Anti-Calcaire Co., Lim.

255, REGENT ST., LONDON, W.

LIQUEUR of the GRANDE CHARTREUSE.

This most excellent Liqueur, the great preventive of Indigestion, and almost certain remedy for sea-sickness, can now be had of all Wine Merchants, and at prices much lower than formerly.

Sole Consignee, W. DOYLE, 35, Crutched Friars, London, E.C.

'One Piece' Studs

PATENTED UNBREAKABLE.

Beautifully Formed.

No one who appreciates a ni. Stud wears any other.

SECTION.

AVOID IMITATIONS.

SEE THEY ARE STAMPED PATENT.

Sold by all Leading Jewellers.

Wholesale only, Saunders and Shepherd, London

THREE GOLD MEDALS.

Exquisite Models. Perfect Fit. Guaranteed Wear.

THE Y & N PATENT DIAGONAL SEAM CORSET

Will not split in the Seams nor tear in the Fabric. Made in White, Black, and all the fashionable colours and Shades in Italian Cloth, Satin, and Coutil, 4/11, 5/11, 6/11, 7/11 per pair and upwards.

CAUTION.—Every genuine Y & N Corset is stamped.

Sold by Drapers and Ladies' Outfitters in the United Kingdom and Colonies.

ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT

PURELY VEGETABLE, Perfectly Harmless. Will reduce from two to five pounds per week; acts on the food in the stomach, preventing its conversion into Fat. Sold by Chemists. Send stamp for pamphlet.

Botanic Medicine Co., 3, New Oxford-street, London, W.C.

GOLD MEDAL

Health Exhibition, London.

BENGER'S

"Retained when all other Foods are rejected. It is invaluable."
—London Medical Record.

FOOD FOR INFANTS,

INVALIDS, AND THE AGED.

BENGER'S FOOD

is sold in Tins by Chemists, &c., everywhere.

BEST & SAFEST DENTIFRICE

SOLD BY ALL CHEMISTS AND PERFUMERS IN ELEGANT CRYSTAL TOILET CASKET PRICE 2/6.

ALSO IN PATENT METALLIC BOX PRICE 1/-

PRESERVE YOUR TEETH

BY USING THE

OS TOOTH BLOCK

Established 20 years

OVER 3000 TESTIMONIALS

WHAT IS IT?

Why, an ATTACHMENT TO A SPEAKING-TUBE by means of which you can carry on a sustained conversation and need only have one instrument for 6 or 8 Tubes.

Of all Speaking Tube Fitters, or THE HOMACOUSTIC SPEAKING TUBE CO. Show Rooms:—6, Bruton-street, New Bond-street, W.

MAPLE & CO

THE LARGEST & MOST CONVENIENT

Furnishing Establishment IN THE World

EASY CHAIRS EASY CHAIRS

500

TO CHOOSE FROM.

THE FAMOUS "CHANCELLOR" CHAIR

Large, roomy, well proportioned, exceedingly comfortable upholstered in Dormouse cloth of any shade

50/-

TOTTENHAM COURT ROAD LONDON

PLAYER'S

Beautifully Cool and Sweet Smoking.

The Original NAVY CUT

PLAYER'S NAVY CUT TOBACCO is sold only in 1-oz. Packets, and 2, 4, and 8-oz. and 1-lb. Tins, which keep the Tobacco in Fine Smoking Condition. Ask at all Tobacco Sellers, Stores, &c., and take no other. The genuine bears the Trade Mark, "NOTTINGHAM CASTLE," on every Packet and Tin.

PLAYER'S NAVY CUT CIGARETTES are sold in Packets of 12, and Tins containing 24, 50, and 100.

Also supplied in a new size—"MAGNUMS"—packed in Pocket Tins containing 16; and in 50's and 100's.

THE ORIGINAL

CORDING'S

(J. C. CORDING & CO., Established 1839.)

HIGH-CLASS

WATERPROOFS

In Exclusive Patterns and Latest Designs for SHOOTING, FISHING, DRIVING, AND GENERAL USE.

Every Necessary in Waterproof Goods for Sporting Purposes.

ONLY ADDRESS—

19, PICCADILLY, W.

(Corner of AIR STREET).

BARNARD, BISHOP, & BARNARDS

LIMITED.

ORIGINAL MANUFACTURERS OF THE CELEBRATED

SLOW COMBUSTION, OR, COUNTRY PARSON'S STOVES.

New and Original Designs always being produced.

Latest Novelty—ALL-TILED CANOPY STOVE, as Illustrated, No. 667,

"THE IDEAL." (Design Registered.) Fitted with our well-known Patent Norfolk Fire Basket, Brass Vases to Bar Frame, Ventilating Ash Pan, &c.

This Stove, when made up in 6 in. × 2 in. brickettes as shown, in whole colour, as Teapot Brown, &c., has an exceedingly quaint and attractive appearance.

PRICES—

34" wide × 36" high, 13" fire...	£4 12 6	39" wide × 36" high, 13" fire...	£4 17 6
36" " × 36" " 15" " ...	4 15 0	42" " × 36" " 21" " ...	5 0 0

Mantel, Hearth, &c., extra.

93, QUEEN VICTORIA ST., LONDON, E.C.,

And NORFOLK IRONWORKS, NORWICH.

CADBURY'S COCOA

Entirely free from added Alkali or any foreign admixture.

Absolutely Pure, therefore Best.

The Leading Doctors and Analysts, and the Medical Press, testify to the purity and superiority of CADBURY'S COCOA. The LANCET describes it as the "standard of highest purity at present attainable."

OUR PUZZLES.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 910.—SUGGESTIONS OF NAMES FOR YEARLINGS.

 I find that one of the names given by W. W. P. (viz., Nostrum) is borne by a horse that ran last year, and is, I am told, still in training. This being so, I will next week name another prize-winner in W. W P.'s place.—THE PUZZLE EDITOR.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, NO. 916.—EPITAPH ON THE LATE SESSION OF PARLIAMENT.

Vox (real name and address will be published in due course) £2 2 0

SPECIAL NOTICE. — THE COMING "TRUTH" TOY AND DOLL SHOW.

As I have had several inquiries on this subject, let me say here that the large Dolls, as well as the small ones, are now quite ready to be sent out to early applicants. In former years the supply of these large Dolls has always proved insufficient to meet the demand. This year a larger number than usual has been obtained, so it is hoped there will be no disappointments. But as the Dolls are sent out in the strict order of the dates of the applications received, ladies who want to dress large Dolls should not delay in communicating their wishes.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 915.

The announcement of the result of this competition will be made next week.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 917.

The Prize in this Competition has been divided between VINDEX and NIN-NIN for the following quotation :—

"It is a creature that I teach. . . . to wind, to stop, to run directly on; its corporal motion governed by my spirit." Julius Cæsar, Act iv. Sc. 1.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

 The real name, with the address, of ASHER, winner of a half of Prize No. 912, is C. F. Garston, Esq., Hill View, Sherborne, Dorset.

C. H. S. and DONE AGAIN.—Many thanks for your letters. You will see that I have acted on the information you have sent me.

MERCY AND TRUTH.—I am much obliged to you for your communication.

J. E. S.—The subject is scarcely a suitable one, I think.

THE PUZZLE EDITOR.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 921.

An ingenious correspondent of a contemporary, following a precedent long set in French journals at times of crises in French politics, has found in the names of the members of the present Cabinet letters which, when duly arranged, form the significant sentence

"ANNIHILATE THE DESPOT."

Below it will be seen how this sentence is formed :—

Be A ch
Devo N shire
Lo N g
Sal I sbury
Gosc H en
Burle I gh
Ba L four
C A dogan
Ri T chie
Jam E s

Hamil T on
As H bourne
Chamb E rlain

Lans D owne
Ak E rs-Douglas
Hal S bury
Cha P lin
Cr O ss
Whi T e-Ridley

As other sentences, apropos to the present crisis in Foreign affairs, can doubtless be formed in a similar fashion, the readers of TRUTH are asked to exercise their ingenuity in forming them. The usual prize of Two Guineas will therefore be given to the competitor who

BY TAKING ONE LETTER FROM THE NAME OF EACH OF THE NINETEEN CABINET MINISTERS (AS SHOWN ABOVE) IS ABLE TO FORM THE SENTENCE WHICH SHALL BE DEEMED MOST APROPOS TO THE PRESENT STATE OF AFFAIRS IN TURKEY.

Any part of the names of the Ministers may be used for the purpose of this puzzle. Competitors may send in more than one sentence, on condition that all answers reach me by the morning of Monday, September 28, at the latest.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 918.—ASSORTED SPECIMENS—GOOD AND OTHERWISE.

SUGGESTIONS OF TEXTS SUITABLE FOR SERMONS AT CYCLISTS' SERVICES.

The burden of Tyre, Isaiah xxiii., 1.—Infelix, Bootle's Baby, Skriker, Danehill.

But take heed lest by any means this liberty of yours become a stumbling block to them that are weak, I. Corinthians viii., 9.—Demerara Girl.

The Lord will take away their round tires, Isaiah iii., 16.—Junius, Mavourneen, Jedforest.

Power was given him to scorch, Revelations xvi., 8.—Junius, Immota, E. N. S., Nedals, Anvil, Eila, Sterne, and others.

When they went out, the wheels also were beside them; and every one stood at the door of the east gate of the Lord's House, Ezekiel x., 19.—Esperanza, St. Blaise, Meewit, Baritone, A.B.T., Achilles, Albrighton, Figaro, Adelphos, Cyclana, Asher, S. P. W., Penserosa, Infelix.

Let thine eyes look right on, and let thine eyelids look straight before thee, Proverbs iv., 25.—W. H. Fenton, E.M.S., Nedals, L. Whitton, Elimans, Londoner, Mavourneen, Kit, Peltast, White Heather, Risk, and others.

The driving is like the driving of Jehu, the son of Nimshi, for he driveth furiously, II. Kings, ix., 20.—Baba Jujube, Taffy, W. G. B., Clericus, Pax est Mihi, Allspice.

They that were foolish took their lamps, and took no oil with them, but the wise took oil in their vessels with their lamps, St. Matthew xxv., 3.—Silver Mell, Lyswys, Kipper, Mazeppa, Kit, Hopo, Enilorac, Drynoch, Rex, Amalasuntha, Pneumatic, and others.

The chariots shall rage in the streets, they shall justle one against another in the broad ways; they shall seem like torches, they shall run like the lightnings, Nahum ii., 4.—Cymraes, Penserosa, Wanderer, Margaretting, Kynde Wytte, Springer, Dairy, Pigtail, Arch. Gibbs, Derfla, S. Anstice, W. Stone, &c.

Two are better than one; . . . For if they fall, the one will lift up his fellow; but woe to him that is alone when he falleth; for he hath not another to lift him up, Ecclesiastes iv., 9 and 10.—Red Republican, Isabel, Omemee, Dartmouth, Naomi Tighe, Derfla, Pelican, Lil, Provident, X. Q. Q., Oatcake, Orman, E. M. S., White Heather, Elvy, Drynoch, Cortex, Immata, Gregarious, W. B. J., Pop, Uncle Joe, Nedals, Pictor, &c.

My record is on high, Job xvi., 19.—Judith.

He that hasteth with his feet sinneth, Proverbs xix., 2.—Marrowbones.

And the living creatures ran and returned as the appearance of a flash of lightning. And their appearance and their work was as it were a wheel in the middle of a wheel. For the spirit of the living creature was in the wheels, Ezekiel i., 14, 16, 20.—E. N. S., Peltast, May Lewes, Pegasus, Skriker, Penelope, White Heather, Meg, Ivanhoe, Enilorac, Atra Cura, &c.

For bodily exercise profiteth little, but godliness is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come, Timothy iv., 8.—Aberglaslyn, Cymraes, A. E. Beginner, Ro, Donagh, Go Ahead, &c.

We will ride upon the swift; therefore shall they that pursue you be swift, Isaiah xxx., 16. (N.B.—In New York policemen are set to catch "scorchers" on cycles of their own).—Sterne, Dartmouth, Atro Cura, Leo, &c.

Lo, this I have found that God hath made man upright; but they have sought out many inventions, Ecclesiastes vii., 29.—Pentland and others.

For the spirit of the living creature was in the wheels, Ezekiel i., 20.—Pump Court, Nesta, A Novice, Ivanhoe, Meewit, Oom Paul, Clericus, Antelope, White Heather, Lyswys, Enilorac, Iris I., Amalasuntha, Rasbeg, Pipestrella, Annan Academy, A. E. Hancock, Binks, Isabel, A. Hopkin, Searabee, Cigarette, Qu'Appelle, Berrie, Nedals, The Mac, Avis, Inda, E. T. H. W., S. D. Richards, Dora, Adam, Cheriton, X.Q.Q., Tatters, Asher, Ombra, Crofter, &c.

And when the living creatures went, the wheels went by them; and when the living creatures were lifted up from the earth, the wheels were lifted up, Ezekiel i., 19.—Hesta, Dulwichian, Angarad, Ombra, S. P. W., Meg, Inda, Kipper, Timphoni, Arromanches, Wentworth, May Lewes, A. Hopkin, Zummerzet, Naomi Tighe, Beginner, &c.

We will not ride upon horses, Hosea xiv., 3.—Noë, Belfastite, Kilwarlin, Naomi Tighe, &c.

Know ye not that they which run in a race run all, but one receiveth the prize? So run that ye may obtain, Cor. ix., 24.—Demerara Girl, A. E. Hancock, Oatcake, Daisy, White Heather, Ro, Allspice, Raby, Metchley, Elchartay W. Molo, Nikerman, Go-Ahead, Nancy B., Ling-Ling, Wanderer, Whirlwind, Rex, X. Y. Z., Per Ardua, Wanderer II., &c.

I was a reproach among all my enemies, but especially among my neighbours, and a fear to mine acquaintance: they that did see me without fled from me, Psalm xxxi., 11.—Ubique.

They should be sorely pained at the report of Tyre, Isaiah xxiii., 5.—Iris I.

The race is not to the swift, Eccl. ix., 11.—Silver Mell, Immota, Risk, Dodo, Judith, Drynoch, Taffy, Omemee, J. McGrigor Allen, Wyalong, Pax, Queenie Dog, Pictor, Nesta, Kilwarlin, Oatcake Rewob, Dalton, &c.

Some fell by the wayside, St. Luke viii., 5.—Silver Mell, Pictor.

And their wheels like a whirlwind, Isaiah v., 28.—Forget-me-not, Applepine, St. Blaise, Hopetoun, Zac, Dodo, Judith, Wentworth, W. Molo, Opoponax, Ivy Leaves, J. McGrigor Allen, Anvil, Clericus, Avant, Qu'Appelle, Pictor, Meg, Pax Vobiscum, Dartmouth, Deadeye, Kilwarlin, &c.

We will ride upon the swift, Isaiah xxx., 16.—St. Blaise, Hopetoun, Taffy, White Heather, Invicta, Grow Pride, Zac, Whirlwind, Alpha, Atro Cura, Lancaster, Annan Academy, Deadeye, Orlando, Lea, Achilles, E. Phillips, Qu'Appelle, Albrighton, S. P. W., Sterne, Skriker, Noë, &c.

They hunt our steps that we cannot go in our streets, Lamentations iv., 18.—Skriker and Grow Pride.

Wherefore, seeing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us, Hebrews xii., 1.—Aberglaslyn, Allspice, Per Ardua.

As for the wheels, it was cried unto them in my hearing, O wheel! ("whirling wheels" in Revised Version), Ezekiel x., 13.—Hopo, Ivanhoe, Isabel, Hester, A. E. Hancock, Dartmouth, Toby Snibor, Mona, Cigarette, The Mac, C. H. Smith, A Novice, Lil, May, Quid Nunc, Jedforest, Pictor, Nicola, Beryl, Pump Court, Senrab, Could'em, Per Ardua, &c.

When they went out the wheels also were beside them, Ezekiel x., 19.—Hopetoun, Isabel, Pneumatic, Invicta.

A false balance is not good, Proverbs xx., 23.—Applepine, White Heather, and others.

The prudent man looketh well to his going,

Proverbs xiv., 15.—Applepine, Red Rowan, Carfax, and others.

They shall come with speed swiftly. None shall be weary nor stumble. Isaiah v., 26.—Penserosa, Oatcake, Meg, and others.

And the eye cannot say unto the hand I have no need of thee: nor again the head to the feet, I have no need of you, I. Corinthians xi., 21.—Demerara Girl, Danehill, Queerie, Provident, &c.

The height of a wheel was a cubit and half a cubit, and the work of the wheels was like a chariot wheel; the axle-trees, and their naves, and their felloes, and their spokes were all molten.—I. Kings, vii., 32, 33.—Senrab.

Many shall run to and fro, Daniel xii., 4.—Oceanica.

A just weight and balance are the Lord's, Proverbs xvii., 2.—Boythorpe.

Whither have ye made a road to-day, I. Samuel, xxvii., 10.—Serpent, Moris, and others.

A word fitly spoken upon his wheels is like apples of gold in pictures of silver, Proverbs xxv., 11.—Berrie, Per Ardua, and many others.

When they went they went upon their four sides; they turned not as they went, but to the place whither the head looked they followed it; they turned not as they went, Ezekiel x., 11.—Pegasus, Emilorac, and others.

The Singers go before, Isaiah v., 28.—Dodo.

The Singers went before, Psalm lxxviii., 25.—Springer, Deadeye.

Then I turned, and lifted up mine eyes and looked, and behold a flying roll. Then said he unto me, This is the curse that goeth forth over the face of the whole earth, Zechariah v., 1 and 3.—Mickey-Doodle.

And they shall come from the cities of Judah, and from the places about Jerusalem, and from the land of Benjamin, and from the plain, and from the mountains, and from the south, bringing burnt offerings, and sacrifices, and meat offerings, and incense, and bringing sacrifices of praise unto the House of the Lord, Jeremiah xvii., 26.—Arcturus.

And there shall be no more a pricking brier unto the house of Israel, nor any grieving thorn of all that are round about them, Ezekiel xxviii., 24.—Mazeppa.

Stand still, and consider the wondrous works of God, Job xxxvii., 14.—Greeba.

The Pharisees said unto Him, Behold, why do they on the Sabbath day that which is not lawful? . . . And He said unto them, The Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath, Mark ii., 23-28.—Alpha.

And many among them shall stumble and fall and be broken, Isaiah viii., 15.—Ornan.

And they shall be as mighty men . . . and the riders on horses shall be confounded (i.e., they shall make the riders on horses ashamed; see margin), Zechariah x., 5.—Elvy and Metchley.

The wilderness and the solitary place shall be glad for them, Is xxxv., 1.—Pictor.

For this cause pay ye tribute also, Romans xiii., 3.—Margaretting.

And all went to be taxed, every one into his own city, Luke ii., 3.—J. McGrigor Allan.

Strengthen ye the weak hands and confirm the feeble knees, Isaiah xxxv., 3.—Polar, Whirlwind.

He hath hedged me about that I cannot get out; he hath made my chain heavy.—Lam. iii., 7.—Rewob.

In that day the Lord will take away their tinkling ornaments and their round tires like the moon, Is. iii., 18.—Rex and Crofter.

Lo, this only have I found, that God hath made man upright, but they have sought out many inventions, Eccl. vii., 29.—Atra Cura, &c.

They reel to and fro, and stagger like a drunken man, and are at their wits' end, Psalms cvii., 27.—It.

My record is on high, Job xvi., 19.—Pictor and Elchartay.

But what went ye out for to see, Mat. vxi., 8.—Cigarette.

We also bear record; and ye know that our record is true, 3rd Ep. St. John i., 12.—Nedals.

PROPHETIC OF THE "SCORCHER" ON A TANDEM.

1. There met him two possessed with devils . . . exceedingly fierce, so that no man might pass by that way, St. Mat. viii., 28. 2. And strong men shall bow themselves, Eccl. xii., 3.—Pax est mihi.

The woman shall not wear that which pertaineth to man, Deut. xxii., 5.—Uncle Joe, Grow Pride, Amalasuntha, Mixed Biscuits.

When they shall say peace and safety then sudden destruction cometh upon them, I. Thess. v., 3.—Annie.

He hath no pleasure in the strength of an horse, neither delighteth he in any man's legs, Psalm cxlvii., 10.—Cortex.

Beware of dogs, Philipp. iii., 2.—Lyswys.

Their strength is to sit still, Isaiah xxx., 7.—Whitburn.

They return at evening, they make a noise like a dog, and go round about the city, Psalm lix., 6.—Mena and others.

And they shall wander from sea to sea, and from the north even to the east, they shall run to and fro, Amos viii., 12.—S. Anstice.

He wrought a work on the wheels, Jeremiah xviii., 3.—Sancta Bega, Margaretting, M. W., and others.

I am escaped with the skin of my teeth, Job xix., 20.—Scotia.

Put forth all your strength, and be ye not weary, for ye can never go far enough.—Blue China.

Let your moderation be known unto all men, Philippians iv., 5.—Vitio E. J.

Feet have they, but they walk not, Ps. cxv., 7.—A. B. T.

Put them in mind to be subject to principalities and powers, to obey magistrates, to be ready to every good work, to speak evil of no man, to be no brawlers, but gentle, showing all meekness unto all men, Titus iii., 1, 2.—Mona.

Behold, they shall come with speed swiftly: none shall be weary nor stumble among them, Isaiah v., 26, 27.—Excelsior.

Ponder the path of thy feet, and let all thy ways be established, Proverbs iv., 26.—Harebell.

And the noise of the rattling of the wheels, Nahum iii., 2.—Nemesis, and others.

Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest, St. Matthew xi., 28.—Tempus Fugit.

For a just man falleth seven times and riseth up again, but the wicked shall fall into mischief. Rejoice not when thine enemy falleth, and let not thine heart be glad when he stumbleth, Prov. xxiv., 16-17.—Pop and others.

Wasting and destruction are in their paths, Isaiah lix., 7.—Danehill.

A false balance is abomination unto the Lord; but a just weight is his delight, Proverbs xi., 1.—Lea.

And many among them shall stumble, and fall and be broken, and be snared, and be taken, Isaiah viii., 15.—Clandon.

Always in my prayers making request if by any means now at length I may have a prosperous journey by the will of God to come unto you, Romans i., 10.—Mixed Biscuits.

Her filthiness is in her skirts, she remembereth not her last end; therefore, she came down wonderfully, Lamentations i., 9.—Pax Vobiscum.

When they (the cherubims) went out, the wheels also were beside them, and every one stood at the door of the east gate of the Lord's house: and the glory of the God of Israel was over them above, Ezekiel x., 19. (N.B.—This last is especially applicable to the duty of cyclists attending church.)—Peltast.

Give us of your oil for our lamps are going out, St. Matt. xxv., 8.—Omemee and Opoponax.

Cast up, cast up the highway, gather out the stones. Isaiah lxii., 10.—Ndalama.

Is there anything whereof it may be said, "See, this is new," Ecclesiastes i., 10.—Blossom.

To guide our feet into the way of peace, St. Luke i., 79.—Hope.

1. I will instruct thee and teach thee in the way which thou shalt go; I will guide thee with mine eye, Ps. xxxii., 8. 2. Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path, Ps. cxix., 105.—Atra Cura.

In all thy ways acknowledge him. He shall direct thy path, Prov. iii., 6.—Baptist.

The days of Terah, Genesis xi., 32 (with no offence meant to Ernest Terah Hooley, Esq.).—The Mac.

Ponder the path of thy feet, and let all thy ways be established. Turn not to the right hand or to the left; remove thy feet from evil, Provs. iv., 26, 27.—Fritz.

Let us go speedily to pray before the Lord, and to seek the Lord of Hosts: I will go also, Zech. viii., 21. Go thy way, eat thy bread with joy, and drink thy wine with a merry heart; for God now accepteth thy works. Eccles. ix., 7. I will surely go forth with you myself also, 2 Sam. xviii., 2.—Uncle Joe.

And the inhabitant shall not say I am sick, Isa. The medical profession agree that cycling has a most beneficial effect on the health, especially in the case of dwellers in towns. If the preacher chose the above appropriate text he can pass on naturally from emphasising the importance of physical well-being to a sermon on the necessity of moral and spiritual health.—Biddy.

The race is not always to the swift nor the battle to the strong, but time and chance happeneth to them all, Eccles. ix., 11.—Juno.

A wise king scattereth the wicked and bringeth the wheel over them, Proverbs, xx., 26. Lo, this only have I found, that God hath made man upright, but they have sought out many inventions, Eccles vii., 29.—Alastor and others.

If thou turn away thy foot from the Sabbath, from doing thy pleasure on my holy day; and call the Sabbath a delight, the holy of the Lord, honourable; and shalt honour him, not doing thine own ways, nor finding thine own pleasure, nor speaking thine own words: then shalt thou delight thyself in the Lord; and I will cause thee to ride upon the high, Isaiah lviii, 13-14.—Elvy.

I heard . . . the noise of the wheels over against them, and a noise of great rushing, Eze. iii., 13.—M. B.

Take heed, therefore, that the light which is in them be not darkness, Luke xi., 35. The appearance of them is as the appearance of horses, and as horsemen so shall they run, Jon. ii., 4.

Many shall run to and fro, Dan. xii., 4.—Torridge.

Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended: but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus, Philippians iii., 13, 14.—Ro.

The riders on horses shall be confounded, Zechariah x., 5.—Melrose,

Asshur shall not save us; we will not ride upon horses; neither will we say any more to the work of our hands, ye are our gods, for in Thee the fatherless findeth mercy, Hosea xiv., 3.—Agatha.

1. Let thine eyes look right on, and let thine eyelids look straight before thee, Proverbs iv., 25. 2. Wherefore their way shall be unto them as slippery ways in the darkness, they shall be driven on and fall therein, Jeremiah xxiii., 12.—Pop.

Other texts have also been received from Taffy, E Phillips, St. Blaise, Hopetown, Wild Arab, Nin Nin, Frank, Theology, Forget-me-not, Hope, Pansy Johntoe, Meg, W. Stone, Arromanches, Iris 1., E. M. S., Uncle Joe, R. A. S., Lucastes, Kynde Wytte, Allspice, Atra Cura, Ro, Maori, Junius Grow Pride, X. Y. Z., Zac, Polar, Immata, M. B., Baritone, Rex, Whirlwind, Alpha, Wanderer, Invicta, E. N. S., Demerara Girl, Juno, Margaretting, Quidnunc, Dalton, Metchley, Mixed Biscuits, Marrowbones, Isabel, Omemee, Bootle's Baby, Jedforest, Per Ardua, Derfla, E. N. S., Crofter, E. J. Go-ahead, Provident, Queenie, Risk, Danehill, Red Rowan, Serpent, Noë, S. K., Emlorac, Pegasus, Ivanhoe, Donagh, White Heather, P. M., L. W., Beginner, Oatcake, Mavourneen, Toby, Deadeye, Applepine, Dartmouth, Clericus, Zummerzet, A. E. H., A Novice, Cymracs, S. P. W., Ombra, Nemesis, Judith, A Denizen of Pump-court, Amasaluntha, Dodo, Drynoch, E. N. S., Springer, Raby. Wentworth, Metford, Kingston, Pennywig, Risk, Hamburg, Serpent, Binks, Mabel, Sappy, Go-ahead, Snibor, Nedals, Dorset, Xavier, Viti, Cigarette, Orlando, Scarabee, Rob Roy, Neptune, Infelix, Opoponax, Will & Co., Dove, A. Hopkin, Blue China, J. McGrigor Allan, Anvil, Gregorians, Hibernian, Wyalong, Ivy Leaves, Albatross, The Mac, Eila, Jeff, L. S. Manger, Garret, Pelican, Wanderer, C. B. T., Angarad, Inda, W. G. B., C. H. Smith, Daisy, Millefleurs, Lil, Pigtail, Elimans, C. M. P., E. T. H. W., S. D. Richards, Arch Gibbs, Ubique, Francis, Barberry, Ling-Ling, Achilles, Mey, Baritone, Mena, Avis Kellan, Pax Vobiscum, Pneumatic, Nitram, W. J. T., Beryl, W. B. J., Bimbo, Londoner, Asher, Cyclone, Adelphos, Nicola, Figaro, Pictor, Elchartay, Albrighton, Queenie Dogge, Qu'Appelle, Pax, Avant, Tatters, X. Q. Q., Aspiring Maid, Roan, Pentlands, Cheriton, H. P., Rabelais, Dove, L. Whitton, Kip, H. St., Naomi Tighe, Pilgrim, Ap Deio, E. Hobson, Facteur.

A THIN PAPER EDITION OF

TRUTH

is published weekly,

and can be obtained on order of all newsagents.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.

To all countries in the Postal Union:—

THREE MONTHS	£0 7 8
SIX MONTHS	0 15 4
TWELVE MONTHS	1 10 8

And to any Address in the United Kingdom—THREE MONTHS, 7s.; SIX MONTHS, 14s.: TWELVE MONTHS, 28s.

Used on the Tooth-Brush

In the Morning a few drops of

SOZODONT,

THE PLEASANTEST DENTIFRICE in the WORLD,

WILL SWEETEN THE BREATH ALL DAY.

SOZODONT

KEEPS THE TEETH, LIPS, AND GUMS HEALTHY, AND OF A GOOD COLOUR.

It Cleanses the Teeth, and the spaces between the Teeth, as NOTHING else will do.

THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE.

In Toilet Case, complete, 2s. 6d.

BE SURE OF HAVING SOZODONT.

10/6 THE "PELICAN" SELF-FEEDING PEN 10/6

(PATENTED)

WRITES INSTANTLY AND CONTINUOUSLY.

Has Extra Large Reservoir of Ink. Secure against Leakage in any position. Flow of Ink regulated with the Greatest Nicety.

POLISHED VULCANITE, HANDSOMELY ENCHASED, FITTED WITH SPECIAL BARREL PEN in 14-ct. GOLD, IRIDIUM-POINTED. Also

THE "NOTA BENE" STYLOGRAPH OR FLUID PENCIL

(PATENTED)

5/- 5/-

IS READY FOR INSTANT USE, WITHOUT ANY ADJUSTMENT. MAY BE CARRIED IN ANY POSITION, WITHOUT FEAR OF LEAKAGE.

POLISHED VULCANITE, HANDSOMELY ENCHASED, WITH NEEDLE, SPRING, & NOZZLE, MADE OF THE PRECIOUS METALS.

Sold by all Stationers. Wholesale only by the Sole Manufacturers, THOS. DE LA RUE & CO. Ltd., Bunhill Row, London, E.C.

BUY FROM THE GROWER.

TEA MERCHANT
BY SPECIAL APPOINTMENT

TO HER MAJESTY
THE QUEEN.

LIPTON'S DELICIOUS TEAS

HAVE THE LARGEST SALE IN THE WORLD.

NO HIGHER PRICE. PER 1/7 LB.

APPRECIATED EVERYWHERE FOR THEIR DELICATE FLAVOUR AND EXQUISITE AROMA.

NO HIGHER PRICE.

THIS IS THE FINEST TEA THE WORLD PRODUCES.

PER 1/4 LB. RICH, PURE, AND FRAGRANT. PER 1/- LB.

LIPTON, Tea Planter, Ceylon.

Chief Offices, CITY ROAD, LONDON. Branches Everywhere. Agencies Throughout the World.

MORGAN & CO. Limited

Under Royal and the Most Distinguished Patronage.

45 FIRST CLASS PRIZE MEDALS &
9 HIGHEST AWARDS CHICAGO EXHIBITION.

Patent Cee Spring Landau, built in four sizes.

100 to 104, 128, 129, 15, 15a, LONG ACRE
And 10, OLD BOND STREET.

The Largest Order Ever Given For Typewriters WAS AWARDED TO THE

Smith Premier Typewriter

By the UNITED STATES WAR DEPARTMENT.

WASHINGTON, MARCH 27.

The War Department of the United States at Washington desired to purchase 150 typewriters, and established a board of experts to pass upon all the typewriters in competition, and after a thorough examination it was decided that the Smith Premier Typewriter, manufactured at Syracuse, N.Y., was the machine that stood the highest in point of improvements and mechanical construction, consequently the order for 150 typewriters was awarded to the Smith Premier Typewriter Company.—New York World, March 29.

Send for Illustrated Catalogue.

The Smith Premier Typewriter Co.,
14, Gracechurch Street, London, E.C.

TO THE CONTINENT.
VIA QUEENBORO'-FLUSHING
ROYAL DUTCH MAIL.
GREAT SAVING IN TIME.
GREAT IMPROVEMENTS IN SERVICE.

The magnificent new 21-Knot Paddle Steamers, built by the Fairfield Company, of Glasgow, are now running in this service.

Berlin—London in 20 hours. Arrival Berlin 8.28 p.m.
London—Dresden in 28 hours. Arrival Dresden 12.41 a.m.
London—Bale in 23 hours, &c.

Apply for Time Table to the ZEELAND STEAMSHIP COMPANY'S London Office,
44a, Fore Street, E.C.,
Where Circular Tickets may be obtained within Three Days' Notice.

TANN'S
£5 5s.
SAFES.
LISTS FREE.
NEWGATE ST.

IZOD'S

LONG WAISTED. A GREAT SUCCESS.
THE LONG WAISTED.

200 Dozen or 2,400 Pairs of this Celebrated Make alone delivered this season in London per Day. The great question of the day with all Ladies is the Fashion in Corsets, which grows year by year, until our Special Artistes have produced corsets for every type of figure.—IZOD'S CORSETS are cut on scientific principles, with a precision of accuracy formerly unknown.—IZOD'S draw Ladies' attention to their Long Waisted Corsets, which have been designed by their British and Foreign Artistes, which are the best the world produces.—The Ladies' Tailors always recommend these celebrated goods for the elegance with which they set off a tailor-made dress and create a long waist and graceful figure. They are made in a variety of qualities, and are beautiful and inexpensive. Every pair stamped on busk Izod's Long Waisted, and also on lid of the box.—To be had of all Drapers and Ladies' Outfitters in Europe, India Canada, United States, Australia, the whole of the British Colonies, and throughout the world.—Write for our Sheet of Drawings.

E. IZOD & SON, 30, MILK ST., LONDON, E.C.
Manufactory: LANDPORT, HANTS.

STRAINED VISION.

DISTRESSING HEADACHES, indigestion, simulated neuralgia, and nervous depression, are frequently caused by some peculiarity of the Vision, which can at once be overcome by the use of proper glasses. See "OUR EYES" (Now in its Sixteenth Edition), price 1s.; by JOHN BROWNING, F.R.A.S., F.R.M.S., President of the British Optical Association, &c.
Or consult, free of charge—
MR. JOHN BROWNING,
OPHTHALMIC OPTICIAN,
63, STRAND, LONDON, W.C.

ROYAL EXCHANGE
ASSURANCE.

SETTLEMENT POLICIES
Guaranteeing FIVE PER CENT. on the sum assured. No Trustees Required.

DEATH DUTIES
Provided for by a small annual payment through life.

ANNUITIES
Special Terms for Impaired Lives.

For Rates, apply to the Secretary,
Chief Office—ROYAL EXCHANGE, LONDON.

GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY (IRELAND).
NOTICE TO TOURISTS.
The Principal Seaside and Health Resorts of Ireland are situated on this Company's System.

BUNDORAN, co. Donegal (on the Atlantic Coast) is pronounced by eminent medical authorities to be the most invigorating Seaside resort in the Kingdom, and is within a few miles by rail of LOUGH ERNE (the Irish Lakes), which district offers splendid sport for Rod and Gun.

BUNCRANA, RATHMULLAN, ROSAPENNA, and PORTSALLON (all situated on the Atlantic Coast).—Invigorating seaside resorts, and within a few miles of the City of Derry.

ROSTREVOR.—Balmy and restorative climate.

WARRENPOINT, MALAHIDE, and HOWTH.—Exhilarating and attractive health resorts.

VISIT THE VALLEY OF THE BOYNE, and view the Ruins of MELLIFONT ABBEY, MONASTERBOICE, and NEWGRANGE TUMULUS (the Pyramids of Europe).

CHEAP TICKETS AND CIRCULAR TOURS.

Write for Illustrated Guide.
HENRY PLEWS, General Manager.

Dublin, June, 1896.

RUBINAT.
BEST
RUBINAT.
APERIENT.

Source Dr. Llorach.—SPANISH APERIENT MINERAL WATER. Dr. WEX, Official Chemist to the town of Hamburg, places Rubinat before the most vaunted of the German purgative waters. Is invaluable in all gout and intestinal complaints.

—Has none of the drastic and ofttimes irritating effects of other waters, which chiefly depend for their action upon magnesian salts of which they are largely composed.

E. GALLAIS & CO.,
90, Piccadilly, London, W.

A WONDERFUL MEDICINE
BEECHAM'S PILLS
Have been before the Public for more than fifty years, and have now the greatest sale of any Proprietary article. This has been achieved without the publication of testimonials, the convincing fact is, that BEECHAM'S PILLS RECOMMEND THEMSELVES.

WORTH A GUINEA A BOX
FOR ALL
Bilious & Nervous Disorders
SUCH AS
Sick Headache, Constipation, Weak Stomach, Impaired Digestion, Disordered Liver and Female Ailments.

Annual Sale, SIX MILLION BOXES.

Sold everywhere in boxes 9½d., 13½d. and 2/9 each.

Printed for the Proprietor by WYMAN & SONS, Limited, Great Queen-st. W.C. and published at 10, Bolt-ct. Fleet-st. E.C. in the Parish of St. Dunstan-in-the-West, in the City of London. Cheques and Post Office Orders should be made payable to REGINALD E. BOOKER, "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-st. Queen Anne's-gate, S.W.

TRUTH

"Cultores Veritatis Fraudis Inimici."—Cicero.

No. 1030. Vol. XL. Thursday, September 24, 1896. Price Sixpence.

NOTICE.

In response to various communications which reach me on the subject, I beg to notify that the terms of Subscription to Truth, which are payable in advance, are as follows:—To any address in the United Kingdom, for 3 months, 7s.; 6 months, 14s.; and for 12 months, 28s. The Thin Paper Edition is forwarded to countries within the Postal Union for 3 months for 7s. 8d.; 6 months, 15s. 4d.; and 12 months, 30s. 8d. Cheques and Post Office Orders should be made payable to the Manager, Truth, "Truth Building," Carteret-street, S.W.

A reprint of the Truth report on the Kilburn Sisterhood can be obtained at the Publishing Offices, Bolt-court, Fleet-street, price 2d.; by post, 2½d.

ENTRE NOUS.

THE Queen has summoned Lord Pembroke to Balmoral, a fact which has excited some comment, as the Lord Steward is not usually in attendance at Court during the private visits of Foreign Royalties. The Emperor Nicholas had requested that he might have an opportunity of meeting Lord Pembroke, who is a great grandson of Prince Woronzow, a Russian territorial magnate, who was for a great number of years one of the most prominent personages at the Court of St. Petersburg, and was long the Russian Ambassador in London. Prince Woronzow was born in 1744, and he died in London in 1832.

Sir John McNeill is to be the Equerry-in-Waiting on the Queen at Balmoral during October. Colonel Carington has been appointed to be in attendance on the Czar because he was the Equerry next for duty until the 30th.

When the Emperor Nicholas I. visited England in June, 1844, he spent a week in London (living at the Russian Embassy) and at Windsor Castle. His presents on leaving included six gold snuff-boxes, with his portrait set in diamonds, for the Lords-in-Waiting; eight gold snuff-boxes, with his cypher in diamonds, for the Equerries and Grooms-in-Waiting; £2,000 among the servants at Windsor Castle, besides a separate gift of £1,000 for the housekeeper. A hundred brooches, rings, and watches were distributed by the Master of the Household among various of the dependents; £500, to be continued annually, was given for a Cup at Ascot; a parure of diamonds, valued at £2,000, went to Madame Brunnow, the Russian Ambassadress, and £2,800 was given for charities, including £1,000 to the Society for the Relief of Foreigners in Distress.

At Balmoral the great event since the arrival of the Court on Deeside has been the return of the Munshi Abdul Karim from India, after an absence of six months. A Queen's Messenger was despatched to Calais to meet the Munshi and his retinue, and special arrangements were made for their accommodation on board the steamer in which they crossed to Dover. The Queen has built a house in the Balmoral grounds for the Munshi, who has been accompanied to Deeside by his wife and her female attendants, all of whom are closely veiled.

The silly season is certainly raging with severity. Could anything be more extravagantly absurd than the announcement of the St. James's Gazette that on Sunday last the Queen's dinner party would be "invested with rather more ceremony than usual," for her Majesty would drink two toasts, in memory of the battle of the Alma, in champagne. This is an absolute invention, for no such anniversaries are ever thus celebrated at Court, and toasts at the Queen's table are unknown. How people can be found to print such fantastical fooleries it is difficult to understand. Certainly a ceremonial at Balmoral in memory of the battle of the Alma would be a pretty sort of bêtise just forty-eight hours before the arrival there of the Emperor and Empress of Russia.

There is an infantile ingenuousness in the idea, expressed by a number of people, that the visit of the Prince of Wales to Lord Rosebery must have an important bearing on the Eastern question, and is therefore to be generally regarded with satisfaction. The Prince simply went to Dalmeny to spend a couple of days, because from that place he could meet the Emperor and Empress of Russia at Leith without trouble, and otherwise he must either have spent a night at an hotel in Edinburgh, or have travelled direct to Leith from Balmoral, which would have involved starting at six in the morning The notion that the Prince went to Dalmeny "to talk over the political situation" is simply idiotic, for if H.R.H. wished seriously to discuss matters with a view to any practical result he would, of course, go to Lord Salisbury.

Last week the Scotch papers were full of the yelpings of the people of Grantown, who had made elaborate preparations to give "a suitable reception" to the Prince of Wales when he passed through their station on Monday on his way from York to Adrie, where he was to be the guest of Mr. Sassoon at Tulchan. There was a loyal and eager crowd at the station, and the special train stopped for several minutes, but the Prince never showed, the blinds of his saloon remaining down. Considering that the hour was seven in the morning, the Prince was probably asleep, and the good people of Grantown were decidedly unreasonable in their expectations, and had much better have remained in their beds.

The Duke and Duchess of York, who are now at Balmoral, will arrive at York Cottage, Sandringham, for the winter on Tuesday, October 6. The Duke is to shoot in November and December at Elveden, near Thetford, with Lord Iveagh; and at Didlington, near Brandon, with Lord Amherst of Hackney.

The Duke of Cambridge is to pay a visit next month to the Duke of Grafton at Euston Hall, Suffolk, when there will be a shooting-party to meet H.R.H., who is also to be the guest of Captain and Mrs. Pretyman at Orwell Park, their beautiful place near Ipswich.

The Duke of Connaught has quitted Aldershot for two months on leave of absence. H.R.H. and the Duchess, who are now at Balmoral, will leave London for Vienna on Wednesday, October 7, and they are going to Hungary to visit Prince and Princess Philip of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha and the Archduke Joseph and the Archduchess Clotilde. The Duke and Duchess will afterwards proceed to Siniai, near Bucharest, on a visit to the Crown Prince and Crown Princess of Roumania.

The Emperor William has sent the Queen three large photographs of himself, his Majesty being depicted in the full, undress, and field uniform of the 1st (Royal) Dragoons, the British regiment of which he is the Honorary Colonel.

The Crown Princess of Denmark, who had hoped to marry her son, Prince Charles, to the Queen of the Netherlands, is consoling herself for this disappointment by arranging a match between her eldest son Prince Christian and Princess Pauline of Würtemberg, another great heiress, who is the only child of King William, by his first marriage with Princess Marie of Waldeck-Pyrmont, sister of the Queen Regent of the Netherlands and of the Duchess of Albany. Princess Pauline is excluded from the throne of Würtemberg by the Salic Law, but she will inherit her father's huge fortune. Prince Christian will celebrate his twenty-ninth birthday next Saturday, while Princess Pauline will be nineteen in December. There is already a family connection between the Court of Copenhagen and Stuttgart, as a few months ago Princess Louise of Denmark, eldest daughter of the Crown Prince, was married to Prince Frederick of Schaumburg-Lippe, eldest brother to the present Queen of Würtemberg.

This is not the only marriage which is in process of arrangement at Copenhagen. Princess Ingeborg, second daughter of the Crown Prince of Denmark, who was one of Princess Maud's bridesmaids, is to be betrothed to the Hereditary Prince of Wied. The Prince of Wied owns very large and valuable estates in the Rhine Provinces and other parts of Germany. The Princess of Wied, who is an aunt of the Crown Princess of Denmark, inherited an immense fortune from her father, Prince Frederick of the Netherlands. The Queen of Roumania is a sister of the Prince of Wied, and their mother is a sister of the Grand Duke of Luxemburg and of the Queen of Sweden. The Hereditary Prince Frederick was born in June, 1872, and he is six years older than Princess Ingeborg. The Prince and Princess of Wied and their family have been staying at Charlottenburg on a visit to the Crown Prince and Crown Princess of Denmark.

The Emperor Nicholas has intimated his intention of conferring the Order of St. Andrew (which is the first decoration in Russia) upon Lord Salisbury, who, however, will have to refuse it if he follows the example of his predecessors in office under similar circumstances. The St. Andrew has a light blue ribbon and a diamond star, which the Czar invariably presents. The Duke of York is to be made a Knight of the St. Andrew.

Lord and Lady Cadogan will not return to Ireland for some time, probably over two months, this being the season at which Irish Viceroys usually take their "long vacation." A general feeling prevails in Ireland that Lord Cadogan has not taken to the country. His "reign," notwithstanding all the prophecies, is likely to prove an uninteresting and uneventful one. It is not easy to be a successful Viceroy of Ireland. The place has been, of late years, an especially difficult one to fill gracefully and judiciously. The hopelessness of the case is considerably increased when the Viceroy is a Cabinet Minister as well, which necessarily makes him far more representative of the Government than of the Sovereign. To be a rich peer is popularly supposed to be a great thing, to be a Viceroy greater still, and greatest of all to be a Cabinet Minister. No wonder if the burden of three such honours laid on him at once should prove too much for one man; and for one to whom, if heredity had not given the first honour, the other two would, in all probability, never have come. The rumour again prevails in Ireland that Lord Cadogan is anxious to resign his post, but he is not likely to do so at present.

The Archbishop of Canterbury arrived last week in Ireland on a visit to the Archbishop of Dublin, Lord Plunket. The Primate of Ireland, Dr. Alexander, was also the guest of Lord Plunket in Dublin. On Sunday large congregations had an opportunity of hearing Dr. Benson and Dr. Alexander preach respectively in St.

For the Truth Hotel List, see page 792 in the present issue.
For Hospitals and Appeals, see page 796.
For Amusements, see page 793.
For Our Puzzles, see page 801.

Patrick's and Christ Church Cathedrals at different services. Catholics are not allowed by the laws of their church in Ireland to enter a non-Catholic church whilst any religious service is being held, a rule which remains in force since the penal times, when apparent conformity to the Protestant religion enabled any member of a Catholic family to seize the property of his non-conforming kindred. The main object of the Archbishop of Canterbury's visit to Ireland was the opening of the Kildare Cathedral, which took place this week on Tuesday, with much ceremonial. No such gathering of Protestant ecclesiastical dignitaries has for many years taken place in Ireland.

Lord Ashbourne has taken on Howth Castle from Lord Howth for another year, and the Lord Chief Justice of Ireland, Sir Peter O'Brien, has again rented Castletown House, co. Kildare, for the hunting season. Howth Castle, at the foot of the Hill of Howth, is picturesque, and one of the oldest residences in Ireland. It has been in possession of, and inhabited by, the St. Lawrence family since the eleventh or twelfth century. Lord Howth's health has not allowed him to live there for the last few years. Lord Ashbourne became the tenant of Howth Castle on coming into office with the present Government. Castletown House belongs to the Conolly family, and is of palatial size. It has often been suggested as a possible Royal residence. Meanwhile, the Lord Chief Justice of Ireland dispenses royal hospitality there and has become a well-known figure in the hunting fields of Kildare.

Sir Michael Hicks-Beach is going to sell his Netheravon estate in Wiltshire. He has also a fine property in East Gloucestershire, Williamstrip Park, near Fairford, but that place has been let for some years. It was at Netheravon that Sydney Smith was curate for several years, before he went to Edinburgh, and he then acted as tutor to the grandfather of the present Chancellor of the Exchequer.

The enterprising Italian who runs the buffet at the railway station at Modane considerately publishes his bill of fare in both French and English, so that his patrons of the latter nationality may be under no misapprehension as to what they are eating. The following interesting example of his efforts to enlighten the travelling Briton has been sent to me, and I reproduce the menu or "slender" (it will be seen that the ingenious translator crowned his achievement by writing "porridge" where he meant "slender," and vice-versâ) just as it was originally printed :—

Menu.	Porridge.
Potage Saint-Germain.	Slender at the Saint-Germain.
Quenelles de Brochet sauce financière.	Pike forced meet ball sauce of the financial.
Bœuf braisé Légumes.	Beef to bake Vegetables.
Galantine de volaille de Bresse à la gelée.	Poultry snovv-drop of the Bresse at the Jelly.
Salade de saison.	Salad of the time.
Entremets. Fromage et dessert.	Side-Dish. Chees and dessert.
(1/2 bouteille de vin.)	(1/2 bottle of wine.)

With reference to a complaint published in Truth the other day about the difficulty of mastering the regulations for the conveyance of bicycles to Switzerland, Messrs. Thomas Cook & Sons write that all necessary information can always be obtained at their various offices in England and on the Continent. They also mention that in all countries it is necessary for the owner to personally see his machine through the custom-house, in the same way as other luggage, which is a fact perhaps not universally understood.

In reply to my paragraph last week respecting the bridge tolls at Waterford, I have been favoured with a communication from which it would seem that the inhabitants of the city and their visitors should really be thankful that things are no worse. It is true that some of the charges which are at present levied strike many people as nothing less than iniquitous; but, as a matter of fact, still higher charges are authorised by the old Act of Parliament under which the bridge is worked. As to the particular charge which I mentioned last week, my informant, who is in a position to speak with authority, states that prior to the last letting of the tolls an attempt was made to get the weight limit of parcels which can be carried over the bridge free raised from 14 lb. to 28 lb., but the majority of the directors thought the proposal revolutionary, and rejected it. However, it is satisfactory to learn that there is a prospect of the Bridge Company being bought out before long, and the sooner this happens the better I should think it will be for Waterford.

LET SLEEPING "LAUREATES" LIE!

"What is our Poet Laureate about in these stirring times? Is he asleep?"—Evening Paper.

Let's hope he is. His crown of bays
  P'r'aps helps to drowsy make him.
At all events, if sleep he does,
  For goodness sake don't wake him!
By all means let him slumber on—
  For who meanwhile the worse is?
But if he woke—portentous thought!—
  He might indite more verses!

So let us sing a lullaby
  In soft, appropriate numbers—
"Sleep, little Alfy, soundly sleep!
  Let naught disturb thy slumbers!
Great Alfred's mantle's fall'n on thee,
  Its folds, forsooth, thou'rt lost in,
Then let it as thy bed-gown serve—
  Sleep on, exiguous Austin!

"Thy lyre, upon a hat-peg hung,
  Has ceased to music scatter;
But never mind, recumbent bard,
  It really doesn't matter.
Thy Muse has not of late a flash
  Of rapture to thy eye lent,
But never mind, for as a fact
  We like you better silent.

"Sleep on, then! for if thou shouldst wake,
  By Jingoism heated
Thy fatuous ode on 'Jameson's Raid'
  Might be too soon repeated.
Sleep on! lest some impulsive gust
  Parnassus-ward should sweep thee.
Sleep on! exiguous Alfy, sleep!
  'Twill out of mischief keep thee!"

Water Supply for Mansions, &c.—Artesian Bored and Driven Tube Wells, Wind Engines for pumping, &c.—State your requirements to Alfred Williams & Co., 39, Gt. Eastern-st., London, E.C.

Mr. John Hare has at last played Eccles in "Caste" and I am confident that his rendering of this oft-quoted character in a recent revival at Birmingham would have delighted Robertson, the author of this remarkably successful play. The germ of the play called "Caste" first appeared in a Christmas book entitled "Rates and Taxes" (1866), contributed to by Tom Hood, Thomas Archer, W. J. Prowse, Tom Robertson, W. S. Gilbert, and Clement Scott. We there see the real Eccles that Mr. Hare has for the first time placed before the play-going world. Robertson was never wholly satisfied with the Eccles of George Honey, amusing as it was. He thought it—and it was—a trifle exaggerated and out of the picture. Mr. Hare has restored the lost balance by giving us an Eccles who invests the curse of inebriety with a grim pathos which materially assists the play and the motives of the various characters. As the critic of the Birmingham Daily Post neatly puts it, "Mr. Hare as Eccles seems to be a human being conscious of his unhappy infirmity and trying to appear sober, rather than an actor playing at being drunk." That is exactly it, and very happily expressed. The terrible cloud ever hanging over the "little house at Stangate" has never been better expressed than by the old Eccles of John Hare. It is something to be able to boast of being the best Gerridge and the best Eccles in the same play of "Caste."

I am asked to mention that the Southwark and Lambeth free loan exhibition of pictures, which has been so highly successful during the last three or four years, is to be held this year at Red Cross Hall, Southwark, and will remain open for three weeks from October 24.

The Bishop Suffragan of Stepney (Dr. Browne) is to be the Canon-in-Residence and Sunday afternoon preacher at St. Paul's Cathedral during October, and Sub-Dean Duckworth will be on duty at Westminster Abbey.

The Bishop of Ripon has taken a long time to fill up the Archdeaconry of Craven, which has been vacant since the death of Archdeacon Bardsley, Vicar of Bradford. The new Archdeacon is to be the Rev. F. C. Kilner, Vicar of Bingley, who has done much good work in the diocese during the last ten years. While Archdeacon Bardsley was a staunch Evangelical, his successor is a decided High Churchman, but a man of wide mind and liberal sympathies.

The Low Churchmen of the diocese of Durham have lost one of their most popular, most able, and most zealous leaders by the widely lamented death of the Rev. John Coulson, who had held the important living of Holy Trinity, South Shields, for twenty-four years. Mr. Coulson, who was a very clever man, an excellent organiser, and an admirable preacher, was originally a National School teacher, but his talents and perseverance enabled him to enter Durham University, where he took high honours and gained a Fellowship, after which he entered the Church. Bishop Baring had a very exalted opinion of Mr. Coulson, and it was mainly through the influence of his diocesan that he was presented by the Dean and Chapter of Durham to the living which he held until his death.

Apropos of the Archbishop of Canterbury's recent warning to incumbents against the employment of "unauthorised, irregular, and even criminous clergymen," I mentioned the other week a statement of the Rev. Evan Jenkins, formerly Rector of Monafon, that he had been doing duty during the past two years in the dioceses of Exeter and Southwell. As I indicated at the time, I had only Mr. Jenkins's word for this, and I now learn that so far as the diocese of Exeter is concerned careful inquiries have failed to discover any case in which he has officiated there during the last two years. If Mr. Jenkins still adheres to his statement, perhaps he will name the parish in which he was engaged.

By the way, nobody has questioned Mr. Jenkins's other statement that, since he was deprived of his living, he was for eighteen months practically in sole charge of the parish of Wingerworth, in the diocese of Southwell. If that is true, as it would seem to be, the fact is anything but creditable to the Bishop of Southwell and the diocesan officials.

In recording the fact that the Festival of St. Eanswythe was held at the Folkestone Parish Church last week, a local paper mentions that many visitors took the opportunity of inspecting "the relics of the sainted Saxon Princess, which were exposed to view." This means, some one writes to tell me, that once a year on St. Eanswythe's Day, the Vicar gets the sainted Saxon Princess's bones out of a cavity in the wall of the church and exposes them to the view of the morbid. "It seems to pay," adds my correspondent, who apparently considers that such a business is not exactly reverent or creditable to the church. But if it does pay, I am surprised the exhibition is limited to one day in a year.

Concerning the case of the Vicar of Llanganten, Breconshire, Mr. John Lloyd informs me that an application is to be made to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners for a grant to the Vicar on account of the tithes which are paid by the parish but appropriated to "the suspended prebend of Llandarog, Llanganten, and Llangynog." It has been ascertained that in 1830 the then holder of the prebendal stall granted a lease of the tithes for three lives, and if living now the persons named would be respectively eighty-two, seventy-five, and seventy-four years of age. Whether all or any of these lives survive or not, it is to be hoped that the Ecclesiastical Commissioners will be able to accede to the application, and so put an end to what the Bishop of St. David's has characterised as "the intolerable scandal" of the Vicar's appeals to the charity of the public—an "intolerable scandal" directly due to the unprincipled way in which the Church has allowed the revenue intended for the incumbent of the parish to be diverted from its original object.

China and Glass. — Messrs. Goode, Artists and Designers, solicit an inspection of their collection in their recently-extended South Audley-street premises, now by far the largest and most important in Europe. Messrs. Goode guarantee the excellence of all their productions, and invite a comparison of their prices with those of any co-operative stores.

"Hôtel Burlington," at Sunny Boscombe. (200 rooms.) Every luxury. Delightful grounds. Magnificent golf links. Sea-water baths. Moderate charges.—Bournemouth East Station.

The Vicar of St. Mary's, Shrewsbury, is the reverend gentleman who once distinguished himself by preaching a sermon in which he argued that the fall of the church spire during a gale was a judgment of the Almighty on the town for proposing to erect a memorial to Darwin. He is now seeking fresh distinction as a polite letter writer. The Council of the Shropshire Archæological Society lately passed a resolution in reference to certain alterations to St. Mary's Church, which were said to have been in contemplation. The Vicar has now sent the Council a letter, from which I take the following:—

> I note also your protest against the "demolition of any old work in any part of the fabric." What a pity it was not addressed to the wind on the day of the great gale in 1894! It might have been as effectual then as it is likely to be now; for I sincerely hope that if the vicar and wardens of St. Mary's think it their duty at any time to make any alteration in their church they will not have the Archæogynismatic weakness to be deterred by the protests of any Archæological Society, even though it be THE COUNCIL OF THE SHROPSHIRE ARCHÆOLOGICAL AND NATURAL HISTORY SOCIETY, but will take them at the fitting valuation, "hujus assis."—I am, gentlemen, your obedient servant,
>
> NEWDIGATE POYNTZ."

Cannot the Rev. Newdigate Poyntz's friends prevail upon him not to make himself so supremely ridiculous?

The continued neglect of French and German at Sandhurst is exceedingly discreditable to the authorities, and especially when the strong and repeated recommendations of the Board of Visitors are remembered. A species of French and English game seems to be played at Sandhurst, one body of governors pulling pertinaciously against the other, and such chaotic fatuities are highly mischievous on all accounts. It may be hoped that a new and more satisfactory system will be established there in the course of a few months.

I have received the following amounts towards this year's Toy Fund:—O. G., £1; Howard Ellis, 10s. I have also received for Lady Jeune's Fund:—O. G., £1; F. C. H., £3; Fredk. Weldon, £5.

CARPET BEATING SEASON.—The Queen says: "A good place to send carpets to is the Compressed Air Carpet and Tapestry Cleaning Company, Brook Green, Hammersmith, W. Dust blown out. No beaters used." To prevent deception carpets cleaned by this process bear the Trade Mark on the back.

LORD WOLSELEY'S "RIDICULUS MUS."

[Elaborate instructions for the adoption of a new mess jacket have just been issued to the officers of the British Army.—Daily Papers passim.]

Come, come, Lord Wolseley, what is this? Your most pronounced assailers
Did not expect that you'd be found amongst the Army tailors;
That your reforming zeal, 'bout which you made so great a racket,
Would for its boasted first-fruits bear—a paltry new mess jacket!

The "Limpet" Duke, as well we know, a glutton was 'mongst gluttons
For altering chevrons, changing belts, and rearranging buttons;
Gold lace possessed a charm for him, and 'twas his greatest pleasure
To give to things sartorial large portions of his leisure.

But you, we'd always understood, when him you had succeeded
Did not intend to be content to do the things that he did;
You, we imagined, when you were to his high post promoted,
Would prove yourself to higher aims and greater ends devoted.

Then what is this we hear about those long, excited sittings,
At which this jacket was evolved with its new-fangled fittings?
What of the rumours, flying round, of strong and heated feeling
'Mongst you and your advisers when with its chief features dealing?

Is this a time, d'you think, my lord, to waste on such a question
So great a wealth of intellect and highly-paid suggestion?
Europe, you know, is one vast camp of mighty hosts divergent—
This new mess-jacket was it, then, just now so very urgent?

The Army you have criticised with such unsparing candour
Did not expect this kind of thing from its brand-new commander.
It looked to him to firmly deal with questions much more pressing—
Its wrongs, and not its officers, are what most need re-dressing!

The scandals rife throughout its ranks, too numerous to mention,
Its crying grievances—'tis these that first demand attention.
'Tis ripe for great reforms, and 'tis with disappointment bitter
It sees you on a tailor's job your time and talents fritter.

There are a thousand things to do which have too long been slighted;
A thousand faults that should be cured and wrongs that should be righted;
A thousand urgent points to be examined and debated—
Then, surely, for a time at least, that jacket might have waited.

REJECTED ADDRESS BY THE BRITISH DENTAL ASSOCIATION. Vital importance to Dental Licentiates, Parents, and the Public. Post free five stamps.—O'DUFFY, L.D.S., 54, Rutland-sq., Dublin.

By order of the Czar, the colonel of a crack Russian regiment has just been retired, a lieutenant dismissed the Service, and eleven other officers of the regiment reduced in rank, as a punishment for a blackguardly attack upon a civilian. The only culpability of the colonel in connection with the affair was that he had failed to report it to headquarters. Comparing this incident with the abominable outrage upon Lieutenant Hodge in the 4th Hussars, and the organised conspiracy against Lieutenant Bruce of the same regiment, it would seem that somewhat more strict notions as to what constitutes conduct becoming to an officer and a gentleman prevail in the Russian Army than in our own. I do not know whether Lord Wolseley is likely to meet the Czar during his Majesty's sojourn in Britain, but should a chance offer itself, he might with advantage take the opinion of the Russian monarch upon the Hodge case.

Although nearly three months have elapsed since a personal inquiry into the Hodge and Bruce cases was promised in the name of the Commander-in-Chief, no visible result has followed up to the present moment. On the contrary, from the fact that no steps seem to have been taken to obtain the evidence of the two gentlemen principally concerned, while the officers implicated are all leaving the country with their regiment, it looks very much as if an attempt would be made to let the scandal drop again. I trust it may turn out that I am mistaken in this prediction, and I do not wish to appear impatient, but my experience of official methods leads me to anticipate the worst.

A military appointment of an extraordinary, probably unprecedented, character, was notified in the Gazette a few weeks back. In 1888 a Mr. Bland-Hunt left the 4th Royal Fusiliers with the rank of Second Lieutenant. He has since then been engaged in civil pursuits until the other day, when he was suddenly appointed to a captaincy in the same battalion, over the heads of all the officers who have been doing their military duty during that time. Virtually, this favoured individual takes up the same place as he would have occupied had he remained in the regiment during the last eight years. Such a proceeding points to jobbery of the most nefarious and shameless description, and it is astonishing that Lord Wolseley should countenance it.

During a recent visit of the Cape Premier to King Williamstown the Municipal Council directed his attention to a truly extraordinary and startling state of affairs. It appears that no Imperial troops are stationed in the town, and the detachment of Cape Mounted Rifles has also been withdrawn, but the military authorities still keep stored at the barracks arms and ammunition to the value of nearly a quarter of a million, and all this property (including 38,000 lb. of loose gunpowder) was actually left until lately in the care of two old watchmen, one a cripple, and the other reported to be a drunkard. Since then "six special constables armed with revolvers" have been engaged to guard these munitions of war; but considering the possibilities of danger to the town, especially in case of any trouble with the natives, even the presence of this formidable force has failed to make the inhabitants of King Williamstown easy in their minds. Such an arrangement is anything but creditable to the colonial military authorities, and if they really cannot spare any troops for King Williamstown they ought to be compelled to remove their stores.

The Government will shortly have the disposal of the valuable office of Chairman of the Prison Commissioners for Scotland, which is to be vacated in a few weeks by Mr. Andrew Beatson Bell, who has held this post for about sixteen years.

Mr. Edward Garrard, who has been an officer of the British Museum (in the Zoological Department) for the unprecedent period of sixty-five years, is to retire on a pension next week. Mr. Garrard's retirement is a purely voluntary act, as he is still thoroughly up to his work.

In reference to a note in TRUTH the other day concerning the system of promotions to District Inspectorships in the Royal Irish Constabulary, a member of the force tells me that neither a senior nor a junior head constable can present himself at the examinations, which are supposed to have thrown the higher posts open to competition, without first being recommended by his immediate official superior. As to the value of the new system to head constables who can obtain such recommendations, but who are without further influence to back up their claims to advancement, my correspondent expresses misgivings which seem to have been intensified by the result of the first "competitive examination" which has just been announced. Three officers are named as having passed the examination. Each of them is stationed in County Clare, each was promoted from sergeant to head constable on the same day, July 16, 1893, and now each has qualified for a District-Inspectorship on the same day, other candidates being rejected. This certainly does seem, on the face of it, an extraordinary series of coincidences.

More than once I have referred to the very hard case of Mr. Kunhi Kannan, a late deputy-collector and magistrate of Malabar, who was dismissed from the Service owing to a gross miscarriage of justice. Twelve months ago Mr. Moberly, the district magistrate of Malabar, reported to the Madras Government that a consideration of the facts had led him to the conclusion "that C. Kunhi Kannan was convicted on false evidence," and he recommended that he should be given an opportunity of establishing his innocence. Notwithstanding Mr. Moberly's recommendation, this unfortunate gentleman has up to the present been persistently refused any chance of vindicating his character, the Madras Government being apparently afraid to admit that it may have erred. There is now, however, a new Governor at Madras, and the petition which has just been sent to him will afford Sir Arthur Havelock an excellent opportunity of showing that he has the moral courage to mete out justice in spite of the advice of official underlings who foolishly imagine that British prestige will be damaged by the righting of a wrong.

If you want to entirely Furnish your House or select any article of Furniture or Carpet, &c., send for HEWETSONS' Illustrated Priced Catalogue.—HEWETSONS, Tottenham Court-road, London.

By the last mail from India I received a long letter, accompanied by a mass of printed papers, respecting the grievances of the provincial or junior division of the Survey of India Department. I have referred to the matter before, and at the present moment, at any rate, it it is impossible for me to again discuss it in detail. To put it briefly: these officers complain, and for years past have been complaining, of the slowness of promotion in their branch, of the poorness of their pay (which remains pretty much as it was fixed thirty years ago, notwithstanding the depreciation in the value of the rupee, for which they are allowed no compensation), and of the inadequacy of their scale of travelling allowances; and, so far from being improved, their position seems to have been rendered rather worse than before by a reorganisation scheme which was formulated in April, 1895. Their case is an exceedingly strong one, and if the Viceroy gives his personal attention to the latest of the series of memorials that have been addressed to him, I cannot but think that he will recognise the justice of their claim to more favourable and considerate treatment than they have hitherto obtained.

A gentleman at Singapore invites me to crack this little nut for him. His father was a German and his mother an Englishwoman. He was born in Turkey and baptised at the British Embassy Chapel. Since he left Turkey he has always lived in British possessions. Is his nationality German or is it English? I should say that it is German. Further, if his legal status at present is that of a German subject, can he become naturalised as a British subject at any place where there is a British consul, and will such naturalisation entitle him to all the rights and privileges of a person born a British subject? To both these questions I am inclined to reply in the affirmative. But I do not profess to speak with any authority on the subject; and if I am wrong I dare say some of my legal friends will be ready enough to put me right.

I have received a lengthy communication from Mr. J. Mackenzie, the President of the "Strangers' Hospital" at Rio de Janeiro, with reference to the dispute between the committee and certain of the nurses, which was referred to in Truth on July 2. The remark that I made upon the incident was that, in view of all the circumstances, it would be better if in future the agreements with the nurses were to specify their duties more fully. Mr. Mackenzie now tells me that in future the contracts will contain a clause prescribing "out-nursing" (the matter over which the dispute arose) as one of the obligations of the service. In view of this statement it seems to me quite unnecessary to go at this date into the various questions respecting the merits of this particular dispute, which are raised by Mr. Mackenzie's letter. That there were other differences, more or less personal, in the background was pretty clear from the first; but the question of out-nursing was the one on which each of the parties took their stand in the correspondence which passed, and the decision of the committee in regard to the future arrangements under this head seems to justify all that I said on the subject. The hospital is a very useful institution, and I wish it every prosperity.

Some two months back the post of surgeon to H.M. Customs at the Port of Gravesend fell vacant by the death of the local practitioner who had held it; and, after an official intimation that the salary would be reduced, the late surgeon's assistant, who had succeeded to his practice, was informed by the Board of Customs that they were highly satisfied with the way in which he had done the work, and would recommend him for the post. The appointment, however, rests with the Treasury, and My Lords have eventually passed over Mr. Skipworth, the gentleman above referred to, and appointed another local practitioner, Mr. Thurwell, whose qualifications are certainly in no way superior to those of the other candidate, and who is an absolute stranger to the work. There can be no doubt that this appointment is a job, due to occult influence of some kind, and, as usual, in carrying it out the public interest has been ignored as much as the claims of justice.

A medical reader of Truth suggests that the discrepancies in chemists' charges are explained by the variation in the wholesale price of certain drugs. It seems that some drugs vary immensely in quality, and proportionately in price. This will be a very interesting point to the general public, for it at once raises the question whether the efficacy of the drugs varies with their quality. If such is the case, I ought to have been benefited half as much again by the prescription I had made up at the seaside for 15d. as by that which I had made up at the Stores for 10d., and twice as much by that which cost me 1s. 9d. in the country. The last one, in fact, ought to have cured me outright. Judging, however, by their effect on my anatomy, the value of the drugs was pretty much on a par in all three cases.

Besides, is there not a Sale of Food and Drugs Act which requires all the more familiar preparations to be of a certain quality? When a tradesman supplies the quality of article prescribed by law, he has done all that is required of him. If a chemist wishes to supply a fancy quality of drug, he ought at least to give his customers a choice in the matter. There may be connoisseurs of physic (as of wine) who would pay half-a-crown for an old, crusted black draught, so many years in bottle, rather than poison themselves with a cheap article, bought at the Stores for fourpence-halfpenny. But in the matter of drugs few of us are connoisseurs, and for my part, so long as the fourpenny-halfpenny dose does its duty, it is good enough for me.

Fire Protection of Country Houses.—Merryweathers' system. Economy, convenience, efficiency. Illustrated particulars post free.—Write Merryweathers, 63, Long-acre, London.

Hewetsons, Tottenham Court-road, London, send their Illustrated Catalogue post free, and it is acknowledged to be the best Furnishing Guide extant.

Even in a modest little village like Pitlochry the Post Office officials are infected with the departmental passion for appearing smart at the expense of the public. The other day a telegram was sent to a gentleman there addressed, "——, Hydro, Pitlochry." There are two "hydros" in the village, but the people at the Post-office knew perfectly well at which establishment the gentleman in question was staying, other telegrams similarly addressed having been duly delivered. This message happened, however, to be one of some urgency and importance, and possibly for that reason it was not delivered, but returned to the sender with the notification, "Address insufficient; two hydros. there." In any concern conducted on common-sense business principles this sort of stupid fooling would be summarily checked; but in the Post Office it seems to be positively encouraged.

At the last meeting of the Brecon Town Council, the medical officer reported the existence of a disgraceful and dangerous condition of things in connection with certain cottages, and the surveyor expressed the opinion that the dwellings in question should be pulled down. It transpired that this scandal had been reported over and over again, and the surveyor said he had spoken to the landlord about it times out of number; but nevertheless the Council contented themselves with ordering a notice to be sent calling upon the owner of the property to put it in order, the idea being that he should be given further time. Is it the practice of the Council to dawdle and trifle in this way with matters of sanitary administration? If not, why has an exception been made in this instance? Has the fact that the property owner referred to is a magistrate and councillor anything to do with the procrastination of the authorities?

The monstrous prosecution of a pauper at Lincoln, which I mentioned last week, has been followed by another equally monstrous case at Lichfield. In this second instance a woman named Kilbride, who carried a baby in her arms, was charged with absconding from the workhouse with Union clothing. It seemed that the Guardians had granted her a day's leave of absence to visit her mother and friends who live six or seven miles from Lichfield, and that on the way there on Saturday morning she and her baby got wet through in a heavy storm. Having no other clothes, she did not return the same day, and Sunday being again wet she postponed her tramp back to the workhouse till Monday, when, upon her arrival, she was at once arrested under a warrant which the master had taken out. At the Police-court, the woman expressed the belief that the master had prosecuted her because she had ventured to make a complaint against him some days before about her dinner; and to anybody who knows the average Bumble, the explanation will not seem at all an unlikely one. Whatever his motive may have been, however, this Lichfield Bumble said he must press the charge against Kilbride, and instead of sharply reprimanding him for bringing such a ridiculous case into court, the dunderhead on the bench proceeded to sentence the defendant to seven days' hard labour. A magistrate capable of passing such a shameful sentence is no more fit for his position than the workhouse master who prosecuted the woman under such circumstances is fit for his.

At Poplar Workhouse the aged and infirm pauper who becomes a bit troublesome is forthwith thrust into the padded room, or, as a witness at an inquest last week preferred to describe it, "the padded dungeon." The inquest concerned the death of Mary Pendred, aged eighty-five, who, though very weak and ill, had been placed in a padded room because the nurses alleged that she was violent. Just imagine, now, the amount of violence this poor old creature would be capable of! The assistant medical officer said he was told that she had attempted to strike a nurse, and that when he went to see her she was packing up her things and declaring that she would not stay in the workhouse any longer. He seemed to think that this extraordinary display of viciousness by a feeble old woman of eighty-five justified him in subjecting her to the restraint of the padded room, and keeping her there until her death, four or five days later; but the jury were of a different opinion, and so most people will be. It was not pretended that the woman was insane, and, even if her confinement in the padded room had been temporarily necessary, there was no excuse whatever for prolonging it day after day when, as the doctor and nurses admitted, she had become perfectly quiet. The case is one which ought not to be allowed to drop with the censure pronounced by the coroner's jury. There must be something radically wrong about the management of a workhouse where the officials consider such cruel and callous treatment fit and proper for a sick and dying old woman, and the Local Government Board will fail in its duty if it does not at once hold a searching inquiry.

Yet another example of Bumbledom is reported from Brecon. Among the inmates in the workhouse there is an Army pensioner named M'Donagh whose pension is sufficient to pay for the maintenance of himself and two children. The other day M'Donagh wanted to go into the town to meet a friend, and tried to find the master to ask for leave, but as that functionary could not be found he took the liberty of going without his consent. Although the man pays for his own support he must, of course, conform to the rules of the house, and if the Guardians had reprimanded him for his breach of discipline nobody would have blamed them. This, however, was too mild and too sensible a course to commend itself to their minds, and so they directed that the delinquent should be put on a bread-and-water diet for three days. In common justice they should make a reduction in their charge against M'Donagh for those three days.

The Hernia Institute, 489, Oxford-st., London, W., absolutely cures rupture in from three to six weeks. Highest testimonials. Pamphlets and consultations free.

"After having once used 'Cerebos' I cannot endure the common table salt. Cerebos is so dainty, so fine, so dry, and never goes lumpy." All the best Grocers and Stores keep it. In large tins, 6d. and 1s.

In the course of a case before the Manchester County Court the other day, Judge Parry pointed out a very fertile source of robbery in the liquidation of insolvent debtors. It seems that in proceedings under an administration order, the Treasury has a preferential claim to 2s. in the £ on the liabilities, which means that in the case of many exiguous estates the Treasury takes the bulk of the assets, while not unfrequently it scoops in the whole of them. As a stroke of humour it is a piece of excellent fun that when debtor and creditors come to public authority to adjust the little difference between them, public authority should settle the matter by appropriating everything that the debtor has to offer his creditors. That a business nation, however, should regulate its affairs on this serio-comic principle is inexplicable.

The estate of a Mr. Hame, lately liquidated in the Norfolk County Court, has yielded to the gratified creditors a dividend of ⅝d. in the £1. In the case of one creditor the Official Receiver has, by some inscrutable process of official arithmetic, arrived at the conclusion that the amount due is exactly one penny, without any fraction. Thereupon this lucky creditor receives by post the usual printed notification of his good fortune, with the corresponding form of acknowledgment of the receipt of the penny, and the authority to the Official Receiver to remit the penny (at the creditor's risk) by cheque or money order. Should the creditor prefer to travel to Norwich in order to receive payment of the penny in person, he is warned to bring this imposing document with him. It may be that the safety and well-being of the nation require that this sort of solemn tomfoolery should be performed in the name of the Law; but—owing, I suppose, to the mental obliquity which makes a man a Radical—I quite fail to see the necessity.

There have been many curious and humorous incidents at the Revision Courts during the past week or so, but none, I think, quite equal to the scene enacted at Barrow on Thursday. Attention was drawn to "a matter of importance with reference to his Honour [so the Revising Barrister is designated at Barrow] missing his train at Coniston." It had been hinted that this catastrophe occurred through one of the political agents informing the station-master that "his Honour" was in the train, which, in the absence of such information, would apparently have been delayed for so august a personage. On Thursday the Revising Barrister graciously expressed himself satisfied that the agent was not to blame. He added, however, that he had been told that it was a reporter who gave "the false information," and that if he found him out "certain proceedings would be taken against him." Somebody said the reporter was in Court, and that his name was James Hudson, whereupon the following colloquy took place:—

The Revising Barrister: Will James Hudson step forward?—Mr. Hudson, who was seated at the reporters' table, then stepped forward.—The Revising Barrister: It is reported to me that you gave false information to the station-master at Coniston as to my being in the train, James Hudson. Why did you give that statement?—Mr. Hudson: I did not give the statement directly. It was understood you were in the train.—The Revising Barrister: I shall hold you responsible for the train going without me. What is your name?—James Hudson.—The Revising Barrister: You gave information you had no right to do without authority.—Mr. Hudson: I did not, sir, and I understand from the letter read that the station-master at Coniston——.—The Revising Barrister: Will you hold your tongue? You had no right at all to say I was in the train, when you had no authority.—Mr. Hudson: I did not say so to the station-master, and I appeal to the agents whether I said it or not.—The Revising Barrister: I hold you responsible.—He then took down Mr. Hudson's name and address.

I am anxious to learn what punishment will be meted out to this presumptuous scribe. It will require at least something lingering with boiling oil in it to fit the crime, I should think.

Here is an extraordinary story of the conviction of a publican at Newcastle-on-Tyne, which, for some reason or other appears to have been ignored in the local papers. The defendant was the landlord of the Cumberland Arms. On the night of August 27 a party of men were in the house for three or four hours drinking beer, and on leaving at eleven o'clock one of them purchased two gills of whiskey. He afterwards drank half this whiskey, and three or four hours after leaving the public house he fell down some stairs and was killed. Two summonses were issued against the publican, one for permitting drunkenness on his premises, and the other for supplying a drunken person (the deceased) with two gills of whiskey. The witnesses for the prosecution were four men who were with the deceased the whole of the evening in question, and for the defence four men who saw him quit the house at eleven o'clock. Not only the four witnesses for the defence but also the four for the prosecution swore positively that the deceased man was perfectly sober when he bought the whiskey, and when he left the Cumberland Arms. In spite of their unanimous testimony, however, and of the fact that the landlord had been a licence-holder in the city for twenty-five years without a single conviction being recorded against him, the magistrates fined him £10 and costs, under the second summons, and endorsed his licence. If these are the facts, a more monstrous miscarriage of justice has never occurred, and I imagine that the Court of Quarter Sessions will, on appeal, have no hesitation in quashing the conviction. I trust the Court will at the same time give some wholesome advice to these Newcastle Solons. They should be told that, however intense their antipathy as teetotalers to Bung, they have no business to allow it to interfere with the course of justice.

Mr. Samuel Knowles has written to me in reference to the recent prosecution of the firm of S. Knowles & Co., Limited, for taking water from a main belonging to the Bury Corporation without first obtaining the consent of the Corporation. He says he was himself entirely ignorant of what was done until afterwards, and that, whatever opinion may be formed "as to the wisdom of Charing Cross Hospital, W.C., entirely dependent on voluntary support, urgently requires help. Liabilities, £11,000. No investments.

Every requirement for Furnishing tastefully at least expense is amply illustrated in the Galleries and Catalogues of Hampton & Sons, Furnishers & Decorators, Pall Mall East, S.W.

the method adopted, he is quite certain it was not prompted by any improper motives." Neither in these statements, however, nor in a further letter which Mr. Knowles's son has addressed to a Manchester paper is there anything which affects what I said last week. I did not suggest that Mr. Knowles, senior, was personally to blame; and as to the intention of the Company to pay for the water, it does not alter the fact that they were guilty of an extremely audacious proceeding in annexing the supply from a main for forty hours and thereby depriving many domestic consumers of water without the sanction of the authorities. If a householder did such a thing, I doubt whether he would escape, as this Company were lucky enough to do, with a fine of £5.

A customer of the East London Waterworks Company, the Directors of which have just declared a dividend of 7 per cent., sends me the following verses, which, he suggests, might appropriately be appended to the last half-yearly report of the Board:—

THE DIRECTORS TO THEIR SHAREHOLDERS.

Our mains have been empty for half of the day,
Our reservoirs frequently dry,
Our customers, too,
Have had reason to rue
A sparse, intermittent supply;
The Press has assailed us in outspoken style,
And charged us to quickly repent;
But why need we care,
How they bluster and blare,
Whilst we still can pay seven per cent?

Disease has been rife at the East End of town,
And 'tis said that the blame rests on us;
But we scarcely need stay
This assertion to weigh,
Or its pros and its cons to discuss.
For what though the death-rate went rapidly up
As downwards our reservoirs went?
The fact still remains
That out of our gains
We can pay a snug seven per cent!

Yes, our business is done on a very 'cute plan,
And we play at a very safe game,
For, through frost or through drought,
Should our water give out,
Why, our customers pay just the same.
So whether we've water or not in our mains,
Our shareholders need not look wan;
Its flow, as they see,
Intermittent may be,
But their dividends always flow on!

A rather humiliating rebuff was administered to the Public Analyst for Shropshire, Mr. T. P. Blunt, in a prosecution for alleged adulteration of ground ginger at Newport last week. He certified that the ginger contained 25 per cent. of spent ginger, but he admitted that he had only made three previous analyses of ground ginger. On the other hand, the Lancashire County Analysts, who make hundreds of such analyses every year, certified that the ground ginger in question was absolutely free from spent, and they had applied the microscopical test—by far the best—which Mr. Blunt had omitted to do. The magistrates accordingly dismissed the case. It is necessary, I suppose, for an analyst, like everybody else, to acquire experience in his business, but he ought not to do this at the expense of tradesmen, and it is to be hoped that before he next brings a charge of adulteration, this Shropshire official will make sure that his analysis is correct.

There is a popular notion that a man cannot be punished twice for the same offence; but it is evidently a mistaken one, so far at least as the administration of the Fishery Laws in Ireland is concerned. At Newtownbarry a few weeks ago two summonses were heard against a man named Simmons for illegally attempting to take salmon with a "stroke haul." The first summons was issued at the instance of the landlord in virtue of his private right of fishery, and Simmons was fined £1. 10s. The second prosecution for precisely the same offence was instituted by the Fishery Conservators, and the defendant was mulcted in a penalty of £4 with £1 costs. Technically the Justices were bound to convict on this second charge, and £4 was the minimum penalty they could impose. They seem, however, to have been conscious of the injustice which the double punishment involved, and they recommended that the second fine should be reduced to the same amount as the first. This recommendation has been in due course submitted to the Lord Lieutenant, but he has refused to comply with it, the explanation of the refusal being, I am assured, that the Fishery Conservators were opposed to the reduction. Is this true? It certainly seems an extraordinary thing that the Lord Lieutenant should attach more weight to the views of the prosecuting authorities than to those of the adjudicating Justices.

Very cold comfort is given to the ill-used wife who asks the Barnet Justices to put in force the recent Act for the protection of married women. Last week a woman applied for a separation order on the ground of her husband's "persistent cruelty," the particular proofs of his cruelty on which she relied being that on two days in succession he turned her and her children out of doors, that on the third day he tore up her clothes and that on the fourth day he tried to strike her with a stick, scratched her face, threw stones at her, and once more turned the children into the street. She worked to support herself and the children, and she was afraid she would lose her place, as she had lost others, through her husband's conduct. The defendant did not appear to answer these allegations, but his absence did not matter. The Barnet Shallows believe in giving a husband plenty of rope before they pull him in, and the woman's application was dismissed with the consoling remark that it could be renewed if the cruelty was continued. While they were about it they might as well have told her precisely how long they expect a wife to endure such treatment before she is granted a separation order.

Scott Adie, 115, Regent-street, London, for Shooting Gowns, Cawdor Capes, Travelling Ulsters, Jackets, Racing Coats, Carriage Rugs, Mauds, Shawls, and Scotch Tweeds. Patterns post free.

Sufferers from all liver and gouty complaints, unable to visit the Spa, reap great benefit from taking the Carlsbad Waters or Sprüdel Salts (Löbel Schottländer, Carlsbad, on wrapper). Of all Chemists, and Ingram & Royle, Ltd., 52, Farringdon-street.

As usual at this season, the country magistracy are applying themselves with much zest and determination to the punishment of all offences (or, for that matter, suspected offences) against the sacred majesty of the Game Laws. My Legal Pillory this week contains two or three cases which are fair samples of scores that are chronicled in the provincial papers. At Warwick a man has been sent to gaol for a month because "a net with two dead rabbits recently snared was found concealed by a tree that he was seen near," while at Ironbridge penalties amounting to £15, and I know not how much more for costs, were imposed on three men because one of the three had in his possession on the highway a net and four rabbits. The case at Dunfermline is contrasted with another in the same town, which shows that it is a far cheaper sport to beat and kick a wife, and, if that is not enough, two other women as well, than to trespass in search of game. There are plenty of other examples of misguided lenity in dealing with charges of violence and cruelty, those from Sheffield, Wakefield, and Burton being specially noteworthy. As to the sentences on the other side, those passed on two absconding paupers at Sheffield seem to me particularly foolish, as well as vindictive. Considering the length of time for which both men had relieved the ratepayers of the burden of their maintenance, it seems neither just nor politic to visit them with such heavy punishment for leaving the workhouse without notice:—

Dunfermline Borough Police-court. Before Bailie Rolland. James Johnston, convicted of assaulting his wife by dragging her about by the hair of the head and kicking her; also of assaulting two other women "in the same vicious manner." Fined £2.

Dunfermline Sheriff-court. Before Sheriff Gillespie. Peter Robertson and Robert Adamson, convicted of trespassing in pursuit of game. Fined £3. 1s. 5d. each.

Sheffield Police-court. Before Mr. S. G. Richardson and Dr. Hunt. Harry Thompson, convicted of assaulting Tom Gilbert. As complainant was going along the street he received a severe blow in the jaw, and on turning round to discover his assailant he was knocked down, and defendant, with others, kicked him all over the body and head. Subsequently he was subjected to similar ill-usage a second time. Fined 20s. and costs.

Sheffield Police-court. Charles Roynes, charged with absconding from the workhouse with Union clothing. He left the workhouse without leave in April, 1894. Twenty-one days.

George Glossop, charged with a similar offence. He absconded last January. One month.

Wakefield Police-court. Martin Gallagher, charged with assaulting Thomas Fallon. Defendant struck complainant on the head with a pair of tongs, inflicting two large wounds, from which blood flowed copiously. He became unconscious, and had to be taken to the hospital. Fined 25s. and costs.

Warwick Borough Police-court. Henry Green, charged with poaching. He said he was searching for mushrooms, but it seemed that "a net with two dead rabbits recently snared was found soon afterwards concealed by a tree that Green was seen near." There were two previous convictions. One month.

Aberdeen Police-court. Before Acting Sheriff Brown. Edward Finnigan, charged with assaulting J. Merson by seizing him three times and severely compressing his throat, knocking and pushing him about, beating him with a stick, throwing him to the ground and again beating him. Fined 30s.

Newton Police-court. Before Mr. W. J. Watts, jun., and other magistrates. Thomas Williams, charged with sleeping out. Seven days.

Albert Moore, a lad, charged with stealing twenty-two pears from an orchard. Ordered to pay the costs, £1. 14s.

Prince of Wales Hotel, Harrogate.—Finest position, facing the Stray. Redecorated and sumptuously refurnished. New management. Excellent stabling. Electric light throughout.

Burton Borough Police-court. Before the Mayor, Messrs. T. B. Lowe, C. Harrison, and T. Turner. John Laban, butcher, charged with cruelty to a cow by starving it. Defendant bought the animal, which was in a very diseased and emaciated condition, for 13s., and then left it in a pen at the sale yard for three days without food or water. He said he bought the cow for pig meat. The Bench considered it a bad case. Fined £2 and costs.

Wem Police-court. Before Sir W. M. Honyman, Bart., and other magistrates. William Taylor, convicted of assaulting a man named Hamlet. Taylor struck complainant over the eye, knocking him down. Later on, as complainant was going home, he was waylaid and again seriously assaulted. He was left lying in the road, and his injuries required the attention of a surgeon. Fined 10s. and £2 costs.

Blackburn County Police-court. Before Messrs. Hanson and Noblet. Joseph Walmsley, convicted of assaulting John O'Donnell. Defendant struck complainant violently on the right temple and on the face, rendering him unconscious. His eye was blackened and cut, two teeth were broken, he was badly bruised, and he did not recover consciousness till next morning. Fined 20s. and costs.

Retford Borough Police-court. Before the Mayor, Messrs. G. Cutts and B. Haigh. Thomas Collingwood, charged with assaulting a boy named Vatcher, aged twelve. The boy was gathering mushrooms, when he was violently assaulted by defendant, who twice struck him on the arm with the handle of a scythe. The lad's arm was broken. Fined £2, including costs.

Birmingham Police-court. Before Messrs. Colmore, Harris, Barnsley, Cadbury, and Green. Harry Diamond, convicted of assaulting Mary Jane Tootill. He cut her head open with a loaded and knobbed stick, and the Bench said it was lucky for him that the woman's injuries were not worse; such a weapon might have caused death. Fined 20s. and costs.

Burton Borough Police-court. Before the Mayor, Messrs. A. J. Coxon and T. Turner. James Gadsby, labourer, charged with stealing a cap value 1s. Twenty-one days.

Bridgwater Borough Police-court. Alice Osmond, charged with wandering abroad and being without visible means of subsistence. Two months.

Ironbridge Police-court. Before the Mayor, Messrs. — Maw and E. W. Shorting. John Owen, William Owen, and Richard Jones, charged under the Poaching Prevention Act with being in possession of nets and rabbits. A net and four rabbits were found in Jones's possession. Fined £5 each and costs.

Chard Police-court. Before the Mayor and the ex-Mayor. Edward Tyrrell, a tramp, apparently about 70 years of age, charged with destroying his trousers in the casual ward at the workhouse. He said he did so because the trousers were so threadbare that he could not keep them together. One month.

Cheltenham Police-court. Before Major-General de Courcy Hamilton and Captain Willis. Peter Parker, charged with sleeping in a shed, having no visible means of subsistence. Seven days.

Barnsley Police-court. Before Mr. F. H. Taylor and other Justices. John Paley, an old man, convicted of sleeping out. Fourteen days.

Southampton County Police-court. Before Sir O'Bryen Hoare, Bart., and other magistrates. George Edward Matthews, charged with sleeping out. One month.

Stoke-upon-Trent Police-court. Before Messrs. G. Leason, W. Kirkham, and A. Edwards. Enoch Hodgitt, charged with having attempted to steal sweets from an automatic machine. Fourteen days.

If the good people of Newbury duly pray, as doubtless they do, that the magistrates may be given "grace to execute justice," I fear they must be sadly disappointed with the answer to their supplications as it is exemplified in the acts of the Borough Bench. The other day three little girls, Rose Underwood, aged 12, Mary Jane Underwood, aged 11, and Winifred Bevan, aged 12, were brought before this Bench charged with stealing a bicycle. The bicycle was left outside a public house, and on seeing it Rose said to her companions, "Let us take the machine and have a ride upon it." They did so, and travelled a considerable distance, one riding and the others holding her up and pushing the machine along. After being out all night and getting drenched to the skin, they were met next morning by a policeman, Mary

Boot and Shoe Makers.—Major Howe & Co., 16, Coventry-street, W.; 60, Strand, W.; 13, Queen Victoria-street, City; 81, Gracechurch-street, City. (Klenrusha Polish.)

Jane still seated on the bicycle. Incredible though the statement may appear, it is nevertheless a fact that for this childish escapade Messrs. E. Harris, J. H. Mason, and J. Elliott, J.P.s, committed the delinquents to a reformatory for five years. A local paper solemnly affirms that "neither of the girls previously bore a good character," but I hope the trio of woodenheads who passed this sentence will save themselves the trouble of attempting to justify their severity by any such preposterous nonsense about the "character" of little children of eleven and twelve. Nothing can justify this treatment of a mere juvenile freak as a serious crime, and magistrates so palpably destitute of grace to execute justice would do well to resign the task to somebody equipped with the necessary sympathy and understanding.

Among all the different classes of employers, co-operative societies might fairly be expected to be first and foremost in recognising the duty of paying a living wage; but it would seem that some of them are, on the contrary, as determined and unconscionable sweaters as the most grasping of private capitalists. The Scotsman reports the disappearance of one Hunter, secretary to the Cowdenbeath Co-operative Society, Limited, whose books show defalcations to the amount of £5,000, and the astonishing statement is made that this official's salary was only £24 a year, though for many years past the secretaryship had constituted his sole employment. The fact that he was so miserably underpaid did not, of course, entitle this man to help himself to money from his employers' funds; but, at the same time, the Society cannot be acquitted of a heavy moral responsibility for his dishonesty. They ought not to have expected a man to fill a position of trust in which hundreds and thousands of pounds were passing through his hands for a beggarly wage of less than 10s. a week, and their complacent acceptance of his explanation that he was for all these years "making a good thing" by betting, only accentuates their folly.

Sundry correspondents have directed my attention to two recent cases at Newark, one before the County Bench, who committed a man for three months for an orchard robbery; the other before the Borough Bench, who fined a defendant £20 for stealing £1. 4s. 3d., belonging to a firm in whose employ he had been for about forty years. The former sentence seemed to me excessively severe, and I pilloried it last week. As to the second sentence, however, I by no means endorse the censures which have been passed on the Borough Justices on account of their lenity. If magistrates err at all in such a case, it is better that they should err on the side of mercy; but in this instance, having regard to the age and character of the defendant and all the circumstances, I do not see that any exception whatever can fairly be taken to their decision.

Better late than never. I am afraid it is only on this principle that I can offer my congratulations to the police on the conviction last week of three of the individuals who have so long been running the missing-word swindles. At the trial at the Central Criminal Court it was stated that these frauds had been going on since 1892, but that "the matter was first brought to light through the stopping by the Dutch police of a bag in transit, which contained 352 letters addressed to 'Arthur, Rotterdam.'" Indeed! Why, it has been "brought to light" in the columns of Truth scores of times during the past three or four years, and I have repeatedly pointed out that, though these swindlers were using addresses at Ostend, Middleburg, Rotterdam, and elsewhere in Belgium and Holland, London was the real base of their operations, and here they cashed their cheques and post-office orders, and printed and posted the papers with which the game was carried on. However, it is, after all, some satisfaction to know that three of them have now been laid by the heels, and the two men richly deserve the punishment of a year and ten months' hard labour which the Common Serjeant awarded them. I see that the prosecution put the prisoners' average weekly receipts at £360. This shows once more what a precious lot of jackasses there must be among the British public, for anything more transparent than the fraud by which these vast sums were obtained could scarcely be conceived.

I would recommend any one who may have been duped by the swindling advertisement emanating from Messrs. Mason, alias Smith & Co., of 145, Fleet-street, to follow the course adopted by one of my lady correspondents. This lady had sent to these people fourteen stamps for the instructions, &c., for the home employment advertised by them a day or two before my reference to the swindle. But directly her eyes were opened to the nature of the trick which had been played upon her, she wrote in no measured terms to Messrs. Smith & Co. demanding the immediate return of the money, and threatening, in the event of non-compliance with the demand, to place the matter in the hands of the police. Within twenty-four hours she received the fourteen stamps "from the Publisher," without a word of explanation or extenuation. I take this to be practically an admission of guilt on the part of Messrs. Mason-Smith & Co., and I would commend this view of the case to the proprietors of those newspapers which in spite of my repeated references to the subject persist in lending their assistance and their advertisement columns for the plundering of the public.

The unceremonious way in which the Continental police occasionally arrest private citizens is repugnant to British ideas, but it sometimes has its advantages. A Munich paper gives an example of this. A swindler, who had done a term of three years' imprisonment for some fraud worked by means of a newspaper advertisement, came out of gaol and commenced advertising again on similar lines. As soon as the advertisement appeared the police pounced down upon the man, and put him beyond the power of continuing his operations. An English swindler under similar circumstances, although the police might be perfectly aware of the nature of his game, would have had a free hand until some victim chose to incur the trouble and expense of prosecuting him.

Gratis and post free, very elaborately-illustrated Price Lists, showing exact sizes of Havana Cigars issued by the Havana Trading Association, 177, Piccadilly.—C. A. Carlin, Gen. Manager

On the authority of a Transvaal paper I learn that the rascal Goldstein, alias "Harry Roberts," as to whose whereabouts frequent inquiries have been made in Truth during the last two or three years, is at present a sojourner among the Boers. It is also reported of him that he was a cordial sympathiser with the plot against the Republic which culminated in the Jameson raid. What truth there may be in the latter allegation I do not know, but as it stands it is about the cruellest thing yet said respecting the organisers of the raid. Perhaps if the matter were represented to him in the proper light, President Kruger might be induced to hand over this conspirator to the British police, who have "wanted" Goldstein for some years.

Yet another ignominious exposure of a "thought-reading" humbug came off the other day at Sandown, Isle of Wight. An entertainer, calling himself Mr. Padey Pennington, has been giving a show there, in which one of the attractions was a "Miss Grosvenor," announced as being "one of the ten clairvoyantes of the world," and as being able to tell the past, present, and future while in an ecstatic state. These feats were accomplished by the time-honoured trick of getting the audience to write questions on pieces of paper, and supplying innocent-looking blocks for them to write on. The blocks, of course, contain black tracing paper, and after the questions have been written upon them they are all collected and removed to a back room for the "clairvoyante" to study at her leisure, before she goes into the ecstatic state, and delivers her oracular responses.

It seems that a gentleman named Boustead, who had interested himself in the entertainment, made a proposal that the blocks should be placed in the hands of a committee, upon which Pennington lost his temper and responded with various offensive personalities as well as incitements to some of the roughs in the place to turn out his interrogator. Mr. Boustead got out of the hall with some difficulty, and determined to expose the clairvoyante, which he did at the next night's entertainment, by getting possession of one of the blocks, ripping it open and displaying the tracing paper to the audience. He has since sent the block to me, and I have it in my possession. Pennington, like all of his class when tackled in this fashion, took refuge in abuse, and wrote an impudent letter to the Isle of Wight Press, announcing that Mr. Boustead would be arrested on a warrant the following Monday for stealing the cardboard block, and that an action for defamation was to follow. At the same time he took refuge in the silly pretence that he had never known how the clairvoyance business was done, adding that he had terminated "Miss Grosvenor's" engagement, and sent her back to Liverpool. I would respectfully suggest to him that a better way to rehabilitate his reputation would be to learn to keep his temper on the platform, and to be civil to his audience, however inconvenient their questions. These are the first qualifications of a showman.

Typewriters and Cycles for Sale or Hire. Great bargains in Standard Machines.—N. Taylor, Manager, 74, Chancery-lane, London. Established 1884.

A feeble attempt has been made in the Western Mail to answer my remarks of last week concerning the Cwmavon Schools. The writer admits that my allegations "would, if true, prove a rather strong indictment against the voluntary school system as far as Cwmavon is concerned at any rate." He then ingenuously proceeds to corroborate, with one exception, every statement that I made. The one exception is that he says "the agitation is confined to some twenty or thirty men." As to that, my own information with regard to the general feeling among the workmen is far more likely to be correct than that of a journal making inquiries with the express object of defending the action of the employers. But the really important points to which I called attention were (1) that these so-called "voluntary" schools have been kept going by a system of enforced deductions from the wages of the men employed at the local tinworks, and (2) that on objection being taken to these deductions the manager issued a notice threatening that all who ceased to pay the school poundage would be charged increased house rents "to meet the school expenditure." The truth of both these statements is admitted. This being so, I see no reason whatever for modifying the opinion I expressed last week that the Tinworks Companies are making a most improper and tyrannical use of their position as employers and house owners to maintain these "voluntary" schools at the cost of the workmen. The object, of course, is to prevent the formation of a School Board, which would to a great extent shift the burden on to the Companies as the largest ratepayers.

The following Reuter telegram from Rhodesia, that appeared a few days ago, is suggestive :—

> Ndama's people, who refuse to surrender, declare that they prefer to see what the whites can really do, since any life is preferable to working in the mines.

Some time ago Mr. Rhodes made a speech, in which he said that the natives must not be allowed to live in reserves, as in this case they might become rich and refuse to work. The scheme of Company government seems to have been that a hut tax was to be imposed upon them, and that they were to be deprived of their cattle. This, it was thought, would force them to work for the white man at a low wage. That they should have rebelled against this usage, and that they should be unwilling to surrender unless in future secured against it, is hardly surprising.

Whilst we are in a state of indignation against the Turks for their treatment of Armenians we might do well to turn on a portion of that indignation against what is going on in Rhodesia. Every few days we hear of women and children being captured. Can anything be conceived more vile in a war against the former possessors of Matabeleland than to capture their wives and children in order to force them to lay down their arms? Then there is the condemnation to death of Makoni, as a rebel to our rule. The Matabele, rightly or wrongly, are fighting for their independence. Can we blame them for killing their prisoners, if we kill the chiefs that fall into our hands? Major Watts, it is said, is on his way with his witnesses to Cape Town under arrest. I trust that he will be severely punished, for most unquestionably the sentence of death ought not to have been carried into effect before it had been considered by the High Commissioner. The unfortunate man was not, in any case, as guilty as were the Jameson raiders. The former was a brave man struggling to be free and fighting for the independence of his country; the latter were speculators who carried war into a neighbouring State in order to serve their own private ends.

It is telegraphed that the "colonists" of Rhodesia are of opinion that this infamous execution will lead to the surrender of the Matabele, and they are indignant at the High Commissioner objecting to it. These "colonists" would do well to realise that no one cares one brass farthing for their opinions. They consist in the main of gold speculators, liquor sellers, and the riff-raff of South Africa, and these sort of people would willingly shoot all natives who are not inclined to be reduced to servitude. The principal colonists have "claims" that they would convert into companies and thus sell to British investors. Any one, and anything, which interferes with this promoting of companies, more or less bogus, ought, in their estimation, to be suppressed.

SCRUTATOR.

WHAT WE CAN AND WHAT WE CAN'T DO.

FEW things have been more horrible than the Armenian massacres, and few things more foolish than the suggestions in respect to what should be done by us. "What should" must always be subordinated to "what can," and this those desirous of a remedy for the permanent maltreatment of Christians in Turkey should bear in mind.

The Turkish question has been before the world for many a year. For a long time the fear was that all Europe would be overrun by these Mahommedans. When this danger had passed, the fear was that one or other of the European Powers would lay hands on the Turkish territories, and against this contingency we have fought and intrigued. Mr. Pitt nearly dragged us into a war with the Empress Catherine of Russia, when that potentate acquired the Crimea from Turkey and threatened a further advance. When the outraged opinion of Europe forced the Turks to withdraw from Greece, the Duke of Wellington termed the defeat of the Turkish fleet through which this had been achieved an "unfortunate event." In 1829 the Russians tried to free the Danubian principalities from Turkish misrule; we did our best to prevent it. In 1854 we engaged with France in the Crimean War, because the Emperor Nicholas had claimed a Protectorate over the Christians of the Greek Church within the Turkish Empire. Our latest feat was to insist upon the Treaty of San Stefano between Russia and Turkey being torn up. Russia had driven the Turks out of Bulgaria, and they had agreed to grant practical independence, not only to the Bulgarians, but to most of the Christians living south of the Balkans. In addition to this, a sort of Russian Protectorate over Armenia was assured. To all this we refused to assent, and at Berlin a Treaty was substituted, which consigned once more the Christians south of the Balkans to Turkish tender mercies, and substituted for the right of Russia to interfere in order to secure good government in Armenia, the right of the European Great Powers to do so collectively. This action on our part, which Lord Beaconsfield termed "peace with honour," was all the more dishonourable as we obtained for ourselves Cyprus in payment for our exertions on behalf of the Sultan.

Thus it will be seen that, during the last hundred years, Russia has sought to free the Christians of Turkey from Mahommedan misrule, and we have done our best to retain them under it. That Russia has been actuated by motives of pure philanthropy is impossible. She has looked to her own interests; we have looked to what we deem ours. She has wanted to secure an outlet to the Mediterranean; we have endeavoured to prevent this by using the Turkish Empire as a barrier against her progress towards the South. Thus we have persistently sacrificed the well-being of our co-religionists in Turkey to what we have been pleased to regard as the exigencies of our policy.

What is the present situation? The Armenians have been massacred. But, although this has attracted our attention for the moment to them, it must not be supposed that the other Christians in the Empire are well governed. They are one and all treated as servile races. The Turks are the civil administrators, and alone are soldiers. The Christians are invariably despoiled and maltreated. Against the action of the Turks towards the Armenians, we have appealed to what we call (lucus a non lucendo) the European Concert. Nothing has come of this appeal, for the very plain reason that, in respect to Turkish affairs, the European Concert does not exist.

I do not believe that Russia desires to incorporate any portion of the Turkish dominions within her Empire; but she would bind Turkey hand and foot to her. There would be—if she attains her ends—a political union between the two Empires, in which the Turkish Sultan would occupy the position of the subordinate partner. In this way Russia would secure an outlet to the Mediterranean, and the Dardanelles would become as much a Russian strait as is the approach to St. Petersburg. Against this Russia would see to the fair treatment by her subordinate of the Christians under Turkish rule. What is the opinion of Europe in regard to this? We, and we alone, are opposed to it. Austria only of the Continental Great Powers would prefer the status quo; but she would make no objection to the change, provided that she received herself some little accession of territory in the neighbourhood of Bosnia.

We must, therefore, recognise the fact that the malgovernment of Turkey, with all its attendant horrors, has been, and still is, due exclusively to us. Lord Rosebery suggests that the solution is to be found in diplomacy. It is not. Diplomacy may perhaps bring to an end direct massacres, but it cannot change the state of things inherent in Turkish rule, theoretically under some sort of general European control, but practically under no such control, because the European Powers are not agreed as to how, and with what ultimate aim, it is to be enforced. Others suggest that we should act independently of the Continental Powers, and send a fleet to Constantinople, in order to coerce the Sultan into good government. This would be impossible. Our fleet might run the batteries on the Dardanelles, and anchor in somewhat a dilapidated condition off Constantinople. But what then? We could not well bombard an open town, nor could we occupy it without having with us an army of at least 80,000 men, for it must not be forgotten that the Sultan has himself an excellent and numerous army. The appearance of the fleet would be followed by a general massacre of the Christians throughout the Empire. Moreover, I greatly doubt whether the Continental Powers would consent to these high-handed proceedings. They do not believe in our sincerity. They know that for years we have done our best to rivet the Mahommedan yoke on the Christians of Turkey. They have not forgotten our Cyprus transaction, nor that we are still in Egypt, although we pledged ourselves that our occupation would only be temporary, and that we are now engaged in extending that occupation along the upper valley of the Nile.

Cycling Suits are a speciality at Ulster House, Conduit-street, London, W., where Ulsters, Overcoats, and Capes are kept ready for immediate use.

What, then, ought we to do? To recognise the fact that Russia ought to have an outlet to the Mediterranean, and that the sole mode in which we can secure the Christians in Turkey against Mahommedan misrule is to make it clear that we shall not oppose the practical suzerainty of Russia over Turkey. To this solution all the Continental Powers are agreeable. We alone are against it, although what harm it will do to us is by no means evident. Be this, however, as it may, either the Christians in Turkey will, as heretofore, be misgoverned, or Russia must be left to become the paramount partner in a close Russo-Turkish alliance. Our first step in this direction should be to break off diplomatic relations with Turkey, as we did when we sought to express our disapproval of the rule of King Bomba over Naples. Our second step should be to indite a despatch to the Continental Great Powers, informing them of our determination to have in future no part in a sham European Concert, but to leave the Turkish question to find its own solution free from any interference by us: this would practically mean that we trust that Russia and Austria would at once deal with it. The outcome would be that Austria would probably extend her frontier in the direction of Salonica; that the Sultan would remain a puppet at Constantinople; that the islands of the Levant, now belonging to Turkey, would be distributed amongst the Mediterranean Powers, and that Russia would be paramount in that part of European Turkey still remaining under the nominal rule of the Sultan and in Asia Minor.

To my mind nothing is more loathsome than hypocrisy. I believe that there is a strong current of public opinion amongst us against our "traditional policy" in respect to Turkey. So there was when the Bulgarian atrocities took place. Lord Beaconsfield stood firm to that traditional policy, and the political wiseacres in the Press applauded his action. But when a general election took place, this policy cost him his place. So now our statesmen declare their horror of the Armenian atrocities in well-balanced phrases. But their aim is to stand once again to this policy, and to maintain the Turkish Empire. I have pointed out how alone we can bring about what we declare is our dearest aspiration. That the Turk still misrules is due to us. That the Armenian atrocities took place is due to us. That Christians are misgoverned in European Turkey is due to us. That misgovernment, varied by an occasional outbreak of atrocities, will take place in the future, will be due to us, and to us alone. We must sacrifice our traditional policy to our sense of right, or our sense of right to our traditional policy. If we do the latter, we are—as, alas! in this Turkish matter we have been in the past—the most contemptible of hypocrites.

If there is one thing more certain than another, it is that Russia will eventually occupy such a position at Constantinople that Turkey, so far as regards foreign nations, will be to Russia what our protected Princes in India are to us. I hold that such a connection is only right and proper, and that in this way alone can this eternal Turkish question be set at rest. Supposing that the English Channel were a salt-water lake, landlocked at one end, and connected with the open sea by a narrow strait at the other, and that the shores of this strait were to belong to some weak Power, does any one suppose that we should consent to any Great Power of Europe meddling at the strait? We should insist on being paramount there. To where do the Dardanelles lead? To a lake which is practically Russian. Why, then, can we not at once recognise that the Dardanelles must sooner or later be, to all intents and purposes, Russian? The question is not whether they eventually will be, for they will; it is whether we are to put this off for a time at the cost of a possible European war, and of the certainty of further Turkish misgovernment and Turkish atrocities.

That the massacres of the Armenians have produced an honest outburst of indignation I am far from questioning. What I would have all who rightly feel indignant realise is that so long as the Turkish Empire exists subject alone to a general right of Europe to interfere, misgovernment must be the rule, and when one outbreak of fanaticism has spent itself, it will soon be followed by another, whilst we cannot alone interfere with any prospect of putting an end to this state of things. We may wish that it were otherwise, but wishing cannot alter facts. We must bring home to our minds that Turkey is to Russia much what Scotland was to England in the days of Queen Elizabeth. Just as that Queen would never allow either Spain or France to meddle with the affairs of Scotland on the plea of Roman Catholics being oppressed, so Russia will always set herself against any real interference on our part in Turkey on the plea of the Christians there being oppressed. Her doctrine is, and long has been, that she is the natural protector of these Christians, most of whom belong to the Church of the Russians, whilst her political aim has always been to bring Turkey within the sphere of her political existence. We stepped in after the Bulgarian war to hinder the realization of these aspirations. Up to a point, we had Austria and France with us. Now, both these countries are on the side of Russia, and Germany is with them. The persistent craze that Constantinople practically in Russian hands would in some mysterious fashion prove injurious to us, blocks the way to the effectual ending of the long story of Turkish inhumanity. The Armenians are massacred, and will be massacred; the Greek Christians are ground down, and will be ground down, until we either free our minds from this craze, or are no longer prepared to use these unfortunates as mere pawns in our political game—a game, indeed, in which we have nothing to gain.

THE COUNTESS AND HER CAVALIERE SERVENTE.

A trial has just taken place at Rome which has excited the greatest interest throughout Italy. In Rome lives a Countess Collere. She is one of the Roman grandes dames, and she has been closely connected with the Court. For some time she has had a son of the late Prime Minister Crispi as her cavaliere servente. In April last year, she told Luigi Crispi that she wished to dispose of a casket of jewels. He said that possibly they might be bought for the Duchess d'Aosta, and she obtained them from the jeweller where they had been deposited for safe keeping. They were not sold to the Duchess, and on the 15th of the month Luigi Crispi was passing the evening with her. He told her that it would be dangerous to retain them in her house, and several times, according to her, he stated that he heard "noises," and suggested that they might be burglars who had got into the house. At a little after midnight, he wished her good evening, went down to the courtyard of the house, where his carriage was standing, and drove away. The Countess then went into her bedroom and undressed. As she was getting into bed she heard steps in the salon. Arming herself with a revolver, she entered the salon. There she saw a man escaping on to the balcony. Knowing that there was no exit from this balcony except through the salon, she locked the door and went down to the porter's lodge to bring the porter back to seize on the intruder. But there were two stairs and two separate doors to the house, and just as she reached the porter's lodge she heard the other door close, the man having crept along the front of the house by means of some projections on the outer wall, run down the second staircase, and thus escaped. The Countess reported what had occurred to the police. Luigi Crispi was examined, and said that he knew nothing about the matter, but the Countess wrote him a letter in which she implied that he was connected with the robbery. A few days later, a certain Cioffi called on her and told her that he could put her on the track of the robbers. On payment of 150 francs, he stated that he had two friends, Tito and Luigi Malpieri, who were brothers. They had told him that they held Luigi Crispi in their power, and in various ways they hinted that they had been employed by him to effect the robbery. The Countess by this time had come to the conclusion that the police were endeavouring to hush up the affair owing to the scandal that might accrue to the family of the Prime Minister. The Préfet of Rome was her cousin, and an ardent supporter of Crispi. He and his wife advised her to take no further steps. On this she dressed herself as a man and went frequently to see Cioffi at his house. Then she discovered that the brothers Malpieri were spending money largely, and accounted for it by having won a prize at the lottery, but that they had sold several stones, which she believed had been extracted from her jewels. When these facts were made public, the police were forced into taking action, and arrested the brothers Malpieri. The next event was that the Deputy Laurenyana, also a strong supporter and intimate friend of the Prime Minister, called upon her. He said, according to her account of the interview, that the jewels could not be restored to her, but that, if she would consent to hold her tongue, she should receive the equivalent for them in money; adding that, if she revealed this proposal, he would deny that it ever had been made.

The entire matter was referred to the law officers of the Crown, who, whilst Crispi was Prime Minister, managed to put off all action. After his fall there was an outcry for a trial, and the two Malpieris were put in the dock. Luigi Crispi is still abroad, but various other witnesses were heard. The Countess repeated her story, and the interest culminated when last Thursday the Deputy Laurenyana was heard. His evidence was remarkable. According to him he had had three interviews with the Countess; the first one at the request of Luigi Crispi. The Countess had explained to him that she had played on the Stock Exchange with Luigi Crispi, and that he still owed her 600 francs; that she was ruined, and that she wished the Prime Minister to make her a lady of honour and to purchase certain Etruscan tombs that were on her property for the State. He begged her to put this request in writing; but a Councillor of the Prefecture, who was present as a friend of the lady, advised her to write nothing. On informing an advocate of what had taken place, he suggested that the Prime Minister should at once be seen, and there was an interview between the Prime Minister, his son Luigi, and Laurenyana. The Prime Minister handed his son a pistol and advised him, if guilty, to shoot himself. But he replied that he was innocent. In cross-examination, Laurenyana admitted that he had asked the Countess whether she would take money for the loss of her jewels? Finally he was asked whether he thought that there had really been a robbery, to which he replied that he could not make up his mind. One of the Malpieris was found guilty of having been fraudulently in possession of stolen property, and condemned to a year's imprisonment.

Practically this judgment means that this Malpieri was in some way connected with the theft, and leaves it in doubt whether Luigi Crispi had employed him actually to steal, or had, with the assent of the Countess, given him a few stones from the jewels to sell, in order to convey the impression that there had been a robbery.

I have carefully read through all the evidence, and, like Laurenyana, I cannot quite make up my mind as to what occurred. What seems most probable is that Luigi Crispi did introduce Malpieri into the house to steal, that he has fled with the jewels, that Malpieri sold the few that were given to him for his services, and that the Countess, believing that the robbery had been committed by Luigi Crispi, sought to blackmail his father into the purchase of the Etruscan tombs, and her appointment as a lady of honour, on condition that she did not push matters further. The journals antagonist to Crispi are making a great fuss about the trial, and it seems pretty clear that, had Crispi remained Prime Minister, the case would never have come into Court.

SOME SAMPLES OF SHYLOCKISM.

For many years past I have made it one of my weekly tasks to expose the malpractices of the modern Shylock and warn the guileless against his machinations. I have the satisfaction of knowing that the seed I have sown in this field has been productive of some good fruit. It has, at any rate, rendered a considerable section of the public proof against the wiles of the most artful usurer, and directly or indirectly, also, it has helped to bring several of the fraternity to book in civil or criminal courts. Unfortunately, however, half-a-dozen fresh bloodsuckers spring up for every one who is sent to gaol or retires from the scene; and I should think the profession was never more full and never more active than it is at present. Certainly, I have never been so beset with communications from unappreciative recipients of their seductive promises of pecuniary accommodation. To notice all the rejected circulars that reach me in this way is quite impossible, but it may be useful to deal with a few which may be taken as fair samples of this kind of literature.

One interesting feature in the modus operandi of the advertising and circularising usurer is the skill with which he baits his hook for gudgeons of some particular profession or calling. The embarrassed clergyman, the impecunious doctor, the distressed agriculturist, are all tempted to accept loans from philanthropic capitalists bubbling over with sympathy for persons in their position. Judging from the amount of attention that is bestowed upon them, the clergy must be exceptionally amenable to this sort of blarney. One of the most importunate of their friends is the man Grunwell, who runs a usury shop at 40, Oxford-place, Leeds, under the specious title of the "Leeds and Counties Clerical Agency." His offer of "cash advances" is always accompanied by a page of "extracts from some of many letters" which purport to be testimonials to his kindness, courtesy, consideration, honourable and straightforward dealing, &c., &c., from rectors and vicars (all, of course, anonymous) who have had transactions with him. Even, however, if Grunwell has managed—as the notorious Shuckburgh of Bristol did—to inveigle or intimidate a few infatuated clergymen into singing the praises of his precious agency, the fact remains that he is a most rapacious and remorseless usurer, and I sincerely pity anybody who falls into his clutches. Another concern devoting special attention to the clergy is the so-called "Carlton Bank, Limited," which, besides doing the usual money-lending business, seeks to enlist the parson's services as a tout on commission among his parishioners. The circular containing this impudent and disgraceful proposal is, it would seem, still being distributed, though the universal resentment it has excited might well have convinced the Bank of the desirability of withdrawing it. The clergy are also greatly pestered by an individual with an address in the Haymarket, who disguises himself under the ingeniously suggestive title of "W. H. Smith & Co." As to the medical profession, their most insidious foe is a certain Sydney Bassett, of 285, Oxford-street, W., who makes his approaches in the guise of a disinterested friend. He has observed that "outstanding patients' bills are very seldom promptly met," thus "causing at times considerable inconvenience both to the new and old practitioner;" and, having "uninvested spare capital" he has benevolently resolved "to meet this emergency" by accommodating medical men with loans at "a nominal rate of interest." It is scarcely necessary to remark that any medico who is credulous enough to try Mr. Sydney Bassett's remedy for pecuniary "inconvenience" will find it in the end a good deal worse than the disease. There is a similarly alluring style about a circular which is being sent out broadcast to agriculturists by B. S. Thomas, of Oxford. This gentleman advises farmers and stock breeders that it would be to their advantage to hold over their produce for a time instead of selling at the present low prices. He recognises, however, that many are unable to do this without temporary financial aid, and so he has generously decided to come to their rescue by advancing any sums from £50 to £1,000 "at a very low rate of interest upon note of hand alone." Thomas is a new name to me, but from the character of his circular I have not the least doubt that any agriculturist in low water who resorts to him for help will soon be completely submerged.

The sharks who prey upon all classes of the community alike, one section not being enough to satisfy their voracious appetites, are too numerous to mention. It would be an unpardonable omission, however, to entirely pass over Isaac Gordon—the most irrepressible and the most unmitigated scoundrel of the lot. Gordon is the name by which his victims get to know him only when they are already securely within his grip. His headquarters are at 6, Livery-street, Birmingham, but he has branches or agents in London, Bristol, Liverpool, Manchester, Newcastle, Edinburgh, Glasgow, Dundee, and possibly other places. At each address he has a different alias. In one town he is B. Edwards, in another James W. Ryland; and Williamson, Anderson, Grant, Armstrong, and Martin are also among the patronymics which this Polish Jew has assumed. Isaac's circular, like Joseph's coat, is of many colours, and it is addressed indiscriminately to all sorts and conditions of men and women. All are fish that come to his net; and the small are landed with as much zest as the big. His rate of interest ranges from so little as 100 to as much as 1,800 per cent. The latter was the amount he had exacted in a case which came before Sheriff Campbell Smith at Dundee the other day, the circumstances drawing from the Sheriff the significant remark that "the business of a swindler was not half so lucrative or half so safe as that of a money-lender." There is another money-lender at Manchester who has just tried Gordon's dodge of dropping his own name in his announcements. I lately alluded to the newspaper advertisements of Mrs. Gertrude Hall, a lady of means with money to lend, at 26, Brown-street, Manchester, and suggested that, if there was any woman in the business at all, she was probably the decoy of some usury-monger in the background. So it turns out. "Mrs. Hall" is really, I am informed, Mrs. Hemmons, the wife of the man who was prosecuted at Manchester a few months ago for frauds by means of the preliminary fee trick, and who had the good fortune to be acquitted, the judge who tried him taking a line totally at variance with that which was adopted by another judge in the case of the notorious Pockett. But, notwithstanding his acquittal, Hemmons appears to have found it difficult to resume business at the old address and under the old style, and so he now puts forward his wife, or rather "Mrs. Gertrude Hall," as a decoy.

Many examples of the ruin and misery that are caused by these extortioners are published in TRUTH from time to time; and I may as well give here the two latest that have been brought under my notice. The cases are extremely sad ones, and not any the less instructive because the amounts involved happen to be small. The first occurred at Middlesbrough, the victim being a man named Wass. He borrowed £2. 17s., paid back £3. 5s., and was then committed to gaol by Judge Turner for non-payment of £2. 5s., the amount of the interest, with costs, which the money-lender still claimed. The result was that Wass's wife and four children at once became chargeable to the Middlesbrough Union. Apart from its interest as an illustration of the relentless rapacity of the usurer, this case is not without importance in connection with the complaints that have long been rife respecting Judge Turner's abuse of the process of committing people to prison for debt. The Lord Chancellor has now, I believe, promised to make some inquiries on the subject, and, from the case of this man Wass, it would seem to be high time that he did so.

In the other case the borrower was a female teacher employed by the West Ham School Board. She borrowed £10 from a Birmingham usurer named Henry Jones, agreeing to pay 240 per cent. interest and assigning a year's salary as security. On falling into arrear with one of her instalments she was so persecuted and frightened by Jones's representatives—the usurer himself is dead—that she suddenly disappeared and her family and friends have never since heard of her. The School Board were recently sued for the salary alleged to have been assigned to Jones, but Judge French dismissed the claim, with costs against Jones's executors, and stigmatised their conduct towards this unfortunate girl as infamous. But the average usurer cares nothing for the scathing censures which he constantly receives from most of the judges (misguided functionaries of the Turner type are happily rare); and he is equally impervious to the criticism of the public. Nor do the herd of simpletons who deliver themselves into his hands, like sheep, to be fleeced, appear to pay much heed to the warnings that are continually given. What is really wanted to deal effectively with this evil—and that it is an evil of the most serious and extensive kind nobody who has studied the question will deny—is some drastic amendment of the law which will have the effect of paring the claws of such birds of prey as the Gordons, the Grunwells, and the rest of them.

TINNED MELODRAMA FROM AUSTRALIA.

What unkind critics have called the Pecksniffian and Podsnapian gravity of Mr. John Coleman, when he addressed his Drury Lane audience, is merely a return to the old manners and customs of the theatre. It was an old-fashioned address by an old-fashioned actor. It reminds me of the days when a manager came, hat in hand, to the front of the footlights, and was at least respectful to the public before him. Nowadays, some of our managers, brimming over with conceit, and oozing out with self-importance from every pore, dash on to the stage on the slightest provocation, argue and chaff with the people in front of them, whom they evidently consider their inferiors, and bounce out their egotism and platitudes until this custom of licence has become positively nauseating. The penalty of praise, no matter whether just or unjust, appears to develop the "swollen head" fever to such an extent that anything like respect or deference is impossible. Let the impetuous hot-headed young managers take a leaf from the book belonging to Mr. John Coleman's charming library, and I think, on the whole, they will find the public far more attentive and appreciative by being courteously and gently addressed than being bombarded with foolish and irrelevant remarks and senseless arguments very mal à propos.

That the "Duchess of Coolgardie," played for the first time on Saturday night at Drury Lane Theatre, is a success goes without saying. And the reason of its success is obvious. The play has been constructed and written by experienced men, produced by experienced men, and acted by experienced men and women. The story is simple and human. The heroine, a rather perverse young lady, is suddenly introduced into the middle of a gang of Australian miners in a drinking booth, whither she has come to act as lady help—a euphemism in Australia for a barmaid. She is confronted by her lover of days that once were, who is on the search for gold out West, and who, in order to make matters hum a little more cheerfully, has taken a strong liking for "spiritual intercourse," and tosses off flowing bowls of brandy and whiskey ad libitum. The arrival of the new lady help, who is immediately christened the "Duchess of Coolgardie" by the entire community of gold diggers, awakens the thirsty hero to a sense of right and wrong, and he forthwith foreswears all alcoholic liquor for the future, but, as the unfortunate heroine is accompanied by a small child, he not unnaturally believes naughty things about her, and decides, notwithstanding all arguments, to let the canker gnaw his very heart-strings to pieces. Anon comes the villain, who has seduced the sister of the Duchess of Coolgardie, and to whom, of course, the innocent infant belongs. The sisters meet; the betrayed lady, all sobs and tears, sighs out the fact that the villain has cruelly deserted his foolishly confiding mistress, when, hey presto! to the rescue comes a big, burly, sentimental gentleman, who seemed rather undecided as to his nationality. First of all he tried to be a Welshman, then he broke out into violent Scotch, then a bit of Old Ireland chipped off him, and in the third act we were given to understand he was a Yorkshireman, but he was least like this of all. Well, the hero discovers a gold-mine, and sells his nuggets for twenty-five thousand pounds, which he forgets to put in the bank until too late, and being rather nervous of carrying the notes about with him he confides them to the care of the seduced and deserted maiden, who declares she is the possessor of a real Chubb, and who is now beloved and consoled by the sentimental Yorkshire or mixed man. The transaction is, however, witnessed by the villain, who, in order to secure the treasure, pleads resurrected affection for his cast-off lady love. He is on the eve of winning the spoil, but is prevented by the enraged heroine, who sends her weak little sister back to her room like a naughty child, and gives the wicked man money to take himself off. This he does, but only for a time, mark you. He returns, murders his paramour, steals the money, and fixes his crime on an innocent man. This is so new, is it not? But murder will out! And out it does come in a splendid trial scene, which is carried on in a manner calculated to make the hair of every judge stand on end with astonishment, were it not for their wigs! But Hermann Vezin, the grave judge, or "Warden," seems to know how best to settle matters in this part of Australia, so the villain, hunted down by the vindictive hatred of a diminutive black boy, is run to earth, secured, but escapes. The last scene discovers the murderer flying from justice. He wants to hide! Where, oh, where shall it be? In the dining saloon? No, no not there; he will not have his goose cooked there, so he flies to the deserted shelter of a convenient conservatory. Enter hurriedly the excited heroine, bent at last on a reconciliation with her lover. Where is he? Take, oh, take me to him! But there is no need to take her, for this is his cue, and on he comes, travel-stained, weary, and in an all-over state of dilapidation, to learn that his sweetheart loves him and wishes him to take her to his manly bosom. The villain appears at the back, and is about to put an end to the hero, when simultaneously the little black boy prods him in the back with a penknife, and down falls villain, pistol and all. Virtue to the front, black boy at the back, harmony breathing over all!

Of Miss Hilda Spong, the new actress from Australia, nothing but praise can be said. Possessed of nature's choicest gifts, she came, she saw, yea, and verily, she conquered. The career of this charming and accomplished actress will be watched with keen interest. And what of Miss Laura Johnson, who suddenly bounded into fame as the impish rogue of a black boy named Wallaroo? The performance of this clever lady is at once fascinating and absolutely true to nature. Miss Johnson may have been allotted a part she appreciates, but it is extraordinary with what rare intelligence and poetic beauty she has imbued a character which, in the hands of a less artistic temperament, might have become boring and commonplace. Mr. Charles Glenny is seen at his very best as the mighty hero of the new Drury Lane melodrama, and acts with an intensity of power which belongs to him, and him alone. Mr. Vanderfelt makes the most of his villainous opportunities, and very able assistance is rendered by Mr. Laurence Cautley, Mr. C. Lowne, and Mr. W. Brunton. To Mr. John L. Shine falls the task to cheer and not inebriate, and it is needless to say that he avails himself of every possible opportunity. Miss Laura Linden, as the bonny Irish lassie, is all that could be desired. Mr. Hermann Vezin, an actor of dignity, charm, and power, brings all his fine style and presence to bear on a character which, if not quite worthy of him, at least adds materially towards the attractiveness of the play.

Go to old Drury and see for yourselves what experience, good acting, and common-sense can do. Mr. John Coleman is heartily to be congratulated on his most successful enterprise. The audience seemed disposed to wish him luck now, and in the future.

NOTES FROM PARIS.

M. FAURE'S NEW SUIT.

As the Imperial visit draws nigh, we hear more and more of approximative etiquette and sartorial display. M. Félix Faure now wants, sixty-six years after George IV.'s death, to figure as the First Gentleman of Europe. He also wishes to bring the Elysée, through a code of approximative ceremonial, into more intimate touch with the Courts of Europe. All innovations have their victims. "Approximation" has borne hard on the subaltern officers in the President's following at the grand manœuvres. The custom of having all the members of the escort at the President's table has been this time set aside. The line is now drawn at field officers. Captains and Lieutenants have to forage for themselves, and out of their own pockets. This form of approximation may perhaps serve as a leaven of discontent in the Army. It appears that "notes" have been sent from other Captains and Lieutenants to M. Paul Cassagnac, who is sure not to let them get worm-eaten in pigeon-holes. Approximative etiquette has had its effect in the President's costume. He is not entitled to a military uniform like his fellow rulers of the other States of Europe. But his tailor, bearing in mind that the Czar will enter Paris in the full-dress uniform of Colonel of Russian Hussars, has devised something to approximate. What do you think of a smart, handsomely-braided jacket, superfine in all its materials, a cavalry mackintosh for wet or cold weather, grey trousers the colour of an Italian officer's, bottes à l'écuyère with russia leather linings, and slightly creased like Charles I.'s? The "Cronstadt hat" is another compliment to Russia, and is of superfine felt, neatly bound and banded. It only wants feathers to debourgeoisise it. White gloves, supple and scented, give the finishing touch. A hand that may shake an Emperor's and hold the tips of an Empress's fingers surely ought to be gloved to perfection. The riding whip is an objet d'art, and carried with jaunty stateliness. Louis XIV. once—and the occasion was memorable—used his riding whip as a sceptre. An escort of generals, handsomely mounted, but on horses inferior to the chestnut charger of M. Faure, rode to right and left of him at the grand manœuvres. This was strikingly "approximative," and spoke to the eyes of 50,000 soldiers used to see Presidents rolling en pékin (civilian) in carriages at autumn manœuvres. Doubtless the carriages were drawn by artillery horses with artillerymen as postilions. All the approximation is intended to show the Russian friend que la République est la meilleure des monarchies. The groom that rode behind the President is simply an outrider of the Empire, with livery of a different colour. The bottle-green coat is now royal blue with red facings. The doeskins and top-boots are the same as we used to see when the Emperor and Empress drove in the Bois. The ladies at the Elysée are like the Archbishop of Canterbury's wife. They count not in the protocol. Still, we hear that it has been decided to "approximate" them. Their old cronies, of course, are furious to hear that they travelled the other day by special train from Havre to the Royal abode of Rambouillet, where they are to enjoy forest after sea air. This privileged mode of travelling has, as might be feared, aroused tempests of envy in all directions. But the vials of wrath will not be poured out until after the Czar leaves.

Maignen's Filter is the only one adopted after public competition by the City of Paris (10th July, 1896) see Bulletin Municipal Officiel, 30th July, 1896.—Full particulars from Maignen's Filtre Rapide & Anti-Calcaire Co., Ltd., 255, Regent-street, London, W.

Thiers never gave a thought to etiquette, nor did Grévy, who had the good fortune to have for his Chamberlain, or Military Secretary, General Pittié. The General was a born troubadour. A more obliging person never lived. When he could not oblige, he still managed to send supplicants away delighted with him. He had a light way of dealing with questions of ceremony. He showed that he, personally, attached no importance to them. His poems were graceful and pervaded with sensibility. In approaching the President, to whom he also served as gentleman usher, his manner was deeply respectful; but the respect was that of a military man for his chief. Had not General Pittié died prematurely, Grévy would probably have only left the Elysée in his coffin. The person who served in Pittié's stead was General Bragère, a stick who went through the Polytechnic "refrigerator." He was overbearing, and thought that ceremonial and etiquette added to his own importance. Carnot took him on, and it was perhaps the only injudicious thing he did. MacMahon, who had the spirit and the training of a gentleman, only observed military rules of etiquette on grand official occasions. He had a high sense of dignity, personal and Presidential, but was none the less simplicity itself, unless in doing things handsomely. Carnot, though extremely simple and unassuming in private life, was a little ceremonious. Bragère made him appear more so than he really was, and brought Caran d'Ache and other caricaturists down on him. They wrongly made him out wooden or un homme de zinc. Nothing was farther from his thoughts than to approximate the Elysée to an Imperial palace. His impeccable correctness delighted the provincial bourgeoisie. His suavity made friends of all who approached him, and his deep-seated modesty disarmed envy.

M. Casimir Perier had a gentlemanly standard of his own, and never thought of approximating. His manner of receiving was good and quite natural. He knew exactly what to do, did it, and attached small value to what the Sir Oracles of the Protocol said—unless in his relations with Ambassadors.

Lady Isabel Somerset is at Marseilles with her friend Miss Willard, an interesting specimen of the "Western Woman." Lady Isabel went there to give material aid and sympathy to the Armenian exiles. I was prepossessed by her at the first meeting. She shows French blood in her well-set-up figure, upright carriage, broad though not inelegant shoulders, deep chest, neat waist, and her manner of wearing her clothes. The clothes were a tailor-made jacket of grey cloth, and a broad-brimmed hat with a white sprigged veil. The veil, however, did not hide at all the face, which is a most agreeable one, and worthy to be fixed on canvas by a great portraitist. Her dark, animated, and yet kindly eyes are French, with I know not what of English sense and sensibility. She is very much the lady in the soft self-restraint of her manners. Did she not show herself a practical woman in going, after she had visited the Armenians at a night asylum, and ordering for them all the bread that a bakery could furnish? Miss Willard is intensely original, fearless—as most original persons are—unconventional, and not uncouth. All her ideas are her own, though she is a singularly well-read person. She looks kindly. One is not afraid of her shrewd, perceptive glance, in which one can detect a gleam of fun.

Nothing more tormented Rénan than curiosity as to what the twentieth century was likely to bring forth. He, who believed so little, had utter faith in the march of science and progress of intellect. He did not see that science may march faster than the intellects of most people, and just do to strengthen the teeth and claws of beasts of prey in human guise. I fear that if Rénan could have seen some decades into the future, he might have read statutes to give over prisoners and paupers to vivisectors. There will be a good scientific excuse. Human diseases are not those of brutes. This thought strikes me as I reflect on the appalling indifference of Europe to the horrors of Armenia and Constantinople. What difference is there really between the motives of vultures and hyenas and those doddering Chancellors of the three Empires who snigger as the Sultan cudgels Lord Salisbury's dog Armenia? M. Faure is too much taken up with things sartorial and etiquettes to trouble himself about the massacres. M. Hanotaux has been a good deal in the Levant—a bad training for the moral sense. He has also steeped his mind in the wicked doings of his idol, Richelieu. The lesson inculcated by his history of Richelieu is that the end justifies the means, though the end be to prey in the name of king or State. He has betrayed no compunction at the ghastly monster tragedies of Constantinople. Chacun pour soi et Dieu pour personne!

I suppose there must be writing on the wall that bodes no good, if we could only read it, for the twentieth century. The great sin of the French Republic is inconsistency, as the great blunder of the English public is to fancy England still a military power. France has supplied the Sultan with his actual head of the Police de Sureté. He was lent to the Sultan thirteen years ago by Comte de Montebello, now Ambassador at St. Petersburg. Up almost to the eve of the massacres he drew pay as an inspector of the detective force of Paris. Comte de Montebello and M. Lozé, now Ambassador at Vienna, can play into the hands of this policier. Imagine the fulcrum they and M. Cambon, Ambassador at Constantinople, have in him, and Nelidoff through them. He is prime favourite of the Sultan, whose fears he works on as he pleases. The Prefecture of Police manipulates also a great personage at Berlin, who lives in fear of its revelations.

The great cause of the massacres was to pay off Lord Salisbury for his peace-with-honour programme at the Congress of Berlin. The crowned Lohengrin who was so civil to Lord Salisbury before the Russo-French Alliance was concluded is now overawed by the situation it has given rise to. Elsa-Armenia may weep till the source of tears run dry before the Imperial Lohengrin will raise a finger to help her. If English emotion had brains behind it a nice trick might be played on Germany. Germans, it is said, are undermining British commerce, because their travelling agents are more fit and good linguists. There is a chance now for your manufacturers and merchants to cut out those Germans by employing polyglot Armenians as bagmen. Frederick the First did not go to war for the sake of the French Protestant refugees. He encouraged them to come to Berlin.

LETTER FROM THE LINKMAN.

THE following curious communication, dear Lady Betty, has been addressed to me by the Sultan:—

"Marmaduke. Praise be to Allah! You are a man of wisdom. Give me your ear. I have things of importance to impart, and I am sure that you will consider them with becoming attention.

"My son, what news is this? Are the Ingliz mad?

"Do the Ingliz take us for animals without understanding, or do they look upon themselves as the people of the day without compare, especially privileged to take the beards of mankind into their hands, and to do what they like with them?

"For centuries they have most rubbed their heads against the Imperial threshold, and they have most found favour in our sight. Now maledictions come from the lips of your countrymen in horrid succession, until the once mild and patient Englishman appears to have become more furious than a Mazanderan lion!

"How can I understand the humours of such madmen?

"Allah, the almighty and allwise, to some nations giveth wisdom, and to others folly!

"I am aware of the quarrels and makings-up of the various nations, of their jealousies and their hatreds, and particularly of their interested motives in their conduct towards me.

"They resemble the curs of the market, that howl at a hunting dog but dare not approach it.

"They are all infidels, my friend, and, by the blessing of Allah, will all grill in the same furnace.

"One of the most remarkable features of the Frank nations is their extreme desire to do us good against our inclination! Rather than not attempt it they put themselves to infinite trouble, and even do not refrain to run the risk of destroying each other!

"There is much to be got between the rival dogs.

"What is done, is done, and peace abide with it; but after all, I am a Mussulman and justice is due to me as well as to another. We are a nation whose warriors have made our name respected throughout the world, and burnt the fathers of the Franks wherever they could find them.

"No, no—we may eat, but we will not digest your insolence.

"The same powerful destiny which has led me step by step through the labyrinth of life will doubtless take me again by the hand, and perhaps at length, safely land me where I shall no longer be vexed.

"You, however, have been eating much abomination. You are in a difficult situation, and there are many who cast the evil eye upon you. Consider this: what well-fed hound ever went among wolves without being torn to pieces?

"Tell the Ingliz that if they will submit to become Mussulmans, and embrace the only true faith, they will immediately be like ourselves, their defilements will be washed clean, and they even may stand a chance of walking in the same storey of the heavens as the genuine children of Islam will in the world to come.

"I have spoken, and you are master to act as you please.

"May Allah keep you in peace and safety!

"Abdul Hamid."

* * * * *

"Newspapers all the world over are run principally for the purpose of making money. This explains the continual recurrence of newspaper war scares. Whilst the various Governments are peacefully arranging whatever trifling differences there may be between them, the newsmongers, ignorant of the real condition of events, to further their own ends, publish mendacious accounts which alarm those who have not the means of ascertaining the actual facts. There is no prospect of an immediate rupture with any European nation in connection with the Armenian difficulty. This is almost to be regretted, for it would be a curious historical circumstance were the Tsar to address a declaration of war against Great Britain from Balmoral!

"This is the keystone of the present situation. There may be much bluffing and much blustering, but there will be no blows. Whoever bluffs the most will obtain the most. Were the armies either of the German Emperor or of the Emperor of Russia to suffer a defeat or two, those sovereigns would speedily be driven from their thrones. In England you are more fortunate. Several serious defeats at the commencement of a campaign would only have the effect of substituting a Radical Ministry for the Conservative Ministry which is at present in power. All know this, from the most powerful Emperor to the least considerable Minister. But, of course, the newspaper men do not know these things, and, moreover, it is profitable to them to create excitement." Almost word for word the foregoing remarks represent the opinions of one of the most prominent and powerful statesmen of the day.

* * * * *

Many will have read with especial regret the announcement of the death of Lady Vaux of Harrowden. The late Lady Vaux, as Miss Matheson, was a favourite companion of most of the prominent fashionable young men in London in the early and middle 'eighties. Much sympathy is expressed throughout the West End for Lord Vaux, who is now left in charge of three young children, the three co-heiresses to the Barony of Vaux of Harrowden.

* * * * *

Throughout the Diplomatic Service much satisfaction will be caused by the appointment of Mr. Le Marchant Gosselin to be Secretary of Embassy in Paris, to succeed Mr. Henry Howard, who has been promoted to be British Minister at The Hague. Rumours have recently been current to the effect that Mr. Gosselin was anxious to quit the Service, and as he is particularly popular with his colleagues, and is a valuable public servant, it is gratifying to learn that he will not yet retire. Mr. Gosselin will be promoted to the rank of Minister.

* * * * *

It was suggested in these columns last week that the British Government would do well to follow the example of the German Government in appointing several commercial representatives to different European countries. The authorities at the Foreign Office have decided to adopt the suggestion.—Believe me to be, very truly yours,

MARMADUKE.

SPORTING NOTES.

A LONG list of transactions on the Cesarewitch appears daily in the papers, but the betting has really been on a comparatively limited scale, one reason for the stagnation being the uncertainty which prevails as to whether Laodamia will start. There have been sinister hints that the mare will be withdrawn unless her owner is able to back her to his satisfaction. If Mr. Fulton has not already got his money on Laodamia, it is perfectly certain that he cannot now do so, and the sooner he recognises this fact the better. It seems, however, to be quite inconceivable that he can have failed to back Laodamia for the Cesarewitch before she ran for the Doncaster Cup, as he must surely have known that her victory in that race (which was so confidently anticipated) must inevitably make her favourite for this handicap. Laodamia has been managed with such provident perseverance that it is unlikely that her owner (being presumably a person of quick apprehension and clear intelligence) would throw away her excellent prospect of winning the Cesarewitch, inasmuch as her turf career is nearly over, and it is absolutely certain that she will never again have such a chance given to her. If Mr. Fulton has not backed Laodamia, he must have been singularly wanting in common-sense when he decided to run her at Doncaster, but in that case he can only make the best of the painful situation and run her for the stake, and for anything which he may be able to get on. It is a mortifying miscarriage of a great handicap coup if this is the position of affairs, but he cannot blame any one except himself. It is a case of he who runs may read with Laodamia after her running at Doncaster, and never has there been a better thing on paper. The doubts as to her Cesarewitch prospects are, of course, calculated to fill Cambridgeshire speculators with anxiety and perplexity. If the mare is withdrawn from the long handicap, will she "go for" the shorter race? If she were scratched to-day for the Cesarewitch she would at once become first favourite for the Cambridgeshire. Should she run for and win the Cesarewitch she will have 9 st. 9 lb. to carry in the Cambridgeshire, and would be meeting Champaubert at 8 lb. more than weight for age and Canterbury Pilgrim would have an advantage with her of 13 lb. On the other hand, supposing Laodamia merely to run well for the Cesarewitch, she would still be a dangerous candidate for the Cambridgeshire.

Count Schomberg is being steadily backed, but I cannot see this horse's chance; and Chit-Chat's prospect does not seem very brilliant after his hollow defeat at Doncaster, where he was perfectly fit. Portmarnock is very much fancied at Newmarket, and he is going well in his gallops, being just suited by the soft ground, but it will be prudent to leave Captain Machell's horse alone until the day of running arrives, as it is just possible that he may not get through his preparation, and the same doubt applies to Oleander and Contract, both of which animals are remarkably well handicapped. T. Jennings is sanguine of winning with Cypria, who, as a three-year-old, ran a deadheat with Red Eyes in 1893. Arlequin, one of the French candidates, has been well backed, and for good money.

Thais is, as nearly as possible, first favourite for the Cambridgeshire, but she certainly will not beat Canterbury Pilgrim at 1 lb., and I do not believe the Prince of Wales's filly can stay the course, for she was "all out" when she won the One Thousand over a shorter distance. Quarrel cantered away with the Caledonian Cup at Ayr last week, a victory which does not involve a penalty in the Cambridgeshire. On the previous day Quarrel was galloped at Newmarket (in the presence of Lord Rosebery) with Sir Visto and Avilion, and he then travelled all night to Ayr (a journey of fifteen hours), so that his race there was a most creditable performance. He is a greatly improved horse. He has been backed for the Cambridgeshire (8 st. 9 lb.) at 20 to 1, but it is quite likely that he will run for the Duke of York Handicap at Kempton Park (9 st.), and that Avilion will represent Lord Rosebery in the Newmarket race. Champaubert, who literally walked in for the Prix Royal Oak at Longchamps last week (beating all the best of the French three year olds) has been so freely backed for the Cambridgeshire that he is now first favourite, but this horse had much better be left alone for the present, as he has two engagements to fulfil in France before he comes over to Newmarket. He is a grand colt, and he would unquestionably have won the Grand Prix if he had been all right, but he was then suffering from cracked heels. Red Heart is being recommended as the "pick of the handicap," but the fact might be added, in order to prevent eager backers from being misled, that this horse has done no work worth notice for a long time past, and that he certainly will not be fit to run for the Cambridgeshire. It is, indeed, very doubtful whether Red Heart will ever stand a thorough course of training again. Regret is being mentioned in connection with the Cambridgeshire, but I have good reason to believe that the Duke of Westminster will be represented in the race only by Shaddock, who is to be specially prepared for it, and whatever beats him will win, taking a line through Labrador. Regret will be reserved for his various weight-for-age engagements at Newmarket, of which he has five, and he is also in the Liverpool St. Leger of £500, run on November 11. The Duke of Westminster, who is now deer-stalking at Loch More, in Sutherlandshire, will be at Newmarket for the Second October and Houghton Meetings, and his colours will be worth following during the next two months.

Odds were recklessly betted on Paris III. for the Ayrshire Handicap, and Lord William Beresford (who stayed at Eglinton Castle) went down to see the horse run, but he could not move in the heavy ground, and Noah's Ark (who was thrown in) won easily.

Lord Stanley's filly, Birch Rod, is a marvellously improved animal, and, as she is apparently still coming on, she must have a fair chance for the Duke of York Handicap. At Yarmouth Birch Rod won the principal handicap, run over a mile, in a common canter, and she was giving a stone to Welbeck, who was backed in preference to Labrador at Kempton Park in August, when he was meeting the Duke of Westminster's colt on precisely the same terms.

Ghislaine has been amiss, and it is unlikely that she will be able to run for the Duke of York Handicap, for which she is most leniently weighted.

It is probable that Prince Soltykoff will win the Autumn Breeders' Foal Plate of £1,000, which is run at Manchester on Friday, with his dark colt Filliford, by Sheen out of Dorothy Vernon, who is a very good looking and racing-like animal, but he is still backward, as he could not be trained on the hard ground, and was only put into active work after rain had fallen in abundance. If Filliford wins on Friday he will not incur any penalty for the Boscawen Stakes next week.

It has been stated that Victor Wild is not likely to start for the Cesarewitch, because he is being prepared to run for the Prix du Conseil Municipal, the fact being that Mr. Worton's horse is intended to fulfil both engagements. The Prix du Conseil Municipal has hitherto been run on the Sunday before the Cesarewitch, but this year the Newmarket October meetings have all been put back a week, so that there will be an interval of ten days between these two races. The Prix du Conseil Municipal (which is worth £4,000) will be run at Longchamps on Sunday, October 4, while the Cesarewitch is not decided until Wednesday, the 14th. The result of the French race will be eagerly awaited in England, as the running cannot fail to have an important bearing on both the Cesarewitch and Cambridgeshire, for Victor Wild, Omnium II., and Champaubert, are all to start, and if Mr. Worton's steed wins he would become first favourite for the big handicap at Newmarket, whereas if either of the French horses is successful, betting on the Cambridgeshire would be revolutionised. Here again we see another flagrant example of the muddy-minded folly of not having penalties for winners of weight-for-age stakes.

Twenty-one horses have accepted for the Prince Edward Handicap of £2,000, which is run at Manchester on Saturday, the distance being one mile. King Hampton, who was remarkably well in, has paid forfeit. The distance is too far for Raconteur. I am disposed to fancy that the race will be won by the Duke of Westminster's candidate, which will be either Rampion or Conroy. If the Kingsclere stable is beaten it will probably be by Troon, who has a better chance here than at Kempton Park. The Duke of Portland's horse has been going remarkably well in his gallops of late.

There will be some capital racing at Newmarket next week, and the disappearance from the scene of St. Frusquin and Galeazzo has considerably opened up a number of stakes at the October meetings which had appeared to be absolutely at the mercy of one or other of Mr. L. de Rothschild's colts.

Forty-three three-year-olds are left in for the Great Foal Stakes on Tuesday. £1,000 is nominally added to the race, but all the forfeits go to the fund, so that practically there is very little besides the added money to run for. The conditions of the stake should be revised. Let there be an entrance of £5, to be the only forfeit if declared, with a sweepstakes of £25 each for every horse left in afterwards. The list includes Santa Maura, Coylton, Serfdom, East Sheen, South Australian, Regret, Labrador, Conroy, and Red Ray. The Duke of Westminster's candidate ought certainly to win the race. The three-year-old heat of the Triennial (with £500 added) has thirty left in, and if Santa Maura can raise a gallop she will have no difficulty in winning now that St. Frusquin is out of the race. On Friday the Newmarket St. Leger will be won by either East Sheen or Nouveau Riche, as the best of Sir Horace Farquhar's pair can surely beat Drip. Regret cannot stay the course if the race is run at a fast pace.

Twenty-five four-year-olds are left in for the T.M.M. Triennial, but not more than five of these animals are now in training. Lord Derby will win with Dingle Bay (who is nominated by his breeder, Mr. D. Cooper), as Utica cannot stay the distance, and Marco is more likely to be kept for some handicap.

There are seven subscriptions to the rich Buckenham Post Stakes, which will be worth £1,500 if only three start. Each owner has three representatives, and brings one to the post. The only animal in the lot that has shown any respectable form is Lord Cadogan's Lowly, by Common out of Lonely (which is nominated by Mr. D. Cooper). M. Lebaudy has Rêve d'Amour (she is nominated by her breeder, the Duke of Beaufort), by Petronel out of Rêve d'Or. The Duke of Portland has Brilliana, by Sheen out of Atalanta (dam of Ayrshire and Troon), and Smean, who was at one time believed to be a smart filly. Of the Duke of Westminster's lot, Brooch and Delamere are not considered to be flyers, but Simoon, by St. Simon out of Shotover, had a great reputation early in the season. She went amiss in the summer, but if now all right Simoon ought to have no difficulty in winning this race. Prince Soltykoff may win the Granby Plate with Peacock, who ought to beat Cyrenian at the weights, and he will be in better racing condition than when Galtee More defeated him at Doncaster. The Boscawen Post Stakes of £600 may be left to the Duke of Portland and Prince Soltykoff, who ought to win with Filleford, who should beat either Lady Frivoles or Smean. One of the Duke of Devonshire's pair is the filly by Ayrshire out of Snood, and she will be worth looking after whenever she is slipped for a nursery. Mr. Russel has Riccarton, who is half-brother, by Galliard, to Whittier, but he does not seem to be a flyer. Lord Falmouth has two grandly-bred animals in Simmer, by St. Simon out of Dutch Oven, and a filly by St. Serf out of Jannette. It is strange that these two mares (the pair realised about £8,000 at the late Lord Falmouth's sale) have proved complete failures at the stud. There are thirty-six entries for the Hopeful Stakes, and Lord Durham should win with Hellebore, for I presume that colt can beat Berzak. There are thirty-nine entries for the two-year-old heat of the Triennial, including Pace-Egger, Lady Frivoles, Brigg, and the dark Rapallo. I shall plump for Brigg. The Rous Memorial (£500 added) has forty-one entries, and Goletta is sure to win if she is all right. The Rutland Stakes may be left to Berzak, who can certainly beat Stewarton.

When the final forfeit was declared last January for the Jockey Club Stakes of £10,000, twenty-six horses were left in, but half of these animals might just as well have been withdrawn for all the chance they then appeared to possess, and an additional entrance of £52 (making £100 altogether) has to be paid on each animal which was not then struck out. The field next week may include Persimmon (9 st. 7 lb.), Kirkconnel (9 st. 13 lb.), Knight of the Thistle (8 st. 4 lb.), Laveno (9 st. 13 lb.), Bay Ronald (8 st. 1 lb.), Troon (9 st. 10 lb.), Sir Visto (10 st. 2 lb.), and Regret or Labrador (9 st. 1 lb.). Persimmon has not much in hand of Labrador on the Doncaster running, and if the Leger winner has gone off a little (which is exceedingly probable) he will be beaten by the Duke of Westminster's colt. It is probable that Troon will run well, for he is now apparently in much better trim than during the summer, and I expect him to prove the best of the four-year-olds, as Sir Visto performed badly in a trial last week, and he has been doing so little work that he will not be really fit next week, to which it must be added that Lord Rosebery's horse is certainly deficient in speed. The Prince of Wales is expected at Newmarket to see Persimmon run, and long odds will doubtless be betted on the Leger winner; but, all the same, it is very far from being a certainty that he will beat Labrador at 6 lb., or Knight of the Thistle at 17 lb. Mr. McCalmont's colt is now going very well indeed, and he has never been within measurable distance of proper racing condition until the present time. If Knight of the Thistle happened to win the Jockey Club Stakes, he would, of course, come to a very small price for the Cambridgeshire, in which race his weight is 7 st. 4 lb., and whatever he may do next week, I feel convinced that he will be the best of the Bedford Cottage lot for that handicap, and simpletons who have rushed upon Snowy Corrie may have substantial reasons for deploring their rash impetuosity.

A correspondent writes to ask me to take up a question already discussed in a paper exclusively devoted to sport, and that is the revival of rowing at Westminster School. There is not an oarsman at either University, or on the Thames, who would not welcome a return to the old order. How few are the schools that can send out oarsmen! There is Eton, Radley, and Bedford Grammar School. It is left to the Universities to manufacture the rest out of such material as does not consider itself fitted to get its blue for Rugby or Association football. And every year, at both Universities, this mad craze grows, and the "Fresher" will rather watch the University playing some second-rate metropolitan club than make himself stiff and sore in a college tub. Let there be as many schools as possible at which rowing can be taught, and Westminster should return to her old traditions, and then her alliance with Eton and her right to membership of "Third Trinity" would not be the farce it is at present. How many years is it since an O.W. rowed in the Cambridge boat? It is absurd to believe that what Westminster could do in the past she cannot now do with a little energy and a little effort. Coaches would be needed. If there are no good ones among the masters, there are a number of Old Etonians who would lend a helping hand. While on the subject of school rowing it may be as well to mention that there is another school which in point of numbers and opportunities has unrivalled advantages in the way of rowing. That school is St. Paul's. The numbers of the school are enormous, and there are, to put it at a small estimate, one hundred and fifty boys between sixteen and nineteen. All of them cannot get their colours for cricket and football. The school is not a stone's throw from Biffen's at Hammersmith, and yet it cannot turn out a decent four, let alone an eight. As a scholarship manufactory the school cannot be beaten. But scholarship is not all that is required. In after-life a "blue," in addition to a good degree, is invaluable. The competition for a rowing blue is less keen than in any other branch of sport. Every school sends up its cricketers, footballers, and runners, but a good rowing "Fresher" is treasure trove, and he is bound to come to the fore. It is remarkable, therefore, that the High Master of St. Paul's, in many respects a shrewd business man, has not set his undeniable powers to work at the organisation of school rowing. As an advertisement a rowing blue would not fall far short of a Balliol scholar, and this may influence the authorities at Hammersmith.

Not very long ago a correspondent, who assured me that he was officially connected with the organisation of the Amateur Swimming Association in the North, was very angry because I did not see my way to accept his statement that, of all sports, swimming was the purest. Well, if he is right, I regret that its language is not of the same kind. For has not the Association's idol, who, under the ægis of Mr. Pragnell, was to have bathed in the Ægean Sea and braved the dangers of the Hellespont at the recent Olympic games, been suspended by the Northern branch for using naughty swear words at Nottingham? Now, if the behaviour of such a champion was so bad as to call for suspension, the fact in itself does not reflect great credit on the swimming world. At the same time, it would be unfair to condemn the sport because of such conduct on the part of one man. If, however, the statement made by the champion Tyers is true, then one's contempt for the Association cannot be too clearly expressed. Tyers says that he was not summoned to attend the meeting which considered his alleged misconduct, that he has never had an opportunity of meeting his accusers or rejecting their statements, and, as the pleader says in a slander-suit, he denies that he uttered or spoke the words alleged, and denies that the words alleged bear or are capable of bearing the meaning alleged. Perhaps my correspondent from the Mayfield S.C. can throw some light on the matter, and, as he is always so keen on reform, he might inaugurate a movement to give a defendant a right to be heard in his own defence, even if he is an amateur swimming champion.

Space prevents the Ravensbourne meeting being dealt with this week, but it was assured of success long before it was held. Heartiest congratulations to Green on winning the Championship of London for 150 yards and the Challenge Cup for the third year in succession. The cup thus became his property, and he generously returned it to the Pacific S.C. as a perpetual trophy. But, then, he is a member of the Otters S.C., the members of which in a quiet and sportsmanlike way do more for swimming than all those self-advertising blatant legislators with which swimming abounds. These challenge cups which become the winner's property have proved the curse of swimming, and Mr. Green cannot be too heartily thanked both for his swimming and his unselfish conduct.

Several letters have been sent me on the remarks I made last week as to the A.A.A. and the suggestions made as to cash prizes. With regard to the former, one writer declares that those who paid the suspended athletes have been punished. The only punishment is that Mr. Cooke, of Chelmsford, has been deprived of his position as local officer because some persons paid an athlete's expenses that he might run in that town. He appears to have been made a scapegoat, and on grounds that do not justify the punishment meted out to him. As the official report stated that several leading clubs were implicated, and as all the leading London clubs are either by election or ex-officio represented on the committee, it looks as though the judges or some of them might well have been in the dock. At all events, if the Amateur Athletic Association is to command any respect at all it had better give much fuller information than it has hitherto vouchsafed concerning this affair.

As was only to be expected, Bacon, with age greatly in his favour, had a ridiculously easy win in a four-mile race with Anstead. The winner strode home in his favourite style at the finish. The South London Harriers' meeting was spoiled by rain. In the level sprint Woodyatt had all his work cut out to beat Chambers by inches, and in the three-quarter mile race Bennett, of Portsmouth, was an easy winner, Butler being second, and Munro, with no training, third. Bennett has done some good times for the mile, and next year he should pull off the championship.

The lawn tennis season was wound up with two brilliant tournaments at Eastbourne and Brighton. At both places the play in the ladies' singles was very good. Mrs. Hillyard played very strong games against Miss Bidding and Miss Austin, and the latter played up admirably against Miss Cooper, the champion at Brighton, but could not repeat her success of the previous week. At both places Baddeley, the ex-champion, was in admirable form, and showed that his health was the chief cause of failure at Wimbledon. From the interest taken in these tournaments, there is no doubt that the croakers about the decline of tennis are still very much in the wrong.

Already keen interest is being taken in the position of League clubs. Derby County started so badly that it was quite a relief to their supporters to find them scoring freely against Wolverhampton. At the same time, the defence of their backs was anything but good. Everton have been doing great things, so that Aston Villa deserve every credit for beating them at Liverpool. The winner's defence was very good. Sunderland was once a strong team, but this year they are worse than last season, and Sheffield United had an easy win. In the second division Woolwich Arsenal are doing remarkably well. The London Caledonians were too good for Ealing, who need polishing up forward. Their goal-keeper showed considerable promise.

Another Irish grievance. Two Scotchmen, Messrs. Taylor and Anderson, fought out the final of the Irish Golf championship, and for the second year the former won. In a professional tournament there was some close play, and Herd won after very close games with Tingey, Vardon, and Sayers, who lost the match by weakness on the green. The Yorkshire Golf Union held a most successful meeting at Redcar. The team match was won by Wakefield by two strokes from Bradford.

The Sanitary Engineering Co. (Carter Bros.), 65, Victoria-st., Westminster, for making Sanitary Surveys in London or country.

MAMMON.

From MOSES MOSS to BENJAMIN BOSS.

Sunday.

MY DEAR BEN,—The excessive nervousness which has recently prevailed is at last passing off, the fact that the Directors of the Bank of England did not consider a further advance in the Bank rate necessary having had a soothing effect. Politics, too, appear to have been played for a great deal more than they are worth, and while a good many weak elements have been shaken out, it is also coming to be recognised that much of the recent fall in prices was due to the manipulations of the ursine party.

An All-Round Rally Due.

Under these circumstances it is not surprising that there has been a rally, particularly in those markets in which the worst declines took place, viz., in Consols and Home Rails. The Mining department has not yet shaken itself free from the weakening influences, but both in the Kaffir Circus and in West Australians the intrinsic position is so favourable that a recovery must come about as soon as the public realise that they have been very injudiciously playing into the hands of the "Bears." They are already discovering this with reference to Home Rails, in which the recent relapse was altogether exaggerated. It is true that stock has come on the market which had been held with borrowed money, for the purpose of skinning the difference in the interest; but investors are commencing to absorb this at the lower level reached. In some instances, moreover, yields of nearly 4 per cent. are obtainable in Home Rails, such as Brighton "A" and "Coras," at present prices, and it is obvious that even a further rise in the Bank rate ought not to interfere with the value of such securities. It is different with Consols and with the other high-class investment stocks, which had attained an altogether impossible level. My readers will remember how reluctant I have been for some time to encourage them in placing their money in Colonial Government stocks, Home Corporation stocks, Prior Charges of Home Railways, and debentures of Industrial Companies, and how I have advised them to rather leave their money unemployed than to risk a considerable fall in capital value. It now transpires that many of these securities had also been run on borrowed money, so as to obtain the excess over the interest on the loan in the yield in dividends. There has been a very considerable shake-out in such stocks ever since the Bank rate was put up, and it is quite possible that the reaction which has taken place will make further progress. But this is no reason for a decline in the more speculative securities, the yield of which, although not quite so safe, is large enough not to be affected by even a further turn of the screw in the Money Market. On the contrary, as I have already stated, I consider that prices of the high-class investments should approach more closely to the hitherto neglected second and third-class stocks, and a fresh drop in the former might very easily coincide with a rise in the latter. It is difficult to predict the future course of Consols. The higher value of money ought to put them down, but the ever-recurring demand for the Sinking Fund and the Savings' Bank is a steadying influence. On the other hand, directly the political situation looks threatening operators still fly to the expedient of selling Consols as a hedge. In this way it is believed that a considerable "Bear" account has been accumulated, and, if monetary and political developments do not grow worse, the "Bears" of Consols will probably have a bad quarter of an hour at the end of September account. Be this how it may, it is hardly fair that Consols should altogether lead the other markets, as they are subject to influences which have not the same bearing upon other securities. I do not believe that the British Government will precipitate a European war in connection with Turkey, whatever measures may be necessary to modify the position in Constantinople, and as far as the recent reaction in the stock markets has been due to this apprehension, it must be considered as groundless. The American department has displayed great steadiness, owing to an improvement in the political situation in the States, and to the large shipments of gold which have been made from Europe. More of the precious metal will doubtless be required for the same destination, and a further rise in the Bank rate is not improbable, as the Directors of the Bank of England do not make the present rate effective. The strain has, however, been somewhat relaxed by the action of the Bank of France in allowing half a million of gold to be withdrawn for New York.

A Recovery in Home Rails.

A further fall in Home Rails on forced sales in connection with the mid-September settlement, and which was aggravated by heavy "Bear" selling, has been followed by a moderate recovery. How far the latter will continue must depend upon the future course of the Money Market, and upon Eastern politics. A reassuring point is undoubtedly the resumption of investment purchases, some of the pawned stock which has recently been thrown overboard having been picked up by small capitalists. Even the Heavies are from one to two points above the lowest. In their case, however, the yield even at present price does not exceed from $3\frac{3}{8}$ to $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent., and this is not much of a margin should the Bank rate have to be further advanced. The more speculative stocks, on the other hand, ought not to be disturbed, even if the official minimum had to be raised to 3 per cent., for not only is it possible to obtain something like £3. 19s. per cent. in Brighton "A" and in Coras (Caledonian Deferred Ordinary), but future prospects of many of the lines, including the two just referred to, are in favour of still higher dividends. I am not surprised that South Western Deferred should have dropped, as their yield even now is only $3\frac{1}{4}$ per cent., while the Ordinary hardly give $3\frac{1}{8}$ per cent. The South Eastern Company is doing so well that the dividend on Dover "A" for the current half-year will doubtless show a considerable increase upon the corresponding half of 1895, so that the yield, which is at present only about 3 per cent., should become materially larger. This is, therefore, one of the best speculative purchases in this department. Next in order I place Caledonian Deferred and North British Deferred. Both lines are making great progress, and the recent reaction has put the stocks on a very moderate level. Metropolitan Districts have been the most active market in this department. They touched $33\frac{1}{4}$, and have reacted to $32\frac{1}{2}$; but strong financiers are at the back of the upward movement, and not only has a very large take-up occurred last settlement, but I hear that a great deal more stock will be lifted at the end of this account, and I have reason in every way to confirm the important statement which I was able to make last week. The great possibilities of the deep level scheme are also gradually being realised on the Stock Exchange, and we are apparently on the eve of a further important rise.

A Steady Yankee Market.

Yankee Rails have been steadier during the past week than for a long time, and they have been all the better for the absence of the violent fluctuations which so often characterise this department. The financial position in the United States has improved considerably, on continued large gold shipments both from London and Paris, and the movement is likely to continue in view of the very large excess of American exports of produce over imports. Cable advices, for instance, state that all the room on the regular ocean liners has been engaged for grain shipments until December, while the steamers running from Boston are full up until January. Although the New York Bank statement shows but a moderate improvement, the change has been in the right direction, and the Banks will be further strengthened by the large sums in gold now on the way. Another favourable development has been the end of the Southern rate war, and it is now announced that rates will be restored by all the Roads on September 28. The Republican victory at the Maine State Elections appears to have been very sweeping, and has given fresh encouragement to those in favour of the gold "plank." The decision of Maine is distinctly important, as it represents that of a State possessing large and diverse interests in the marine, agricultural, lumber, and manufacturing trades. The issue of the Presidential campaign is, of course, not yet assured, but events appear to be making for a considerable Republican victory. With gold from abroad pouring in by the million; with cotton, corn, wheat, and other produce going to Europe in such quantities as to tax to the utmost the capacity of the Atlantic ports; and with the importation of merchandise falling off heavily, the "Bears" in Wall-street are certainly robbed of the material with which to engineer a campaign. On this side a good deal of public interest is beginning to be taken, and it is also currently reported that Addison Cammack, the great "Bear" leader, while ostentatiously selling in New York, has been quietly picking up large blocks of stock on this side. Milwaukee have been a very steady market, being quoted at about 73⅜, which is nearly the top price recently touched. Amongst other representative stocks, Louisville at 42⅜, and Denver Prefs. at 43⅜, are also but a dollar or so below the highest recent points. The end of the rate war should benefit Louisville considerably, and their quotation is kept down here chiefly by the very strong exertions of a big jobber, who is, however, increasing his "Bear" interest to such an extent that he may at any time be subjected to a squeeze. The very light rate on Louisville at the last settlement indicated considerable scarcity of stock, and the "Bear" position has since further increased. A good many of the low-priced stocks continue to be locked up by capitalists in the hope of a large profit to be realised after the Presidential elections, and in view of the very moderate range of prices there does not appear to be much risk in this policy. From New York a steadily growing interest in the market for American Railroad bonds is also reported. The bonds of the railroads which have passed unscathed through the last few years of depression are certainly good value at the present low level, and the properties already reorganised, or now undergoing rehabilitation, present many opportunities for satisfactory employment of capital; always providing, of course, that the Presidential Election in November will go the right way. Canadian Pacifics, after a reaction, have been put up again to close upon 60 by large German purchases; but Grand Trunks have been dull and inactive.

Foreigners and South Americans.

Considering the sharp spasms which have taken place in Home securities, partly on the fear of trouble in the East, the Continental Bourses have kept up very well; and foreign bonds, such as Italians, Spanish, and others of that ilk, have been remarkably steady. Even Turks are rallying again. In fact, the more sober-minded do not anticipate that the British Government will enter upon a course of adventures which, however chivalrous, would bring it into collision with the other great Powers. The journey of the Czar, moreover, continues to have a reassuring effect. Argentine Government stocks have reacted in consequence of a fresh rise in the gold premium in Buenos Ayres, and a very disagreeable impression has also been created by the inaction of the Argentine Government with reference to the City of Buenos Ayres Loan of 1888. In 1893 an "ad referendum" agreement, arranging for the obligations of the Banca Nacional, which had guaranteed the payment of the interest and principal of this loan, was signed, which was approved in May, 1894, and the "Procurador" reported to the Minister of Finance in March, 1895, that there was nothing in point of law and competence opposed to the sanction and approval of the scheme. Notwithstanding the promises made by various successive Ministers, the sanction of the Government was finally refused in January, 1896, and subsequent representations made to the Government have led to no result. It seems to be quite time that the Argentine Government should deal with this matter, especially as Dr. Romero (the Minister of Finance), in communications which he made in August, 1895, admitted the duty of the Government to conclude an arrangement for satisfying the bondholders' claims. Argentina will never be able to rehabilitate her credit if she does not see justice done in this instance. Brazilians have given way, and Uruguay bonds are also easier, although the remittances for the service of the debt continue to be made with great regularity. Mexican Sixes have been firm, and Peruvian Corporation stocks are hardly changed. Amongst the so-called rubbish stocks of the various South and Central American Republics, Honduras are easier at 5¼. That defaulting Republic, Costa Rica, has not yet made any effort to come to an arrangement with the bondholders.

The Kaffir Circus still in Suspense.

Any stick will do to flog a dog with, and when the surroundings are dark, and the public nervous, any false or unauthorised rumours will do the work of the "Bears," who have been very active of late in the Mining Market. An enterprising Pretoria correspondent sent the report that judgment had been delivered in favour of the African Gold Recovery Company in the well-known Cyanide patent suit in the Transvaal. This rumour, coming upon a market already weakened by previous unfavourable developments, had an appreciable effect, especially as it was accompanied by exaggerated estimates of the annual charge which would be entailed on the mining industry on the Rand by the royalties. Subsequent advices showed the whole of this to have been a myth, as the High Court of the Transvaal is not sitting and will not do so until October. Even if the Cyanide patent should be sustained in the Transvaal, the royalties would not exceed £100,000 per annum, an amount which would not make any great difference to the Witwatersrand mines. Another "Bear" trick was the publication of a long letter in the Times making an attack on the Barnato Bank. There was hardly anything new in all that was stated in this, and what was new was quite unimportant. Yet the strictures passed sufficed to knock down the price of Johnnies temporarily to 3 9/16, from which they recovered sharply to 3¾. The occurrence emphasises the remarks which I made last week as to the desirability of Mr. B. I. Barnato making a public statement with reference to the amalgamation of the Barnato Bank and other properties with the Johannesburg Consolidated Investment Corporation, and to generally impart to the shareholders in his various Companies the information which he has been able to gather during his recent visit to South Africa. The only other doubtful point which remains is the fate of the proposed Sunday Closing Bill in the Transvaal, to which I have already referred. It is to be hoped that the rumours which are current, that it will be withdrawn, are well founded. As far as can be gathered the mining industry on the Rand is progressing very favourably, and further record crushings are expected for September. It is true that peace has not yet been concluded in Matabeleland, and after all the talk of a settlement with the chiefs in the Matoppo Hills, we now hear of a fresh ultimatum having been given to these threatening the resumption of hostilities in ten days. It is not surprising that under these circumstances Chartered shares should be flat; but affairs in Rhodesia have no direct bearing upon the Transvaal mines, which ought to shake themselves free from this influence. That Deep Level mines should still show weakness in view of the Geldenhuis Deep disappointment I can understand; but all the sound outcrop mines on the Witwatersrand mines are a good purchase, and so are the other substantial Transvaal mining and land shares. In fact, purchases at present quotations of the various shares mentioned by me a fortnight ago promise excellent results, whether they belong to the Barnato, Robinson, or other groups. Randfontein are recovering from the temporary depression, which was apparently due chiefly to a "Bear" attack, and the news from the various sub-Companies is certainly promising. Some very favourable developments on the Randfontein have just been announced, and the progress made, as well as the new discoveries, are so important that I herewith give the cable advices just issued by the Company in extenso :—

Champagne.—Périn et & Fils' Cuvée Réservée. Vintages 1884, 1887, and 1889, are of unrivalled quality and highly recommended for present consumption. Of all Wine Merchants.

The Randfontein Reef has been struck throughout the whole length of Block B, the assays averaging 4 oz. 15 dwt. per ton. On Blocks C and D the reef is also being opened up, and has been traced as far as Block G. Porges Randfontein—The mill has just been restarted with forty stamps to set the plates, and on October 1 the full number of sixty stamps will be running. North Randfontein—This Company will commence crushing with sixty stamps about the end of October. Robinson Randfontein—The machinery is in course of erection. The reef has been well developed, and by the time the mill is ready to start there will be several levels opened up, and ready for stoping the full length of the Company's property—about 3,000 ft. The reef assays very high on this property. Block A Randfontein—The reef is being developed, and levels are being opened up throughout this property, which adjoins that of the Robinson-Randfontein Gold Mining Company, Limited. The assays average 4 oz. per ton, taken from forty-one samples. Mynpacht Randfontein—A shaft has been sunk on this Company's property, and drives are being made on the reef.

Woodstock (Transvaal) should also be bought. It is stated that the African Gold Properties will do well out of their investment in Landau's Colliery. The coal is said to be of an exceptionally good quality. The African Gold Properties is also largely interested in the Randt Gold Mining Company. Assays from the stone from the deepest level of this mine have given good results. A fair amount of business has taken place in Barberton Consolidated at from $1\frac{1}{2}$ to $1\frac{3}{4}$; and notwithstanding the general dulness, Transvaal Exploring have maintained themselves at 1. East Rands, Rand Mines, and Consolidated Goldfields, which I have repeatedly characterised as dangerous gambling counters, have again touched lower prices. Efforts are being made to explain away the unfavourable result of the August crushing of the Geldenhuis Deep, and the increase in expenditure is attributed to extra work underground by the preparations for running more stamps. But there is only to much reason to fear that this extra expense will continue, and the statement made in the cablegram that the cyanide precipitation is unsatisfactory is certainly not a "Bull" point, as it shows a difficulty of treatment not generally met with in the outcrop mines on the Randt. It is somewhat surprising that the Directors of Knights have not yet announced that the 30 stamps have actually begun working, and it would be desirable that some statement should now be made on this point, as the battery was to have commenced crushing in July last. It will be remembered that a further 60 stamps are to start on January 1 next. As development has been carried out on a large scale, this mine should not only increase the monthly output of the Rand, but also yield excellent returns to the shareholders. The shares are now quoted at $6\frac{7}{8}$-7, and are gradually recovering from the recent decline. Amongst other mines which will in future add to the output of the Transvaal is the New Heidelburg-Roodepoort Company, one of the Barnato mines, crushings on which are expected to commence at no distant date. I am not surprised that the London and Orange Free State Exploration Company should have declared a dividend of only 10 per cent., as far too sanguine hopes have been entertained with regard to this concern. I have to acknowledge receipt of a copy of the "Annuaire Français des Mines d'Or," which is the first mining manual published in the French language. It is compiled by Mr. Charles K. Westcott, of 12, Chaussée d'Antin, Paris, and should be a very useful vade mecum for our French neighbours. Diamond shares, too, have displayed dulness, although a moderate recovery was marked at one time. De Beers stand at $29\frac{3}{4}$, New Jagersfontein $9\frac{15}{16}$, Consolidated Leicester Diamonds $1\frac{15}{16}$, New Bulfontein $1\frac{3}{4}$.

Golden West Australia.

In the West Australian market it is also noticeable that comparatively insignificant events or rumours take an exaggerated effect, especially as strong efforts continue to be made by the ursine party to depress quotations. The circular of the Directors of the True Blue Gold Mine is certainly disappointing; but these shares had been put to an artificial premium altogether unjustified by prospects, and they were only "prospects." I have never recommended the purchase of these shares, as they appeared to me inflated, the stage which development had reached being altogether inadequate. In ordinary times such a solitary disappointment would not have had any effect, and even now there is no reason why this should unfavourably affect quotations of other groups which are doing well. Again, another batch of satisfactory crushings has come to hand, as will be seen from the following statement :—

	Tons of ore crushed.	Ounces of gold.	Assay of tailings per ton.
Ejudina	48	113	—
Great Boulder	668	2,338	—
Hannan's North	30	55	—
Hannan's Brownhill	214	836	34 dwt.
Mainland Consols	359	1,407	9 ,,
Mount Jackson...	135	150	—
Cue One...	270	309	—
Great Boulder Main Reef ...	205	444	—

The Mainland Consols crushing, more especially, was distinctly favourable, and ought to have created a stronger effect. It cannot be said that the small crushing of the Ejudina is satisfactory, after all the glowing statements which had been made in the early history of this mine. A most important cablegram was published in the Financial News of Friday last, giving the substance of an interview which the representative of that journal had at Perth with Mr. Charles Kaufman, the Consulting Engineer of the Whitaker Wright group. The statement which Mr. Kaufman, who is known as a very careful expert, made with regard to the Lake View Consols was more particularly encouraging. I may as well give the actual wording of his remarks :—

> We are developing the Lake View Consols in a most thorough and comprehensive way, and its possibilities are so great that I hardly like to put it into words; you might think I was romancing. But you have seen the telegrams I recently sent my Directors in England, which have been republished here. There is not a word in them I wish to qualify or take back. The mine is a wonder.

In another portion of the interview Mr. Kaufman distinctly reiterated his statement that the Lake View Consols was the queen of the Coolgardie goldfield. His statements, in fact, only applied to the Coolgardie goldfield, more especially to Hannan's, the White Feather, and the Broad Arrow, with regard to which he stated that they showed all the earmarks of permanence and success. He mentioned more especially the eight mines of the Whitaker Wright group, viz., the Mainland Consols (Murchison), the Golden Crown (White Feather), which will be the next to crush, and Paddington Consols (Broad Arrow), the next in line. At Hannan's he mentioned the Golden Treasure and Golden Group, concerning which I have already furnished particulars which show them to be exceedingly promising mines. Mr. Kaufman casually referred to the Wealth of Nations and Wealth of Nations Extended, on both of which he is, as I have already stated, constructing dams for the conservation of water. With regard to the cyanide process, Mr. Kaufman considered that it was indispensable, and that he looked upon the tailings of the slimes lying at the Lake View Consols, Great Boulder, and other mines as a very valuable asset. So far, this most encouraging report has had no special effect upon the market; but I have very little doubt that prices will eventually respond to the very promising position, and that the West Australian Exploring and Finance and London and Globe Finance Companies (the parents of Mr. Kaufman's group) will greatly appreciate in the near future. Another group which has been to the fore during the past week is that of the West Australian Joint Stock Trust and Finance Corporation. The interim report which has just been issued discloses a very satisfactory financial position, as shown by the fact that after two interim quarterly dividends at the rate of 100 per cent. per annum have already been paid, and provision made for a large reserve fund and for the claims of the Founders' shares, a third quarterly dividend at the rate of 100 per cent. per annum is declared. The report also furnishes particulars of the large interest held by the Trust in the Northern Territories Goldfields of Australia. The Northern Territories Syndicate, Limited, in which the West Australian Joint Stock Trust has the largest share, has recently handed over to the Northern Territories Goldfields of Australia, Limited, six extensive groups of mines, from which, according to the report, during the last four years about a quarter of a million's worth of gold has been obtained by Chinese labour alone, with certain plant, machinery, and upwards of 25,000 tons of tailings. The report also deals with the position of the Associated Group of mines, with its properties in the Burbanks district, the Nil Desperandum mine, and a large group of mines in close proximity to the Mount Jackson mine, in which the trust holds an interest; and from all I can learn I anticipate a further advance in West Australian Joint Stock Trust shares, which are now quoted $4\frac{1}{8}$ premium. The West Australian Goldfields group has not so far braced up yet, and several of its shares have been the butt of "Bear" attacks. This has been specially the case with Hampton Plains, which have been sold down to 4, but have recovered to $4\frac{1}{4}$ on the publication of the Directors' report, which is very satisfactory. The accounts show a cash debit of £10,292; but on the other hand a credit share balance of £327,000, taking all the shares held at "par." A good many of these shares have been sold since March 31 last, to which the accounts are made up, so that there is also a much larger cash balance now. The Directors propose, as this is a Land Company, instead of paying a dividend, to repay 4s. per share on capital account—a very handsome distribution. The Company still holds 139,463 acres of most valuable land, and its possibilities are so great that an important rise is fully justified. West Australian Goldfields are lower at $7\frac{7}{8}$. With reference to the W.A. Venture Syndicate group, I am told that the accounts have arrived from the Colony, and show very satisfactory returns. This group, it will be remembered, is also interested in the Northern Territories scheme. The ursine party have also attacked West Australian (Gold District) Trading Corporation shares, which are lower at $1\frac{5}{8}$, while the Founders' shares have improved to 90; but I should not be surprised if the "Bears" were badly caught in these one of these days, especially as the reports with reference to the Company's present business and its Ore Atomic reduction process are very satisfactory. King of the West shares, during the recent depression in the Westralian market, have been exceptionally strong. This proves that the shares are well held, and that holders do not lose sight of the fact that the Company owns a large and well-developed property, with an exceptionally low capitalisation, in which a particularly large margin of working capital has been reserved. A Company on much the same basis, and dealing with a property in the Burbanks district, will shortly be offered for subscription under the title of "Burbanks Main Lode." The shares in the Great Reef Company and the Webster's Find are steady at 10s. An exceptionally good report is to hand from the Manager of Sherlaw's Gold Mine, which says: "Lease No. 190, where we struck the rich ore, is looking well. We are now about 12 ft. into this rich lode, 6 ft. wide, and the grade is, if anything, higher than when we first struck it. My samples—eleven in all—average 43 oz. fine gold and 57 oz. silver to the ton." A cablegram has been received from the Talisman Gold Mines, according to which the machinery was started on the 16th inst., and everything was working well. Hannan's King (Brownhill) have been firm at $1\frac{5}{8}$, with an active demand. Latest advices are to the effect that Mr. A. G. Burge has been specially appointed by the Board to take charge of the Company's property. A sample taken from the hard red clay met with in No. 2 shaft gave an assay of 3 per cent. in gold, which if confirmed would be extraordinarily rich. This mine is described by experts as one of the best in the district, and is believed to have both the Brownhill and Iron King reefs. Burbank's Birthday Gift have been steady throughout the surrounding weakness, and are quoted at $2\frac{5}{16}$, while Burbank's North stand at $\frac{1}{4}$ premium. I hear that Mr. Burbanks has arrived in London, and will shortly make a statement on the mines with which he is more particularly connected. Gladiators have been firm at from 1 to $1\frac{1}{8}$. The last cablegram from Professor Nicholas states that the main shaft is now down 200 ft., and that the ground at the bottom of the shaft is becoming harder and darker, evidently closer to water level. I am told that amongst new West Australian Mining Companies will be the Champion Extended and Home Rule Gold Mines, Limited. This Company will acquire six gold-mining leases in the Nannine district, Murchison, Western Australia, altogether about ninety acres. As several of these adjoin the celebrated Champion Reef (Nannine property), and a considerable amount of development work has been carried out, this would appear to be a promising undertaking. From a West Australian source I learn that a rig of the Boulder Half-Mile South was attempted by means of the incorrect statement that the Great Boulder Lode had been met with in this property. The rumour so spread, however, proved false, and only shows how unscrupulous some people are. Fortunately, this is not a mine the shares in which are dealt in on this side. People have therefore not been caught in it as in the True Blue, for which, I repeat, I have fortunately never had a good word to say.

Indian, New Zealand, and Other Mines.

Under different surroundings the Indian section would probably have displayed a good deal of strength, and as it is, there have not been absent some favourable movements—Mysore Wynaad, for instance, improving, while Goldfields of Mysore are firm at 24s. On the other hand, Ooregum, Mysore Reefs, Nundydroog, and Coromandel are all easier. In Australian shares other than West Australian, Aladdin's Lamp have been easier at $2\frac{11}{16}$, although the mine continues to do exceedingly well. Amongst Charters Towers mines, Mill's Day Dawn United and New Queen have advanced; but Day Dawn Block and Bonnie Dundee are down. A fall of $\frac{1}{2}$ in Mount Lyell is a development at which I am not surprised. Croydon Mines have been in favour on the wonderful results obtained by the Croydon Consols, the shares in which (5s. each, 4s. 6d. paid) have risen to 8s. 6d. In view of the excellent news from this mine, the shares of North Croydon Consols (which adjoins this property) have come into demand at 2s. 6d., and are likely to double their price. These are shares of 5s. each, with 4s. paid, and the capital is only £36,000. The property of the North Croydon Consols is called the "10 North Golden Gate," while that of the Croydon Consols (which immediately adjoins it) is the "8 North Golden Gate." There are two shafts, one being 128 ft. deep vertically to the reef, and thence some 90 ft. following down the lode on its underline. The other shaft is about 130 ft. deep, and has about another 70 ft. to go to intercept the reef on the line of the rich chutes of gold of the Croydon Consols. Should these chutes be obtained on the North Croydon Consols, these shares will doubtless take a jump. In the meantime, in the course of the development some 337 tons have recently been crushed for 463 oz. of gold. Other neighbouring mines are doing well. Thus the "8 West Golden Gate" has crushed 500 tons for 1,503 oz. of gold, and the "7 North Golden Gate" has crushed 721 tons for 1,776 oz. of gold taken from the reef 230 ft. deeper than where the Croydon Consols is working. New Zealand mines have shown dulness, under the lead of Taitapu, which have executed a further downward movement, in which they were accompanied by Waihi, Waihi Silverton, Waitekauri, Woodstock, &c. In the general foreign section dealings have been on a small scale, and Linares, Columbian Hydraulic, Pestarena, and La Yesca are lower, but De Lamar, Frontino and Bolivia

Irroy's Champagne. Vintage 1889. Carte d'or. Extra sec.
Irroy's Champagne. Vintage 1889. Carte d'or. Brut.
Ernest Irroy & Co., Reims. Established 1820.

and St. John del Rey have improved. Grand Central (Mexico), after reacting to 2½ on realisations, are firmer at 2⅝ on the announcement that 130,000 dols. gold was produced from 3,125 tons of ore. The business of the Mines and Banking Corporation is quietly extending, and is stated to be of a good character. Strong efforts are being made in certain quarters to puff the San Miguel Silver Mines of Bolivia, and it is apparently proposed to introduce these shares on the London market. This is one of the instances in which operators and investors should most carefully inquire into the position of the property before embarking their money into it, as very often exhausted mines are thus temporarily galvanised into life again.

IN THE HAVEN OF LIQUIDATION.

A correspondent sends me a long letter complaining that, having invested some years ago in the Madras Presidency Goldfields, Limited, which was to work for diamonds in the Anantapur district of the Madras Presidency, he has never been able to obtain any further information about the concern since it went into liquidation in 1890 or 1891. The mine was closed and the plant sold, and the shareholders have never had any sort of statement of affairs, although it was generally supposed at the time that all the paid-up capital had not been spent, and that a small sum would be returned to the shareholders. Letters addressed to the Secretary in London were never replied to, and although this gentleman was appointed liquidator, my correspondent states that his last letter came back through the Dead Letter Office, with the statement that "the addressee had gone and no address was known." Subsequent inquiries resulted in the discovery that he had cleared off to the Colonies some three years ago, and that nothing was known as to how the affairs of the Company were wound up. My correspondent asks whether the above position of affairs is in harmony with British law, and whether a Limited Liability Company can be wound up in this hole-and-corner fashion without the shareholders being fully informed. Unfortunately, it happens only too often that a Limited Company, and especially a Mining Company, enters the haven of liquidation without ever being heard of again by the shareholders. A case in point, for instance, is the unfortunate Ida Gold Mining Company, which went into liquidation in 1893. It is true that a meeting was held in July, 1895, at which the liquidator, Mr. Harrison Smith (who had also been the Secretary) explained to the indignant shareholders that a return would probably be made to the shareholders of a small amount per share, although previously the hope of a considerable sum being returned was held out. Now more than a year has passed, and Mr. Harrison Smith, the liquidator, has made no sign. It seems to me that he ought to at least inform the shareholders, who were induced to put their money into this greatly mismanaged concern, of the result of the liquidation. It is really monstrous that such things can be allowed to go on by English law, and that in many cases in which the Directors succeed in quietly landing a mine in liquidation, nothing should ever again be heard of the concern, however discreditable had been its surroundings.

NEW ISSUES AND ENTERPRISES.

The prospectuses of the following new Companies and issues have been placed before the public during the week :—

The Desirable Proprietary Gold Mines (W.A.), Limited.—This Company has been formed for the purpose of acquiring seventeen mining leases situate near Lake Cowan, in the Norseman District, Western Australia, and ten acres of water site on Lake Cowan. The capital is fixed at £250,000 in shares of £1 each.

The extent of the property acquired by this Company is 84 acres, and the development that has already been done goes to prove that the reef runs through the whole length of the block, and varies from 2 ft. 6 in. to 3 ft. 6 in. in width. A 10-head battery is now at work, and additional steam power and machinery capable of working twenty more head of stamp have been erected, while water supply is ample. The first bulk crushings resulted in 686 oz. of gold being obtained from 317 tons. This venture promises well.

The London and Colonial Exploration and Finance Company, Limited.—This Company has been formed for the purpose of conducting the business usually carried on by an Exploration and Agency Company in all its branches in Australia, New Zealand, and elsewhere, and transacting a general financial business. The capital is fixed at £150,000 in shares of £1 each. The present issue is of 100,000 shares.

MY LETTER BOX.

The following are replies to inquiries from various correspondents :—

GOVERNMENT, &C., BONDS.

N. F.—Yes, the new Uruguay loan is a satisfactory investment, yielding upwards of 7 per cent.

BANKS, TRUSTS, AND FINANCIAL.

J. S. C.—You ought to have withdrawn your application before you received an allotment, and I doubt if you can withdraw now; but, as requested, I forward the name of a firm of smart City solicitors in your envelope. S. Q.—I am strongly of opinion that it would be well to wait for some little time before re-investing the £9,300 in question, as the rising tendency of the Money Market may reduce the prices of some of the high-class investment stocks. Mona.—I am still of opinion, as expressed in previous letters, that it would be advisable for those who desire to invest in gilt-edged stocks to wait now, as the rise in the Money Market may eventually afford them an opportunity of obtaining such securities cheaper. W. G., Settle.—The inquiries which you say you enclose in your letter have not reached me. Querist.—I have been unable to discover what you mean by your remark; but even so high an authority as the one mentioned would not alter my opinion. W. C. LL.—Have nothing to do with this outside concern. Newnham.—The name of a respectable City firm of solicitors has been forwarded in your envelope as requested. Sailor.—I can only say to you as to others, that the present is a period of transition in high-class stocks, and trustees would do well to wait before investing at the present high level.

HOME RAILS.

Liverpudlian.—You should certainly hold your Scotch stocks and Dover "A." Flageolet.—Great Eastern are a fair investment; but I prefer Dover "A," which are more progressive, and yield a higher rate of interest.

AMERICAN AND FOREIGN RAILS.

L. B.—I do not recommend Turkish investments of any kind (Nos. 1 and 2); but the Indian Debentures (3) are a good investment. Gorrachie.—I strongly advise you to keep your American bonds, Nos 1 to 6. Matters in the States are now improving, and even the Ordinary stocks have advanced considerably in price. G. H. S., Manchester.—How can I possibly tell you the result of the Presidential elections, which will take place in November next? Any one being fully assured of that would be able to make millions. Hold your Missouri, Kansas, and Texas; and if you wish to have a flutter in the better-class stocks, Louisville, Milwaukee, and Atchison Prefs. would be preferable. A. A. 1, J. J. C., Santa Fé.—As all the other Argentine lines are doing well, I should think that this railway will also fall into line. I certainly advise keeping the bonds. H. F., Thirsk.—It is quite impossible to trace articles in back numbers, such as you require. You ought to have filed your TRUTHS, in which case you would have had the information at hand. V. C.—I should say that it would be advisable to support the scheme.

MINING SHARES.

W. W. W.—Your mining shares Nos. 1 to 26 are a somewhat mixed lot; but this is not the time to sell, least of all South Africans. Hold for a rise, and another advance in Burbank's Birthday Gift is also expected. D. H. H. W.—A Committee of Shareholders has been appointed, and the old Directors turned out. This is all I can tell you, and you should write to the Committee of Shareholders. Nicholas.—1. Yes; you might as well clear your profit and reinvest in Golden Treasure and Golden Group. Transvaal Exploring are also promising. 2. There is no distinction. 3. Yes, fully-paid. Nemo, Accrington.—I think you can make a better investment than that in Nos. 1 to 4, by investing in the shares mentioned in my letter under "Golden West Australia." Kent Coast.—The Kalgoorlie mine is supposed to be a promising undertaking, and I should not advise you to sell now. Jewells.—Why did you buy these South African shares? The concern is a very doubtful one, but I suppose it would be preferable to wait for the chance of a recovery. L. E.—Block B should be held for a recovery. Lubricant.—I do not think much of Bechuanaland Exploration, but think you had better hold now until the market recovers again. Burian.—With such low-priced shares I should not like to take the responsibility of advising you; they may or may not turn out all right.

I still think favourably of London-Continental Investment. I prefer Transvaal Exploring to the other shares. Carousal.—There is no option but to hold Nos. 1 to 10, as a recovery is quite on the cards. When that comes about you should at once sell out of Consolidated Goldfields of South Africa, which are too highly speculative. H. W., Leeds.—1. A fair mining risk, but no catch. 2. Certainly hold Randfontein and buy more to average, if you can afford to take the shares up. Parl.—Burbank's Birthday Gift (1) is a good investment; but I do not particularly care for No. 1. H. N., Manchester.—1. The date of the meeting has not yet been fixed; I have repeatedly expressed a very favourable opinion of London and Globe Finance. 2. This does not apply in every case. 3. On the contrary, the news is very satisfactory. 4. Apparently not. Mr. Barnato ought really now, as I have urged in last week's issue, to make some general statement. C. W. H.—No particular reason for selling Nos. 1 to 5; but you might have got a higher price for No. 1, and generally you should keep to the golden rule "to clear good profits when you can do so." Pontefrax.—1. No fresh news is available. 2. Impossible to tell. 3. Certainly hold. Sigma.—No option but to hold Nos. 1 to 3 on the chance of a recovery. R. M. C.—You should certainly hold Langlaagte Star for an improvement. The small decrease in the crushing for August was due to short supply of coal, which is now being remedied. Rastus.—I cannot advise you on this matter. A Committee of Shareholders has been appointed, and you should communicate with them. Gold.—I am glad to hear that you have done very well recently by following my advice. You should hold your shares Nos. 1 to 9 for an improvement; this is not the time to sell. Constant Reader, Bradford.—I do not care much for Apex. Captain.—No. 1 is a fair mining risk, and Nos. 2 and 3 should recover again. Dingle.—It is useless to ask such questions. Certainly when Chartered go higher you should sell out; but you must know my views of these shares. You might hold the others for a recovery, which is probable. Pretoria.—This is not a mine which I care about, neither is this the time to sell. You should await an improvement in the South African market, when these shares will probably rally again. I cannot reply by letter. Abercorn (J. E. R.).—I do not see how I can help you any further in the matter of the Abercorn Reefs. The shareholders should combine to appoint a committee to inquire into the matter. Trilby.—There is still a possibility of this mine coming right. Barney.—A fair mining risk, but no catch; I prefer Mysore Gold Reefs. Meirion.—There is no occasion to re-purchase these shares, but be satisfied with your nice little profit, and buy, as you propose, Golden Treasure and Golden Group instead. Shahjehan.—1. I am not so sure that such a high price will be reached, but the mine is certainly a most substantial one. 2. A good property. 3. Randfontein Estates should certainly be held. Avondale.—It is impossible to fix a figure at which to sell Chartered shares; no doubt there will be a fresh rig made, when you should take the opportunity to get out. Keep Nos. 1 to 6 for a recovery, which is probable. Mariner.—1. A fair mining risk. I do not like North Queensland Mines Agency. Write again to the Secretary for full information, which he is bound to give you. Enquirer, Warwickshire.—There is no option but to hold these Matabele shares until the market rallies again; do not sell in the present weak state of affairs. Lowlander.—No option but to hold after the heavy fall. N. H., Whitehall Gardens.—Many thanks for your long letter. I have no hostility to the Lisbon Berlyn, and hope that the Company will get out of its trouble; but you must admit that events have proved me right in advising people not to put their money into this concern. Lindina.—1. Yes; you should hold Burbank's Birthday Gift. 2. No. 3. Yes; Burbank's North and Burbank's Consols are a good purchase, and so are Gladiators. 4. Clear your profit and buy North Croydon Consols. See remarks under "Indian, New Zealand, and Other Mines." 5. Yes. 6. Yes. Novice.—Yes; I mean that Hannan's Golden Treasure bid fair to turn out a second Lake View "Consols." The capital of Lake View Consols is £300,000. Culdee.—1. You should buy North Croydon Consols instead, which are only at 2s. 6d. Other low-priced shares like Nos. 2 and 3 I do not care for. Yes, Hannan's Golden Treasure (4) and Golden Group are a good purchase. You cannot go far wrong in Nos. 6-8. I do not care so much for No 9. Goldfields of Mysore (10) are a good purchase. Nos. 11-14 are fair mining risks. For choice I should select No. 13. A Beginning Sarbut.—You must forward your name and address in token of good faith (not for publication) before I can reply. Tempest.—In the first instance, you ought to number your inquiries. You do not, moreover, appear to read Truth regularly. To buy a lot of low-priced shares indiscriminately would only land you in trouble. You might buy North Croydon Consols, which are cheap at 2s. 6d., and instead of other shares mentioned you should make your selection from the shares mentioned in my letter under "Golden West Australia." Bargad.—1. Outside brokers. You should deal through a member of the Stock Exchange. 2. Another outside concern, whose system is pernicious. 3. No. Nemo, Bungay.—North Croydon Consols are the best purchase. See remarks under "Indian, New Zealand, and other Mines." 2. Not very promising. T. I. C.—Nothing is known about this Australian concern in London. R. A., Streatham.—No. 1-3 are fair mining risks. Hold. J. J. S.—These comments are absurd, and do not alter my view. Explorer.—1. There is nothing against the stock-broker in question. 2. You are welcome to your opinion, and I will retain mine. 3. A rise is probable, if general conditions improve. Syndicate.—Very doubtful. Thistle.—A fair Australian Exploration Company. Hold. I know nothing of the rumour mentioned. Bridon.—No reason to sell Nos. 1 and 2. They are good mines and you might average. Hannan's Golden Treasure would be preferable to the other mine. R. S. F.—Yes, Gladiators at anything like 1 would be a good purchase. Thrums.—No option but to hold all your mining shares for a recovery. Handscrew.—Better join the reconstruction and sell after. No option but to hold Nos. 1-5 for an improvement. J. McI.—1. Lake View Consols, London and Globe Finance, and Hannan's Golden Treasure are all good investments. 2. No good. I am glad you did so well on my advice in London and Globe. C. W.—I have never recommended Golden Plums, and am not surprised at the decline in the shares. Juggins.—You are quite right, something ought to be done about Londonderry. No option but to hold the other mining shares. W. S. — Yes. North Croydon Consols look promising. Delta. Porges Randfontein are a fair mining risk. Peter.—The Menzies properties are not so popular as those at Hannan's. Subscriber, County Armagh.—1. No option but to hold. 2. Certainly hold for a recovery. 3. Yes. Kildare Patey.—1. Write to the secretary. 2. Yes, hold Western Australian Joint-Stock Trust shares for a rise. They are expected to reach 5. Old Head.—Leave these British Columbian ventures alone. Kinsole.—It will be preferable to join the reconstruction and sell after. The documents are returned. Plen.—1. No real reason. 2. A "Bear" attack. 3. Not yet. 4. Mainland Consols should be held. 5. Yes. 6. No option but to hold. Freiston.—Certainly hold Randfontein. The bonus in Porges Randfontein is expected next week. A. G. E.—The mines appear to be improving. Golfer.—I am glad to hear you did so well in Croydon Consols. You should now buy North Croydon Consols. 1. A recovery is probable. 2. A fair mining risk. 3. No, hold. 4. Yes. A. B.—A fair mining risk, but no catch. A. H. M.—No temptation to buy these. You can do better in the shares mentioned in my letter. Beginner, Mountcharles.—North Croydon Consols are preferable. My opinion of Hampton Plains is favourable. E. C. H.—No option but to hold Nos. 1-11 for an improvement. S. E. M.—1. No information available yet. 2. Write to the secretary. 3. Yes. 4. Yes. Lake View Consols are fully paid. 5. Yes. X. Y. Z.—For the purposes of your small trust of West Australians you might select Lake View Consols, Hannan's Golden Treasure, West Australian Exploring and Finance, West Australian Joint-Stock Trust, Hampton Plains, Gladiators, and Burbank's North. F.H.—No, I do not like Nos. 1-3. Hold Aladdin's Lamp for a further rise. Midlothian.—No option but to hold now, but it is not a promising mine. P. D.—I am glad to hear you are doing so well in Croydon Consols on my advice. Hold the other shares and consult my letter about other West Australians. See also reply to "X. Y. Z." above.

Industrial Shares.

Dublin.—Fair prospects. T. S. B.—I mentioned this matter in last week's issue, and cannot trouble any more about it. Doubtful.—I can hear nothing about this concern. It seems a great pity that you should go into such doubtful ventures. Ell.—This is a local concern about which I cannot obtain any information here, and I cannot, therefore, advise you on the subject. Bushmills.—A fair industrial investment, but no catch, as it seems to be over-capitalised. G. N.—I can but say that when shares in Industrial Companies reach so high a price it is quite on the cards that a fall will ensue. I do not like the White Lead Company in question. Fras.—I have heard nothing fresh about the defunct Stamp Distributing Company. Dacre.—No special reason has come to my knowledge; but matters in the United States are not very flourishing at present. W. H. G.—Having once taken the shares you must pay up your calls. If you did not do so your shares would be forfeited, and you would still be compelled to pay up the calls. I cannot reply by letter. Shire River.—No fresh news is available; but the enterprise in itself was sound, and ought to succeed. Its success must, however, depend upon events in Central Africa. Weather Eye.—I am obliged for your communication, and have in this issue conveyed your warning to readers of Truth. Hard Savings.—1. I never have liked the shares in this concern. 2. These ought to be safe enough. 3. A good investment. R. J. R.—No reason to sell. X. Y. Z.—I do not recommend the Aluminium Bicycle Company (Newcastle) or the other concern. You should be more careful with the investment of your money.

Mixed Investments.

Vinecroft.—1. Hannan's Golden Treasure are a good purchase, they are £1 shares. 2. Any stockbroker can buy them against the usual commission. 3. Nothing fresh is known; but to judge from the recovery in price, the prospects are somewhat better. C. Jim.—A. No; I do not advise purchase of these shares. B. I do not care to advise purchase of Preston-Davies' Tyre Company's shares. All your mining shares Nos. 1 to 6 should be held, although some of them are not well selected. Multiplex.—Hold your mining shares Nos 1 to 8 for an improvement. I do not advise purchase of Nos. 9 and 10. If you want to buy a very progressive Home Railway stock, purchase Districts. No. 11 is too speculative; but Nos. 12 and 13 are fair investments. Sic Donec.—You ought to number your inquiries. All the Mining shares should be held for an improvement, which is probable. No reason to sell the Tea shares just now. I cannot possibly tell you how high Hit or Miss will go. Paris.—1. Croydon Consols is an excellent mine and doing very well; but after the heavy rise it might be preferable to buy North Croydon Consols, which are still very cheap. 2. With regard to West Australian mines, I refer you to my letter. North Croydon Consols is, of course, a very cheap share. 3. All the sound Witwatersrand Gold Mining shares are good purchases at present. 4. I do not advise purchase of these Industrial stocks at present as there is likely to be a decline. Persimmon.—The stocks mentioned by you are no catch, and you had better not buy them. You ought to number your inquiries. The Gold Lands Corporation is a promising Company. Peter.—No reason to sell the Bank shares. The Indian shares are a good investment. Roberty.—The Railway stock in question is very speculative. The Brownhill Proprietary is doing well; but the question of treating the slimes has yet to be got over. Standard.—1. Standard Bank of South Africa shares are a good investment, and so are the other Bank shares. 2. The fall in Mainland Consols is unjustified, as shown by the excellent crushing. I do not advise purchase of the Rhodesian shares mentioned. Territet.—1. No temptation to buy. 2. A fair investment. 3. Too dull and inactive. Bolive.—1. Yes, Johnnies are a good permanent investment. 2. Have nothing to do with the Ordinary stocks of this line. Unicorn.—The mine is a good one, and the proposed arrangement appears to be satisfactory, so that you had better fall in with it. 1. Quite high enough. 2. A fair investment. 3. No catch. 4. Dover "A," at from 102 to 103, are a first-rate purchase. 5. Metropolitan Districts will probably go to a much higher price, and they should be bought at once. 6. Yes. 7 and 8. I am not sufficiently informed on these points. 9. You have done quite right; hold Randfonteins for an improvement. I cannot reply by letter. Spec.—1. Hold the shares; they will recover again. 2. The French Dunlop Company is apparently doing well. 3. Instead of Croydon Consols, you might now buy North Croydon Consols, which are still very cheap. 4. I am not generally in favour of the so-called low-priced stocks; they are not always cheap; but I must refer you to my letter. Meph.—1. No reason to sell, as Bank shares generally have an upward tendency. 2. No catch as far as I know. Anxious, Stoke Newington—Certainly, hold Mainland Consols, Golden Crowns, and Austin Friars Syndicate, and buy more to average. I do not think much of No. 4, and have never recommended it. The Seasons.—No reason to sell Nos. 1 and 2; both are very promising West Australian mines. Certainly hold No. 3. The address of the office of Burbank's Consols is Copthall House, Copthall-avenue, London, E.C. Hamish.—1. No option but to hold. 2. After the reconstruction matters may improve. 3. I do not think much of these Tea shares. 4 and 5. Yes; every prospect of an improvement. F. Ready.—Your list of investments Nos. 1 to 25 is a mixed lot; but as most of them are West Australian and South African mines I should advise you to hold these for better times. I do not think, however, that your chances are so mournful as is represented in the daily paper in question, and which is not an authority on the subject. B. J.—1. I am not surprised that you received all the shares that you applied for in the London and Westminster Contract Corporation, but having once subscribed I suppose it will be better for you to await developments, as there is no market for the shares. 2. Take a good profit. Nos. 3 and 4 should be held for an improvement. 5. I do not like these shares. 6. Not now.

Various Investments.

With reference to Consols I have already made some remarks at the commencement of this letter. They fell at one time to 109½, and have since recovered to 110$\frac{5}{16}$. The future of Consols and of other high-class investments must depend upon the monetary and political situation. Silver has recovered slightly to 30$\frac{3}{16}$d., but there is very little strength in this market. No one is anxious to help the American silverites, who are therefore compelled to sell their product in a weak market. Rupee paper has also been dull. In the Cycle share market, Dunlop Deferred have improved again to 1⅝, but Beestons are lower at 3⅞. Grapplers at 1⅛ and Cycle Components at 4, mark a moderate improvement, while there has also been a better demand for Cycle Tubes at 1. Mexican Rails did not for some time continue their upward movement, the weakness of the other markets affecting them, but they appear now to be bracing up again. Brewery shares have been dull, and a decline has taken place in Allsopps to 172½, this being a highly speculative stock which cannot stand bad times. This also applies to such stocks as Coats, which had been rigged to an exceedingly high quotation. The following communication has reached me from Calcutta, and as it conveys a warning to investors, I give it publicity:—

I anticipate that there is to be a "rush" to London, taking advantage of the cheapness of money to foist on to the public by means of newly-named Joint Stock concerns, a lot of unsaleable tea gardens, now lying on the hands of tea agencies of Calcutta, also other properties which the banks would be equally pleased to be rid of. Messrs. ——— have bought up the best gardens, so there will be an endeavour to get rid of them to the anxious investor who becomes a slave of a flash prospectus—"where new clearings planted up" are added. The interests of tea cannot be worse served than by such worn-out properties being vamped up under new names. The truth is that over-production is the immediate danger to tea; unlike a manufactory that can close its works for better times, tea gardens cannot close, they must be worked and kept up, or are ruined. I would warn all capitalists and investors of this grave fact. Bengal has blindly added thousands of acres year by year, also Ceylon. Prices are down, and this year's crops will fall short. "Touch, nor handle not."

The communication is signed "Weather Eye"; but my correspondent furnishes me with his full address, and seems to be in a position to judge. He wishes me more especially to warn my readers against touching any Tea-share scrip, either belonging to Calcutta or Ceylon. Good gardens change hands freely, but bad ones are, according to him, floated on the Stock Exchange for "lambs and mannikins." With reference to my repeated warnings against syndicate touts, I may mention that the proprietor of Cameron, Muir & Co. (against whom I have so repeatedly warned my readers), viz., Henry Ungless, who traded also under other aliases, was on Wednesday last sentenced, at the Central Criminal Court, to eighteen months' hard labour, for obtaining credit to the extent of £20 without disclosing the fact that he was an undischarged bankrupt. These are the men who send out glowing circulars, claiming to make profits of from 100 to 200 per cent. for grateful clients.—Your affectionate Uncle, MOSES.

All Rights Reserved.]

QUEER STORY.

THE TURN OF THE LUCK.

It was night time in Stephen Ward, Guy's Hospital, and the long room, with its rows of beds, was silent, save for an occasional groan from some poor fellow in pain, or the light patter of footsteps as a nurse moved across the room.

By the side of bed No. 17 sat Sister Thorne.

A small lamp stood on the little cupboard, and she was anxiously watching the unconscious man as his face and hands twitched in fever.

It was a curious face, and well worth a few minutes of observation. His age might be forty-five, or perhaps fifty, and the hair, which had once been black, was now freely streaked with grey. The face was withered and weather-beaten, and the long furrows spoke of suffering, and perhaps a bad life. The grey beard had been cut short, and showed the outline of a heavy, vigorous jaw, whose power was contradicted, however, by a weak mouth, and the dark eyes had in them the eager, staring flash of delirium.

The sister—the best and kindest sister in Guy's—sat there hour after hour, waiting for the turn, wondering anxiously—none knew how anxiously—whether it would be for the better or the worse.

Sometimes she left him for a few minutes to go the round of the other beds—arranging the clothes of one, speaking a few quiet reassuring words to another—but always returning as soon as possible to No. 17.

He had been brought in by two or three rough, kind-hearted sailors, straight from a ship to the hospital, a spar having fallen on him during a severe gale in the Channel. One leg was almost crushed and three ribs were badly broken, and his injuries were so aggravated by insufficient attention on board that the surgeons gave little hope of recovery.

No letters were found on him, nobody claimed him as a relative or a friend, but the seamen who had brought him there came to the hospital from time to time to inquire after their mate.

At last the turn came. After dozing more peacefully for a few minutes, the man's eyes opened and the glare of delirium had gone.

Notice to Connoisseurs of Fine Dry Champagne.—Périnet & Fils' Cuvée Réservée, Extra Sec, is in magnificent condition, at Hotel Cecil, Hotel Savoy, Midland Grand Hotel, Spiers & Pond's Hotels and Buffets, and most leading Hotels & Restaurants.

He looked first at the shaded light, then at the row of beds opposite, then at the sister who sat by his side.

He seemed puzzled, and put his hand nervously to his face, over which a twitch of pain passed.

"Come, that's better," said the sister; "you will soon be all right now."

He seemed more puzzled than ever, and raising himself slightly on his uninjured arm, looked anxiously round the ward.

"Don't try to move," she said, kindly. "You are in good hands. This is Guy's Hospital. You were brought here by some sailors from the Cornflower. We shall take great care of you. Now try to drink this."

She put a glass of soda and milk to his lips, which he sipped feebly, and then, apparently giving up the problem of trying to understand his surroundings, dropped back and fell into a quiet, healthy sleep.

When she resigned her post next morning to the sister who had charge of the ward during the day, Edith Thorne said to her:

"I think No. 17 has turned the corner. Look after him, won't you? I—I used to know him years ago."

Every few hours she inquired after the unknown patient, and learned that he was sleeping peacefully, only waking at intervals to take nourishment. Barring unforeseen complications, he was on the high road to recovery.

At night she again took her place, and after an hour or two of patient watching, he opened his eyes and spoke.

"Is that you?" he said.

"Yes, it's Edith—your wife. Are you better?"

"I suppose so. Am I very—shall I get over it?"

"Yes, I think you will now. But you mustn't talk, or worry yourself."

He closed his eyes obediently, and was silent for a few minutes.

"Why are you here?" he said, at last.

"I am a sister in the hospital."

"Were you with me last night?"

"Yes!"

"Ah! I thought so—then I thought it must have been one of the dreams, because you were not here during the day."

"I'm not on duty in the day this month, but I inquired after you from time to time. I wouldn't come in; I thought it better for you to be quiet."

"You inquired after me?"

"Yes, of course I did."

"Are you so very much interested in me? I've been a nice sort of husband."

"Don't let us talk about that now," she said, quietly.

"I wonder why it is?"

"What do you mean?"

"Why, people are so different. Look at me. Since that night I left you, fifteen years ago, I've been in every quarter of the globe, and I think I've been guilty of almost every sin it's possible for man to commit. Then look at your life. You always were good. Probably you've been all the better for the misery I have inflicted on you. Why is it? Why do you like to do what's right? Why do I like to do what's wrong? We were not so very different once. When we first married, we were fond of one another, and there was not such a very wide difference between us, yet what there was good in you has steadily increased—I can see it has in your face—and what there was of good in me has steadily diminished. Why is it?"

"Who can tell?" she answered. "We no more understand the growth of evil or of good in a man than we understand the growth of an acorn or a cherry-stone. Perhaps, after all, it depends on the healthiness of the mind as much as anything."

"I wonder you don't attribute it to 'faith,' or 'prayer,' or some such thing," he said, bitterly. "Women generally do."

He spoke contemptuously, as if her superiority were a personal offence.

"It may be that, too," she answered, in her usual tone. "I don't pretend to understand; but I still think the natural infirmities of the body must be considered."

There was a silence between them for a while, and then he began to tell her of his life. It was not a nice record, and he spared her nothing, seeming to take a gloomy interest in his own misdeeds. It was the nature of the man, too, that he should dwell on himself and his own troubles before he inquired after her happiness.

"You see," he concluded at last, "it was a good thing for you I left you."

She smiled good-temperedly.

"There doesn't seem to be much doubt about that," she said; "it's a dreadful history; but I feel sure different people will be judged by different standards."

"Let's hope so," he said, grimly, "or it will be bad for some. At any rate, Edith," he continued, more solemnly, "you are amply revenged for that blow I gave you. That is the thing in my life I regret most. Ever since then I've sunk lower and lower. It seemed as if nothing could stop me. If I tried to be respectable there was always something cropped up; and now, after all these years, ruined in body, mind, and soul, without a halfpenny in my pocket, I find myself in a London hospital, and the first person I see there is you."

"It is queer how things come round," she said.

"What a mad, drunken beast I must have been to do it. God knows I can't have been in my right senses, for in those days I hadn't got so low down as that at any rate. Did—did it hurt much?" he concluded, with a slight flush of shame on his forehead.

"I don't know," she answered, almost inaudibly; "I have forgotten all about it. Don't let us talk about that."

She always looked upon that last scene, and indeed the few years of her married life which she had spent by her husband's side, as a hideous nightmare.

At first they had been happy enough, then by degrees he had dropped into the habit of speculating, from that into betting and card-playing and late hours. On the whole he met with success, but it was a wretched life for her. The money, obtained easily, went as quickly as it came. Nothing would stop his foolish extravagance, and, it must be added, generosity. Then would come months of bad luck, when they could scarcely find sufficient money to keep tradespeople quiet, and meet necessary expenses. But economy was only followed by a fever of recklessness, and forced gaiety when the luck changed, and the young wife found that the periods of want were, upon the whole, happier than the times of plenty.

By degrees worse habits set in. He necessarily mixed with men of a low stamp, and constant association with them gradually undermined the better side of his character; he was frequently the worse for liquor, and was often away from home all night as well as all day.

Then followed an entanglement with a girl, the daughter of a publican, who had been well educated and should have known better. This soon reached his wife's ears, for in his drunken fits he was perfectly reckless what he did or said.

At last, one afternoon, after being away for two days, he reached home in a savage state of intoxication, and broke into a volley of coarse abuse. For once, she too lost her temper, and answered him with the scorn and contempt he deserved.

He looked at her for a moment in astonished silence. It was the first time she had rebuked him.

Then the devil awoke in him, and, with a brutal oath, he drew back his hand and struck her full in the mouth with his clenched fist.

From that moment, until he was carried half dead into the hospital, they had never met, and while he had been careering round the world, ruining himself and others, she, with the help of friends, had served as a lady probationer in Guy's, eventually rising to the position of sister.

And so the night slipped away in whispered conversation. She gave him a brief outline of her life from the time he left her, and he listened with closed eyes and an occasional catch in his breath like a sob.

Not a word of reproach crossed her lips, and she dwelt

Mortlock's China and Glass Business, Oxford-st., has entered its 150th year, being founded by John Mortlock in 1746. It is carried on by John George Mortlock, the great great grandson of the founder, who solicits patronage and recommendation.

as little as possible on the hardships she had gone through, for the life of a lady probationer is not by any means an easy one; but no man could have been more humiliated than he was.

"But this is my last night in Stephen Ward," she said at last.

"Why?" he asked, with a look of terror in his eyes. "You are not going to leave me, Edith?"

"I must," she said, quietly. "I have to change places with the sister in Philip Ward. For the next month I shall be on day duty downstairs. But, come, it's almost daylight, and I must leave you now; besides, it is time you went to sleep—you have talked far too much for a sick man."

"Shall I pull through this?" he asked, moistening his lips with his tongue.

"Yes, I think you will, but it will depend mainly on yourself; you must keep your courage up. I shall come to see you as often as possible."

"I shall pull through if I can," he said, "and if I do, Edith, I will devote what little life I have left to you. I won't ask you to live with me. I'll go out and work; but we can meet sometimes, and perhaps I may be able to do something. You—you won't mind, will you?"

There was an almost childish quaver of weakness in his voice.

"Of course not," she answered, brightly. "Who knows; perhaps this is a turn in the luck?"

It was one of his favourite expressions in the old days—"A turn of the luck!"

"Good-night, then—or, rather, good morning, for the day is breaking. God bless you!"

Then she kissed him on the cheek and went away to set about her duties.

During the next twenty-four hours he showed no improvement. The new sister, who, at Edith's request, gave him a great deal of her attention, seemed in some way to irritate him by her presence, for he spent the night in a state of fevered excitement bordering again on delirium.

Edith grew alarmed, and during the day made frequent inquiries. Then she decided to sacrifice her next night's rest, much as she needed it after a day in a large ward, and sit again by his bed.

But it was too late.

At eight o'clock in the evening a nurse came to her with a white frightened face.

"If you please, ma'am," she said, "have you heard about No. 17 in Stephen?"

"No; what is it?"

"He's been delirious off and on all day, as you know, but at about eight o'clock, when the lights were turned down for the night, he seemed to go quite mad all of a sudden, for he tore off all his bandages and——"

"Well," said Edith, impatiently.

"Before we could do anything he was gone!"

Edith hurried upstairs, but at the door of the ward she met the night sister.

"Have you heard about No. 17?" she said, with a queer look in her eyes.

"Yes, I'm just going in," said Edith.

"I wouldn't if I were you—it's all over; but I'm very sorry for you, my dear."

Something in the tone of the woman's voice made Edith look up quickly.

"What do you mean?" she said.

"It's so sad to lose a husband, isn't it?"

The two women faced each other with flashing eyes.

"What do you mean?" said Edith. "How—who are you?"

"Do you mean to say you don't know?" replied the other, with maddening composure. "It struck me," she continued, in reply to a puzzled look in Edith's eyes, "that it was so queer that fate should take him out of your hands and place him in mine. I don't think he liked the change," she added, bitterly.

"But I don't understand you," said Edith, thoroughly bewildered. "What have you got to do with it?"

"Only this," replied the other. "Fifteen years ago I was the 'other woman,' just as I am to-day!"

MUSIC.

A MUSICAL PHILANTHROPIST.

For many years past our old friend Mr. Lansdowne Cottell has been a musical philanthropist. He started his London Conservatoire of Music with the object of benefiting the human race, and he advertised free scholarships for students who were talented and poor. There is, I have no doubt, a good deal of profit to be made out of free scholarships, when you know how to do it; and at any rate the enterprise seems financially to have prospered. Not satisfied with this remarkable work, Mr. Lansdowne Cottell resolved to extend his philanthropy. For ten guineas a year "season tickets" were vended, entitling the holder, "subject to the approval of the director," to sing at the school concerts, and to place two students gratuitously in the Conservatoire, or one student who would be boarded and lodged gratuitously "subject to the rules and regulations of the Conservatoire," whatever they may have been. But philanthropy is a virtue which grows upon what it feeds; and three years ago a "Special Private Notice" in blood red ink was circulated to the effect that "Ladies and gentlemen to whom this form may be addressed," might have all these inestimable privileges at the ridiculously low rate of a guinea a year, or five guineas for life. To be able to secure board, lodging, and instruction for a child at the rate of a guinea a year seems to solve the problem, "What shall we do with our boys?" How it is done may be another matter. I have a few blank red-ink vouchers at the service of any one who would like to try.

Philanthropy is, however, from time to time, apt to break out in new places. No one would, I fancy, connect the following advertisement, which occasionally appears in the public prints, with Mr. Cottell and his London Conservatoire of Music in Porchester-road:—

> Gentleman's Son Required, just from school, of good address, and accomplished, to be trained to assist in private office and otherwise a gentleman holding high, prominent position; board, progressive salary; moderate premium.—Letters M., 62, Queen's-road, Hyde Park.

But the gentleman "holding high, prominent position" is, nevertheless, none other than Mr. Lansdowne Cottell, although, with the modesty which invariably accompanies true philanthropy, he advertises from another address—I believe round the corner. The advertisement was recently answered by a gentleman whom I will call Colonel X, and who, in due course, received the following characteristic reply:—

> 66, Porchester-road, Hyde Park,
> August 27, 1896.
>
> Dear Sir,—I require a young gentleman to train in my private office in my mansion above, to assist me generally in financial, editorial, secretarial, management and other work (a little knowledge of music or drawing would be an advantage). Good address and pleasing manners most indispensable. A salary, no doubt, can be fixed at once according to value of services. Only a nominal premium will be asked, according to period mutually agreed upon here, either Friday or Monday, 3 to 8, or Saturday, 12 to 3 p.m.
>
> A most delightful home is offered. The best society and unusual advantages.—Yours truly,
>
> Lansdowne Cottell, R.A.M., M.S.A., &c.

Here the incident terminated. The gallant Colonel apparently did not appreciate the generous offer of the "gentleman holding high, prominent position" with a "mansion above," but instead he sent the letter on to Truth. To me the advertisement was, of course, an old acquaintance. Two or three years since I dealt with a precisely similar incident, and I am informed by a gentleman who now holds a position in Truth office that about ten years ago, when he was a young man, he answered from the country a somewhat similar advertisement, and found that the advertiser was Mr. Lansdowne Cottell. Furthermore, here is yet another advertisement, published in the Standard as recently as Monday of this week, which advertisement, even if Mr. Lansdowne Cottell has not modestly concealed his identity under the initials

A Fair Beautiful Skin.—By washing with Sulpholine Soap the natural tint and peach-like bloom of a perfect complexion is ensured.

"B. B., 842," nevertheless emanates from "a gentleman holding high prominent position."

TO PARENTS.—Young Gentleman Required, of good address and accomplished, to train to assist, in office and otherwise, a gentleman holding high prominent position; board-residence; moderate premium; progressive salary.—Address B. B. 842, Standard Office, St. Bride-st., E.C.

This species of philanthropy (with "only a nominal premium") has therefore not only been going on for a considerable time, but is still in progress.

Although Mr. Newman's announcement that Wednesday is "the date of her Majesty the Queen's record reign" may not exactly express the writer's meaning, it is nevertheless quite appropriate that the fact that the Queen has reigned longer than any other monarch in British history should be celebrated by a performance at Queen's Hall of Mendelssohn's "Hymn of Praise." The cantata itself, as everybody knows, was composed for the alleged fourth centenary of the invention of the art of printing; but the work has long been a favourite of her Majesty, who was one of the most enthusiastic patrons of its composer. Sir Alexander Mackenzie's "Rule Britannia" overture will also be in the programme, together with a "Coronation March"—why Coronation?—by Mr. Percy Pitt.

The Promenade Concerts at Queen's Hall had another leg up on Saturday, when Mr. Santley appeared for the first time. There was a very crowded audience, who warmly applauded the great English baritone's singing of Shield's old ballad, "The Wolf," and other songs.

A fortnight ago I spoke of the anomalous power exercised by the Archbishops of Canterbury in the conferring of musical degrees, and I gave an extract from the Archiepiscopal document which hitherto granted the degree. It appears, however, that in Dr. MacNaught's case there was a very sensible addition to this instrument. It now ran as follows:—

We therefore, in consideration of your having occupied with distinction and great serviceableness the position of Assistant Inspector of Music to the Education Department, on the recommendation of Sir John Stainer, M.A., Mus.Doc., D.C.L. Professor of Music in the University of Oxford, and Inspector of Music to the Education Department, and of Sir George Grove, D.C.L., LL.D., Director of the Royal College of Music, and Sir Walter Parratt, Mus.Doc., have judged it expedient that you, whose uprightness of life and purity of morals are manifest to us, be dignified by the degree of Doctor of Music, &c., &c.

Hitherto, I believe, the sole causes assigned in the Instrument for conferring the Canterbury degree of Doctor of Music were "uprightness of life and purity of morals." The change is an indisputable advantage; for it discloses the real and very sufficient reason for the granting of the compliment.

There has, it seems, also been a short addition even to the Instrument conferring degrees in Divinity, which are now granted "in consideration of your proficiency in study, uprightness of life, sound doctrine, and purity of morals." A quaint defence is likewise now added of the power assumed by the Archbishops, which, as I have already explained, is derived from the Popes of Rome, the Archbishops, as legates of the Popes before the Reformation time, claiming the right to license teachers. They now, however, claim "the power of conferring degrees and titles of honour upon well-deserving men, as by an authentic Book of Taxations of Faculties, confirmed by authority of Parliament, doth more fully appear."

Archbishops of recent years, of course, receive little of the sixty-guinea fee imposed on the new Mus.Doc. Cantuar. The Government, who wink at this old-world power, share in the "swag," the stamp duty alone on the Instrument being £30, while the Crown Office bags £5, and there are various other officials to pay. Although Sir George Grove himself was one of the signatories of Dr. MacNaught's application for the degree, he has stated his belief that the power held by Archbishops of Canterbury in this respect is anomalous. Yet it is only fair to say that the present Archbishop has never exercised it without taking every precaution that the honour shall be deserved. He is more careful in this respect than the Universities, who, as a rule, accept the bare opinion of their Professor of Music, and shower degrees broadcast over the Continent. The Archbishop, on the other hand, will not stir unless the application is signed by several musicians of recognised eminence.

A retirement from musical life when the powers are in their prime is rarely permanent. M. Lassalle is the latest example of this truism. He left the stage in order to become a manufacturer of cement, a calling which paid him better than singing. Now, however, he has repented, and has just signed a contract to appear under Mr. Maurice Grau's management in New York in the winter, and, I hope, in London next summer. Signor Tamagno, another operatic vocalist who was reported to have relinquished opera singing for the wilder joys of a cattle ranche out West, has likewise returned to the stage, and may very possibly take part in the coming autumn season at Covent Garden. That season, by the way, must be a short one, for the Covent Garden balls are announced to commence early in December.

GIRLS' GOSSIP.

DEAREST AMY,—You write me about the dreary drizzles you are having at home, and I reply, paraphrasing Mrs. Gamp, "Sich is the consequences of livin' in a island." A shower or two we have had, it is true, in the Pas de Calais, and a distant thunderstorm, but for the most part blue sky, sunny sea, and golden sands have been the principal items in our weather menu. We had a glorious drive to Montreuil yesterday, a very ancient town, with the enormously high walls still standing, and for the most part in perfect preservation. We drove through lovely sylvan scenery behind a pair of small Hungarian horses, who seemed to be on the most confidential terms with each other, willing little animals, with long tails, such as nature intended horses to have. Montreuil stands on a great height, and is still called "sur-mer," though the sea has long retreated from its ivied walls. We walked round the historic ramparts, and viewed from their immense and inaccessible height the ancient moat now utilised for gardens. Ivy and creeper have thrown a green mantle over the bareness of brick and stone, and the whole scene is now one of perfect repose. The town sleeps lazily in its old age after a lively, effervescent youth. Henry V. was there, but I have forgotten how he fared. I fancy he prudently retreated from the stronghold on perceiving its strength. Henry VIII. besieged it, but I don't think he took it. You may guess the antiquity of the ramparts from the fact that the town is now surrounded by a belt of splendid old trees which have grown from their arborial infancy on the slopes by which the summit of the walls is reached from the town; artificial slopes constructed at the same time as the walls themselves. Far below us, as we gazed downwards, wound the waters of our friend, the Canche, on which we gaze every morning at Paris Plage. From the height of the ramparts the trains approaching the town look like nursery toys, and a group of sheep under a tree were supposed to be ducks by one of the party, not famous for long sight.

Upon the hill-side across the valley we saw the Carthusian Monastery, the monks in which are bound by the vow of silence. Of all their great community only five ever speak, and then only what is absolutely necessary for carrying on the business by which the monastery is supported. There are large gardens in which every variety of fine vegetables and delicious fruits are grown. There is also a printing-press in the monastery, and here are printed the menus of the dinners and banquets given in Montreuil. The monks themselves, living on the coarsest and most meagre fare, must now and then, when producing these menus, remember the days of old when they, too, had their share of the flesh-pots of Egypt. Members of some of the oldest families in France, and some Englishmen of good birth, live there removed from the bustle of the world, self-doomed to "hard living" in their quest of "high thinking." How one hopes that they have not been disappointed after giving up so much. But I always remember, in such cases, the agonised look of miserable disenchantment on the face of the young monk in Doré's picture "The Neophyte."

J. Busvine & Co., Tailors to the Royal Family and the Courts of Europe. New Designs and Materials for Riding Habits, &c., for the coming Hunting Season now ready. Patterns and Sketches sent on application.—4, Brook-street, W.

Our party, being composed of healthy, happy, wholesome human beings who had forsworn none of the good things that kindly Providence has lavished upon a beautiful world, was soon conducted by our host to a marvellous old hostelry in the centre of the town, with a view to luncheon. Entering through the vast kitchen in the wake of our cicerone, we saw a picture that we shall for ever carry on our mental retina. Upon a background of tiled walls hung the innumerable items of a spotlessly clean and polished batterie de cuisine, chiefly consisting of copper vessels. Tending the great ranges were three or four women, one of whom, an aged dame of close on eighty, was the living image of the portraits of Dante. She was alive to her finger tips, in spite of her years, that old lady, and turned on us, when we entered, a look of mingled shrewdness and suavity—the courtesy of the typical innkeeper to the customer, but far removed from obsequiousness. She was full of dignity, as well knowing that she had the wherewithal to please our palates and recruit our energies after the long drive. And truly was she justified in this belief, for we were served with as perfect a little déjeûner as we have ever enjoyed anywhere.

It began with an original hors d'œuvre, to which Richard's Britannic instincts led him to tacitly object on the instant. The rest of us, however, being more free from insular prejudices, tasted and then enjoyed the mingled flavours of Bologna sausage and a melon, whose glorious sunset hues were in themselves a feast to the eyes. This was followed by kidneys à la maître d'hotel and then by perdrix aux choux.

Oh! that some English cooks I could name might have had a glimpse of that dish. Instead of the half-raw condition in which birds are too often sent to table in England, these were cooked to the most tempting tint of deepest brown, thoroughly done all through, and as tender as an infant mushroom, without being in the least dried up. A savoury omelette was the next item, and then came a delicious apple tart, from a pâtisserie in the town which enjoys a wide reputation all the country round. This, too, was brown and bonnie, unlike the pallid pastry which, by its very looks, so often suggests indigestion and its consequences upon the complexion.

Fortified and greatly cheered, we sat and listened to the rapid French of the Maire and Sous-Préfet of the district, who, much interested in Mayville and its prospects, were discussing them with bewildering animation together with our host and an English historian of Montreuil, who was eloquent as to the relics in an ancient church hard by.

Some one suggested that we should go to see them, but we all declined. I can't bear relics! And I more especially dislike them if they consist of human bones. Directly after lunch, too! Even an account of some wonderful jewels did not tempt us. So far as diamonds, rubies, and emeralds are concerned, we felt that we might individually apply the old couplet:—

> If they be not fair for me,
> What care I how fair they be?

As we drove back to Paris Plage we noticed how few, as compared with England, the children in the villages were. Instead of some score of shouting, sturdy boys and girls, there was merely a handful of little creatures, nearly all of whom had hair so fair as to be almost tow-coloured.

At Etaples we had a peep at a large room where some dozens of artists dine daily. The neighbourhood is full of them. They have adorned their salle-à-manger with all kinds of pictures painted on the walls themselves. I believe I saw one signed Dudley Hardy. Another was by Eugène Chigot, whose fine paintings of scenes on the Canche adorn the salle-à-manger of the Hotel Meurice at Boulogne. They might almost be called studies in sand-colour and black.

We go back to town to-morrow and I shall have oceans to tell you about comfortable autumn clothing next week.

Winifred sends me the following notes about the visit of the British Association to Liverpool:—

We hurried home from the holidays this year to greet the gathering of the British Association; all our domestic arrangements, in fact, have been regulated to suit the convenience of that august body. And not in vain, I must confess; for while we entertained them they instructed us — with what measure of success I cannot tell, since I am, as you know, of the strictest sect unscientific, and averse from anything savouring of "improvement of the mind." Dancing and diversion went hand and glove with disquisition and debate. There are those who declare that the science was considerably watered down by the "socials." However that may be, the mornings were devoted to lecture and discussion and the afternoons and evenings to garden parties, excursions, receptions, and the like mild dissipations. And truly the spectacle of the professors at play was a gratifying one. They unbent with the utmost bonhomie, and played as wisely, as ably, as completely as they had discussed the mighty problems of science. The Olympian airs of the morning, the solemn and portentous aspect of high noon, vanished in the evening before the fascinations of music and post-prandial cigars, and we are quite of the mind that those scientific lions, with their lists of degrees that make the alphabet small, were not so terrible after all.

Although our learned guests established themselves amongst us on the 16th, they were not formally welcomed by the Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress until the evening of the 17th, when a brilliant reception was held at the Town Hall, at which, I believe, three thousand folks attended. Our Town Hall is of very fair dimensions, but the powers that be had to enlarge their domains for the night by annexing the Exchange Newsroom, which is just over the way, so to speak. And by means of a covered passage, some charming music, and a capital supper, a few superfluous hundreds were wiled into the quarters where "merchants most do congregate" during business hours. It was all well worth seeing, I assure you. Our Lady Mayoress, the Countess of Derby, loves colour and light, and the supper rooms and ante-rooms bore the daintiest evidence of her influence in this direction. The flowers, the art decorations, the picturesquely grouped palms, the shimmering of many-coloured gowns, the glitter of jewels, all formed a really effective spectacle even to eyes blasé of such sights. The Countess was charmingly dressed in petunia satin, severely cut and decorated with jewelled passementerie. She had some handsome diamonds. Accompanying her, and evidently enjoying the scene of presentation, were Lady Alice Stanley, in a pretty frock of blue chiné silk; Lady Isabel Stanley, in her favourite costume of white satin and pearls; and Miss Henniker, a daughter of his Excellency of Manxland, I believe, who was gowned in pale blue with touches of pink. We were all much interested in a lady in amber satin, or rather in the magnificent diamond tiara she wore. It was a veritable crown, and doubtless occasioned innumerable pangs of envy. Mrs. W. B. Bowring, a former Lady Mayoress, had her gown of satin brocade arranged with a scarf of exquisite Brussels lace. Mrs. Campbell Brown had something lovely in satin and moire in broad stripes, and of sea-shell tints. I caught a glimpse of Lady Maclure in black, of Lady Pullar, Lady Ellison, Lady O'Hagan, with the Hon. Mary O'Hagan and the Hon. Kathleen O'Hagan, Lady Ommaney in black and white brocade, and Mrs. William Oulton in electric blue satin appliquéd with the filmiest, finest grass lawn. Mrs. E. K. Muspratt brought a party from Seaforth Hall. I begin to think that lace is as common as are diamonds in Liverpool. Every second matron one saw was literally swathed in exquisite old lace. Flowing scarves of point de Venise, fichus of Honiton, frills of Mechlin, and panels of Brussels point sometimes adorned, and frequently disguised, the handsomest gowns. Mrs. Bowes, the wife of the Japanese Consul, came in dark green velvet and diamonds; Mrs. J. W. Hughes had a striking dress of amber brocade—indeed, yellow, from the most uncompromising orange tints to the softest and most suggestive shade of primrose, appeared popular with both blonde and brunette.

The weather, again the weather, and evermore the weather! How fervently we all wished it—well, at Jericho, to put it mildly—on the day of Lady Derby's garden-party! A dull morning, a few bits of blue sky at noon, and some flashes of sunlight at three in the afternoon, along with hazy reaches of nebulous pinks and grey raised our hopes, and we set forth to Hunting.—An elegant and graceful up-to-date figure is produced by the easy and perfect fit of the ingenious and appropriate Corsets built by Mesdames Sykes, Josephine, & Co., Anatomical Corsetières, 280, Regent-street, Oxford-circus, London, W.

Now Ready.—Costumes for all kinds of Sports and Pastimes. Redfern makes a special feature of Costumes for all out-door pursuits, and is constantly introducing novelties. Everything practical, correct, up-to-date, and smart.—26, Conduit-st., London.

Knowsley in high spirits and summer frocks. But the weather found us out and poured its disasters on us. We had indeed a glimpse of the wonderful avenues of Knowsley—those Gothic woodland aisles filled with soft chequered lights and shadows, and of lawns steeped in sunshine. But scarcely had we arrived when a rush of rain drenched the lawns, making them unsafe promenades for dainty bottines and frileuse and laced skirts But as the house, with all its superb historic treasures, was at the disposal of the guests, the interest of the afternoon never flagged. And were we not surrounded by a tranquillising atmosphere of music and flowers, picturesque groups of frocks, and a complete absence of formality. The savants were greatly to the fore, and we had further opportunity of watching science take its ease. The Countess of Derby wore a becoming shade of heliotrope cloth, with vest and revers of white chiffon and grass-lawn embroidery. Lady Alice Stanley was handsome in her blue and white dress, trim coat of light grey, and hat of black and pink, and Lady Isabel had dark-blue alpaca, relieved with blue and white trimmings. There were quite a number of chiné silk gowns with decorations of sable, from which I infer that silk and fur are among the modes to be. A lady in purple chiné silk had a full basqued coat of purple satin, the vest formed of cascades of lovely lace. The Ladies Wilbraham were in simple gowns, the one of white, and the other of mauve and white. Girls in spotted muslin and quaint, wide hats were numerous. How becoming are those decided contrasts of colour! Mrs. Willox, wearing a costume of black satin adorned with rose pink as to vest and bonnet, looked her best; another lady had a folded belt of vivid magenta with her moss-green gown. Lady Forwood's daughter was charming in blue-grey canvas with decorations of blue; and I caught sight of Mrs. Douglas Horsfall in a heliotrope gown with revers and vest of white; Mrs. Neale in an effectively cut coat and skirt of light fawn cloth; and Mrs. Alfred Mond in blue glacé silk with lovely lace.

What do you think of the "Function of certain Diagnostic Characters of Decapod Crustacea," and of a "New Genus of Schizomycetes, showing Longitudinal Fission," as subjects for lectures? Amanda went to hear them delivered in St. George's Hall, and has since been so strange in her manner.

Having had a present of a bag of filbert nuts, I tried to utilise some for a cream, the result was excellent. Here is the recipe:—

Take 8 oz. of filberts, weighed after they are shelled, blanch them to remove the skin and pound the nuts with 1 oz. of pounded sugar; put them into a stewpan with half a pint of milk, place the stewpan at the side of the stove for half an hour, then bring slowly to the boil. Strain the milk on to the beaten yolks of 3 eggs, add 4 oz. of fine sugar, return it to the stewpan and stir until it thickens; remove from the fire, stir in ¾ oz. of sheet gelatine, and leave it to cool. Whip half a pint of thick cream; mix it lightly with the custard, add a dessertspoonful of Maraschino or any nice liqueur, and pour into a fancy mould, which may be decorated with a few glacé cherries. When the cream is firm turn out and pour the following sauce round:—Blanch and pound 2 oz. of filberts, mix them with a gill of milk, twist a paper over, and allow them to stand for an hour; strain, mix the milk with 2 yolks of eggs and 2 oz. of pounded sugar, whisk the custard over the fire until it is frothy; remove and whisk until cold, then mix in 2 tablespoonfuls of whipped cream and a teaspoonful of liqueur.

Your loving cousin, MADGE.

DIAMONDS OR OLD SILVER For PRESENTS.
SPINK & SON

SPOONS AND FORKS 2/11 oz BELOW STORE PRICES

17 & 18, Piccadilly, W.
AND AT 1 AND 2, GRACECHURCH STREET
CORNHILL E.C. [Est. 1772.

MODERN MOURNING.

Messrs. JAY

SUBMIT for INSPECTION WITHOUT CHARGE, in any part of the Kingdom, as at their Warehouse in Regent-street, a FULL SELECTION of MOURNING, either WITH or WITHOUT CRAPE.

SKIRTS, MANTLES, AND MILLINERY

Are READY for IMMEDIATE WEAR, and BODICES are COMPLETED to measure in a FEW HOURS.

JAY'S (Ltd.), REGENT ST., LONDON

THE MANUFACTURING
GOLDSMITHS' & SILVERSMITHS' COMPANY,
(The Goldsmiths' Alliance, Ld. (A. B. Savory & Sons), late of Cornhill, E.C.; is transferred to this Company).
Show Rooms: 112 REGENT STREET, LONDON, W. (Adjoining Stereoscopic Company.)
Supply the public direct at Manufacturers' Cash Prices, saving purchasers from 25 to 50 per cent.

Fine Gold Bracelet, £2 15s.

Fine Gold and Pearl Brooch, £1 10s.

Awarded Nine Gold Medals and the Cross of the Legion of Honour.

Fine Pearl and Gold Bracelet, £7 10s.

NEW ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE And NOVELTY LIST. POST FREE.

THE LARGEST AND CHOICEST STOCK IN THE WORLD OF NOVELTIES IN HIGH-CLASS JEWELLERY FOR WEDDING AND BRIDESMAIDS' PRESENTS.

AN INSPECTION INVITED.

Goods forwarded to the Country on approval.

Fine Gold, Pearl, and Diamond Bracelet, £3 15s.

Finely-carved Gold Brooch, Enamel Eggs, Diamond Eyes, £5 5s.

Fine Pearl and Diamond Cluster Half-Hoop Bracelet, £50. Sapphires and Diamonds, same price.

GRESHAM LIFE OFFICE.
Assets Exceed £6,000,000.
Special Terms for Naval and Military Officers.
ESTABLISHED 1848.
THE GRESHAM LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY, LIMITED.
Head Office: ST. MILDRED'S, POULTRY, LONDON.

GAIETY RESTAURANT, STRAND.
LUNCHEONS (HOT and COLD)—At Popular Prices, in BUFFET and RESTAURANT (on 1st floor). Also Chops, Steaks, Joints, Entrées, etc., in the GRILL ROOM.
AFTERNOON TEA—Consisting of Tea or Coffee, Cut Bread and Butter, Jam, Cake, Pastry, ad lib., at 1/- per head; served from 4 till 6 in RESTAURANT (1st floor).
DINNERS IN RESTAURANT—From 5.30 till 9 at Fixed Prices (3/6 and 5/-) and à la Carte. In this room the Viennese Band performs from 6 till 8. Smoking after 7.45.
Private Dining Room for Large and Small Parties.
American Bar. The GRILL ROOM is open till 12.30.
SPIERS & POND, Ltd., Proprietors.

Musical Instruments.

Mason and Hamlin Organs.
Mustel Organs.
Mustel Celestas.
Mason and Hamlin Pianos.
Rönisch Pianos.
Rönisch Organo-Pianos.
Metzler Pianos.
Alexandre Harmoniums.

NEW ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUES POST FREE.

METZLER.

Violins and 'Cellos by Degani.
Violins and 'Cellos by Collin-Mezin.
Mandolines by Angara and by De Meglio.
Guitars by Leblanc.
Auto-Harps by Müller.
Zither Banjos and Banjorettes.
Instruments for Toy Symphonies.
Pianoforte Chairs of New Design.

NEW ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUES POST FREE.

London: 40 to 43, GT. MARLBOROUGH ST., W.

The Piano Resonator

(DANIEL MAYER PATENT) LD.

PADEREWSKI says:

DEAR MR. MAYER,

I am delighted with your Patent Resonator, because I find that it makes the tone of the piano richer, fuller, and it adds greatly to its singing quality.

Sincerely yours,
I. J. PADEREWSKI.

London, October 11th, 1895.

Owing to Erection of Special Machinery, the Resonator can now be supplied from £5 for Upright and £10 for Grand Pianos.

Address—

33, NEW BOND ST., LONDON, W.

ROWLANDS' Macassar Oil

Preserves, Beautifies, Strengthens the Hair;
Also in Golden Colour, 3s. 6d., 7s., 10s. 6d.

ROWLANDS' ODONTO

The Best and Safest Dentifrice; 2s. 9d., of Chemists and Perfumers.
Send Postal Order to—

A. ROWLAND & SONS, 20, Hatton Garden,
LONDON.

Great Improvements in Ladies' Watches—Reduced Prices.

BENSON'S SPECIAL MAKE KEYLESS LEVER WATCH

Silver Cases, £5

18-ct. Gold Cases. £10

Three-quarter Plate LEVER Movement, Compound Balance, Jewelled throughout, strong Keyless action, with Seconds Dial and Gold Inner Cases. In Hunting, Half-Hunting, or Crystal Glass Cases, Monogram free.

Illustrated Book of Watches, Engagement Rings, Brooches, Bracelets, &c., post-free.

18-carat Gold, £10. Silver, £5.
Sent Free and Safe at my risk to all parts,
Selections of Watches and Jewellery sent on approval.

J. W. BENSON, STEAM FACTORY,
62 & 64, LUDGATE HILL.
Also at 28, Royal Exchange, E.C., and 25, Old Bond-street, W., LONDON.

NOW READY.
ANNIE S. SWAN'S MAGAZINE for OCTOBER.
THE NEW VOLUME COMMENCES WITH THE OCTOBER NUMBER OF

THE WOMAN AT HOME

PRICE 6d. CONTAINING—
A SKETCH OF LADY HARCOURT.
With Portraits. By ESTELLA.
QUEEN VICTORIA (Personal Tastes and Characteristics of).
With many Illustrations. By SARAH A. TOOLEY.
STORIES OF LIFE IN PARIS. By ROBERT H. SHERARD.
No. 1. Mademoiselle Blanche.
WHAT SHOULD WOMEN READ?
1. By Lady LAURA RIDDING. 2. By Mrs. ANDREW LANG.
3. By ANNIE S. SWAN. 4. By Mrs. JOSEPH PARKER.
WYNDHAM'S DAUGHTER. A new Serial. By ANNIE S. SWAN.
Chap. I. Hannah Thrale's Invitation. Chap. II. Mrs. Wyndham Interferes.
Chap. III. A Socialist Meeting. (Illustrated.)
THE LADIES' GALLERY. By a Parliamentary Hand.
KATE CARNEGIE. By IAN MACLAREN.
THE GLASS OF FASHION. BRIDES AND BRIDEGROOMS. PAPER PATTERN DEPARTMENT, &c., &c.
THE NEW VOLUME OF THE WOMAN AT HOME COMMENCES with this OCTOBER NUMBER. Now Ready. Price 6d.
London: HODDER & STOUGHTON, 27, Paternoster-row, and of all Booksellers and Bookstalls everywhere.

THE ANCIENT WRITING PAPER OF THE PRIESTS.

NOTE PAPER, 5 Quires, 1s. COURT ENVELOPES, 1s. per 100. MOURNING ENVELOPES, 1s. 6d. per 100. THIN, FOR FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE, 5 Quires, 1s. MOURNING NOTE, 5 Quires, 1s. 6d

HIERATICA (Regd.)

Every Sheet and Envelope Watermarked HIERATICA. Reject Imitations. Any difficulty in obtaining, send stamps to Hieratica Works, 68, Upper Thames Street, London. Samples Free. Parcels Carriage Paid.

THE BELGRAVE LADIES' AGENCY,

83, EBURY STREET, Near Victoria Station,

HOUSES HOUSES HOUSES

Have a LARGE SELECTION of First-rate HOUSES and FLATS for the Parliamentary and London Seasons. Rents MODERATE. Every care is taken to save clients unnecessary trouble and expense. Also APARTMENTS in London, Country, and Abroad. Continental Agents. Rooms all inspected, and the highest references given. Entirely worked by Ladies.

CHATTO & WINDUS'S NEW BOOKS

Sir WALTER BESANT'S New Novel, THE CITY OF REFUGE, will be ready on Oct. 1, in 3 vols., 15s. net, and at every Library.

Mrs. LYNN LINTON'S New Novel, DULCIE EVERTON, is now ready, in 2 vols., 10s. net; and at every Circulating Library.

JERRY THE DREAMER. By Will Payne. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

SONGS OF TRAVEL. By Robert Louis Stevenson. Crown 8vo, buckram, 5s.

"Except his 'Songs for Children,' I know of no work of Stevenson's that more endears him to his readers than this delightful volume."—James Payn in Illustrated London News.

DR. RUMSEY'S PATIENT. By Mrs. L. T. Meade and Clifford Halifax, M.D. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

"Mrs. Meade handles her materials with her accustomed skill, and constructs an eminently readable story. . . Those who like an exciting story of incident and mystery will find one in this volume."—Speaker.

DEVIL'S FORD—A MILLIONAIRE OF ROUGH-AND-READY—SNOWBOUND AT EAGLE'S. By Bret Harte. With Frontispiece by W. H. Overend. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

TWO MASTERS. By B. M. Croker, Author of "Pretty Miss Neville," &c. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

"The richness and variety of character that spring up on every other page of 'Two Masters' would of themselves make Mrs. Croker's book an entertaining romance; but she has also a story to tell of crime and mystery that makes her book doubly delightful."—Morning Leader.

THE PROFESSOR'S EXPERIMENT. By Mrs. Hungerford, Author of "The Three Graces." With a Frontispiece by E. J. Wheeler. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

"Beyond all doubt or question one of the most mirthful and most wholesome books of the year."—Daily Telegraph.

YOUNG LOCHINVAR. By J. E. Muddock, Author of "Basile the Jester," &c. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

A TRAMP ABROAD. By Mark Twain. Cheaper Edition. With 314 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d. [Shortly.

CURLY: AN ACTOR'S STORY. Told by John Coleman. With 21 Illustrations by J. C. Dollman. Crown 8vo, 1s.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 110 & 111 St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

MARIE CORELLI'S NEW BOOK.

THE MURDER OF DELICIA.

Crown 8vo. Price 5s. N.B.—First Edition of 28,000 already sold before publication. Second Edition of 10,000 on sale.

SKEFFINGTON & SON, Piccadilly, London.

Now Ready.

FAMILY STORY TELLER—NEW VOLUME.

Truth says:—"A capital story, and very well told."

Price 1s. each, post free 1s. 2d. each; cloth, 1s. 6d. each, post free 1s. 8d. each.

A FAITHFUL TRAITOR.

A FAITHFUL TRAITOR. By Effie Adelaide Rowlands, Author of "My Pretty Jane," "Margery Daw," "Like unto a Star," &c.

W. STEVENS, Ltd. 421, Strand, London; and all Booksellers.

MR. HEINEMANN'S LIST.

THIRD EDITION, WITH AN INDEX.

THE PAGET PAPERS.

Diplomatic and other Correspondence of the Rt. Hon. Sir Arthur Paget, G.C.B., 1794-1807. With two Appendices, 1808, and 1828-1829. Arranged and Edited by his son,

The Late Rt. Hon. SIR AUGUSTUS PAGET, G.C.B.,

late H.M. Ambassador at Vienna.

With Notes by Mrs. J. R. GREEN.

In 2 vols., demy 8vo, with numerous Portraits, 32s. net.

The Athenæum.—"Most historians and diarists have ignored or slurred over the bungling and tricky diplomacy which played quite as important a part as soldiership in the business. On this squalid side of the memorable contest 'The Paget Papers' throw valuable light. They also supply a good deal of amusing information about home affairs and some of the notable persons mixed up in them."

A BOOK OF SCOUNDRELS.

By CHARLES WHIBLEY.

In one vol., crown 8vo, with a Frontispiece, 7s. 6d.

NEW NOVELS.

A COURT INTRIGUE.

By BASIL THOMSON,

Author of "The Diversions of a Prime Minister." One vol., crown 8vo, 6s.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "THE RED BADGE OF COURAGE."

MAGGIE: A CHILD OF THE STREET.

By STEPHEN CRANE.

One vol., limp cloth, 2s.

"A UNIQUE AND DARING BOOK."

WITHOUT SIN.

By MARTIN J. PRITCHARD.

One vol., crown 8vo, 6s. Second Edition exhausted. Third just ready.

The Academy.—"One is hardly likely to go far wrong in predicting that 'Without Sin' will attract abundant notice, on account not only of the daring conceptions which form its basis but of the skilful way in which a delicate subject is handled."

"EXCITING AND FASCINATING."

THE REDS OF THE MIDI.

AN EPISODE OF THE REVOLUTION.

By FELIX GRAS.

Fourth Edition. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

The Times.—"Never was child of the Revolution depicted in a more attractive manner. . . . The realism of Zola without his offensiveness of detail. The framework is an excellent example of what a first-rate story-teller can make out of old material."

"THE NOVEL OF THE YEAR."

ILLUMINATION.

By HAROLD FREDERIC.

Sixth Edition. Crown 8vo, 6s.

The Review of Reviews.—"The cleverest and most impressive work of fiction that the year has produced."

London: WM. HEINEMANN, 21, Bedford-street, W.C.

ON THE STŒCHIOLOGICAL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION,

ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, AND LUNG COMPLAINTS.

By JOHN FRANCIS CHURCHILL, M.D.

One Shilling, Post Free.

BURLEIGH, late David Stott, 370, Oxford Street.

STERILITY IN WOMEN: Its Causes and Curative Treatment. By J. B. RYLEY, M.D., M.R.C.S., London. An Illustrated Edition of this Work is now ready. Price 3s. 6d.; post free, 3s. 8d.

London: HENRY RENSHAW, 356, Strand.

IMPORTANT NEW NOVELS.

Date of Publication		Price.
Oct. 17	By J. M. BARRIE. Sentimental Tommy The Story of His Boyhood.	6/-
Oct. 1	By W. CLARK RUSSELL. What Cheer!	6/-
Oct. 1	By MAX PEMBERTON. A Puritan's Wife.	6/-
Oct. 3	By FRANK STOCKTON. Mrs. Cliff's Yacht.	6/-
Oct. 3	By E. W. HORNUNG. The Rogue's March.	6/-

CASSELL & COMPANY, Lim., Ludgate Hill, London; Paris and Melbourne.

SMITH, ELDER, & CO.'S LIST.

MRS. HUMPHRY WARD'S NEW NOVEL.

Ready to-morrow. Crown 8vo, 6s.

SIR GEORGE TRESSADY

By Mrs. HUMPHRY WARD,

Author of "Robert Elsmere," "The History of David Grieve," "Marcella," &c.

New Volume of "THE DICTIONARY OF NATIONAL BIOGRAPHY."

Ready to-morrow. 15s. net, in cloth; or in half-morocco, marbled edges, 20s. net.

Volume XLVIII. (REILLY—ROBINS) of the Dictionary of National Biography.

Edited by SIDNEY LEE.

 Vol. I. was published on January 1, 1885, and a further volume will be issued Quarterly until the completion of the work.

ON SEPTEMBER 26th, No. 4, PRICE ONE SHILLING, OF THE

NEW AND ENLARGED SERIES

OF THE

CORNHILL MAGAZINE.

Edited by J. ST. LOE STRACHEY.

CONTENTS.

TRAFALGAR FROM THE SPANISH SIDE: an Anniversary Study. By W. LAIRD CLOWES.
THE TRANSIT OF EARL LI. By 'AMICUS.'
LETTERS. By the Right Hon. Sir M. E. GRANT DUFF, G.C.S.I.
MEMOIRS OF A SOUDANESE SOLDIER (ALI EFFENDI GIFOON). Dictated in Arabic to and Translated by Capt. MACHELL. (Conclusion.)
OCTOBER: or 'The Days that are No More.'
AT THE GREAT DURBAR. By Mrs. F. A. STEEL.
THE WIT AND WISDOM OF LORD WESTBURY. By W. B. DUFFIELD.
HER BROTHER-IN-LAW. By Miss MARY HARGRAVE.
PAGES FROM A PRIVATE DIARY
CLARISSA FURIOSA. Chapters XXXVII.-XL. By W. E. NORRIS.

London: SMITH, ELDER, & CO., 15, Waterloo-place.

The whole of the largely increased Edition for September of the New Series of the PALL MALL MAGAZINE at ONE SHILLING net was exhausted within a few days of issue, and the Number cannot now be reprinted.

THE OCTOBER NUMBER OF THE

PALL MALL MAGAZINE,

Price ONE SHILLING net,
Is Now Ready, and may be obtained of all Booksellers, and at all Railway Bookstalls.

The October Number contains—

A SHORT STORY BY GRANT ALLEN.
AN ILLUSTRATED ARTICLE ON H.M.S. "BRITANNIA."
HATCHES, MATCHES, AND DESPATCHES. Part I. By J. HOLT SCHOOLING.
EXMOOR PONIES, by EVELYN M. PHILLIPPS.
OLD MEMORIES, by SIR HUGH GOUGH, V.C.
THE WEE BOY-ANGEL, by MARION ELLISTON.

Mr. ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON'S last complete story, "ST. IVES," narrating the adventures and escape of a French prisoner of war confined in Edinburgh Castle early this century, will be commenced in the November number.

Offices: 18, Charing Cross-road, London, W.C.

SENSATION AMONG THE CRITICS!

CHRYSTAL:

The Newest of Women.

BY AN EXPONENT.

Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

SECOND EDITION.

The Scotsman calls the author "A humourist in disguise."

The Birmingham Gazette is glad that the author "has sufficient sense of shame to conceal identity."

The Yorkshire Post thinks that the author must be "trying how much the public will stand."

The Glasgow Daily Mail says the author "is preaching a sermon."

The Western Mail says: "The author has a firm grip of character, and is excellent at 'a situation.' The narrative develops a strength that is absolutely thrilling."

The Birmingham Gazette says: "From a literary point of view it is decidedly strong."

The Glasgow Daily Mail says: "The book is written with skill."

The Daily Chronicle says: "'Chrystal' is an amusing and an original child.

The Weekly Times and Echo says: "It is unconventional in the extreme, and yet in no sense objectionable."

Who is the exponent? A hearty friend—or a powerful satirist—of the New Womanhood? Read and decide for yourselves.

DIGBY, LONG, & CO., 18, Bouverie-street, London, E.C.

LIQUEUR of the GRANDE CHARTREUSE.

This most excellent Liqueur, the great preventive of Indigestion, and almost certain remedy for sea-sickness, can now be had of all Wine Merchants, and at prices much lower than formerly.
Sole Consignee, W. DOYLE, 35, Crutched Friars, London, E.C.

"TRUTH" HOTEL LIST.

BATH.—LANSDOWN GROVE HOTEL.—Desirable residence, in beautifully wooded grounds, 400 feet above sea level, facing south, and protected from north and east. Air dry and bracing. Assembly and Pump Rooms within easy distance. Omnibus free to and from Hot Mineral Baths. Billiards, Tennis Lawn.

BONCHURCH HOTEL, Bonchurch, Isle of Wight, one mile from Ventnor Station.
A comfortable, quiet, and most beautifully-situated Hotel. Pretty garden. Good sea view.
H. RIBBANDS, Proprietor.

BOSCOMBE, Bournemouth.—THE CHINE HOTEL.
Under new management.
Magnificent sea views. Moderate charges. Book East Station.
Miss BARNETT (late of the Inns of Court Hotel), Manageress.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HOTEL MONT DORE.—South aspect, 150 rooms, electric light throughout, passenger lift, first-class cuisine, winter garden and lounge, covered tennis court. Turkish, sea-water, and medicated Baths. The Hotel is within two minutes' walk of the Golf Links.—For tariff, address W. KNEESE, Manager.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HIGHCLIFFE HOTEL (first-class). Unrivalled position, West Cliff, full south. Splendid sea view. Most comfortable. Electric light. Table d'hôte (separate tables). Supplies from own Alderney Dairy Farm. Telephone 27.
JOHN KILNER, Proprietor.

BRIGHTON.—GRAND HOTEL.
Centre of Sea Front. Electric Light throughout.
NEW LIFT TO ALL FLOORS.
Inclusive terms if desired from 10s. 6d. per day.
For Illustrated Tariff apply to A. D. HOOK, Manager.

BRIGHTON.—BEDFORD HOTEL.—Old-established. Unequalled in situation; opposite West Pier. Spacious coffee and reading rooms; sea-water service; unequalled cuisine; great variety of excellent wines. Moderate tariff. Electric light in all rooms.
GEO. HECKFORD, Manager.

CARBIS BAY HOTEL, CORNWALL. The very spot to obtain rest and quietude. Overlooking the finest bay in England. Mild yet bracing climate. Within easy distance of London by G.W.R. Splendid Golf Links. "A more beautiful spot for residence could hardly be imagined."—Truth.

FOLKESTONE.—BATES' HOTEL, West Cliff Gardens, and LONGFORD PRIVATE HOTEL, The Lees. Oldest established and most select Family Hotels in Folkestone. Reduced terms during Winter and Spring months. Pension (new Coffee-room) at Bates' Hotel.—G. L. HART, Proprietor
Sanitation Certified.

FOLKESTONE.—ROYAL PAVILION HOTEL, facing Sea. 200 Apartments. Near landing-stage for Continent. Large winter garden. Table d'hôte at 7 p.m.
G. SPURGEN, Proprietor.

GRAND CANARY.—THE METROPOLE.
Newest and best Hotel.
Delightful position, fronting the sea.
Terms most moderate.

JERSEY.—The GRAND HOTEL is charmingly situated, facing the sea, with full south aspect, and sheltered from the north and easterly winds. Every home comfort and liberal management.—For terms apply to D. DE LEIDI, Manager.

MALVERN—One of the most charming places for the Holidays.—The IMPERIAL HOTEL occupies the best position, and receives visitors en pension. The golf-links (18 holes) are one of the best in England. Capital stabling for hunters. Droitwich Brine, Turkish and large Swimming Bath in separate buildings. For tariff, apply to the Proprietor and Manager. F. MOERSCHELL.

TORQUAY.—IMPERIAL HOTEL.—Under entirely New Management. New sanitary arrangements throughout. It is the largest and best-situated Hotel in Torquay, and the best winter residence on the South Coast. Visitors received en pension or à la carte. Terms moderate.
F. FISCHER, Manager.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.—WELLINGTON HOTEL, Mount Ephraim. Under the distinguished patronage of his Grace the late Duke of Wellington, K.G., the leading nobility and gentry, &c. 422 ft. above sea level, south aspect; elegantly furnished; piano in every sitting-room. Cuisine English and French. Electric light throughout.—BRABY, Proprietor.

All applications for spaces in this List should be made to the ADVERTISEMENT MANAGER,
"TRUTH" BUILDINGS, CARTERET STREET,
QUEEN ANNE'S GATE, S.W.

THE GROSVENOR HOTEL,
BELGRAVIA, LONDON, S.W.
Well known for Wedding Breakfasts and Dinner Parties.
TABLE D'HÔTE OPEN TO NON-RESIDENTS.
Covered Communication to three Railway Stations.
The only Terminus Hotel of the Brighton Railway Company in London.
Pure Water from an Artesian Well on the premises.
Electric Light throughout. Address, MANAGER.

HOTEL BELGRAVIA,
VICTORIA STREET, S.W.
(Quite close to Victoria Station.)
This is an Hotel in name only. In reality it is a REFINED HOME, replete with every convenience, every comfort, every luxury. Large and small Suites by the day, week, month or year. Also single Bedrooms.
TABLE D'HOTE, at separate tables, open to non-residents.
FIRST-CLASS CUISINE. CHOICE WINES.
For tariff and all particulars apply to MANAGER.

INNS OF COURT HOTEL, Holborn.—A first-class Family Hotel, with 200 bedrooms, all modern conveniences. Electric lights, lifts, &c. Banquets arranged. The Central Hall is the finest and the Dining-room the pleasantest in London. Masonic lodge, public meeting rooms, &c. Table d'hôte, 6 to 8, 3s. 6d.—FRANK BLACKLEY, Manager. Inclusive terms from 10s. 6d. per day.

ILFRACOMBE.
ILFRACOMBE HOTEL,
The PRINCIPAL and ONLY HOTEL facing the Sea.
Unrivalled sea frontage and open surroundings. Grounds five acres. Lawn Tennis Courts. Croquet Lawn. Large Swimming Bath. Elegant Lounge hall. 250 rooms.
H. R. GROVER, Manager.

A COMPLETE LIST OF
HOTELS OF THE MIDLAND RAILWAY.

London MIDLAND GRAND (St. Pancras).	Leeds ... QUEEN'S.
Liverpool... ADELPHI.	Derby ... MIDLAND.
Bradford ... MIDLAND.	Morecambe MIDLAND.
	Normanton STATION.

The Favourite Hotels for Tourists, Cyclists, and Pedestrians.
Specialities—Comfort, Good Cuisine, Moderate Charges.
WILLIAM TOWLE, Manager, Chief Office, St. Pancras, N.W.

THE WESTMINSTER PALACE HOTEL, facing the Abbey and Houses of Parliament. Every modern comfort and convenience. Reasonable tariff, and no charge for attendance. Telegrams "Hostelry, London."

HASTINGS. Due South, Facing Sea.
QUEEN'S HOTEL,
LARGEST AND BEST APPOINTED.
Sunny, and most sheltered position in Hastings and St. Leonards.
ELECTRIC LIGHT. PASSENGER ELEVATOR.
Moderate Tariff. Hotel Flys attend the trains.
WILLIAM GLADE, Manager.

HOTEL DE PUYS, 3,000 yards from Dieppe; five hours from London. Beautifully placed on the edge of Cæsar's Camp, with spacious verandahs overlooking the sea. Magnificent Salons. No back bedrooms. English sanitation and furniture. Electric light, refrigerating chamber, bicycling establishment, and French and English billiards. Good bathing, perfect cycling roads, lovely walks and drives, delicious cooking, and all the comforts of an English country house. Visitors desiring to winter in this charming valley will find luxurious accommodation at most moderate rates.—J. PELLETIER, Manager.

HANS CRESCENT HOTEL
HANS CRESCENT, BELGRAVIA, LONDON, S.W.
Within three minutes' walk of the Albert Gate Entrance to Hyde Park.

THIS FAMILY HOTEL, sumptuously Furnished and Appointed, is now
Open for the reception of Visitors.
It is luxuriously complete in every detail. There are many self-contained Suites of Apartments, ensuring the utmost privacy (each having a Bathroom), as well as Single Bedrooms. A HIGH-CLASS RESTAURANT (à la carte and at fixed prices) is attached to the Hotel for Non-Residents.

RECHERCHÉ CUISINE.

One of the many attractions of this Hotel is the unique WINTER GARDEN, splendidly proportioned, and occupying an area of 2,500 square feet.

Manager, MONS. C. DIETTE.

AMUSEMENTS.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—SATURDAY CONCERTS.—The 41st Annual Series will commence on SATURDAY, October 3rd, at 3. Vocalist, Mr. Barton McGuckin; Violoncellist, Herr Julius Klengel. The full Orchestra of the Saturday Concerts. Conductor, Mr. August Manns. Seats 1s. to 4s. Admission to Palace, 1s. Prospectus post free on application to Manager, Crystal Palace, S.E.

THE KENNEL CLUB'S 41st DOG SHOW will be held at the CRYSTAL PALACE on October 20, 21, and 22, 1896, at which prizes will be offered of the value of over £3,500. 360 classes will be provided, and 360 special prizes competed for. Schedules now ready, for which apply to W. W. ASPINALL, Secretary of the Kennel Club, 27, Old Burlington-street, London, W. No late entries received. Entries finally close 5th October. —Telegraphic address, "Staghound, London."

THE TIFFIN CLUB.

In addition to its present fixtures arrangements have been made to RENT a STAND at EPSOM for the Spring and Summer Meetings.

The Club Stand will contain Luncheon Room, Buffet, Ladies' Cloak Room, &c.

The Rules as to Reserved Seats and other matters pertaining to the Stand will be arranged by the Committee at a later date. Members will have the privilege of admitting ladies to the reserved seats. Gentlemen who are not members of the Club will not be admitted to the Stand, except as Guests for Luncheon.

The Club Subscription will, for the present, remain at £1. 1s. per annum, payable for new members from the 1st January in each year. As the number of members must necessarily be limited, preference for election will be given to those gentlemen who apply at once, provided they are qualified for election under present Rules.

Negociations are in progress for suitable bedroom accommodation for members.

For any further particulars apply

H. A. WETHERALL (Captain),
Secretary.

16, Shaftesbury-avenue, W.

LOWESTOFT GRAND HOTEL.

Finest Situation on the East Coast.

Over 300 ft. sea frontage.

Stands in its own beautifully-wooded grounds.

Open all the year round.

Special terms from October.

Tariff may be obtained at RIDLER'S HOTEL, Holborn.

BUXTON, DERBYSHIRE.

THE PALACE HOTEL.

Large and high-class Hotel. Upwards of 200 rooms. Finest position in Buxton. Surrounded by own grounds of six acres. Ground-floor sitting-rooms and bed-rooms. Magnificent public rooms. American elevator. Table d'hôte at separate tables. Tariff, with plan of rooms and sketch map of Buxton, on application. A. CROSS, Manager.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE.—"The healthiest, most bracing watering-place in the world."—Vide report, Lancet. The GRAND ATLANTIC is the principal and leading Hotel, facing the sea. 130 sumptuously appointed rooms, delightful public rooms, hydraulic lift, every modern comfort. Nearest to Golf Links and Railway Station. "Own model farm."—Apply, Manager. Telegraphic address, "Atlantic." Telephone No. 11.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE.—Charming health resort for this season.—ROYAL HOTEL, aristocratic and old established, facing sea and standing in its own grounds of 8 acres. Every home comfort and attention, with unrivalled cuisine. Dairy produce and vegetables from home farm. Four tennis courts. Near golf links and beautiful woods. Extensive view of Welsh coast. Terms strictly moderate.—Proprietors, ROGERS BROS.

DIEPPE. HOTEL ROYAL.

Hotel of the Best Class. Established 50 Years.

200 Bedrooms (130 facing the sea). 24 Private Sitting Rooms facing the sea.
Public Drawing and Reading Rooms.
Within 40 yards of Casino and Etablissement des Bains.
THE ONLY HOTEL IN DIEPPE WITH A LIFT TO EVERY FLOOR.
Electric Light. Telephone. Perfect Sanitation.
HIGH-CLASS CUISINE. MODERATE TARIFF. Season, June 15 to Oct. 15.
For Terms, address, MADAME LARSONNEUX, Propriétaire.

PITLOCHRY.

THE ATHOLL HYDROPATHIC (MACDONALD'S).

The ORIGINAL and very much the LARGEST. Every window commands a view of the MOST MAGNIFICENT SCENERY in SCOTLAND. 500 feet above sea level. Pure, dry, bracing air. Extensive Pleasure Grounds.
TENNIS—CROQUET—GOLF—ARCHERY—FISHING.
To prevent disappointment, address all communications—
"THE ATHOLL, PITLOCHRY." Telegraphic Address, "ATHOLL."

AMUSEMENTS.

DRURY LANE THEATRE.—Lessees, the EXORS. of the late Sir AUGUSTUS HARRIS.—AUTUMN SEASON, under the Management of Mr. JOHN COLEMAN. Every Evening, at 7.30, THE DUCHESS OF COOLGARDIE, by Messrs. Euston Leigh and Cyril Clare.

LYCEUM.—EVERY EVENING, at 8,
CYMBELINE.
Iachimo..... Henry Irving.
Imogen..... Miss Ellen Terry.
Mr. Frank Cooper. Miss Genevieve Ward.
Box-office (Mr. J. Hurst) open daily, 10 to 5. Seats also booked by letter or telegram.

GAIETY.—Lessee and Manager, GEORGE EDWARDES.—ANOTHER GAIETY SUCCESS.—EVERY EVENING, at 8.15, a New Musical Play, in Two Acts, entitled MY GIRL, by James T. Tanner, Music by Osmond Carr, Lyrics by Adrian Ross. Box-office open daily from 10 till 6. MATINEE Saturday Next, at 2.30.

ADELPHI THEATRE.—A. & S. GATTI, Sole Proprietors and Managers.—TO-NIGHT, at 8 o'clock, BOYS TOGETHER. Mr. William Terriss and Miss Millward; Mr. W. L. Abingdon, Mr. C. W. Somerset, Mr. Lulgi Lablache, Mr. Mackintosh, Mr. J. D. Beveridge, Mr. Oscar Adye, and Mr. Harry Nicholls; Miss Nesbitt, Miss Kate Kearney, Miss Alice Kingsley, &c.

SAVOY.—Every Evening, at 8.30, and Every Saturday Afternoon, at 2.30, THE MIKADO, by W. S. Gilbert and Arthur Sullivan. At 7.50, WEATHER OR NO. Box-office 9 a.m. to 11 p.m.—R. D'OYLY CARTE, Proprietor and Manager.

VAUDEVILLE.—A. & S. GATTI, Sole Lessees and Managers. EVERY EVENING, at 9, a Farcical Comedy, in Three Acts, by Georges Feydeau and Maurice Desvallières, entitled A NIGHT OUT. Preceded, at 8.15, by PAPA'S WIFE, by Seymour Hicks and F. C. Phillips. Music by Ellaline Terriss. MATINEE EVERY WEDNESDAY, at 3. Doors open 7.45. Box office open 10 to 10.

DALY'S THEATRE.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. AUGUSTIN DALY.—EVERY EVENING, and SATURDAY MATINEE. Mr. George Edwardes's Company in THE GEISHA. The book by Owen Hall. Lyrics by Harry Greenbank. Music by Sydney Jones.

ALHAMBRA.—TO-NIGHT, Two New Grand Ballets, RIP VAN WINKLE and DONNYBROOK. Grand VARIETIES. Prices, 6d. to £3. 3s. Open 7.30. ALFRED MOUL, General Manager.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—EVERY EVENING, Two Grand Ballets, FAUST and LA DANSE. Great success. LUMIERE'S CINEMATOGRAPHE. GRAND VARIETY ENTERTAINMENT. Doors open at 7.30.

PALACE, Shaftesbury-avenue. — The HANDSOMEST THEATRE in EUROPE. The finest Variety Entertainment in London including the NEW SERIES OF TABLEAUX VIVANTS. Full Licence. Prices from 6d. Doors open 7.30.—Manager, Mr. CHARLES MORTON.

LONDON PAVILION.—TREMENDOUS PROGRAMME. Dan Leno, Vesta Tilley, Lucy Clarke, Fannie Leslie, James Fawn, Bessie Wentworth, Jolly John Nash, Tom White's Arabs, Jenny Valmore, Mdlle. Lalo, Nellie Navette, Ada Lundberg, The Kilpatricks, Passmore Brothers, Joe Elvin and Company, Walter Kino, Jenny Lynn, Northern Troupe, Constance Moxon, Albert Christian. The Sliding Roof off every evening. Prices from 1s. to £3. 3s. Doors open at 7.30. Box-office open from 11 to 5.

TIVOLI, Strand, London.—Cool and Well Ventilated.—Open EVERY EVENING, at 7.45, and SATURDAY MATINÉE, at 2.30, with a STAR PROGRAMME, embracing every Artiste of note now in London — Manager, Mr. VERNON DOWSETT.

INDIA & CEYLON EXHIBITION,
EARL'S COURT.
Main Entrance:—LILLIE ROAD, WEST BROMPTON.
Indian, Cingalese, and Burmese Palaces and Shops.
Colonnades, Lakes, Jungle, Gardens, and Streets.
Artisans, Performers, and Illusionists.
Five BANDS.
Grenadiers. Coldstreams.
Venanzi's Orchestra and others.
Mr. Imre Kiralfy's Great Spectacle
"India."
1,500 Performers; 200 Chorus.
Two Performances daily, at 3.30 & 8 p.m.
IMRE KIRALFY, Director-General.
Open 11 a.m. to 11.15 p.m. One Shilling.

GIGANTIC WHEEL running daily.
Two 20-guinea Waverley Bicycles
Given weekly to passengers.

QUEEN'S HALL.
PROMENADE CONCERTS.
EVERY EVENING, from 8 till 11 o'clock.
GRAND ORCHESTRA.
Principal Violin, Mr. ARTHUR W. PAYNE.
Conductor, Mr. HENRY J. WOOD.
To-night (WEDNESDAY), The Date of H.M. the Queen's Record Reign.
PART I.
1. "God Save the Queen," Sung by Audience and Choir.
2. Britannia Overture, A. C. Mackenzie.
3. Coronation March, Percy Pitt (Composed specially for the occasion).
4. Hymn of Praise (Mendelssohn).
PART II.
Popular Orchestral, Vocal, and Instrumental Selections.
Madame Fanny Moody, Miss Isabel MacDougall, Mr. Ben Davies, Mr. Charles Manners.
THURSDAY NEXT, POPULAR NIGHT.
FRIDAY NEXT, BEETHOVEN NIGHT.
ANIMATED PHOTOGRAPHS in Small Hall (6d. extra).
Admission 1s.; Balcony, 2s.; Grand Circle (Reserved), 3s. and 5s. at ROBERT NEWMAN'S Box-office.

MADAME TUSSAUD'S EXHIBITION, Baker-street Station.—Grand Historical Tableaux representing the Announcement to Her Majesty Queen Victoria of her Accession to the Throne, &c., &c. Portrait Models of Fowler and Milsom, Mrs. Dyer, &c., &c. The Actual Confession of Mrs. Dyer. Admission, 1s.; Extra Rooms, 6d. Open from 9 a.m. till 10 p.m.

THE CAPE COLONISATION COMPANY, Limited.

HOW TO MAKE AN INCOME-PAYING HOME.

The object of the above Company is to develop the resources of their estate, consisting of about 12,000 acres, situated in the far-famed Tulbagh district in the Western Province of Cape Colony, about 75 miles distant by rail from Cape Town. They are promoting the establishment of a successful colony. The estate has been surveyed and laid out in blocks of about 40 acres each, a number of which have already been sold. The purchase price of this land this year (with all water facilities) is £12 per acre, threequarters of which can remain bearing interest at six per cent. per annum.

In order to provide for the success of every colonist who has sufficient capital at command to be able to enter into this business, but has no practical knowledge of the work, the company have engaged the services of an efficient manager and a skilled horticulturist; and who will, if desired, plant, cultivate, and attend to the development of each client's farm for one year or more.

Thus any settler, provided he gives ordinary attention to the details of the work this company have undertaken for him, can obtain, under the guidance of a skilled specialist, that practical knowledge which is essential in the working to the best advantage of dairy and fruit farms.

THE CAPE COLONISATION COMPANY, LIMITED.

The Company undertake, if desired, to clear, plant, fence, supervise, and generally manage any holding. They guarantee that 90 per cent. of the trees and vines planted under the supervision of their staff grow to maturity, as specified in the agreement, a copy of which can be obtained on application. The company will manage the estate of any absentee at a charge of £1 a year per acre, and will also undertake to erect on the estate any houses for the residence of a settler, which can be chosen in London before sailing, with estimates given. They further undertake to purchase from a settler, at marketable prices, any approved dairy, farm, and orchard produce.

At the company's headquarters, at Seven Fountains, are the orchard and vineyard belonging to the company, and extensive creameries, packing houses, &c., will be erected as soon as necessary.

Steps are already being taken for the erection of a sugar beet factory, &c., and it is the intention of the company to promote milling and other industries.

THE CAPE COLONISATION COMPANY, LIMITED.

The Company solicit enquiries from families who are seeking a fresh start in life.

Young gentlemen who are looking for an opening in which to make their way.

Farmers who for years have been losing money in this country and would like to start afresh.

Retired members of the Military, Naval, and Civil Services, desiring to increase their incomes.

The delicate (those inclined to bronchial and pulmonary troubles) who need an avenue for making an income in a congenial climate.

The General Manager of the Company is going out at the beginning of October, and will be pleased to have the Company of any one who desires to avail himself of this opportunity of a fresh start in life in a new field.

All are requested to be good enough to place themselves in communication with the Secretary of the Company—from whom full particulars and papers on all points can be obtained. Also the illustrated book on the subject, price 2s., together with a Manual of Practical Orchard Work at the Cape. Published by the Department of Agriculture of the Cape of Good Hope.

3, PANCRAS LANE, QUEEN STREET, LONDON, E.C.,

£4,500 WANTED (to pay out retiring sleeping partners, &c.), at reasonable interest, on good security, in an established manufacturing business in London. Will bear strict investigation.—Apply, A. H. HOLMES, Solicitor, 32, King-street, Cheapside.

ESTATES, AUCTIONS, &c.

ALDRIDGE'S.—The "OLD TIMES" VIRGINIA WATER 40 COACH HORSES will be SOLD by Messrs. W. & S. FREEMAN at Aldridge's, St. Martin's-lane, on Wednesday next, September 30. On view Monday. Catalogue forwarded.

ALDRIDGE'S. — The "CRITERION" SURBITON 25 COACH HORSES will be SOLD by Messrs. W. & S. FREEMAN at Aldridge's, St. Martin's-lane, on Wednesday next, September 30. On view Monday. Catalogue forwarded.

TO INVALIDS.—A LIST of MEDICAL MEN, in all parts, willing to RECEIVE RESIDENT PATIENTS, giving full particulars and terms, sent Gratis. The List includes Private Asylums, &c. Schools also recommended—Address, Mr. G. B. STOCKER, 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C.

PRINCE LINE.—EGYPT and the HOLY LAND.
CHEAP ROUND TOURS a Speciality. Fare £35. The only direct Line calling at Gibraltar, Tunis, and Malta on route.
MADEIRA and the CANARY ISLANDS.—Single fare £10. 10s. Return £15. 15s.
RIVER PLATE DIRECT (not calling at Brazilian Ports), the most direct and fastest Line. Fare 22 guineas.
Luxurious saloons and cabins and promenade decks, all amidships.
Head office:—JAMES KNOTT, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

BUY THE 4711 Eau de Cologne

IT IS THE BEST GENUINE, STRONGEST, MOST LASTING, MOST REFRESHING AND INVIGORATING.

CAUTION. — Be sure and insist upon MULHEN'S 4711 Brand, as inferior makes are sometimes offered. Refuse all substitutes. Of most dealers in first-class Perfumes.

Case of 6 Bottles, carriage paid, for 13s. or Sample Bottle, 2s. 6d. post free.

The 4711 Depot, 62, New Bond St. W.

SPECIAL SHIPMENTS OF

ORIENTAL CARPETS

TO BE SOLD AT GREATLY REDUCED PRICES.

TRELOAR & SONS,

LUDGATE HILL.

PRICES ARE MUCH REDUCED, as not only is the Raw Material lower, but cheap freights and a low rate of exchange are at present in favour of buyers.

TURKEY AND INDIAN CARPETS

Are delivered to the warehouse two or three times a week in all sizes, both in the old and new colourings.

ANY CARPET WILL BE SENT ON APPROBATION TO APPROVED CUSTOMERS.

A CATALOGUE OF FLOOR COVERINGS POST FREE ON APPLICATION.

TRELOAR & SONS, LUDGATE HILL, LONDON, E.C.

A Bad Complexion

4d

is often due to a bad soap.

BLOTCHES ARE REPULSIVE, AND WILL MAR THE APPEARANCE OF ANY FACE. YOU CAN'T GET RID OF THEM WITH BAD SOAP.

PREMIER VINOLIA SOAP

Is made specially for delicate, sensitive, irritable skins, and is scented with the most charming and innocent Perfumes.

PREMIER VINOLIA SOAP

yields a profuse, cleansing, demulcent, lather, and tends to keep the skin soft and velvety, and the complexion beautiful and clear. Its use doesn't cost a farthing a day.

4d

Vinolia is a Complexion Soap.

VINOLIA CREAM.—For Itching, Sunburn, Insect Bites, &c., 1/1½ and 1/9.
VINOLIA POWDER.—For Roughness, Chafes, &c., 1/1 and 1/9.

HOSPITALS & APPEALS.

THE EARLSWOOD ASYLUM FOR IDIOTS.
About 150 AFFLICTED CASES, from all parts of the United Kingdom, are now seeking admission.
FUNDS URGENTLY NEEDED to maintain the Elected Patients now under care and training in the Institution.
Cases on payments regulated by the Board received as soon as approved.
JAMES DOWNING, Secretary.
Offices—36, King William-street, London Bridge, E.C.

GREAT NORTHERN CENTRAL HOSPITAL.
VERY POOR, FREE, and UNENDOWED.
The only Hospital available for a population of one million.
An urgent APPEAL is made for FUNDS to support the work of relieving 1,200 In-patients and 30,000 Out-patients annually.
Holloway, N. L. H. GLENTON KERR, Secretary.

LONDON FEVER HOSPITAL, Liverpool-road, Islington, N.
ADDITIONAL HELP is urgently needed.
Scarlet fever and diphtheria are very prevalent. Subscriptions and donations will be thankfully received by the Secretary at the Hospital.
MAJOR W. CHRISTIE.
Bankers—Prescott & Co., 50, Cornhill, E.C.

CANCER WARDS of the MIDDLESEX HOSPITAL.—35 beds devoted to Hopeless Incurable Cases.
A FUND of £12,000 is being raised for the purpose of erecting a separate BUILDING for the accommodation of the FEMALE CANCER PATIENTS hitherto located in the hospital, an improvement which is urgently demanded on the ground of the health, comfort, and convenience of the patients. Towards the cost of the new building the sum of £9,000 has been paid or promised, and an URGENT APPEAL is now made for the balance of £3,000 still required. Patients are admitted without letters or any recommendation, save that of necessity, and are permitted to remain until "relieved by art or released by death."—F. CLARE MELHADO, Secretary-Superintendent.

CHIVERS'
DELICIOUS. WHOLESOME. REFRESHING.
Prepared in silver-lined pans. Highly prized by all. Flavoured with Ripe Fruit Juices.
Dr. GORDON STABLES, R.N. says:—'Jellies that really add to our health and luxury.'
GOLD MEDAL.
½-PINTS, 2½d. PINTS, 4½d. QUARTS, 8d.
S. CHIVERS & SONS, Proprietors of the First English Fruit Farm Jam Factory, Histon, Cambridge.
CHIVERS' PATENT CUSTARDS and BLANC MANGES—2d. and 3d. packets and 6d. boxes — two more delicious and digestible additions to the dinner and supper table. Made by simply adding milk and boiling.
CHIVERS' 1st PRIZE JAMS.
The Royal Commission on Agriculture, in its report (1895), says: "Messrs. Chivers' Factory at Histon . . is now well-known throughout the country for the excellence of its manufactures."
JELLIES.

ALL HEADACHES INSTANTLY CURED OR MONEY REFUNDED.
LEGAL GUARANTEE.
7½D. EMERSON'S BROMO-SELTZER, the most successful American remedy, is an effervescent powder, taken in water. If three doses do not cure any head-ache, no matter how caused, send the bottle to us, saying where obtained, AND WE WILL AT ONCE REFUND THE PRICE.
Trial Bottle, post free, 7½d. Larger Sizes, 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 3d. Sold by many Chemists or obtained to order by almost all.
EMERSON DRUG CO., Ltd.
46, Holborn Viaduct
LONDON, E.C.
INSIST ON FULL NAME—
EMERSON'S BROMO-SELTZER
EMERSON'S BROMO-SELTZER INSTANTLY CURES HEADACHE

THE LATE EARL OF BEACONSFIELD,
SIR MORELL MACKENZIE,
OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES,
MISS EMILY FAITHFUL,
THE LATE GEN. W. T. SHERMAN, and many other persons of distinction, have testified to the remarkable efficacy of Himrod's Cure for Asthma.
Established nearly a Quarter of a Century.
Prescribed by the Medical Faculty throughout the world. It is used as an Inhalation and without any after bad effects. A free Sample and detailed testimonials free by post. In tins, 4s. 3d. British Depôt—46, Holborn Viaduct, London; also of NEWBERY & SONS, BARCLAY & SONS, LYNCH & CO., J. SANGER & SONS, W. EDWARDS & SON, MAY, ROBERTS & CO., JOHN THOMPSON, Liverpool, and all wholesale Houses.

NEW PRIMROSE GOLD MINING COMPANY, Limited.
NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the Capital of this Company has been increased to £300,000, and Shareholders are informed that they have the right of applying for 1 New Share in respect of every 14 Shares held by them on the 30th September, 1896, at the price of £5 per Share.
The whole of the issue of 20,000 Shares has been guaranteed at £5 per Share.
Applications will be received by the Company's Bankers, Messrs. Glyn, Mills, Currie, & Co., 67, Lombard-street, London, E.C., not later than the 10th October, 1896.
Application forms and full particulars will be sent to registered shareholders, or can be obtained of the London Agents.
The TRANSFER BOOKS will be CLOSED from the 30th SEPTEMBER to the 6th OCTOBER, both dates inclusive.
By order,
JOHANNESBURG CONSOLIDATED INVESTMENT COMPANY, LIMITED, London Agents.
THOS. HONEY, London Secretary.
7, Lothbury, E.C.; September, 1896.

THE NEW RIETFONTEIN ESTATE GOLD MINES, LIMITED.
NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the TRANSFER BOOKS of this Company will be Closed from the 1st to the 10th OCTOBER (both dates inclusive), for the purpose of balancing the Share Ledgers.
By order,
JOHANNESBURG CONSOLIDATED INVESTMENT COMPANY, LIMITED, London Agents.
T. HONEY, London Secretary.
7, Lothbury, E.C.; 23rd September, 1896.

NEWHEIDELBERGROODEPOORT GOLD MINING COMPANY, LIMITED.
NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the TRANSFER BOOKS of this Company will be CLOSED from the 1st to the 10th OCTOBER (both dates inclusive), for purpose of balancing the Share Ledgers.
By order,
JOHANNESBURG CONSOLIDATED INVESTMENT COMPANY, LIMITED, London Agents.
T. HONEY, London Secretary.
7, Lothbury, E.C.; 23rd September, 1896.

THE ROODEPOORT GOLD MINING COMPANY, LIMITED.
NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the TRANSFER BOOKS of this Company will be CLOSED from the 1st to the 10th OCTOBER (both dates inclusive) for purpose of balancing the Share Ledgers.
By order,
JOHANNESBURG CONSOLIDATED INVESTMENT COMPANY, LIMITED, London Agents.
T. HONEY, London Secretary.
7, Lothbury, E.C.; 23rd September, 1896.

THE GOLDFIELDS OF LYDENBURG, Limited.
NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the TRANSFER BOOKS of this Company will be CLOSED from the 1st to the 10th OCTOBER (both dates inclusive), for the purpose of balancing the Share Ledgers.
By order,
JOHANNESBURG CONSOLIDATED INVESTMENT COMPANY, LIMITED, London Agents.
T. HONEY, London Secretary.
7, Lothbury, E.C.; 23rd September, 1896.

MAPLE & CO
THE LARGEST & MOST CONVENIENT
Furnishing Establishment IN THE World
EASY CHAIRS EASY CHAIRS
500
TO CHOOSE FROM.
THE FAMOUS "CHANCELLOR" CHAIR
Large, roomy, well proportioned, exceedingly comfortable upholstered in Dormouse cloth of any shade
50/-
TOTTENHAM COURT ROAD LONDON

NO PROSPECTUSES ARE BEING PUBLICLY ISSUED, BUT CAN BE OBTAINED FROM THE SECRETARY, SOLICITORS, AND BANKERS

APPLICATIONS will be received up to FOUR o'clock p.m. on the 25th September, 1896.

A DEVELOPED GROUP of MINES, fully equipped, with 10-head Battery. 317 tons already crushed yielded 686 oz. of gold, and sample of tailings assayed 6½ dwt. per ton. Area of mining leases, 84 acres. 10 acres of water rights on Lake Cowan. Abundant water supply laid on from Lake Cowan to the battery.

THE DESIRABLE PROPRIETARY GOLD MINES (W.A.), LTD.

CAPITAL £250,000, divided into 250,000 Shares of £1 each, of which 190,000 Shares will be taken by the Vendors in part payment of the purchase consideration, and the balance, namely, 60,000 Shares (whereof 25,000 is apportioned to Working Capital), is now offered for subscription, payable: 5s. per Share on application, 5s. per Share on allotment, and the balance as and when required. Shares may be paid up in full at any time, entitling holders to participate in Dividends from dates of respective payments.

DIRECTORS.

R. V. Barrow, J.P., Director of Brookman's Gold Exploration and Finance Association of Western Australia, Limited.
A. J. Davis, Chairman of the Alliance Mining Company, Limited.
J. L. Strain, Chairman of New Coolgardie Gold Exploration and Finance Association (W.A.), Limited.
John Wilcox, Director of Hannan's Oroya Gold Mining Company (W.A.), Limited.
H. G. Campion, Chairman of Mount Reid Mining Company, Limited.

COLONIAL DIRECTORS.

Hubert Giles, J.P., Adelaide, South Australia.
Charles Angell, Adelaide, South Australia.

BANKERS.—Bank of Adelaide, 11, Leadenhall-street, and branches.
SOLICITORS.—Davidson & Morriss, 40 and 42, Queen Victoria-street, E.C.
SECRETARY AND OFFICES.—W. F. S. Armstrong, 34, Old Broad-street, E.C.
AUDITORS.—Gane, Jackson, Jeffreys & Wells, Chartered Accountants, 66, Coleman-street, E.C.

ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.

This Company has been formed for the purpose of acquiring seven mining leases, comprising 84 acres, situate at or near Lake Cowan, in the Norseman District, Western Australia, and also 10 acres of water site on Lake Cowan. The property is at present being worked, under the management of Captain Stephenson, by the Desirable Mining Syndicate. (No liability.)

The property has been reported upon by Captain Cornish, under date December 23rd, 1895, who after stating "These workings together with several costeen pits have proved the reef to run the whole length of the block, 15 chains, and to vary in width from 2 ft. 6 in. at surface to 3 ft. 6 in. at bottom of shaft" concludes his report as follows:

"The size, richness, and evident permanence of the reef, the amount of payable stone in sight. . . . . together with its many facilities for mining and milling, make this property, in my opinion, an exceedingly valuable one, one which, with economic management, cannot fail to pay handsome dividends."

The property has also been reported upon by Captain Morgan, Manager of Dr. Simon's mines at Norseman, who concludes his report, dated 2nd March, 1896, by saying: "Desirable property presents itself as a most promising group, and I have no hesitation in predicting that, by the aid of machinery, and in conjunction with systematical development and economical management, it will prove itself to be a highly payable concern."

A battery of 10 head of stampers, of the most modern construction, is now at work on the mine, and steam power and machinery capable of working an additional 20 head of stamps have been erected.

Advices from the mine show that nine shafts (the principal of which was 160 ft. deep on the 14th September) have been sunk on the property, and the reefs opened up in various directions, with the view of the most vigorous working of the mine.

The first bulk crushings of 317 tons gave, as a result, 686 oz. of smelted gold of good quality, with tailings in addition of a reported assay value of 6½ dwt. per ton.

Captain Stephenson has recently reported: "Ore in shaft is improving as it goes down. Full of visible free gold."

The property is reported to be well supplied with timber for mining and other purposes, and ample water is laid on from the Company's water rights in Lake Cowan for the purposes of the battery.

The property will be acquired by this Company as from the 19th May last, with the ore at grass, and gold obtained from the crushings, the Company paying the outlay and expenses as from that date.

The purchase price for the whole of the properties has been fixed by the Lake Cowan Syndicate, Limited, who are the vendors to and promoters of this Company, at £225,000, payable as to £25,000 in cash, and as to £190,000 in fully-paid shares of the Company, and as to £10,000 in cash or shares, or partly in cash and partly in shares, at the option of the Directors of this Company. 25,000 shares have been apportioned for working capital which, having regard to the fact that the mine is a developed one, with machinery erected and working, with water supply laid on from Lake Cowan, is deemed to be amply sufficient for all purposes

For contracts see prospectus.

Messrs. Strain, Wilcox & Campion are directors of Lake Cowan Syndicate, Limited, and will not act as directors of this Company until after completion of the sale.

The reports and contracts, together with a copy of the memorandum and articles of association, can be inspected at the offices of the solicitors to the Company.

Prospectuses can be obtained from the solicitors, bankers, and secretary.

London, September 21st, 1896.

This Form may be cut out, filled up, and sent with amount payable on application to the Company's Bankers.

APPLICATION FORM.

THE DESIRABLE PROPRIETARY GOLD MINES (W.A.), LIMITED.—Capital, £250,000, divided into 250,000 Shares of £1 each.—ISSUE of 60,000 SHARES at par, payable 5s. on application, 5s. on allotment, and the balance as and when required.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR SHARES.

No..... (To be retained by the bankers.)

To the Directors of the Desirable Proprietary Gold Mines (W.A.), Limited.

Gentlemen,—Having paid to the Company's Bankers the sum of £....., being the deposit of 5s. per Share on an application for ..... Shares of £1 each in the above Company, I request you to allot me that number of Shares, and I hereby agree to accept the same, or any less number allotted to me, upon the terms of the Prospectus, dated 21st September, 1896, and I agree to pay the balance as thereby required, and I authorise you to place my name on the Register of Shareholders in respect of such Shares. And I agree with the Company (as trustee for the Directors or other persons responsible) to waive any claim I may have against them for non-compliance, in the said Prospectus, with the 38th section of the Companies Acts, 1867, and acknowledge that the said Shares are applied for and taken by me on that footing. In the event of my receiving no Allotment, the amount to be returned in full.

Signature .....
Name (in full) .....
Address .....
Occupation .....
Date ..... 1896.

SUN INSURANCE OFFICE

63, Threadneedle-street, London, E.C.
FOUNDED 1710.
THE OLDEST PURELY FIRE OFFICE IN THE WORLD.
SUM INSURED IN 1895,
£390,775,000.

PRUDENTIAL ASSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED.—Holborn Bars, London.

EVERY DESCRIPTION OF LIFE ASSURANCE AND ANNUITY BUSINESS TRANSACTED.
REVERSIONS PURCHASED.

Invested Funds, £25,000,000.

The last Annual Report can be obtained on application to the Secretary.

SPECIAL ADVANTAGES TO PRIVATE INSURERS.

THE IMPERIAL INSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED. FIRE. Est. 1803, 1, Old Broad-st., E.C., & 22, Pall Mall, S.W. Subd Capital, £1,200,000. Paid-up, £300,000. Total funds, over £1,500,000.—E. COZENS SMITH, Gen. Man.

BIRKBECK BANK (Estab. 1851), Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane, London. Two and a-half per cent. interest allowed on deposits, repayable on demand. Two per cent. on current accounts, on the minimum monthly balances when not below £100.
The BIRKBECK ALMANACK with particulars, post free.
FRANCIS RAVENSCROFT, Manager.

LONDON AND COUNTY ADVANCE AND DISCOUNT COMPANY, Limited.—Cash advanced from £10 to £500, without preliminary fees or deductions for interest, for short or long periods, repayable by easy instalments, at moderate rates, upon approved security. Bills Discounted. Forms free. Offices, 57 and 58, Chancery-lane, W.C.—JOHN STONE, Secretary.

REVERSIONS and LIFE INTERESTS in LANDED or FUNDED PROPERTY or other Securities and Annuities PURCHASED, or Loans or Annuities thereon granted, by the EQUITABLE REVERSIONARY INTEREST SOCIETY, LIMITED, 10, Lancaster-place, Waterloo Bridge, Strand, Established 1835. Capital £500,000. Interest on Loans may be capitalised.

W. B. COCHRANE & CO.,

STOCK AND SHARE DEALERS.
13 and 14, CORNHILL, LONDON, E.C.
Telegrams: "Reinvest, London."
Bankers: London and Westminster, Lothbury, E.C.

Accounts opened for the Stock Exchange Fortnightly Settlements, and also upon the usual Cover System. Accounts opened for Three-monthly Settlement without Carrying-over Rates being charged.

Prospectus, Monthly Investment Book, Mining List, and Market Reports, with the latest advices, forwarded gratis upon application.

W. B. COCHRANE & CO., 13 and 14, Cornhill, E.C.

£20 TOBACCONISTS COMMENCING. Illd. guide (259 pages), 3d., "How to open respectably £20 to £2,000." Tobacconists' Outfitting Co., 186, Euston-rd., London. Mngr. H. MYERS, Est. 1866.

LANGLAAGTE ROYAL GOLD MINING COMPANY, LIMITED.

Notice is hereby given that the DATE of the GENERAL MEETING to be held at Johannesburg having been ALTERED to the 29th October, the Transfer Books will be Closed from the 13th to 29th October, both dates inclusive, instead of from the 22nd September to 13th October.

By order,
JOHANNESBURG CONSOLIDATED INVESTMENT CO., LD.,
London Agents.
T. HONEY, London Secretary.

7, Lothbury, E.C.
18th September, 1896.

THE

JOHANNESBURG BOARD OF EXECUTORS AND TRUST CO., LIMITED.

HEAD OFFICE.
JOHANNESBURG, S.A.R.

DIRECTORS.

S. B. HARSANT (Chairman).
JNO. S. PARKES (Vice-Chairman).
S. J. WILKS. G. A. JONES. A. FRIEDLANDER.

BANKERS.

THE BANK OF AFRICA, Ltd., 113, Cannon-street, E.C.
CHIEF MANAGER, L. EDWARDS.

LONDON OFFICE.

ST. CLEMENT'S HOUSE, CLEMENT'S-LANE, E.C.
(Telegrams: "ETHIOPIAN," London.)
(Telephone No. 2154, Avenue.)

The above Company beg to advise having opened a London Office at the above address, and invite correspondence. All descriptions of TRUST and AGENCY BUSINESS undertaken either in London or South Africa. Secretaryships of Companies undertaken. Special facilities are obtainable through this Company for the placing of funds in secure and remunerative investments. Advice is given on all classes of South Africa Mining, Real Estate, Mortgage, or other Investments, and proxies are accepted to represent European Shareholders at South African Companies' meetings. This is the oldest and most successful Trust Company in the Transvaal. Reference has been kindly permitted to the Bank of Africa, Ltd., 113, Cannon-street, London, E.C.; and to the Head Office of the London and Lancashire Fire Insurance Company, 45, Dale-street, Liverpool.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

NOTICE.

No Member of the Stock Exchange is allowed to advertise for business purposes, or to issue circulars to persons other than his own principals.

Persons who advertise as Brokers or Share Dealers are not Members of the Stock Exchange, or under the control of the Committee.

A List of Members of the Stock Exchange who are Stock and Share Brokers may be seen at the Bartholomew-lane Entrance to the Bank of England, or obtained on application to

FRANCIS LEVIEN
Secretary to the Committee of the Stock Exchange.

Committee Room, The Stock Exchange, London, E.C.

The Subscription List will be Closed on Thursday, September 24, for Town, and the Following Day at Noon for the Country.
NO FOUNDERS' SHARES. VALUABLE OPTIONS ALREADY SECURED. ALL MONEYS SUBSCRIBED BECOME WORKING CAPITAL.

THE LONDON & COLONIAL EXPLORATION AND FINANCE COMPANY, LIMITED.

Incorporated under the Companies Acts, 1862 to 1890.

CAPITAL £150,000, in 150,000 Shares of £1 each.—Present Issue, 100,000 Shares, of which 50,000 are to be allotted in payment for certain options and interests hereinafter mentioned, and the remaining 50,000 are now offered for subscription at par. Payable—5s. on application, 5s. on allotment, and the balance in calls not exceeding 5s. per Share, as and when required, at intervals of not less than One Month.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Sir SOMERS VINE, Kt., C.M.G., F.R.G.S., &c., 12, York Mansions, Barkston Gardens, S.W. (Chairman).
J. C. JESSON, Esq., New Park, Horsham, Sussex (Director of Burbank's Birthday Gift Gold Mines, Limited).
Sir EDWARD SULLIVAN, Bart., 32, Fitzwilliam-place, Dublin.
Colonel AUBONE GEORGE FIFE, 42, Jermyn-street, S.W.
R. WHIELDON BARNETT, Esq., M.A., B.C.L. Oxon., 1, Hare-court, Temple, E.C.
*MARK PARKER, Esq., 5, Buckland-crescent, Belsize-park, N.W.
*FRANCIS HART, Esq., M.A.I.M.E., 18, Wool Exchange, E.C. (Managing Director).

* Will join the Board after allotment.

Bankers.

LONDON: Charles Hopkinson & Sons, 3, Regent-street, Pall Mall, S.W.
WESTERN AUSTRALIA: The Bank of Australasia.

Advisory Experts in Western Australia.—Captain Oats, M.E.; L. R. Menzie, Esq., M.E.

Solicitors.—LONDON: H. Percy Becher, Esq., 26, Bedford-row, W.C.; WESTERN AUSTRALIA: George Leake, Esq., M.L.A., Barrack-st., Perth (W.A.)

Brokers.

IN LONDON: Dean Swift & Co., 19, Old Broad-street, E.C. IN GLASGOW: Alfred Muir, Esq., 104, West George-street. IN LIVERPOOL: H. Lumby & Co., 26, Queen's-buildings, 13, Hackins Hey, Dale-street. IN DUBLIN: Edwards & Wheeler, 5, Westmoreland-street. IN BRISTOL: Betton, Sayce, Vaughan, & Co., 10, Clare-street. IN BRADFORD: Middleton & Fraser, 206, Swan Arcade.

Auditors.—Bolton, Pitt, & Breden, 140, Leadenhall-street, E.C.

Secretary.—Warwick W. Clarke, Esq.

Temporary Offices.—18, Wool Exchange, E.C.

PROSPECTUS.

This Company has been formed for the purpose of conducting the business usually carried on by an exploration and agency company, including the buying, developing, working, selling, acquiring options upon, and dealing in mines and other property and interests in Australia, New Zealand, and elsewhere, the promotion of companies having similar objects, and the transacting of a general financial business.

Nothing has been more noticeable in the stock markets during the past two years than the marked success which has attended the operations of sound exploration and finance companies. Even before the value and permanence of the Westralian goldfields had been fully demonstrated, the shares of all the exploration companies brought out under sound auspices were quoted at substantial premiums, and handsome distributions of profits were made among their shareholders. Now, that it has been proved that the richness of the mines is not merely superficial, and that the reefs are true fissure lodes, increasingly payable as depth is attained, the disposition to invest in the securities of exploration and finance companies is more apparent than ever.

The appended table, showing the present Stock Exchange valuation of the shares of some of the leading South African and West Australian exploration companies, sufficiently indicates the lucrative character of this class of investment:—

Name of Company	Paid up per Share.	Approximate Price.
LONDON AND SOUTH AFRICAN EXPLORATION	£0 10 0	£15½
CONSOLIDATED GOLD FIELDS OF SOUTH AFRICA	1 0 0	13
COLONIAL FINANCE CORPORATION	0 10 0	3¾
RHODESIA EXPLORATION ...	1 0 0	6¾
SOUTH AFRICAN GOLD TRUST	1 0 0	8¼
TRANSVAAL GOLDFIELDS ...	1 0 0	3⅜
ANGLO-FRENCH EXPLORATION	1 0 0	5 1/16
WEST AUSTRALIAN GOLD FIELDS	1 0 0	8⅞
WEST AUSTRALIAN EXPLORING AND FINANCE	1 0 0	4¼
LONDON AND GLOBE FINANCE	1 0 0	4½
WEST AUSTRALIA JOINT STOCK TRUST...	0 10 0	4⅞
CONSOLIDATED GOLD FIELDS OF NEW ZEALAND	1 0 0	4

It is only three years since Michael Hannan made his memorable find at Kalgurli, and, much as has been done since then, it is certain that Western Australia is as yet only on the threshold of her career as a great gold-producing territory. The practically unlimited extent of the auriferous area and the new and rich discoveries which are constantly being made show that there is still ample room in the colony for the profitable employment of capital. Excellent opportunities occur of securing valuable mining interests in return for financial assistance to prospectors and others who are unable to proceed with the development of their properties. Arrangements have already been made for the representation of the Company at Coolgardie, and it will consequently be from the outset in a position to take advantage of such openings as they occur.

It is proposed to secure options on mining properties in the Hannan's, Coolgardie, Menzies, and Kanowna districts.

The Company acquires, on favourable terms, firm options upon the following properties.

(1) 18 acres at Coolgardie, on the Lady Loch Main Reef. This property has been reported on by the well-known mining experts, Messrs. P. J. Robertson and Farquhar McKenzie. Mr. ROBERTSON states in his report:—

"In conclusion, I have no hesitation in recommending the property as a thoroughly genuine mining venture, and one from which good results ought to be obtained by judicious handling."

Mr. Farquhar McKenzie, M.E., after estimating a yield of 2 oz. of gold to the ton, says in concluding his report:—

"I have no hesitation in expressing my opinion that with judicious management and development the property will be second to none in the Coolgardie district as a dividend-paying mine."

Mr. McKenzie's estimate of 2 oz. to the ton has been confirmed by a trial crushing of 10 tons taken 500 tons of stone at grass.

(2) 48 acres at Hannan's.—Mr. C. W. Scott, M.E., states in his report:—

"This property has a lode formation exposed on the surface 50 ft. in width, that will yield 1 oz. of gold per ton. . . . It is in a direct line of the best mines in Kalgurli, and I expect to see the same quality of ore as the Boulder has to-day when settled country is met with."

(3) 24 acres at Haye's Find. This property has been reported on by Mr. A. P. CHANDLER, who states that it adjoins one of the best-known mines—the Shares in which stand at a high premium—and that, from the geological formation, from surface indications, and from shafts that have already been sunk, he believes that the same lodes traverse this property as traverse the adjoining property.

Mr. Francis Hart, M.A.I.M.E., Author of the "Official Handbook to Western Australia," has consented to place his extensive knowledge of the colony at the services of the Company, and to act as Managing Director for a period of five years. Mr. Hart has been recently commissioned to visit the Westralian goldfields, and report on the mines, and his intimate acquaintance with the subject will prove invaluable to the Directors in considering the merits of properties placed before them.

The following properties have been placed with Mr. Francis Hart for disposal. The Company has the refusal of them upon the terms at which they are submitted to him, and will have also the refusal of all other properties that may hereafter during the term of his office as Managing Director be sent to him for disposal:—

(4) 72 acres at Hannan's, on the Corsair line.—Captain Oats, who has inspected this property, says in his report:—

"I have no hesitation in recommending it to the speculating public as a sound prospecting venture, well worth the expenditure of capital necessary to develop it."

(5) 36 acres at Hannan's.—This property has also been reported on by Captain Oats, who says in his report:—

"There is every probability that it will prove a valuable property when the numerous lodes traversing it have been thoroughly developed. . . . I can thoroughly recommend it to speculators as a safe mining investment, only requiring the expenditure of capital necessary to open it up in a practicable manner."

(6) 24 acres at Yalgoo.—This property adjoins the well-known Dollar Gold Mine, and has been inspected by Mr. J. S. Cape, M.E., whose report is being sent over. It is understood to be highly favourable.

(7) 24 acres at Menzies.—This property has been reported on by Herr Schlamm as one of great promise and exceptionally well situated, being only a mile and a-half from the Lady Shenton Mine, and on the same line of reef.

(8) 36 acres at Parker's Range.—This property has been reported on by Mr. William H. Nicholas, M.I.M.M., School of Mines, Ballarat, who states that a considerable amount of development has been done, and good payable gold found, and that after careful examination and sampling he can without hesitation give it as his opinion that the mine will prove an excellent investment, and with confidence recommend its purchase.

None of these properties will be taken over except on the advice of one or other of the Company's mining experts in West Australia.

The organisation of the Company being already complete, investors may embark their capital with the knowledge that there will be none of the delay in starting active operations which generally occurs in the case of newly-formed companies.

There will be no Founders' Shares, and, therefore, the whole of the profits will be available for distribution amongst the Ordinary Shareholders, subject to 10 per cent. thereof being set aside to create a sinking fund, until such fund amounts to the amount of the Capital paid up or credited as paid up from time to time, when the Capital so paid up or credited as paid up will be returned to the Shareholders.

It is not the intention of the Directors at the present time to deal with properties outside Australia and New Zealand. These countries are free from political and other disturbances such as those which have taken place recently elsewhere.

No cash whatever is to be paid by the Company in respect of promotion and registration expenses. The whole of the proceeds of the present issue will, therefore, be available for Working Capital.

The promoters stipulate for the allotment and issue to each of them of 25,000 fully-paid Shares in the Company, in consideration whereof they jointly undertake to provide the whole of the cost of the formation and registration of the Company, and severally to vest in the Company the interests and benefits hereinbefore specified.

Whenever it is practicable arrangements will be made, on the flotation of any subsidiary companies, or on the issue of new capital in any companies in which this Company may be interested, for the Shareholders in this Company to have a prior right to an allotment of Shares pro rata. Having regard to the premium at which so many mining shares stand, these rights should be of considerable value.

The following contracts have been entered into, viz.: A contract dated September 15th, 1896, made between Mark Parker, Esq., of the one part, and Warwick W. Clarke, Esq., as Trustee on behalf of the Company, of the other part, being the contract for the acquisition of the options upon the properties numbered 1, 2, and 3, and a contract dated September 15th, 1896, made between Francis Hart, Esq., of the one part and Warwick W. Clarke, Esq., as Trustee on behalf of the Company, of the other part, being the contract for obtaining the first refusal of the properties numbered 4, 5, 6, 7, and 8, and any other properties that may hereafter be placed in his hands for disposal. Certain other contracts (to none of which this Company is a party) have been entered into by third parties as to the formation of the Company and the subscription of Capital and otherwise, and as these contracts and agreements may constitute contracts within Section 38 of the Companies Act, 1867, applicants must be deemed to have notice of the contents of them, and will be required and will be deemed to have waived particulars and specifications of any such contracts, whether under Section 38 of the Companies Act, 1867, or otherwise, and subscriptions will be received on that condition only.

It is intended to apply in due course to the Committee of the Stock Exchange, London, for an official settlement in the Shares.

Copies of the Memorandum and Articles of Association and of the Contracts above set out can be inspected at the Offices of the Solicitor to the Company.

Applications for Shares must be made on the form accompanying the prospectus, and sent to the Company's Bankers with cheque for the amount payable on application. Should no allotment be made the deposit will be returned in full, and if the number of Shares allotted is less than the number applied for the balance will be applied towards the amount payable on allotment.

Prospectuses, with Forms of Application, can be obtained at the Offices of the Company, or at those of its Bankers, Brokers, or Solicitor.

London, September 15, 1896.

FORM OF APPLICATION.

THE LONDON AND COLONIAL EXPLORATION AND FINANCE COMPANY, LIMITED.

CAPITAL ... ... £150,000, in 150,000 Shares of £1 each,
Of which 50,000 are offered for Subscription at par. Payable 5s. per Share on Application, 5s. on Allotment, and the balance by Instalments of not more than 5s. at intervals of not less than One Month.

No.....

To the Directors of THE LONDON AND COLONIAL EXPLORATION AND FINANCE COMPANY, LIMITED.

Gentlemen,—I hereby request you to allot me.....Shares of £1 each in the above Company, upon the terms of the Prospectus, and of the Memorandum and Articles of Association of the Company, and I agree to accept the same, or any less number you may allot me, and to pay the further instalments thereon when due. I enclose a Cheque for £....., being 5s. per Share payable on application.

Full Name.....
Signature.....
Description.....
Address.....
Date.....1896.

THE

West Australian Joint Stock Trust and Finance Corporation, Ltd.

REGISTERED OFFICES:—FINSBURY HOUSE, BLOMFIELD STREET, E.C.

INTERIM REPORT.

TO THE SHAREHOLDERS.

In accordance with the promise contained in their last circular, dated June 25, the Directors now beg to submit the following interim report:—

It will be remembered that the Company was incorporated in November, 1895, for the purpose of undertaking all the usual business of a financial corporation, but more especially in regard to the Colony of Western Australia, and, in the words of the original Prospectus, of "working in friendly relations with the principal corporations and houses engaged in West Australian mining." The Directors are happy to be able to state that in both respects they have been eminently successful. From the outset the resources of the Company have been fully and actively employed in various West Australian and other mining ventures, whilst the most cordial relations have been established with the leading corporations of a kindred character.

It is impracticable at this stage to give full details of many of the important undertakings in which the Company is concerned, but the following particulars of some of its principal investments will be of interest to shareholders:—

NORTHERN TERRITORIES GOLD FIELDS OF AUSTRALIA.—In view of the widespread interest which has been manifested in this undertaking the Directors think it desirable to give shareholders the following information:—

Shortly after the incorporation of the Company, the attention of the Board was directed to reports and returns of an extraordinary character respecting the auriferous wealth of a large tract of country situated in the Northern Territory of Australia, and immediately adjoining the northern boundary of the Colony of Western Australia. It appeared that for a distance of about 200 miles in a southerly direction from Palmerston, the capital of the Northern Territory, and for a breadth of from 50 to 60 miles—making a total area of between 10,000 and 12,000 square miles—there was a phenomenally rich gold-bearing formation, which had hitherto been worked in a spasmodic and unscientific manner chiefly by Chinese labour, but the returns were of such a character that, having verified their genuineness by a reference to Government records and other official sources, your Directors lost no time in securing options upon nearly all of the best developed properties. Shareholders will be able to form some opinion of the remarkable mineral wealth of the district from the fact that, notwithstanding the primitive and wasteful methods employed, a crushing of 10 tons from one of the properties gave the pheuomenal result of 3,000 ounces, whilst six crushings from the 150-feet level of another property gave the following returns:—

Crushings.	Tons.	Ounces.
No. 1	72	378
,, 2	119	402
,, 3	53	167
,, 4	12	60
,, 5	44	265
,, 6	30	190

The above results are independent of the gold left in the tailings, of which many thousands of tons are upon the properties. Samples of some of these tailings have recently been assayed, and have in some cases yielded returns at the rate of three ounces to the ton.

Having thus secured options over the best known portions of the gold-bearing region, and carefully studied reports of various Government officials and mining experts, your Directors came to the conclusion that the Northern Territory contained such great potentlalities of wealth as to justify them in directing the attention of other leading West Australian Financial Corporations to the subject, and seeking their co-operation with a view to securing for the Western Australian mining investors generally the first opportunity of participating in the development of a new goldfield so closely allied in both situation and character to the West Australian mines. Various meetings were held, and after the matter had been exhaustively considered, with the assistance of a large amount of eminent technical advice, your Directors were ultimately successful in effecting a great combination of West Australian interests for the purpose of taking up the options above referred to, and acting generally as the mining pioneers of the Territory. The combination comprised, in addition to the West Australian Joint Stock Trust and Finance Corporation, such powerful Companies as the West Australian Gold Fields, Limited; London and Continental Investment Corporation of Western Australia, Limited; the West Australian Share Corporation, Limited; the Colonial Gold Fields, Limited; the Universal Corporation, Limited; the Gold Lands Corporation, Limited; the West Australian Loan and General Finance Corporation, Limited; and the "Venture" group of West Australian Syndicates.

These Companies, with others, constituted themselves into the Northern Territories Syndicate, Limited, and the necessary capital was at once subscribed for the purpose of completing the purchases of the properties over which your Directors had obtained options—with the result that the Syndicate has recently been able to hand over to the Northern Territories Gold Fields of Australia, Limited, six extensive groups of mines, from which, during the past four years, about a quarter of a million worth of gold has been obtained by Chinese labour alone, with certain plant, machinery, and upwards of 25,000 tons of tailings. The Syndicate has accepted the whole of its purchase price in fully paid-up shares of the Northern Territories Gold Fields of Australia, Limited, and has further subscribed the whole of the working capital; and the properties are now in course of transfer to the proprietary Company, which has secured the services of two very eminent engineers who have already commenced active operations with a view to the scientific development of the properties. In the meantime your Directors are happy to announce that arrangements are in progress which will give this Company, in conjunction with the New Zealand Joint Stock and General Corporation, Limited, and the West Australian Loan and General Finance Corporation, Limited, the paramount control of the whole scheme. Although up to the present the shares have not been placed upon the market, or offered to the outside public in any way, they are being extensively inquired for upon the London Stock Exchange and elsewhere. Fuller details will be made public at an early date, when, should it be decided to make a public offer of any portion of the Shares, your Directors will use their best endeavours to obtain a preferential consideration for applications from shareholders in the West Australian Joint Stock Trust and its sister Companies. Your Directors have felt that, having been the pioneers of the scheme, the above information is due to their shareholders, whom they feel they may congratulate upon the addition of such an invaluable asset to the Company.

THE ASSOCIATED GROUP OF MINES.—Shareholders will be aware that this group now constitutes a leading feature of the West Australian market. It comprises the Associated Gold Mines of Western Australia, Limited, the Associated Southern Gold Mines (W.A.), Limited, the Lake View South Gold Mines (W.A.), Limited, and the Lake View Extended Gold Mine (W.A.), Limited, all of whose shares stand at high premiums. A large number of other properties in the Hannan's district of Western Australia have also been secured and are in course of active development, with a view to the formation of several further extensions of the associated scheme. Your Directors were fortunate enough to obtain a substantial interest in the group upon terms which have already yielded the Company large profits.

In addition to its interest in the Associated Gold Mines of Western Australia, Limited, referred to in the original Prospectus, the West Australian Joint Stock Trust, in conjunction with Brookman's Gold Exploration and Finance Association of Western Australia, Limited, and the Associated Company, took an active part in the issue of the Associated Southern Gold Mines (W.A.), Limited, in which Company it is a large shareholder. Your Directors also have a large interest in the projected Associated Extensions, and are intimately identified generally with the group. The most excellent accounts are being received as to the progress of developments, and now that crushings are commencing upon the Lake View South Mine, and other machinery is in a forward state of erection, the Directors look for a considerable further appreciation in the value of their holdings and interest.

THE BURBANK DISTRICT.—The attention of the Directors was some months ago called to this district, and they acquired an interest in two properties almost adjoining the Burbank's Birthday Gift Gold Mine. They had reason to anticipate that this district was an exceedingly rich one, and the splendid reports now coming to hand from the Birthday Gift Mine, where 1,463 tons have now been crushed for a yield of 5,951 ounces (or an average of upwards of four ounces per ton), would appear to justify the opinion the Directors formed. One of these mines, Burbank's No. 1 West, has already been successfully issued, and the latest reports from the manager would appear to indicate that it will be not less valuable than the Birthday Mine. Crushings will commence during the present week. The other, Burbank's No. 1 South, which, according to Professor Nicholas, the manager of the Birthday Mine, is on the direct line of that Company's reef, will be issued during the present month, and, as in the case of Burbank's No. 1 West, shareholders in the West Australian Joint Stock Trust will have the first offer of the shares. The Directors regard their interest in these two Companies as likely to prove a very valuable asset.

NIL DESPERANDUM MINE.—This is a very promising property in the White Feather District, to which the attention of your Directors was attracted by the excellent news received respecting the developments of the White Feather Reward Claim, from which highly satisfactory crushings are now being sent. The Company was successfully floated under the auspices of the West Australian Joint Stock Trust in the month of February last, and work is now being pushed on with all speed with a view to the commencement of crushing. The property was acquired from an influential local syndicate, of which Sir William Robinson, late Governor of Western Australia, was a member, and is reported to be extremely rich, an opinion which is being fully justified by the progress of developments.

MOUNT JACKSON DISTRICT.—The Company is interested in a large group of mines in this district in close proximity to the Mount Jackson Gold Mines which was issued some time back by the West Australian Gold Fields, Limited, and also near the Victoria Gold Mine, another property of high repute.

OTHER BUSINESS.—The Company is in constant negotiation respecting a large amount of West Australian business, but the Directors think that the above particulars will be sufficient to indicate to the shareholders that the West Australian Joint Stock Trust is justifying the hope of its prospectus to take its place amongst the most active and enterprising of the West Australian Financial Corporations.

PROFITS AND INTERIM DIVIDENDS.—It will be within the recollection of the shareholders that two interim quarterly dividends at the rate of 100 per cent. per annum have already been paid, and in their last circular the Directors stated: "Having regard to the large profits the Company is making, and to the character of its principal assets, the Directors have no hesitation in stating that after making provision for a large reserve fund, and providing for the claims of the Founders' shares, shareholders may anticipate a continuance of these quarterly dividends pending the formal audit of the accounts at the close of the Company's financial year."

In redemption of this promise the Directors have now declared a third quarterly interim dividend at the rate of 100 per cent. per annum, whilst the continued appreciation in the value of the various shares held by the Company and their daily increasing market popularity constitute such a very large surplus after providing for the intended interim dividends, that the Directors anticipate being able at the close of the financial year to recommend the setting aside of a very large reserve, and at the same time carrying forward a sufficient amount of undivided profit to secure a regular continuance of these interim dividends.

FOUNDERS' SHARES.—The Directors have been approached with a view to a scheme for the conversion of the Founders' shares into Ordinary shares of the Company. They have not, however, yet arrived at any conclusion upon the subject, as the matter is one which requires careful consideration and would involve considerable legal formality. The Board, however, will favourably consider any fair and equitable proposal for merging the Founders' shares should it meet with the approval of the general body of members. In the meantime, the rights of these shares are being fully protected.

SISTER COMPANIES.—In view of the large amount of business before the Company and of the advantages already derived from active co-operation with other Companies, the Directors have welcomed the formation, under the auspices of one of their colleagues, who is also the largest individual shareholder in your Company, of the New Zealand Joint Stock and General Corporation, Limited, with which Company, so far as its West Australian business is concerned, your Directors hope to work in cordial relations. They have also arrived at a working arrangement with the West Australian Loan and General Finance Corporation, Limited, a Company formed in all respects on similar lines to the West Australian Joint Stock Trust, and which has already participated in most of the ventures in which it has been engaged. Your Directors regard the interchange and community of interest thus secured and the practical amalgamation of forces in business, requiring a large amount of capital, as of great importance, constituting, as it does, a still further guarantee for the successful carrying through of such operations as in your interest they may from time to time embark upon.

Signed on behalf of the Board,
JAMES JUDD, Chairman.

September 15th, 1896.

BUY FROM THE GROWER.

TEA MERCHANT
BY SPECIAL APPOINTMENT

TO HER MAJESTY
THE QUEEN.

LIPTON'S DELICIOUS TEAS

HAVE THE LARGEST SALE IN THE WORLD.

NO HIGHER PRICE. PER 1/7 LB.

APPRECIATED EVERYWHERE FOR THEIR DELICATE FLAVOUR AND EXQUISITE AROMA.

NO HIGHER PRICE.

THIS IS THE FINEST TEA THE WORLD PRODUCES.

PER 1/4 LB. RICH, PURE, AND FRAGRANT. PER 1/- LB.

LIPTON, Tea Planter, Ceylon.

Chief Offices, CITY ROAD, LONDON. Branches Everywhere. Agencies Throughout the World.

THERE IS ONLY ONE
Pill to a dose of

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

AND THERE IS ONLY ONE GENUINE PACKAGE.
It is EXACTLY like this, only the wrapper is printed in blue on white.

The vial contains forty pills, and costs 1s. 1½d. at the Chemist's. This is cheaper than pennyworths of doubtfully compounded pills. It is but a trifle over a farthing a dose, for ONE PILL IS A DOSE, though they are so small that FORTY-NINE of them only measure one inch square.

Cure TORPID LIVER WITHOUT FAIL. SICK HEADACHE, MALAISE, DISTRESS FROM EATING, and SALLOW COMPLEXION promptly done away with.

BRITISH DEPOT FOR
CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS
46, HOLBORN VIADUCT, LONDON. E.C.

"BUT BE SURE THEY ARE CARTER'S."

OUR PUZZLES.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 917.—SHAKESPEARE ON THE MOTOR CAR.

VINDEX (real name and address will be given in due course)	£1 1 0
NIN-NIN " " " " "	£1 1 0

SPECIAL NOTICE.—THE "TRUTH" TOY AND DOLL SHOW.

Now that the holiday season is nearly over and most people are at home again, an excellent way of passing the lengthening evenings may be found in dressing dolls for the coming TRUTH Show. Several thousands of dolls have to be dressed between this and Christmas, and they can be sent out at once to any ladies willing to dress them. The TRUTH Dolls are of two sizes, as in former years, and a number of prizes will be given as usual to the ladies who most distinguish themselves in dressing them. TRUTH Brooches will also be given to all ladies who dress a certain number of dolls. Full particulars as to the prizes will be published shortly.

CONDENSED RULES.

All answers to the current Puzzle must be sent in on or before the morning of the Monday week following the date of that Puzzle's publication, to the PUZZLE EDITOR, TRUTH Buildings, Carteret-street, Queen Anne's-gate, London, S.W. The answers must be signed by a nom de plume of not more than twelve letters, and must not be sent on post-cards, nor by telegraph, nor by hand; whilst in the case of new competitors the real name and address must be forwarded with the first reply sent.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 910.

As stated last week, it has been found necessary to disqualify W. W. P. as prize-winner in this competition, it having turned out that one of the names suggested by him, viz, "Nestrum," was already borne by a horse in training. In these circumstances the prize will now be awarded to LE ROI, whose list of names is subjoined:—

LIST OF NAMES SUGGESTED FOR TWELVE YEARLINGS.

1. French Polish. 2. Stepping Stone. 3. Bastion. 4. Pinchbeck. 5. Benedictine. 6. Form-at-a-glance. 7. Assassin. 8. War Dance. 9. Golden Pippin. 10. Escalop. 11. Spot Stroke. 12. Nunnery.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 915.

The prize in this competition has been divided between PERSIMMON and J. MCGRIGOR ALLAN for the following versions of the given French stanzas:—

How vain is life!
Of love a ray,
A little strife,
And then—good-day!

How brief life seems!
Of hope a mite,
A few short dreams,
And then—good-night!
Persimmon.

Our life is vain:
Love's short, sweet spell,
Hate's short, sharp pain,
And then—farewell!

Our life is short:
Hope's little light,
A dream's brief sport.
And then—good-night!
J. McGrigor Allan.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 918.

I should like to take a little longer time for consideration before awarding this prize.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 922.

There have been several TRUTH competitions in past years which have involved searching the works of our best-known English poets; and I have been often asked to give another of a similar kind. It is thought, then, that the following competition will afford an opportunity for that kind of quest which is evidently popular amongst many of the readers of these pages. The usual prize of Two Guineas is offered to the competitor who succeeds in

QUOTING FROM THE WORKS OF WELL-KNOWN POETS LINES IN WHICH THE SEVEN DAYS OF THE WEEK ARE MENTIONED.

As probably many competitors will succeed in finding seven passages containing the desiderated names, it may be well to add that in awarding the prize preference will be given to those competitors who furnish quotations from well-known poets. The seven quotations should also be taken, if possible, from seven different poets, who may be of any nationality, so long as the poems quoted are written in English. Only one quotation for each day is required, a full reference being given in each case to the poem from which the verse is quoted. All answers must reach me by the morning of Monday, October 5, at the latest.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

 The real name, with the address, of VOX, winner of Prize No. 916, is William Vokes, Esq., 103, Elspeth-road, Clapham Common, S.W.

NEMESIS.—I will not overlook the fact you mention in your letter.

IVANHOE.—Yes, the quotation, "The ne'er yet beaten horse of Parthia," &c., should have been credited to you as well as to PAX.

ALICUJUS.—Thanks for your letter.

W. NORTON.—The lines on "Bishops on Bicycles" were not to exceed eight: you sent twenty.

MERRYTHOUGHT.—You build your contention on a baseless premiss.

NEMESIS.—Many thanks for your letter and the additional suggestions sent by you.

ARCH. GIBBS.—I regret that you are not satisfied with the conclusion arrived at.

IVY LEAVES.—I will not forget your suggestion.

J. M. M.—Many thanks for your interesting communication. I fail to see, however, how I can utilise it as the subject for a competition.

JUNO.—The small dolls are 12 in. high.

THE PUZZLE EDITOR.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 919.—ASSORTED SPECIMENS—GOOD AND OTHERWISE.

RHYMED ANSWERS TO THE QUESTION "SHOULD A BISHOP RIDE A BICYCLE?"

Let bishops bike—what will it matter
If reverend cheeks blush rosier,
While boist'rous boys bawl "Whose yer hatter?"
Or "Who's yer bloomin' hosier?"
To nobler curves 'twill shape their calves,
In sounder health 'twill land 'em,
And time will teach their better halves
To join them on a tandem. Skriker.

Can respect for a bishop be felt by the pious
As he rushes down hill on a bicycle by us?
What should we think of a right reverend prelate
If he took to horn-blowing, or ringing his bell at His scandalised flock? Or suppose that a peeler
Should "run in" the ecclesiastical wheeler
For furious riding! No; solemn and pious ease
Is suited to him who has care of a diocese!
Meerschaum.

Yes; leading on the narrow way
Is certainly their station;
But yet they should not trust for sway
To merely wind-inflation.

They must not "put on side," the wheel
Due counterpoise demands.
No "undue leaning" must they feel
When laying on of hands.
New Zealand.

Should bishops mount the gaysome wheel,
And "croppers" come, belike?
Or should the priestly bosom feel
No yearning for the "bike?"

Let bishop-scorchers scour the world,
Nor do the thing by halves;
They've reared the lambs within the fold,
Now let them train their calves. Darby.

Would he neglect his Church's rites?
Would he deny her teaching?
No; for the wheel which all invites Exemplifies her preaching.

And we'll remember, when we see
His Lordship give a lurch,
The "bike" supplies a long-felt want
For chastening the Church! May.

The Church's Feasts depend, you know, in Calendar rotation,
Upon the Cycle of the Moon,* a nineteen years' rotation.
Now if the Church, as oft 'tis said, unto the Moon is like,
The overseers of the Church should likewise have a "bike."

To tend their flock in weal and woe the Bishops show devotion
(Although some rather tend to give their early friends promotion).
Then if beneath the weight of woe they overburdened feel,
May not they justly seek relief by mounting on the "wheel?" A. A. G.

*The Cycle of the Moon or golden number—see tables prefixed to the Prayer Book.

When princes, peers, and politicians,
Ride daily on the wheel,
To pious Mrs. G.'s traditions
Tis useless to appeal.

Let common sense, then, tell us whether
Bishops ought to bike;
Why, rhyme and reason cry together,
"By all means—if they like." Ex.

The motive that suggested the episcopal attire
Was to demonstrate that Bishops ought to cycle, and with ease.
That's why their shoes, their gaiters, and their breeches they require,
For they couldn't "bike" in trousers—they'd get baggy at the knees.

The apron, they foresaw, would polish nickel fairly well;
The "shovel-hat" they took but as a temporary wear;
That is to be abolished, and henceforth, I'm glad to tell,
The full-dress shape—three-cornered—will complete their lordships' gear. King Hal.

No reader of TRUTH would disparage
The Bishop, at cycling "au fait;"
Who gave up his horses and carriage
To give what they cost him away.

Methinks that St. Paul such a pastor
Would thus with encouragement greet,
"I wrought with my hands for the Master;
Do thou as good work with thy feet."
Birota.

How some the sane suggestion mock
In truth I cannot tell;
It will not shock but guide the flock
To hear the Bishop's bell.
No scorching prelate could I praise,
But this is clear as dawn,
Unless he strays from beaten ways
He cannot harm "the Lawn." Twins.

A bishop may ride on a cycle of steel
If he carefully chooses the orthodox wheel.
No Singer, or Dayton, or Humber belike,
Isaiah restricts him to one sort of "bike."
The prophet declares, and he's surely a guide,
That the Swift* is the cycle on which he must ride. Annan Academy.

* "We will ride upon the Swift," Isaiah xxx., 16.

Should Bishops ride on bicycles? Why, surely, if they like,
There seems no reason why their reverend lordships shouldn't "bike;"
Despite the old example—(you all know it, I suppose?)
'Twixt hands beside each other and at length before the nose.

Yet they must be staid in manner if to "biking" they aspire,
They're debarred from putting Sid(e) on, though acquainted well with Tyre;
But Dame Fashion surely meant them to, on bicycles, look neat
When she settled on their lordships' breeks and gaiters all complete. Godfather.

"Should Bishops bike?" This is indeed a poser,
And to the query I should answer "No, sir."
Let curates fly upon the tyre pneumatic
To tend the sick and comfort the rheumatic.
The rector, too, may sometimes join the number
Of those who tread their "Elswick" or their "Humber;"
But not the Bishop—no! the thought is torture—
His Lordship might in time become a scorcher!
Chelsea.

I fail to see why reverend sires
Should fear to mount pneumatic tyres;
Why those who peace and safety like
Should not enjoy a safety bike.
No! let each Bishop mount his Humber
Till all machines are counted lumber,
And steeds are ordered, winged and fair,
To Heaven the lawn-sleeved Bench to bear.
Arden.

Some say that the cycle is not for a Bishop to straddle,
That it becomes not his cloth nor his shanks;
That his dignity's much more imposing in saddle,
For thus with his equals he ranks.
But why should the Bishop not have his small pleasure?
He needs neither horses nor grooms as he goes;
And thus to the poor he can give in large measure,
And gout never troubles his toes. Culpepper.

Of rational costume I write—
A long frock coat, a collar white,
A low-crowned hat with curly brim,
It makes her look just like him.
A silken apron to the knee,
Smart shoes, and gaiters, all may see;
Well, truth to tell, 'tis something like
A blessed Bishop on a bike! Dot.

Answers have also been received from:—Francis, Roberto, Arch Gibbs, Frog, Edgware, Veritas, Ivy Leaves, Troyes, Marguérite, Penquin, Bimbo, Bootle's Baby, A. D. C., Canis, Iota, Jeff, Sol, North Pole, Dedun, Desmatrophy, Culpepper, Nemo, H. W. B., Theology, D. I., R. M., Alicujus, William J. J., W. G. B., Hunks, Philalectres, Dorset, Screen, E. J., Stadium, Con, Quid Nunc, Nitram, A. A. A. A., Mona, Megrah, Atra Cura, Ivanhoe, Monica, Qu'Appelle, Stultulus, Tay, Campbell, Go-ahead, E. Culverhouse, Anvil, Georgina, Forsan, Espérance, Pan, Wahina, Pax, Jep, Felsberg, May, Deadeye, Nocerb, Regate, Achilles, E. W. S. B., Effie, Samson, Pax Vobiscum, Society, Clear, Robin Adair, N. N. N., La Plata, Excelsior, Sol, Dandelion, A Wild Curate, Hub, Esperanza, Jacobite, Zero, Opera, Herpal, Ambrosius, Silidar, Meg, Songster, Nitram, Treeve, AAAA, Candlemas, Shamrock, Nemesis, Whig, Stephanotis, Fridaythorpe, Anvil, and J. McGrigor Allan.

Best is Cheapest & Lasts Longest
Fixed, moderate prices.
Permanent Protection from Chill.
JAEGER
PURE WOOL UNDERWEAR, HOSE, PYJAMAS, RUGS, BLANKETS, CASHMERE SHEETS, DRESSING GOWNS, SHAWLS, CORSETS, CYCLING OUTFITS, BOOTS AND SHOES, etc. etc.
"Health Culture" & Jaeger Coy.'s Price List sent free.
JAEGER DEPOTS:—
3 and 4, PRINCES-ST., CAVENDISH-SQ. (near Regent-circus)
126, REGENT-STREET (near the Quadrant).
30, SLOANE-STREET (adjoining McPherson's Gymnasium).
456, STRAND (near Trafalgar-square).
85 and 86, CHEAPSIDE (near King-street).
TAILORING (only):—
42, CONDUIT-STREET, NEW BOND STREET, W.
The "Jaeger" goods are sold in many Towns. Address sent from Jaeger Co.'s Head Office, 95, Milton Street, E.C.
TRADE MARK ON EACH GARMENT.
The "Jaeger" goods are tested for purity and durability.
Dr. JAEGER'S SANITARY WOOLLEN SYSTEM Co. SOLE CONCESSIONARIES PURE WOOL WARRANTED

Goddard's Plate Powder
SIX GOLD MEDALS.
Non-Mercurial.
THE BEST and SAFEST article for CLEANING SILVER and ELECTRO PLATE. Sold in Boxes, 1s., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d. each, by Grocers, Oilmen, Chemists, &c., everywhere.

'One Piece' Studs
PATENTED UNBREAKABLE.
Beautifully Formed.
No one who appreciates a nice Stud wears any other.
SECTION.
AVOID IMITATIONS.
SEE THEY ARE STAMPED PATENT.
Sold by all Leading Jewellers.
Wholesale only, Saunders and Shepherd, London.

JOHN SHAW, STOCK & SHARE DEALER.
HEAD OFFICE:—
WARDROBE CHAMBERS, DOCTORS' COMMONS, LONDON, E.C.
BANKERS:—
CAPITAL AND COUNTIES, Ludgate-hill, Long Acre, Piccadilly, and Brighton Branches.
LONDON AND MIDLAND, Newgate-street and Tooley-street Branches.
DIRECT PRIVATE TELEGRAPH WIRE between LONDON and BRIGHTON Offices.
FULL PARTICULARS of SPECIAL ARRANGEMENTS for DEALING sent post free on application.
COVER SYSTEM.—The loss is limited, the profits are unlimited, and there is such an independence in acting that the principle must and does recommend itself to business men—indeed, it is the only method on which they deal—for speculative accounts.
£5 COMMANDS £500 STOCK.
£10 COMMANDS £1,000 STOCK.
£50 COMMANDS £5,000 STOCK.
£500 COMMANDS £50,000 STOCK, and so on in proportion.
NO OTHER LIABILITY WHATEVER.
JOHN SHAW, STOCK AND SHARE DEALER,
LONDON, BRIGHTON, MANCHESTER, AND DUBLIN.

TOWN WATER SUPPLIES.
PURIFICATION BY
MAIGNEN'S FILTRE RAPIDE
MAIGNEN'S FILTER is the only one adopted after public competition by the City of Paris (10th July, 1896).—See "Bulletin Municipal Officiel," 30th July, 1896.—Full particulars from
Maignen's Filtre Rapide & Anti-Calcaire Co., Lim.
255, REGENT ST., LONDON, W.

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER
Prevents the Hair from falling off.
Restores Grey or White Hair to its ORIGINAL COLOUR.
Being delicately perfumed it leaves no unpleasant odour.
IS NOT a dye, and therefore does not stain the skin or even white linen.
Should be in every house where a HAIR RENEWER is needed.
Ask your Chemist or Hairdresser for
THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.
Price 3s. 6d. per large Bottle.
Prepared only by the
ANGLO-AMERICAN DRUG COMPANY, Ltd.,
33, FARRINGDON ROAD, LONDON, E.C.

FLORILINE

FOR THE TEETH AND BREATH.
IS THE BEST LIQUID DENTIFRICE IN THE WORLD.
Prevents the Decay of Teeth.
Renders the Teeth Pearly White.
Is perfectly Harmless and Delicious to the Taste.
Of all Chemists and Perfumers throughout the World.
2s. 6d. per Bottle.
FLORILINE TOOTH POWDER.
Put up in Glass Jars, price 1s.

CARTER 6A, NEW CAVENDISH ST. PORTLAND PLACE, LONDON.

ONLY ADDRESS OF ORIGINAL CARTER

LITERARY MACHINE.

For holding book, lamp, meals, &c., in any position over an easychair, bed, or sofa.

Deliciously luxurious. A most useful gift. Prices from 17/6

Carrying Chairs from £1.

Breakfast in Bed Tables from 30/-

INVALID FURNITURE.

ADJUSTABLE COUCHES and BEDS from £1. 10/-

Bed Lift £3. 1[illegible]/-
Reclining Board, 25/-
Walking Machines
Portable W.C.'s.
Electric Bells, Urinals, &c.
Air & Water Beds.

Bed Rests 7/6
Leg Rests 10/-
Crutches 10/6
Bed Baths 12/6
Commodes, £1. 5/-

Self-Propelling Chairs from £2

BATH CHAIRS FROM £1. 5/-

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUES POST FREE.

JOHN CARTER, 6a, NEW CAVENDISH ST. Portland-pl. London, W.

EPPS'S COCOAINE.

COCOA-NIB EXTRACT.

(TEA-LIKE.)

The choicest roasted nibs (broken-up beans) of the natural Cocoa on being subjected to powerful hydraulic pressure, give forth their excess of oil, leaving for use a finely-flavoured powder—"Cocoaine," a product which, when prepared with boiling water, has the consistence of tea, of which it is now, with many, beneficially taking the place. Its active principle being a gentle nerve stimulant, supplies the needed energy without unduly exciting the system.

FARADAY & SON's

Electric Light Fittings

NEW DESIGNS for SEASON '96

2 & 3 BERNERS ST.
LONDON W

10/6 THE "PELICAN" SELF-FEEDING PEN 10/6

(PATENTED)

WRITES INSTANTLY AND CONTINUOUSLY.

Has Extra Large Reservoir of Ink. Secure against Leakage in any position. Flow of Ink regulated with the Greatest Nicety.

POLISHED VULCANITE, HANDSOMELY ENCHASED, FITTED WITH SPECIAL BARREL PEN in 14-ct. GOLD, IRIDIUM-POINTED. Also

THE "NOTA BENE" STYLOGRAPH OR FLUID PENCIL

(PATENTED)

5/- 5/-

IS READY FOR INSTANT USE, WITHOUT ANY ADJUSTMENT. MAY BE CARRIED IN ANY POSITION, WITHOUT FEAR OF LEAKAGE.

POLISHED VULCANITE, HANDSOMELY ENCHASED, WITH NEEDLE, SPRING, & NOZZLE, MADE OF THE PRECIOUS METALS.

Sold by all Stationers. Wholesale only by the Sole Manufacturers, THOS. DE LA RUE & CO. Ltd., Bunhill Row, London, E.C.

W. & F. THORN'S CARRIAGES

AND

ELSWICK CYCLES.

Acknowledged by all the World to be the BEST.

LONDON ADDRESSES—

19 and 19a, Great Portland Street, and 16 and 17, Little Portland Street, W.

Ranelagh House, Lower Grosvenor Place, S.W. London (only).

The Mutual Life Insurance Co. Of New York

Assets . . . exceed . . . 45 Millions Sterling.

INSURES AN INCOME

During Lifetime of Insured.

Life Policies - - - - - -	at 3½ per cent.
Life Option Endowments -	at 4 ,,
Consols - - - - - - - -	at 6 ,,

After Death of Insured.

Continuous Instalment - -	at 5 per cent.
Debenture - - - - - -
20 Year Bond - - - - -

Apply for Particulars to any of the Branch Offices, or to Head Office for the United Kingdom—

D. C. HALDEMAN,
GENERAL MANAGER,
17 & 18, CORNHILL, LONDON, E.C.

FOR YOUTHFUL APPEARANCE. BEAUTIFUL HAIR.

IMPERIAL HAIR DYES &c

ONE LIQUID.

No. 1.—Black.
No. 2.—Dark Brown.
No. 3.—Light Brown.
No. 4.—Golden Brown or Auburn.
No. 5.—Pure Golden.
No. 6.—IMPERIAL HAIR GROWER.

Harmless, Perfect, Permanent, and Odourless.
A Medical Certificate with each bottle.

2/6, 3/6, 5/- & 10/6 (Secretly Packed).

J. BRODIE, 41, Museum-st. London.
ESTABLISHED 1868. ONCE TRIED, ALWAYS USED.

STRAINED VISION.

DISTRESSING HEADACHES, indigestion, simulated neuralgia, and nervous depression, are frequently caused by some peculiarity of the Vision, which can at once be overcome by the use of proper glasses. See "OUR EYES" (Now in its Sixteenth Edition), price 1s.; by JOHN BROWNING, F.R.A.S., F.R.M.S., President of the British Optical Association, &c.
Or consult, free of charge—
MR. JOHN BROWNING,
OPHTHALMIC OPTICIAN,
63, STRAND, LONDON, W.C.

ROYAL EXCHANGE
ASSURANCE.

SETTLEMENT POLICIES
Guaranteeing FIVE PER CENT. on the sum assured. No Trustees Required.

DEATH DUTIES
Provided for by a small annual payment through life.

ANNUITIES
Special Terms for Impaired Lives.

For Rates, apply to the Secretary,
Chief Office—ROYAL EXCHANGE, LONDON.

GREAT SOUTHERN AND WESTERN RAILWAY.

LAKES AND FJORDS OF KERRY.

"The south-western part of Kerry is well known as the most beautiful portion of the British Isles."—LORD MACAULAY.

Opening of the New Railways—New Tourist Resorts—Good Hotels—Magnificent Scenery—Good Fishing—Coaching Tours.

Cheap Tourist Tickets issued to Lakes of Killarney, Glengariff, Caragh Lake for Glenear, Valencia, Waterville, Parknasilla, and Kenmare.

THE GRAND ATLANTIC COAST TOUR affords magnificent views of River, Ocean, and Mountain Scenery by Railway and Coach for ONE HUNDRED MILES around the South Kerry Peninsula.

Tickets are also issued to Kilkee, Lahinch, Lisdoonvarna, and places on the County Clare Coast.

For full particulars apply to Messrs. Cook & Son, Messrs. Gaze & Son, the principal stations on the L. & N. W., Midland, or G. W. Railways, or to the Great Southern and Western Railway, Dublin.—Illustrated Guide sent gratis and post-free on Application to Kingsbridge, Dublin. R. G. COLHOUN, Traffic Manager.

RUBINAT. BEST RUBINAT. APERIENT.

Source Dr. Llorach.—SPANISH APERIENT MINERAL WATER. Dr. WEX, Official Chemist to the town of Hamburg, places Rubinat before the most vaunted of the German purgative waters. Is invaluable in all gout and intestinal complaints.

—Has none of the drastic and ofttimes irritating effects of other waters, which chiefly depend for their action upon magnesian salts of which they are largely composed.

E. GALLAIS & CO.,
90, Piccadilly, London, W.

A WONDERFUL MEDICINE!

BEECHAM'S PILLS

Have been before the Public for more than fifty years, and have now the greatest sale of any Proprietary article. This has been achieved without the publication of testimonials, the convincing fact is, that BEECHAM'S PILLS RECOMMEND THEMSELVES.

WORTH A GUINEA A BOX

FOR ALL
Bilious & Nervous Disorders
SUCH AS
Sick Headache, Constipation, Weak Stomach, Impaired Digestion, Disordered Liver and Female Ailments.

Annual Sale, SIX MILLION BOXES.

Sold everywhere in boxes 9½d., 13½d. and 2/9 each.

Printed for the Proprietor by WYMAN & SONS, Limited, Great Queen-st. W.C. and published at 10, Bolt-ct. Fleet-st. E.C. in the Parish of St. Dunstan's-in-the-West, in the City of London. Cheques and Post Office Orders should be made payable to REGINALD E. BOOKER, "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-st. Queen Anne's-gate, S.W.

• TRUTH •

"Cultores Veritatis Fraudis Inimici."—Cicero.

No. 1031. Vol. XL. Thursday, October 1, 1896. Price Sixpence.

NOTICE.

In response to various communications which reach me on the subject, I beg to notify that the terms of Subscription to Truth, which are payable in advance, are as follows:—To any address in the United Kingdom, for 3 months, 7s.; 6 months, 14s.; and for 12 months, 28s. The Thin Paper Edition is forwarded to countries within the Postal Union for 3 months for 7s. 8d.; 6 months, 15s. 4d.; and 12 months, 30s. 8d. Cheques and Post Office Orders should be made payable to the Manager, Truth, "Truth Building," Carteret-street, S.W.

A reprint of the Truth report on the Kilburn Sisterhood can be obtained at the Publishing Offices, Bolt-court, Fleet-street, price 2d.; by post, 2½d.

ENTRE NOUS.

TO THE QUEEN.

'MONGST those, your Majesty, who now lay tribute at your feet,
And with such pæans of applause your reign protracted greet,
There may be those who louder shout as they approach your throne,
But none, be sure, who wishes breathe more hearty than our own.

Some may be blessed with supple knees more prone than ours to bend,
Some may to wild hyperbole be more inclined to tend,
Some may more fulsomely proclaim the fame Fate on you showers,
But none can bring you votive verse that's more sincere than ours.

We would congratulate you, then, on living to attain
To such an epoch in so great and glorious a reign;
Gladly we hail the fact that you have sat upon your throne
Longer than any King or Queen our country yet has known.

But our congratulations must more warmly be express'd
When we remember your long reign has also been the best;
And when we gratefully recall the wisdom and the skill
With which you've based your sovereignty upon the nation's will.

Forsaking all the bad old paths our Kings did once pursue,
You have to England been as loyal as England's been to you;
Nor have you countenanced those new and ill-considered ways
With which some monarchs even now a Continent amaze.

You have been steadfast to your vows, good faith your arm has nerved,
From the straight path of rectitude your steps have never swerved.
Your country's good—'tis this has been the aim you've made your own;
The mire cast up by party waves has never smirched your throne.

When England spoke as with one voice, 'twas yours to pave the way
For those concessions which have made our land so strong to-day;
And in your proud position now this wholesome truth we see—
The Sovereign never is so great as when the people's free!

Dark shadows have at times obscured the sunlight of your life;
But comfort always has been near when griefs have been most rife,
And you have found when stricken most by harsh Bereavement's hand,
That sorrow is a link that binds yet closer Queen and land.

So, when that land has wounded lain by dire disaster torn,
Your kindly words of sympathy a prompt relief have borne.
No sobbing mourner ever yet appealed to you in vain;
When England's heart has thrilled with woe, your heart has throbbed with pain.

You've seen our Empire greater grow; far, far throughout the world,
You've watched the flag of England wave, by Britain's sons unfurled;
And, better still, it has been yours to aid the statesman's plan,
Which, by the passing of just laws, heralds new hope for man!

Hence 'tis with all sincerity your Majesty we greet,
And lay this tribute loyally and gladly at the feet
Of one to whom the love of all the land is doubly due—
As queenliest of Queens and yet as best of women, too!

The papers have been printing some sensational fiction about the Queen's eyes, one journal announcing that her Majesty is threatened with cataract. There is no foundation for these alarming statements. Professor Pagenstecker came a few weeks ago from Wiesbaden to Osborne to examine the Queen's eyes, and decided that there is no trace of any organic disease, but that a certain weakness of eyesight from which her Majesty has recently suffered, is merely the effect of advancing age. The Queen has been much benefited by the treatment which Professor Pagenstecker recommended, and her new glasses enable her to read and write without difficulty.

The Princess of Wales, who left the Bellevue Pier, in the Sound, at four o'clock last Tuesday afternoon for Aberdeen, in the Osborne, had a very rough passage indeed across the North Sea, and the Royal yacht had never encountered worse weather. The Osborne arrived in Aberdeen Roads at four o'clock on Thursday morning, but the state of the tide did not allow of the yacht entering the harbour until one o'clock. Prince and Princess Charles of Denmark arrived at Aberdeen from Sandringham at seven o'clock, and at nine they went off to the Osborne in a tug boat, and remained on board until the Princess landed, and they all went on to Ballater by the afternoon train. The Princess and her party stayed at Balmoral to drink tea with the Queen, and then they drove on to Mar Lodge, where they are to stay for the next fortnight with the Duke and Duchess of Fife. This is the first visit of the Princess to Deeside since the autumn of 1894.

H.R.H. and the Princess of Wales are to arrive at Sandringham for the winter on the 30th, and they will entertain several house parties there during the ensuing six weeks. The Prince and Princess and Princess Victoria will be the guests of the Duke and Duchess of Marlborough at Blenheim from November 23 till the 27th, when they are to go to Windsor Castle on a visit to the Queen, returning to Sandringham on the 30th, as there will be a large shooting party at the Hall during the first week of December.

There will be no balls at Sandringham during the winter, but there is to be a lawn-meet of the West Norfolk Foxhounds at the Hall, with a hunt breakfast. It is probable that this function will be fixed for Tuesday, December 1, the Princess of Wales's birthday.

The King and Queen of Denmark, who have left Bernstorff on a visit to the Duke and Duchess of Cumberland at their seat on the Traun See, near Gmunden, will probably pay a brief visit to England before they return to Copenhagen for the winter, in which case they are to be the guests of the Queen at Balmoral, and of the Prince and Princess of Wales at Sandringham, where they will meet the King of the Hellenes and his second son, Prince George, who are now in Denmark.

The Queen of the Netherlands is in delicate health, and she will leave the Hague early next month, with her mother, the Queen Regent, to spend a part of the winter in Italy, and they may possibly proceed to Egypt if the weather becomes cold.

Archduke Joseph of Austria with his wife, the Archduchess Clotilde, and their daughter the Archduchess Marie Dorothea, are to pay a visit to the Queen at Balmoral in the course of this month, after which they will be the guests of the Prince and Princess of Wales at Sandringham for a few days. Their Imperial Highnesses are coming to England to visit the Duc d'Aumale at Wood Norton, his seat in Worcestershire, where the Comtesse de Cases and her parents are now staying. The Archduchess Clotilde belongs to the Hungarian branch of the Saxe-Coburg-Gotha family. The Archduke Joseph is the richest member of the Hapsburg clan, excepting only his cousin, the Emperor Francis Joseph.

The Duke of Cambridge has been staying at Glenmuick House, Aberdeenshire, with Lord and Lady Glenesk, and at Drummond Castle, Perthshire, with Lord and Lady Ancaster, during his visit to Scotland. The Duke will spend a considerable part of this month at Newmarket, and he is to have several shooting parties at Six-Mile Bottom, where the Prince of Wales is to be his guest on the 12th, 18th, and 26th.

I had an amusing letter the other day from a gentleman who gravely suggested that the custom of walking backwards before Royalty was due to an instinct implanted in men by Providence. Owing to the wide publicity given to this suggestion in the columns of Truth, it has brought me another suggestion from a philosopher living in the Far East. This gentleman has seen, I imagine, much of savage life. His idea is that the custom of always turning the face towards Royalty arose in this way. The first kings were rulers of savage tribes, whose clothing was extremely limited, and rarely consisted of more than a scanty garment modelled on the primitive fig-leaf. When a subject thus apparelled had to present himself before Royalty, courtesy, not to say decency, would suggest that he should present to the Sovereign only that portion of his anatomy which was concealed by clothing. He therefore kept his back averted in approaching and retiring. Hence the walking backwards. I do not know what learned men may think of this theory, but it seems to me quite as reasonable as the one about the bees and their queen.

The papers persist in describing the Emperor Nicholas as a "keen sportsman," whereas every one knows very well that his Majesty cares nothing for shooting, and never goes out except upon quasi-State occasions, when he is obliged to take a gun as a matter of form. The Emperor has no pretensions to be even a tolerable shot.

The following curious communication was in my letter-box this morning. Its sender purports to be a newspaper correspondent or a detective—I am not quite sure which

---

For the Truth Hotel List, see page 854 in the present issue.
For Hospitals and Appeals, see page 859.
For Amusements, see page 853.
For Our Puzzles, see page 865.

Cheques to be made payable to Reginald B. Booker, "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-st. Queen Anne's-gate, S.W.

—and implies that the subjoined verses were picked up by him close to Balmoral Castle. It is against my rule to publish unauthenticated communications, but I am induced to make an exception in the present case, as the verses, whoever their author may be, appear to me to express a very innocent and natural aspiration :—

In a snug little cottage, not far from the Dee—
Alice and I and the Baby!
How happy we all should be able to be—
Alice and I and the Baby.
The demon of worry would then be appeased,
No longer by etiquette we should be teased,
We could do—only fancy!—whatever we pleased—
Alice and I and the Baby!
Alice—Alice—
Pines in a palace;
Here she'd be jolly and bubbling with glee.
Oh, why doesn't Fate, then, release us all three—
Alice and I and the Baby?

We could walk at our will over mountain and lea—
Alice and I and the Baby!
A detective no longer would pop from each tree
At Alice and I and the Baby.
By sentries and soldiers no longer beset,
We could live our own lives, and might even forget
The dynamite bomb and the Nihilist's threat—
Alice and I and the Baby!
Alice—Alice—
Pines in a palace;
How she would thrive if she only were free!
Oh why, then, won't Fortune the freedom decree
Of Alice and I and the Baby?

As we roamed through the heather or sat by the shore—
Alice and I and the Baby,
The smug Court officials no longer would bore
Alice and I and the Baby.
Five-sixths of our cares from our lives would take wing,
Nine-tenths of the load from our backs we should fling;
Oh, wouldn't we carol and wouldn't we sing—
Alice and I and the Baby!
Alice—Alice—
Pines in a palace;
She would be jolly enough by the Dee.
Yes, we all should be happy as happy could be—
Alice and I and the Baby!

A good deal of correspondence in defence of the West Indies as a health resort has been provoked by the paragraph on the subject which appeared in TRUTH a fortnight ago. I may mention more particularly an unqualified panegyric that I have received on the merits of Barbados, which the writer, after having wintered out of England for eleven years, describes as one of the healthiest spots to be found. There has, at any rate, been no authenticated case of yellow fever there since 1881. On referring again to the medical gentleman who originally raised the alarm on the subject, I am told by him that his remarks apply only to Antigua and St. Kitts, and from what he says I gather that the shortcomings of those places are due far less to Nature than to the defiance of the laws of health and common-sense by the inhabitants. The truth seems to be that the different islands vary considerably both in climate and sanitation, and that it is desirable for visitors to exercise discrimination. Personally, I know several people who have wintered repeatedly in Jamaica and Barbados, and who describe the West Indies as an earthly Paradise for winter quarters. Probably, with a little rational attention to sanitary requirements, all the islands might be made so.

It may be more to the purpose to utter a word of warning to English people contemplating a visit to Madeira, which is annually growing in favour as a winter resort. I hear from a lady who wintered there last season that typhoid fever was very prevalent during the winter and spring, and in March and April there were four deaths from it among English visitors in as many weeks—a very alarming proportion considering the number of English in the island. That the danger is not yet over is shown by the fact that one of the resident English doctors is only now recovering from an attack. The mischief is said to have been clearly traceable to the drinking-water, and as nothing has been done to remove the pollution, the moral would seem to be that water-drinkers should avoid Madeira for the present.

A bitter wail reaches me from a lady respecting the condition of the first-class waiting-room and the ladies'-room on the main-line platform at Liverpool-street Station. As a frequent passenger to and from the station she says she finds a seat outside on a luggage-barrow preferable to one in a place so badly ventilated and disagreeably overcrowded as the first-class waiting-room usually is, while in the ladies'-room, which can only be approached through the general waiting-room, the state of things is even worse. I feel sure it is only necessary to mention this complaint to ensure attention being given to the matter by the Company's officials.

If only half the schemes now projected are carried out next November the streets of London will look passing strange. The month of fogs and civic festivity will witness the authorised introduction of motor-cars in our midst, in celebration of which event a grand parade of horseless vehicles is being arranged, finishing up with a run to Brighton and back. Next we are promised a couple of lines of horseless omnibuses plying between Hammersmith and the Bank, one of these enterprising companies claiming to use an auto-motor costing only twopence a mile to work. And there are some hints that the privilege cab question, now exercising the minds of the London cab trade, is not unlikely to arrive at an unexpected and—to one side—disastrous solution by the substitution of the auto-motor for the horse and growler. However, we have survived more terrible predictions in the past—and the metropolis still stands where it did.

Apropos of the cab difficulty, a reader in the North of England asks me to call attention to the arrangement which some of the railway companies make for registering luggage from the starting-point straight through to the owner's address, and delivering it to him there.

A BEAUTIFUL HOTEL AT BOURNEMOUTH.—The "ROYAL BATH." "Hôtel de Luxe of the South." Sea frontage, 1,000 ft.; grounds, 5 acres. Due south. Only Hotel on East Cliff. Moderate fixed tariff

Whether all the railway companies do this I cannot say, but I suppose it is pretty well known that some of them do, though the arrangement, of course, only applies to London and a few large towns, and within a certain radius of the terminal station. It is a system, however, which, if generally carried out and properly brought to the notice of the public, ought to prove as remunerative to the companies as convenient to their passengers.

The National Gallery and the National Portrait Gallery are no longer available to the public on Sundays. The reason appears to be the total absence of artificial light. It is admitted that the experiment of opening these galleries on Sundays during the past summer has been so successful that there is no question of the practice being continued next year. This being the case, the National Sunday League are inaugurating a memorial to the Trustees requesting them to take steps for enabling the rooms to be kept open continuously all the year round. A moment's reflection will show that the advantages held out for inspecting the National collections are much more likely to be sought after in winter than in summer, as holiday trips to the country and suburbs are then, as a rule, no longer indulged in, and the Trustees will do well to remember this fact, and act accordingly.

In this utilitarian age it is almost useless for Art (even with a capital A) to hold itself aloof from the enterprising advertisement agent. The sorrows of Sir Edward Arnold, made public by a willing Press, suggest an amount of innocence and confidence on the part of the poet which are immensely refreshing in these sophisticated days. It is true that in accepting a commission to supply a patriotic effusion upon a certain date Sir Edwin may have credited the purchaser with nothing more than an intense admiration for his poetic efforts; but, bearing in mind that the latest President of the Royal Academy was made by means of his picture, "Bubbles," to help swell the pockets of a soap-dealing firm, it would have evinced a clearer knowledge of the art of the advertising agent if salutary restrictions had been added to the original contract in the present instance.

An impression has got abroad—though how it can have started it is impossible to say—that the English play called "Caste" is a German play which Robertson translated and adapted to the English stage. This is wholly erroneous. "Caste" is an absolutely original play, and, as I said the other day, first appeared in the form of a short story in a Christmas book edited by Tom Hood the Younger, called "Rates and Taxes." It was the story told by the Poor Rate collector. The only play of the old Tottenham-court-road (Prince of Wales) series by Robertson which had something to do with the German stage was "School," and was suggested to Robertson after reading "Aschenbrodel" (Cinderella), by Benedix. But the plays are identical only in the merest outline. There is no affinity whatever in the literary style of Benedix and Robertson.

Mr. Underhill has undertaken to write the Life of Lord Leighton, whose collected "Discourses to Students of the Royal Academy" will be published in a few weeks.

My attention was called the other day to a case in which a gentleman who has several hundreds a year of his own, and whose parent's income is reckoned at thousands, holds an open scholarship at Oxford; and the correspondent who brought the matter to my notice suggested that some means should be devised by which the pecuniary benefits of scholarships should be reserved for men who are really in need of them, even if the mere honour was left absolutely open to competition among all sorts and conditions of men. This is a very difficult question. It would be easy enough, of course, to confine University scholarships to men of limited means; but everybody knows that the effect of this would be to place the holder of the scholarship under a stigma by branding him among his University comrades as a sort of confessed pauper. There is something, too, to be said in favour of leaving scholarships absolutely open regardless of the candidates' means, so that the poor man may win provided he is the best man, but not otherwise.

The only substantial argument, I take it, for attaching any sort of condition to the holding of a scholarship is that the moneyed man has an advantage over other competitors from the fact that as a moneyed man he has had the benefit of better schooling and coaching. In this respect there may undoubtedly be injustice in the fact of a rich man holding a scholarship, but it is a most difficult thing in any given case to say for certain that a scholarship has been really won by means of money and the advantages that money confers, rather than by superior industry or ability. It seems to me that the most you can justly do is to encourage men who do not want the money to resign their scholarships in favour of unsuccessful candidates, to whom the money would be of more consideration.

But, again, how is this to be done? You might allow a man to relinquish the emoluments and convert himself into an honorary scholar, and you might allow him to adorn himself with a gold tassel on his cap, or a blue ribbon in his button-hole, or make some other arrangement for advertising the fact that he is not only the winner of a scholarship, but such a wealthy man that he is able to refuse the pecuniary benefits attaching to it. But any such inducement, whatever its exact form, must be more or less an appeal to the snobbish instinct in man. Here and there, perhaps, you may find men who are not only clever enough or well-educated enough to win scholarships, but generous enough to hand over the profits to a poorer scholar who needs them more. But unless a man does the thing voluntarily and out of pure generosity, I do not see much good in either forcing or tempting him to do it.

"Hôtel Burlington," at Sunny Boscombe. (200 rooms.) Every luxury. Delightful grounds. Magnificent golf links. Sea-water baths. Moderate charges.—Bournemouth East Station.

Cheques payable to Reginald E. Booker, "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-st. Queen Anne's-gate, S.W.

An appointment is to be made next Monday to the new Adam Smith Chair of Political Economy in Glasgow University, and there are six candidates. The salary will be £600 a year, and the post is to be held ad vitam aut culpam, and carries a retiring pension with it.

I have had several letters with reference to the recent article in TRUTH on "Board Schools for the Middle Classes," to which I may, perhaps, return hereafter. In the meantime, however, it is worthy of note that the Manchester School Board has apparently gone to work already very much on the lines which I recommended to the London Board. At Manchester the Board is running two, if not three, higher grade schools. In one of them, the Central Organised Science School, the fee is 7d. a week for children of ratepayers and 1s. 6d. for others, and the course of instruction embraces the following subjects:—Mathematics, chemistry, and physics (theoretical and practical), theoretical mechanics, manual instruction, art and mechanical drawing, French, English, book-keeping, and shorthand. Scholarships to this school are granted from the Elementary Schools. The scheme, therefore, seems to be in all essentials almost identical with the one I suggested for London, although I had no knowledge of it at the time of writing. What Manchester is doing, London ought to be able to do.

The following statement of the accounts of a so-called "voluntary" school is highly interesting at the present juncture. The school in question is the Stalmine British School, Poulton-le-Fylde, Preston, and these are the official accounts for the year 1895-6:—

INCOME.

		£.	s.	d.
To Balance in hand		21	17	8
,, Annual grant, Education Department ...		66	10	0
,, Fee grant		39	2	6
,, School fees		17	4	1
,, Books sold to children		2	12	10
,, Science and Art (Drawing) ...	£2 11 0
From other sources	4 9 0
		7	0	0
		£154	7	1

EXPENDITURE.

	£.	s.	d.
By Salaries of teachers...	115	7	7
,, Books, apparatus, and stationery ...	7	13	2½
,, Repairs to buildings / ,, Replacement of furniture	11	2	10
,, Rates, taxes, and insurance	1	8	0
,, Sundry expenses and postage	0	4	11½
,, Balance in hand March 31, 1896... ...	18	10	6
	£154	7	1

The item "other sources, £4. 9s.," represents the proceeds of school treats and interest from the bank. It will therefore be seen that the income of this "voluntary" school is entirely derived from the payments by the children and the Government, with the possible exception of some portion of a balance of £21. 17s. 8d. brought forward from the previous year. Whether any portion of this balance really represents subscriptions, I do not know; but it is clear from the accounts that there were no voluntary subscriptions of any kind towards the support of the school during the last educational year, and I am credibly informed that there are no regular annual subscribers of any kind. I am under the impression that a rateable proportion of the Government grant is forfeited when the voluntary subscriptions do not amount to a specific portion of the annual income. But how this rule is to be reconciled with the state of things shown by the above account, I fail to understand.

This particular school would seem to be a good example of the worst kind of voluntary school. By the trust deed the management is nominally in the hands of a committee of two-guinea subscribers, elected by the whole body of guinea subscribers. In point of fact, as there are no guinea subscribers, the committee elect themselves. From the above account, it would seem that none of the committee possesses the two-guinea qualification, and they have, therefore, no legal right to occupy their present positions. The school had last year ninety-eight children on the books, and an average attendance of seventy-seven, and an income of £140 is obviously inadequate to conduct it efficiently. A salary of £115 is divided between a master and a mistress, and these teachers have actually to provide out of that amount for coals, cleaning, and other incidental expenses. The school is under-staffed, inefficiently equipped with teaching apparatus, and the self-appointed committee, which consists chiefly of small farmers and tradesmen, have not the knowledge, nor probably the inclination, to remedy its shortcomings. They are perpetually quarrelling and dismissing their teachers, the master alone having been changed five times in about nine years. As might be expected, the Government Inspector's report is generally unsatisfactory, and though the teachers have to bear the blame for this, it is obviously no fault of theirs.

I do not suggest for one moment that this is in any sense a representative voluntary school; but I do say that there are scores of schools more or less like it all over the country; and the voluntary spirit which keeps such schools in existence is simply the desire of the ratepayers to save themselves the few pounds a year which they would have to pay for an efficient school, if a School Board were established. The sooner this form of voluntary school is exterminated the better it will be for the whole community.

It is to be feared that clergymen who have entered the Church through theological colleges are wretched scholars as a rule. The Bishops have lately found it necessary to insist on an entrance examination in general subjects

CARPET BEATING SEASON.—The Queen says: "A good place to send carpets to is the Compressed Air Carpet and Tapestry Cleaning Company, Brook Green, Hammersmith, W. Dust blown out. No beaters used." To prevent deception carpets cleaned by this process bear the Trade Mark on the back.

W. & F. THORN'S SPECIALITY.—Job Carriages.—This is by far the best and cheapest way to keep an establishment, saving all trouble, annoyance, and expense. Carriages kept like new for small annual payments.—19, Gt. Portland-street, W.; Ranelagh House, Lower Grosvenor-place, S.W. London only.

before admission to a theological college can be granted, and the results have been decidedly startling. The requirements are almost ridiculously elementary: a couple of books of Xenophon's "Anabasis," some quite easy Latin, two books of Euclid, and so forth. Nevertheless, it is stated that a large number of candidates for Orders are so grossly ignorant that they have been unable to get through this exceedingly easy ordeal.

Mr. Balfour has two Crown livings now at his disposal—Beverston, Gloucestershire, which is worth about £400 a year, with residence; and Maker, Cornwall, of which benefice the net value is £215 a year, with house.

A memorial has just been addressed to the Primus of the Scottish Episcopal Church, by certain Churchmen at Glasgow, impugning the propriety of the retention of the name of the Rev. A. C. Laughlin, as a member of the Foreign Mission Board of that Church. The objection is based on an incident alleged to have taken place when Mr. Laughlin held a charge at Ahmednugger, and it is suggested that the singling out of this cleric "for special honour in the above, as also in other ways, is a grave and increasing scandal amongst many members and friends of the Scottish Episcopal Church." Reference is probably made here to the fact of Mr. Laughlin having recently been given the charge of a Mission parish at Glasgow. Supposing that the allegation in the memorial is well-founded, it will be rather interesting to hear what the Primus has to say in reply. I should be the last to condemn a man for good and all on the strength of a single offence, or to deny him a chance of retrieving his reputation; but between giving him such a chance and "singling him out for special honour" there is a wide difference.

In common with those more immediately concerned, I am looking with considerable interest for the appointment of a new vicar of the parish of All Saints', Hatcham Park. This living is in the gift of the Haberdashers' Company, and among the candidates is a youthful cleric known to have influential relatives in that Company. There is an ample field for selection, one or two of the candidates being men who have been requested to allow their names to be sent in, and whose experience amply qualifies them for such a responsible post—the parish containing a population of 17,000, mostly poor. There are those who doubt the probability of the Haberdashers' Company acquitting itself satisfactorily of the trust vested in them. But we shall see.

The premature death of Archdeacon Favell is universally and deeply lamented at Sheffield, where he had passed his whole life, and he was beloved and esteemed by all classes and parties. Archdeacon Favell was a decided Low Churchman, but he was a wide-minded man, and displayed unfailing sympathy and tact in dealing with ecclesiastics and laymen of all schools of thought. It was justly regarded at Sheffield as a real scandal when the Simeon Trustees passed him over last year for the vicarage of Sheffield, in order to give it to a divine whose qualifications for the benefice could not be for a moment compared with his own. The Archbishop of York is understood to have shared the local sentiment on this subject, and he made such amends as was in his power for the reprehensible injustice of the patrons by giving Mr. Favell the Archdeaconry of Sheffield. The Archdeacon was a most zealous and successful parish clergyman an eloquent and interesting preacher, and an admirable public speaker. He refused three Colonial Bishopries.

The Church of England possesses a bright ornament and a notable Christian in the person of a reverend gentleman named Taylor, described as curate of St. John's, Stoneygate, Leicester. In view of the forthcoming Congregational Conference at that town, this cleric has warned his flock from the pulpit that for any of them to attend the meetings would constitute a heinous offence in the eyes of God and of the Established Church. The publication of this warning has brought to light other equally edifying pronouncements of the same gentleman upon "the sin of schism." Mr. Taylor is presumably a very young man, and it may be hoped that he will learn wisdom, not to say charity, as he advances in years. But a certain amount of responsibility for his indiscretions necessarily rests upon the Vicar who allows such a youth to bring discredit on the Church by his aberrations in the pulpit.

By the way, a striking commentary on the views of this Mr. Taylor, and other clerics of his kidney, is furnished by the fact that the service in the Presbyterian Church at Crathie was on Sunday last attended by the Queen, the temporal head of the Anglican Church, and the Czar of Russia, the head of the only Orthodox Church. Schism in excelsis!

Much surprise and regret have been expressed at Oxford in consequence of the announcement that Mr. Butler has resigned the vicarage of St. Mary, to which he was presented a few months ago by Oriel College, when Mr. Lang accepted the living of Portsea, in succession to the Bishop of Newcastle. The inconvenience of having the University church vacant at this period of the year is very great, and it may be hoped Hewetsons, Tottenham Court-road, London, send their Illustrated Catalogue post free, and it is acknowledged to be the best Furnishing Guide extant.

"Truth" will be sent weekly to any address in the United Kingdom for 7s. for 3 months; 14s. for 6 months; or 28s. for 12 months. The subscription for all Countries included in the Postal Union is, 3 months, 7s. 8d.; 6 months, 15s. 4d.; 12 months, £1 10s. 8d. All subscriptions are payable in advance, and cheques and P.O.O.'s should be made payable to the Manager, "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-street, S.W.

that a satisfactory appointment will shortly be arranged. St. Mary's is an historic church, but the value of the benefice is practically nothing.

The following amusing correspondence recently passed between a well-known London cleric and the vicar of a country parish. The London parson had been spending his holidays at a Vicarage in the West of England. Upon his return to town he received the first of these letters. After trusting that he would not be thought impertinent for writing in such a strain without having any sort of acquaintanceship with the gentleman he was addressing, the country cleric proceeded thus:—

> I was over at ——— the other day, and it happened in the course of conversation to be mentioned that the Rectory had been taken by Mr. ———; but that neither he nor any of his party had ever attended the parish church the whole time they were there; and that they played cricket and tennis most of the day. "The weaker brother," I suppose, might find Sunday cricket or tennis a rock of offence; but that, of course, is not my point. What I must confess did perplex me, was my friend's statement (made on the word of another) that you were never present at public worship during your stay at ———. I declared that I did not believe it, and that I would write to you and ask; because a wide-spread rumour of this kind is a really grievous stumbling-block to the work of the church in country districts. I am not a Puritan; scarcely, since I am a member of the E.C.A. Still, I must confess that to me, at all events, it would be a sin if I disobeyed the call to worship on the Lord's Day. . .
>
> I beg to remain, yours truly, ——

To this his London brother replied as follows:—

> My Dear Sir,—When I was a younger man I joined that most excellent of societies, the Anti-Poke-Your-Nose-into-Other-People's-Business-Association. I still belong to it; and I venture to recommend you, as well as your mendacious informant, to do the same.—Yours faithfully,
>
> ——.

It seems to me that in this instance the London cleric had the best of it.

A number of inquiries have been addressed to me during the last few weeks with reference to appeals that are being circulated on behalf of "St. Mary's Home, Broadstairs." As some of my correspondents have surmised, this Home is really one of the institutions conducted by the Kilburn Sisters, and was the scene of many of the occurrences some two years back which have brought such discredit upon the Sisterhood. There is nothing whatever in the appeals that are now being issued to indicate that the Home is in any way connected with the Sisterhood or the Church Extension Association; the circulars being simply dated from St. Mary's Home, Broadstairs, and signed "Eleanor Paget." This, it seems to me, is a piece of disingenuousness very much in keeping with many other proceedings of the Sisters on which I have already commented. An appeal of this kind is calculated to draw subscriptions from many people who certainly would not give if they knew that they were really sending their money to the Kilburn Sisters, and I cannot help thinking that this consideration has a good deal to do with the wholesale distribution of these particular circulars at the present juncture. At any rate, let the public clearly understand that St. Mary's Home, Broadstairs, stands on precisely the same footing as all the other homes and institutions conducted by the Kilburn Sisterhood.

Savoy Hotel, Savoy Restaurant, London. Large reception-rooms for fashionable réunions. Orchestra plays daily during dinner and opera supper.

Lord Wolseley certainly does not forget his friends and supporters, and there seems ground for hoping that before long every member of "the ring" will be provided with desirable employment. Sir Baker Russell having been appointed to the command of the Bengal Army, the command of the North-Western District at Chester has been given to Major-General Swaine, who was Lord Wolseley's Military Secretary during the Egyptian Campaign of 1882, and who is one of his most intimate friends. There are several highly-deserving officers whose claims for this post are far superior to those of Major-General Swaine, who is certainly a favourite of fortune, as for more than eleven years he was pleasantly employed as Military Attaché at Constantinople and afterwards at Berlin.

The recent article in Truth on the case of Major Acheson has furnished the Broad Arrow with another opportunity of exhibiting its peculiar journalistic methods. It will be remembered that in dealing with Major Acheson's case I was careful to offer no apology for that officer's conduct towards Lieutenant-Colonel Bridge at Aldershot, nor did I in any way condemn Lieutenant-Colonel Bridge for the course which he took in reporting the occurrence. The article was designed to show, as I stated at the outset, how, when Major Acheson had given offence by his indiscretion on this occasion, advantage was taken of an unfavourable confidential report, which had been lying unnoticed at the War Office for six months, to demand his retirement from the Service. On this point, the whole point of the article, the Broad Arrow has not a word to say. The writer confesses, with ingenuous simplicity, that he knows nothing about the confidential report, and has not troubled to inquire into it. On the further suggestion that the real ground of complaint against Major Acheson at headquarters was the suspicion (unfounded) that he had written certain letters to a Service journal (not the Broad Arrow), the Broad Arrow is equally silent. It simply takes up the cudgels against that officer on the strength of his conduct in the particular incident at Aldershot which immediately brought about his resignation.

In regard to this, the Broad Arrow bolsters up its case by asserting as "facts" that "Major Acheson openly stated that he had expressed an intention to insult Lieutenant-Colonel Bridge, and he kept his word." I now have Major Acheson's authority for giving the lie direct to this assertion. Major Acheson denies that he ever expressed his intention of insulting Lieutenant-Colonel Bridge. As I have already said, I have no desire to extenuate his conduct, or to offer any apology for it. He went to the A.S.C. Mess at Aldershot with a feeling of resentment against the Lieutenant-Colonel. In so doing he was extremely indiscreet, and in giving visible expression to his feelings he was guilty of inexcusable conduct. But at the worst it was not conduct to justify the compulsory removal from the Army of an officer who had served eighteen years without a stain upon his record; and that fact was recognised when the Commander-in-Chief fell back upon the confidential report as a ground for calling for Major Acheson's resignation.

The Sanitary Engineering Co. (Carter Bros.), 65, Victoria Westminster, for making Sanitary Surveys in London or co

The Broad Arrow drops sundry crocodile tears over Major Acheson's fate, and expresses extreme sorrow for him. It is a curious mode of expressing sympathy to blacken the character of a man, who has already been hardly used, by publishing downright lies about him. The Broad Arrow further affects reluctance to recur to the matter, and talks about having been forced to do so by the article in TRUTH. How forced? If the article in TRUTH imperatively called for an answer in the Broad Arrow, the points to be answered were—(1) The use of a stale confidential report which had no bearing upon the officer's character for the purpose of getting rid of him after the Bridge episode; and (2) the previous appeal to Major Acheson from the War Office to clear himself of the imputation of having expressed certain views in the Army and Navy Gazette. So far from having been forced to deliver its valuable remarks, the Broad Arrow seems to have gone out of its way to utter a slander, which, even if true, is no answer whatever to the TRUTH article.

I must congratulate the Broad Arrow, however, on one circumstance. In the same number which contains this reference to the Acheson case, I find that the same journal has been favoured with a letter from the Band of the Royal Dragoons in reference to a paragraph in TRUTH, and the contents of this document are paraded with great gusto. It is something so new to the Broad Arrow to pay the slightest attention to any communication received from the rank and file of the Army, that the Editor is quite right in making the most of his performance in this instance. Except for this, however, the value of his information from the Dragoons is somewhat discounted by the fact that it had been published in TRUTH three days previously. As I promised to do, I have made further inquiries into the statement originally furnished to me; and the result seems to show that it was either a practical joke at the bandmaster's expense, or the work of some enemy of that officer. I must therefore express my regret to the worthy bandmaster for any annoyance which may have been caused to him, and I hope that he will consider me innocent in the matter.

A story was told in TRUTH the other day of an officer, after gaining a commission from the ranks, being called upon to refund the gratuity of £5 which he had previously earned by a certain number of years' exemplary conduct. It turns out that there is nothing in any way unique in this example of official meanness; on the contrary, it seems to be simply the regular course of procedure, and several instances of the same thing having been done have since reached me. Whether prescribed by the Regulations or not, it is a monstrous thing that, when a man has earned a pecuniary reward by a certain period of good service, he should be called upon to refund the money because, by further good conduct, he has gained his promotion; and the thing is so manifestly unjustifiable, that I should hope that the first opportunity will be taken of amending the practice on the subject.

In response to my request for any instance of official meanness to beat the foregoing, the following case has been sent to me. In the last Afghan War a certain subaltern was severely wounded, and was awarded on the strength of his wound a gratuity of six months' English pay. The financial authorities, however, paid the sum in rupees, calculated at the exchange value of 2s. 0½d., the fact being that a rupee was worth at that time about 6d. less than that amount. The subaltern was, therefore, done out of something like £7 or £8 in English money. But this was not all. While he was lying wounded and helpless in hospital, his tent was struck by order of superior authority, and along with a number of others, was used to form a "traverse" as a protection against the enemy's fire. When the subaltern came out of hospital the "traverse" had been taken down, and his tent had disappeared beyond recovery. He applied for compensation through the proper channel, pointing out that, as he was lying wounded in hospital, it was impossible for him to look after his property; but the official reply was that the claim was inadmissible. These cases are not bad as examples of the manner in which the humbler grades of our warriors are treated by their superior officers; but I still think that the rule about the refunding of gratuities holds the record up to the present.

There is some grumbling at Spike Island, Cork Harbour, respecting the division of duty and extra pay between the three companies of Royal Artillery and the two companies of the Inniskillings, who at present form the garrison. The Artillery are 360 strong, but they only furnish three men daily for guards, while the infantry detachment of 130 have to furnish twelve. On the other hand, with two or three insignificant exceptions, all the berths carrying extra pay are occupied by N.C.O.s and men of the R.A. This does not seem a fair distribution of the kicks and halfpence of the garrison, and it might be well for the Commandant to see whether it cannot be altered.

In the course of some remarks on the Army Medical Department in TRUTH on September 10 it was stated that Surgeon-Major-General Taylor had recently inspected the establishment at Netley. Surgeon-Major-General Taylor now asks me to correct the statement, the fact being that he has not visited Netley since 1869.

REJECTED ADDRESS BY THE BRITISH DENTAL ASSOCIATION. Vital importance to Dental Licentiates, Parents, and the Public. Post free five stamps.—O'DUFFY, L.D.S., 54, Rutland-sq., Dublin.

SUFFERERS from all liver and gouty complaints, unable to visit the Spa, reap great benefit from taking the Carlsbad Waters or Sprüdel Salts (Löbel Schottländer, Carlsbad, on wrapper). Of all Chemists, and INGRAM & ROYLE, LTD., 52, Farringdon-street.

Buildings, Carteret-st. Queen Anne's-gate, S.W.

With reference to the case of Sergeant Roy, of the 4th Volunteer Battalion Scottish Rifles, I am asked by Colonel W. R. Maxwell to state that he resigned the command of the battalion in the November preceding the occurrence in question. I cheerfully acquit Colonel Maxwell of all part in this affair. But this in no way affects the merits of the case or the need of some official inquiry into the circumstances, and more particularly into the allegations that had been previously made by two N.C.O.s against the proceedings of the officer who was concerned in the incident.

The unmarried sergeants of the 1st Royal Scots Fusiliers have a little grievance in connection with their mess, which seems to deserve notice. While the majority of them were on furlough during August last, the mess account was allowed to get into debt to the extent of £2. 8s. How this happened while the numbers were so limited has not been explained; but at a recent mess meeting, when the matter was under consideration, it was decided to defray the debt out of a separate private fund to which all the sergeants, single as well as married, subscribe equally. It is certainly rough on the men who were absent at the time when the debt was incurred that it should have to be defrayed, either directly or indirectly, at their expense.

There seems to be a gallant non-commissioned officer now in the garrison at Barbados who is a sort of military counterpart of the "Lord High Everything Else" in Gilbert's "Mikado." This martial Pooh-Bah, who ranks as a staff quartermaster-sergeant in the Staff Clerk Section, Army Service Corps, is the senior clerk in the office of the Deputy-Adjutant-General. He next fills the office of acting garrison-sergeant-major. He is librarian of the garrison library. He holds some post connected with the Officers' Games Club; and, finally, he is a chorister in the Garrison Church choir. The last duty is, I take it, an honorary one; but I suppose that some sort of emolument attaches to all the others, and a combination of all these offices in a single individual looks somewhat unfair to the rest of the garrison, while it is not quite clear how the tenure of the post of garrison-sergeant-major by this particular N.C.O. is to be reconciled with the Regulations.

Mention was made in TRUTH about three weeks ago, of the report of a court-martial on Colour-Sergeant Young, of the West Yorkshire Regiment. This man was tried at York on a variety of charges, and was acquitted on all of them except one relating to a trumpery discrepancy of half-a-crown in his accounts, as to which the evidence seems to have been very inconclusive. Notwithstanding this, he was sentenced to be reduced to the rank of sergeant—the mildest punishment that could be imposed by the Court after having convicted him. The subsequent history of this case is instructive. As though in a spirit of vindictiveness at the failure of the charges levelled against Young, the sentence of the Court was followed by his being ordered to join the Home battalion of his regiment at Dover, at twenty-four hours' notice. On his arrival at Dover, the Adjutant took the earliest opportunity of giving him a hint that if he could not behave himself better there than at York, he had better clear out; and as the man, from his experience of the Army, knew that the hint boded no good to him, he decided to apply for his discharge, and has now left the Service. Young had served fifteen years, and for twelve of them as sergeant, during the whole of which time he had only two entries against him; but he returns to civil life with a qualified character of "Good," and the country loses a good soldier and an experienced N.C.O. I should like to know for what? Apparently for an open question about half-a-crown in a matter of account.

In regard to the foregoing case, it was pointed out to me the other day by an officer, that in the case of the conviction of an N.C.O. by court-martial, reduction is the mildest punishment which the court could impose; and that having felt it necessary to convict on the question of the half-crown, the court had no alternative but to reduce him; the fault, therefore, lies, not with the court, but with the officer who ordered him before a court-martial on insufficient grounds. So be it. I have no desire to lay the blame anywhere but in the right quarter; but whatever blame attaches to the officer who first sent the man up for court-martial must now be shared by the other officer who gave the hint which led to his discharge.

The following case is a good illustration of one of the hardships connected with the present system of competitive examinations. A boy fresh from school, the son of an old Army officer, and destined for a commission in the Marines, went up a couple of years ago to see what he could do, and qualified in all subjects, although his marks were not high. He did the arithmetic paper with great ease, and came to the conclusion that he would have no further difficulty with the subject. He then went to a crammer for a year, and had a further shot, with the result that he added over two thousand marks to his former total, but somehow or other he failed this time to qualify in arithmetic. After another six months he went up for his last attempt, and, to the astonishment of his tutor and every one else, was again disqualified in arithmetic. There seems good reason to believe that this misfortune was due either to excessive nervousness or unusual bad luck; and under the old system of a preliminary examination it could not have happened. Surely under circumstances like these, where a boy has already qualified once in a subject, and at subsequent examinations has obtained a high aggregate of marks in others, he might be provisionally passed on condition that he qualifies in his weak subject within a given time.

The last Woolwich examination afforded a fresh example of the injustice caused by holding the medical examination of cadets subsequently to the educational. A cadet, the son of a well-known Indian officer, after having seen his name announced among the successful candidates, and having enjoyed his triumph for three weeks, was disqualified at the medical examination on the ground of defective eyesight. I cannot express the hardship occasioned by such treatment better than in the language of the lad's father:—

SCOTT ADIE, 115, Regent-st., London, for Shooting Suits, Golf Suits, Travelling Coats, Inverness Capes, Carriage Rugs, Shawls, Mauds, hand-knit Hose, Scotch Cheviots, and Harris Homespuns.

> The present system is the most refined cruelty. At fifty we are inured to disappointment—not so at seventeen. And to publish a young lad's success far and wide, to allow him for three weeks to enjoy all that it brings, and then to snatch the prize from him, is a form of torture only justifiable by necessity. Where is the necessity?

Necessity there certainly is none; but there may be two reasons for the present system. One of them is that it saves a certain amount of trouble to the Medical Staff to examine only candidates who have passed their educational examination, instead of having to examine the whole body of candidates before the examination is held. This reason is an altogether insufficient one, and merely means that the Government sacrifices fairness and justice for the sake of a trumpery saving in expense.

The other reason is that the present system lends itself to the process of knocking out successful candidates after they have passed their examination, in order to make room for men who have failed to pass, but who have influence of one kind or another behind them. I am far from saying that the present arrangements were adopted in order to facilitate this iniquity; but there is a widespread suspicion that advantage is taken of the system for such iniquitous purposes, and cases have already been cited in TRUTH which lend colour to such suspicion. If Army examinations are to be above suspicion, no arrangement of examinations ought to be tolerated which is even capable of being abused for purposes of this kind.

As regards the question of eyesight, it strikes me that in nine cases out of ten it is most flimsy and insufficient ground for rejecting any candidate who has proved his fitness in other respects. The fact of a man having to wear glasses is no bar to his usefulness in any ordinary sphere of life, and, as long as a man can see with or without glasses well enough for ordinary purposes, I fail to see why he should not be considered fit to hold a commission in the Army. There is no necessity for officers to be first-rate marksmen, and even if there were, first-rate marksmanship is not incompatible with the wearing of glasses. The German army would be in a pretty state if it were suddenly deprived of the services of all its officers whose eyesight is at present defective; and what is good enough for the German army ought certainly to be good enough for the British.

Many of my readers doubtless saw accounts in the papers of the excellent work done by the Sussex armoured train under Colonel Boxall during the late manœuvres in the South-Eastern District. This train had its origin two or three years ago, as noticed in TRUTH at the time, in the experimental mounting of a gun upon a railway truck, for use upon the South Coast line; and the success of the experiment amply justifies the anticipation formed of its usefulness. I suppose there is no doubt that railways are likely to play a more and more important part in modern warfare, and as the military authorities have cordially acknowledged the success of Colonel Boxall's train, it is to be hoped that they will now give more attention than they have hitherto done to the organisation of this form of fighting machinery. It ought not to be left to the Volunteers to give the lead to the Regular Army in a matter of this kind.

A very practical step towards improving the lot of the veterans of the Crimea and Indian Mutiny has lately been taken at Bristol, by the formation of an Association which is intended to form a rallying-point for the old men, to provide them with a meeting place, to back and forward any claims they may have upon the Government, to give them financial and other assistance when practical, and to look after their widows and orphans when their time here is up. There ought to be many well-wishers of the Army who will be ready to give this Association the support it requires, and I should hope that its activity will not be confined to Bristol.

I would respectfully call the attention of the gallant officer commanding the 2nd Battalion Scots Guards to the following matter. In the battalion in question there is a certain corporal who has for some time past been engaged in organising "watch clubs" on behalf of a firm in the North. The "club" consists of twenty-five men, who each pay a shilling a week. Every week a watch is (or should be) allotted, until the whole twenty-five have had one. The objections to the system when worked in this way are obvious, and have been frequently pointed out. A man who undertakes an agency of this kind among his subordinates is under a direct inducement to abuse the authority entrusted to him, and even if he is ever so scrupulous in refraining from putting undue pressure upon his comrades, the men themselves are sure to feel that it may be more prudent on their part to patronise their superior's business undertaking than to incur his displeasure by holding aloof.

Moreover, not only is the thing bad in principle, but in the case of the 2nd Scots Guards, it appears to have been working exceptionally badly in practice; for I understand that the proper number of watches has not been forthcoming, and that the men have been unable to obtain either their watches or a refund of their money, while they are afraid to incur the corporal's displeasure by making any complaint on the subject. The system is so bad all round that I feel confident that, on attention being called to it, it will at once be stopped.

In reference to my repeated comments on the incessant recurrence of enteric fever among the troops at Dublin, I have at last received, from an official source, a communication which is of some interest. It is pointed out to me that there were, in the first week in September, 102 cases of enteric fever under treatment in civil hospitals in Payable to Reginald B. Booker, "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-st. Queen Anne's-gate, S.W.

Dublin, and it is suggested that there are probably an equal number of cases under treatment in private houses. As at the same time, there were only two cases under treatment in military hospitals, among a garrison nearly 4,000 strong, the argument is that the barracks are no worse than the rest of the city. Before accepting this conclusion, it will be necessary to know whether there are always about a couple of hundred people down with enteric fever in Dublin at any given moment. Even if the town is really such a hotbed of disease, the question still remains how it is that the innumerable Boards that have been engaged almost every week for months past in inquiring into outbreaks in the barracks have not discovered the source of the infection, and supplied the military authorities with some means of dealing with it.

The other day a draft of recruits from the Depot joined the Buffs at Kilkenny. A few hours after their arrival a corporal came into the barrack-room with his coat off and asked one of them a question. The recruit answered "No," instead of "No, corporal," as the etiquette of the Service requires; whereupon he was marched off to the guard-room by the corporal (although, by the way, there was a sergeant in the room at the time), and was eventually awarded six days' C.B. for his "crime." An encouraging sort of experience for a boy just starting his soldiering! I suppose there lurks in some cloudy official minds an idea that loyal and obedient soldiers are to be manufactured by such a process, but it is a curious delusion for a rational being to entertain.

I am somewhat surprised to find that the Southsea Regatta Committee have taken no official notice of the statement which Mr. G. C. Vertue has published with regard to the recent race for the Queen's Challenge Cup for naval and private training ships. Mr. Vertue asserted, in effect, that the conditions of the race were this year so altered and arranged as to give the crew from H.M.S. St. Vincent an unfair advantage over the crew from the training ship Mercury; and, as I pointed out a fortnight ago, the charge is one which the authorities of the Regatta ought not to pass over in silence. If Mr. Vertue's statement remains unanswered, the public will be sure to infer that this is because it is unanswerable.

Some time ago attention was called in TRUTH to the fact that enterprising tradesmen at certain dockyard towns were able to obtain information of promotions before they had been officially announced, and to make use of this information for business purposes. The publication of this fact caused this leakage to be stopped, but apparently only for a time, for I hear from Devonport that the same thing has recently been occurring there. Petty officers at that port have lately had the news of their promotion to warrant rank conveyed to them by tradesmen several days before even the Commander-in-Chief at the port knew anything of the fact; and, as might be expected, a tradesman who comes with information of this kind to solicit an order for an outfit generally succeeds in effecting his purpose. There is reason to believe that the information is transmitted from London by telegraph, and the Admiralty ought to be able to discover the channel through which it flows. It is to be hoped that the matter will be thoroughly inquired into, for if information of this kind is sold—and, of course, it is sold—for one purpose, it may be for another.

The merciless severity of naval courts-martial received a further illustration the other day in the trial of a private in the Marines, named Burke, on a charge of striking a superior officer. The offence was not denied, but Burke pleaded in mitigation of punishment a set of extenuating circumstances, which it is inconceivable how any body of men nominally acting as a court of justice could refuse to take into consideration. The superior officer who had been assaulted was a Sergeant Hagan, and the prisoner detailed a long list of instances of the system of bullying and provocation to which the men under this sergeant had been exposed. On July 12 the sergeant had struck Burke, and Burke had returned the blow; the two men were separated by the bystanders, and the incident ended there. On August 3 prisoner asked Hagan to take him on the quarter-deck. Hagan refused and struck him (Burke) in the mouth. He subsequently apologised for this and requested Burke to let the matter drop, which Burke did. On August 28, Burke asserts, Hagan struck and knocked down a private in his (Burke's) presence. On the same day Burke returned to his ship from shore somewhat under the influence of drink. Hagan reported the circumstance, and, after being seen by the First Lieutenant and Doctor, Burke was sent below. The result of this was that Burke lost the leave for which he had previously applied, and on the way below with Hagan he gave vent to his resentment by striking the sergeant.

Now, two points are perfectly clear about this case: (1) that at the time of his offence Burke was excited with drink; (2) that he and the sergeant had frequently exchanged blows before, and that the sergeant had in previous cases given the provocation to such treatment. Burke put the case very forcibly in his defence:—

> I give these instances of the treatment to which we have been subjected not as an excuse for my offence, but beg to urge upon the Court that, having been accustomed to play roughly with the sergeant and receive rough treatment from him, I did not on the day in question sufficiently weigh the effects of my action. . . . I would beg the Court to consider that I did this not of any malice at all, but in a sudden fit of temper, hardly knowing what I did, but being greatly aggravated by the stoppage of my leave by a man who had treated me, and allowed me to treat him, with great freedom.

No impartial spectator will question that whatever the prisoner's offence, the chief blame for it lay with the sergeant, who had shown himself so entirely unfit for his position; or that the case was eminently one for imposing a mitigated penalty. The Court saw nothing of the kind,

---

MORTLOCK'S China and Glass Business, Oxford-st., has entered its 150th year, being founded by John Mortlock in 1746. It is carried on by John George Mortlock, the great-great grandson of the founder, who solicits patronage and recommendation.

but sentenced Burke to eighteen months' hard labour, and dismissal from the Service—a punishment commensurate only with the most aggravated and inexcusable offence. The merciless and undiscriminating nature of this sentence is conclusively proved by the fact that a few days later a stoker of H.M.S. Argus, charged with the precisely similar offence of striking the officer of the watch, was sentenced —but not by a court-martial—to forty-two days' hard labour only. It is time that some strong means were adopted of teaching naval courts-martial the necessity of exercising some modicum at least of intelligence and justice in meting out their sentences, which at present throw into the shade the worst doings of Army courts, and the stupidest performances of the unpaid magistracy. In the present instance this might be well done by remitting some substantial portion of Burke's punishment.

A very painful sensation has been caused at Southampton by the death of a gentleman named D'Elboux, who has been for forty-four years in the local office of the Ordnance Survey as an engraver. Mr. D'Elboux is said to have been an engraver of exceptional industry and skill, and one of the last acts of the late director, Sir Charles Wilson, was to specially recommend him, with others, to the Board of Agriculture for an increase of pay on account of the excellence of his work. Of late years, owing to some failure of his eyesight, he has been unable to work so rapidly as of old, and in consequence of this he recently received notice from those in authority over him that unless the quantity of his work was greatly increased he would be subjected to a reduction of pay, and his pension would be in danger. The intimation preyed upon his mind, and is alleged to have been the cause of brain complications, from which he died. This, at least, is certain, that he died at the age of fifty-six, having never been absent from his work for a day from any sort of illness previously to his fatal attack. Mr. D'Elboux seems to have been vilely treated, and there ought to be some further inquiry as to where the responsibility for his treatment rests. I understand that not long since the engravers in a body presented some sort of memorial to the Director-General respecting their treatment, and it is not unlikely that proper inquiry will show that Mr. D'Elboux was simply the victim of a confirmed system of sweating.

Consternation and disgust have been excited throughout the Consular Service by the reported intention of bestowing the Consul-Generalship at Havre—one of the best posts in the Service—upon a gentleman from the Foreign Office who is a total stranger to the Consular Service, having been employed in the Librarian and Treaty Departments. Such an appointment would be a rank injustice to the Consular Service, in which the number of well-paid appointments is extremely limited, while the work in nearly every case is most arduous and responsible. The majority of the British Consuls abroad deserve very well of their country, and are of the greatest service to British merchants, and to Britons sojourning beyond the seas; and it will be a grievous wrong to all of them if one of the best-paid posts should be bestowed on an outsider with no claims of any kind to such a reward.

With reference to the recent complaint of an English firm that after writing to the United States War Department and forwarding English stamps for reply, they twice received answers in unstamped envelopes and had to pay for them at this end, one of my American correspondents points out that the omission may be excusable, because official communications in the United States are posted in office envelopes, which are always carried free without stamp of any kind. In posting such an envelope the clerk might either not notice the address, or overlook the fact that United States postal regulations do not apply abroad. If I remember rightly, the communication came in one of these official envelopes, so the excuse may reasonably be accepted. But apropos of this matter, I should very much like to know why on earth the various States of the Postal Union should not recognise one another's stamps in the country of posting as well as in that of delivering. Even if they have any good ground for declining to do this, why should they not exchange at their post-offices foreign stamps for local stamps of corresponding value? Or, failing that, why should not a Postal Union stamp be devised which would pass current in all States of the Union?

In spite of all the protests, censures, and mandates of the Local Government Board, the Helmsley Rural District Council still pursues the even tenour of its way, neglecting, deferring, or trifling with the performance of its duties as a Sanitary Authority in the manner I have so often described. It is now many months since a new drainage scheme for the town was adopted; but during all this time the only work done to carry it out has been in connection with the settling tanks and filter-bed on the river bank. The borough beck and the old drains and sewers remain in the shocking condition in which they were a year ago, when a serious epidemic occurred. The result, as might have been expected, is that typhoid fever has reappeared in the town, and at the last meeting the Medical Officer urged the Council to hurry on with the new drainage. But the Council is not the body to hurry on account of an outbreak of typhoid; and so it was merely agreed that the matter should stand over, "as the new scheme, when completed, would provide for all complaints." How long it will be before the scheme is completed seems to be regarded as quite immaterial.

Two other striking illustrations of the methods of this remarkable Council were given at the same meeting. Owing, apparently, to the objections of the Chairman (Lord Feversham), there is no licensed common lodging-house in Helmsley, and the nearest place of the kind is in a village four miles away. This establishment is merely a cottage containing two bedrooms and one living room, and the attention of the Council was directed to its dirty state and to the gross overcrowding which goes on, there being six permanent inmates, and at times as many as eighteen lodgers. The Council, however, find themselves unable to interfere, because they have omitted to exercise their statutory power of making by-laws for such houses. The other question was in reference to the salary of the Inspector of Nuisances. This officer's duties extend over a wide area of scattered villages, some of them sixteen miles or more from Helmsley; and he is at present paid £20 a year. Recognising that if such work is to be efficiently done it must be properly paid for, the Local Government Board have peremptorily called upon the Council to increase the salary (half of which is returned by Government). But the Council, after rejecting even a proposed increase of £5, have replied that they will consider the matter next year.

Buildings, Carteret-st. Queen Anne's-gate, S.W.

The point that most surprises me in these scandalous proceedings is the impotence of the Local Government Board in dealing with this obstinate and dunder-headed local authority. Time after time the Board has allowed itself to be hoodwinked or defied by the Helmsley Council; yet it still persists in sending admonitory letters, which are just as persistently disregarded. If the authorities at Whitehall have no effective means of compelling the fulfilment of their requirements, they would better consult their own dignity by giving up all attempts to reason with such hopeless subjects as the Helmsley Bumbles.

There are great complaints about the drainage at Ascot. Early in the spring a largely-signed memorial was presented to the Rural District Council asking that adequate steps might be taken to place the drainage of the neighbourhood in a satisfactory condition. The District Council (in accordance with the usual custom of such bodies) has so far taken no notice of this most reasonable request. It is stated that many residents dispose of the sewage by placing it on their gardens, and the result of this practice has been to cause a nauseous and most unhealthy smell, particularly in wet weather. Unless these matters are speedily and thoroughly reformed, Ascot will probably be visited by an epidemic of typhoid fever and analogous maladies.

I stated several weeks ago that Mr. John Skelton will shortly resign the office of Chairman of the Local Government Board for Scotland, which is worth £1,200 a year, and that he is to be succeeded by Mr. Anstruther, M.P. for St. Andrews Burghs. The proposed arrangement has excited a ferment among the Scotch Tories, who have protested vigorously against this desirable appointment being handed over to any Liberal Unionist, Mr. Skelton himself being a Tory, and it being consequently thought that the post ought to go to a member of that Party. It had been privately proposed, by way of a compromise, that the seat to be vacated by Mr. Anstruther should be offered to Mr. Gilmour, of Montrose, who is very popular in Fifeshire, and who has three times contested the Eastern Division of the county against Mr. Asquith. The rebellious Tories had sullenly acquiesced in this arrangement, but the Unionists, whose rapacity is really insatiable, insist upon getting both the place and the reversion of the vacant seat, and Sir Ralph Anstruther, brother of the sitting member, is to be their candidate. The Government Whips are now endeavouring to induce both these aspirants to withdraw, in order that the Solicitor-General for Scotland (Mr. C. S. Dickson) may stand for St. Andrews. The seat is not a "safe" one, for last year Mr. Anstruther's majority was under 200.

The inhabitants of London have, I think, but slight knowledge of the danger to which they are exposed by the inadequacy of the available public accommodation in the shape of infectious diseases hospitals. Although the fact has not, so far as I am aware, been noticed in the Press, the whole of the fever accommodation of the Metropolitan Asylums Board is at the present moment occupied, and in many districts fever cases are waiting their turn for admission to the Board's hospitals, and are in the meantime exposing the community to a constant danger of infection. I have this fact from a friend, one of whose servants suddenly developed scarlet fever a fortnight ago, and who found it absolutely impossible to get the patient removed from his house by the Asylums Board. Only after a lapse of a few days was a vacancy secured at the London Fever Hospital, and had the unfortunate householder been dependent upon the Asylums Board, the case would have had to be nursed to the end in his house. Although scarlet fever is very rife in London at the present moment, it cannot be said to have attained the proportions of a serious epidemic. Yet if our available hospital accommodation is exhausted under the present circumstances, what sort of position should we be in if confronted with some calamity such as a general outbreak of small-pox or cholera? The Metropolitan Asylums Board has money enough at its disposal, one would think. Does it want more, or is the present state of things merely a proof of the inefficient way in which it spends the money it has?

At a recent meeting of the Governors of an Irish Asylum, attention was drawn to the fact that the present head nurse, though she also fills the office of matron, and has admittedly saved hundreds of pounds by her skilful management, is actually being paid for the double duties less than half the salary which the former matron received. The lady superintendent of a hospital at Dublin tells me that this is by no means an exceptional case. It is now the custom, she says, for asylum authorities to engage only those women who have qualified for such appointments by training in general nursing, which means years of hard work, and it is equally the custom to offer these officers about half the remuneration their untrained predecessors received. Considering the laborious and responsible character of the duties, the pay appears to be, as a rule, very inadequate, and the authorities show a very mean and misguided passion for economy in expecting efficient and experienced servants to be content with such terms.

The agitation at Dudley with regard to overcrowded and unsanitary dwellings has at last compelled the Town Council to move in the matter. I cannot, however, congratulate them upon the first step they propose to take towards dealing with the frightful state of affairs in the slums of the town, which I described two or three months ago. The intention seems to be to spend, as a beginning, about £8,000 in buying up and demolishing the worst of the slum properties; but nothing is to be spent in erecting new workmen's dwellings. The natural result of this policy will be, of course, to gratuitously increase the value of the houses which remain, as well as to make the overcrowding more serious than before. It is, moreover, open to the objection that the selection and purchase of such properties will afford a most undesirable opening for municipal jobbery. A far better plan would surely be for the Council to spend the money in building houses of the class required, and at the same time to rigorously enforce the law for the purpose of closing all the existing rookeries which are unfit—as many of them are—for human habitation. The idea that municipal funds should be used solely to purchase these places is a preposterous absurdity, and the ratepayers of Dudley must be long-suffering indeed if they allow such a scheme to be carried out.

WATER SUPPLY FOR MANSIONS, &c.—Artesian Bored and Driven Tube Wells, Wind Engines for pumping, &c.—State your requirements to ALFRED WILLIAMS & Co., 39, Gt. Eastern-st., London, E.C.

My reference in an article the other week to the condition of the water in the Marine Lake at Southport, has brought me several denials, but, with two exceptions, the letters are anonymous. To the latter I pay no attention, and with all respect to the writers of the others, I feel bound to say that at present I see no sufficient reason for doubting the statement which I published, and which emanated from a resident in the town, who is probably quite as deeply interested in its prosperity as any of my correspondents. If, however, the Corporation think fit to say anything on the matter, I shall, of course, be glad to give their views due consideration and publicity.

In an unguarded moment the Enniscorthy Town Commissioners some time ago decided to enforce the law with regard to street obstructions. A beginning was made by summoning some cart-owners for leaving their vehicles in the road, and the police were lately invited to report any other cases of obstruction to the clerk for prosecution. The police have accordingly just reported a number of shopkeepers and other persons for obstruction by placing their goods in the street, and among the principal offenders who were named were several of the Town Commissioners. This commendable impartiality of the police was more than the Commissioners had bargained for, and a private meeting was held to consider the situation. The members who had been reported are said to have threatened to resign if a majority of their colleagues authorised the clerk to prosecute them, and the matter was finally postponed for further consideration. No doubt the Commissioners have put themselves in an unpleasant predicament by making a rod for their own backs, but it will tax their ingenuity to evade the application of this rod without appearing to be guided by their own personal interests rather than those of the public.

The Solicitors' Benevolent Association furnishes one among many examples of that abuse of charitable funds which arises from the undue capitalisation of revenue. This Association, which annually holds a festival for the purpose of raising cash, and never fails to represent itself as greatly hampered in its work by lack of sufficient income to meet the calls upon it, is really accumulating year by year a considerable amount of surplus revenue, and possesses at the present moment invested capital to the amount of something like £50,000. The rate at which this accumulation grows may be seen from the fact that in the 1892 report the capital of the Association was stated to be £41,547, while in the report for 1894 the amount had grown to £45,250. At the last festival dinner it was officially announced that "in many cases where they gave relief the Directors would have gladly increased the amount, and would have been delighted to have relieved more fully, had they the funds." Such a statement is totally unjustifiable when vast accumulations of revenue lie at the disposal of the Directors, and every year shows an income exceeding the expenditure by thousands of pounds. This matter has been brought under my notice by a solicitor, who complains of the inadequate assistance given by the Association in cases of need; and as long as funds are being accumulated in this way those who suffer from the curtailment of the benefits of the Association have the most legitimate grounds for complaint.

As I have pointed out in connection with other benefit and relief funds, this system of capitalising revenue is unfair to subscribers as well as to beneficiaries. Take the case of a prosperous solicitor who, having made a fortune in the profession, leaves a bequest of a few thousand pounds for the benefit of men who have not been so fortunate as himself. The men whom he desires to benefit are presumably those of his own time and standing, among whom he has worked, and whom he knows, or who have known him. He is not thinking of generations of solicitors yet unborn. Neither, I take it, is it his intention—it certainly would not be mine—to benefit his distressed fellow-professional men to the mere amount of the 2½ or 3 per cent. per annum which can be obtained by the investment of the money. If it were, he could effect his purpose better by keeping the capital under the control of his trustees, and settling a certain sum per annum to be applied for the relief of necessitous solicitors for a certain number of years. It may be desirable for a permanent Benefit Fund of this kind to keep a certain reserve in hand in case of emergency, but the general principle on which it is administered ought to be that the whole amount subscribed from year to year is expended upon the objects for which it is given.

There seems to be more reason for impressing this consideration upon the Directors of the Solicitors' Benevolent Association, inasmuch as a resolution was actually passed at a general meeting, so far back as 1885, laying down that "having regard to the large accumulated funds belonging to the Society . . . . relief should be given on a more extensive scale than heretofore," and authorising the Directors "to expend the whole income of the Society from every source in

If you want to entirely Furnish your House or select any article of Furniture or Carpet, &c., send for HEWETSONS' Illustrated Priced Catalogue.—HEWETSONS, Tottenham Court-road, London.

Buildings, Carteret-st. Queen Anne's-gate, S.W.

the relief of necessitous cases." How this resolution is to be reconciled with the great accumulation of funds that has taken place since 1885, only the Directors can say.

The latest development of the Constantinople Consulate scandal is that a special judge has been appointed by the Foreign Office to try Mr. Henry Silley's action against Judge Tarring, and that a similar course has been taken in regard to the action of the Constantinople Building Society against Vice-Consul Sarrell. So far as they go, these are steps in the right direction, and it is to be hoped that they will conduce to the ends of justice. But in the present state of things at Constantinople, what may happen to anybody a few weeks hence is a matter of pleasing uncertainty.

Respectability seems to cover a considerable amount of brutality at Halstead. At the Petty Sessions last week, Harry Bunny was charged with assaulting his wife. Owing to his violence, she had obtained a summons against him and left his house; but he fetched her by force from the neighbour's, where she had gone for protection, and when he got her home again he proceeded to knock her down, beat her with his fists in the face and chest, and kick her in the stomach, notwithstanding the fact that she was enceinte. In the face of evidence to this effect, the magistrates suggested that the prisoner and his wife should see whether they could not live happily and comfortably together; remarking that, "as he was a respectable man, they were anxious not to ruin his character and prospects by sending him to prison, which would have been the proper sentence." It is highly desirable that magistrates should give due weight to an offender's previous good character, but it seems to me that they have given a good deal more than due weight in this particular instance. I wonder, too, whether they would have been so anxious not to injure his prospects, if instead of being guilty of a most ruffianly attack on his unfortunate wife the defendant had committed some petty larceny, or indulged in a little poaching.

Is it customary for County Court officers to be provided with handcuffs? There was a case at Manchester Police-court on Friday in which it appeared that a man named Donohue had falsely represented himself to a gentleman as a detective, and in support of his assertion had produced a pair of handcuffs from his pocket. The handcuffs bore the mark of the County Court, and the defendant explained to the Court that they were in his possession "in his capacity of County Court officer." Mr. R. A. Armitage, the Chairman of the Bench, expressed surprise that such an official as the accused should be in possession of handcuffs, and said that nobody outside the police force should be allowed to carry them. It is certainly difficult to believe that there is any necessity for equipping County Court officers with such things, and I hope his Worship's remarks will receive the attention of the authorities of the Manchester Court.

The choicest example of Justices' justice recorded in my Legal Pillory this week is that from the Southampton County Police-court. A tired and tottering old man takes the liberty of going to sleep under a hedge by the roadside. There he is discovered by a vigilant constable, and being absolutely destitute, he is locked up, brought before Mr. H. G. Willmer on the charge of wandering abroad and lodging in the open air, having no visible means of subsistence, and sentenced by that muddy-minded magistrate to seven days' imprisonment. To Shallows of the Willmer type few crimes are so heinous as that of being old, homeless, and penniless. I regret to have to pillory the learned stipendiary at Bradford with the Great Unpaid. When, however, a man is convicted of a piece of wanton cruelty which in the opinion of the magistrate himself would be most suitably punished by "a sound flogging" it seems a weak and impotent proceeding to let him off with a pecuniary penalty. The flogging of course could not be inflicted, but the brute might at any rate have been sent to gaol for a week or two. As to the rest of the list, I would particularly ask my readers to note the nice discrimination which the Paisley Bailies show in fitting the fine to the offence in cases of wife-beating. Thus if a husband only uses his fists and a poker he escapes with the payment of 10s. 6d.; but if he brings his feet as well as his fists and a leather belt into play he has to pay as much as 15s. The fists alone can doubtless be employed on a wife for 5s. or so:—

Wokingham Borough Police-court. Before Messrs. E. J. Gould, E. T. Phillips, and S. A. Hankey. George Joel Giles, a "general dealer," charged with assaulting his wife. He went home the worse for drink, knocked his wife down, knelt upon her, and beat her with his fists. The woman's face was very much bruised. Fined 10s. and costs and bound over.

Grimsby Borough Police-court. Before Messrs. S. Oates, E. Bannister, E. L. Read, A. Connell, and W. Jackson. Charles Debnam, a well-known local boxer, and Gertrude Debnam, charged with assaulting Annie Genney. Complainant was attacked and ill-treated by defendants in the street, the man holding her while the female defendant struck her. Finally, the male defendant knocked Genney down, rendering her insensible. Fined 17s. 6d. each.

Darlington Borough Police-court. Before Messrs. J. H. Bowman, C. G. Hoskins, E. T. Pease, and W. Hobson. Wm. Hymer, convicted of assaulting Annie Flood. He threw her out of his house into the street, and then picked her up and threw her forcibly to the ground again. Fined 20s.

Paisley Police-court. Before Bailie Fisher. Joseph Haincy, charged with assaulting his wife by beating her with his fists and striking her with a poker. Fined 10s. 6d.

The same Court. Before Bailie Goudie. Robert Graham pleaded guilty to a charge of assaulting his wife by striking her repeatedly with his fists and with a leather belt, and kicking her on various parts of the body. Fined 15s.

Plympton Petty Sessions. Before Messrs. A. T. Mudge and C. E. Bewes. Henry Richards, a young seaman, charged with stealing a quantity of apples from an orchard. The prosecutor said he had no desire to press the charge, but he wished to check the pilfering of fruit. Fourteen days.

Grimsby Borough Police-court. Before the Mayor, Messrs. T. Charlton, W. Jackson, W. B. Louth, C. Morton, E. Bannister, and S. Oates. John Smith, fishing apprentice from the Stockport Union, charged with disobedience by neglecting to go to sea. One month.

Faringdon Petty Sessions. Before Colonel Edwards and Mr. G. Liddiard. William Warner and George Brown, charged with trespassing in search of rabbits. Brown fined £1. 7s. 6d.; Warner, £2. 10s. 6d.

Crediton Petty Sessions. Before Messrs. A. Davie, L. D. Montague, A. Gamlin, H. Elston, and C. Ireland. James Vinnicombe, charged with trespassing in search of game. Fined £2. 2s. and costs.

Sturminster Newton Police-court. Before Mr. H. S. Bower and General Sir W. Parke. Edward Moore, charged with wandering abroad and being without visible means of subsistence. One month.

Bradford Police-court. Before the Stipendiary and other magistrates. William Thompson, coal hawker, and Fred. Ellis, greengrocer, charged with cruelty to a mare. Because the animal, which was aged and in poor condition, was unable to draw a heavily-laden cart up a steep hill, Thompson unmercifully thrashed her with a whipstock. Ellis also joined in thrashing the mare, and afterwards actually thrust the whipstock about eight inches up the animal's nose, causing it to bleed profusely. The Stipendiary said he deserved a sound flogging for his brutal conduct. Ellis was fined £4 and costs; Thompson, 10s. and costs.

Rochester Borough Police-court. Before Messrs. G. Booth, V. Hills, J. Shaw, and Colonel Cooper. William Kitchen, dealer, charged with cruelty to two sheep. He bought the animals for 6s. each, and left them in a pen at the market without food or water for thirty-four hours. The superintendent of police said defendant constantly neglected the animals he purchased. Fined 4s. and 11s. 6d. costs.

West Bromwich Police-court. William Grice, convicted of assaulting Elizabeth Goodby. He beat her in a brutal manner, blackening her eye, and also kicking her while she was on the ground. Fined £2. 14s., including costs.

Southampton County Police-court. Before Mr. H. G. Willmer. George Richardson, described as an aged and decrepid man, charged with sleeping out and being without visible means of subsistence. A policeman found him asleep under a hedge at the roadside. He said he was tired and only took a rest. Seven days.

West Hartlepool Police-court. Isabella Wilson, charged with stealing a shirt from a clothes line. One month.

Market Drayton Police-court. Before Messrs. F. R. Twemlow, J. Wilson, and J. Lawton. Richard Hicks and Thomas Lightfoot, charged under the Poaching Prevention Act with being found on the highway in possession of nets and poaching instruments. Fined £5 each and costs.

Derby Borough Police-court. Before Sir J. Smith and other magistrates. Edwin Booth, charged with sleeping out. Fourteen days.

Thornbury Petty Sessions. Before Admiral St. John and Mr. H. L. Hardwicke. Henry Casey, William Dix, and Ayliffe Carey, charged with poaching. Casey three months; Dix and Carey six weeks each.

There is something curiously suggestive about the results of three prosecutions for wasting water which were heard at Cardigan Police-court last week. The first defendant was a solicitor and magistrate's clerk, the second a borough magistrate, and the third a working man. In the solicitor's case the Corporation Water Inspector clearly proved that water was being wasted, but the defence was that the tap from which it was running was out of repair, and the summons was dismissed. The summons against the magistrate was also dismissed, apparently on the ground that the magistrates thought some other person should have been proceeded against. In the third case the inspector went to the back of the working man's house and found water running into a bucket which was overflowing. He could not say how long it had been so running, and the defendant's wife turned off the tap when her attention was called to it. The magistrates delivered a little homily on the importance of preventing such waste and fined the working man half-a-crown. So long as little incidents of this kind occur it is hard to disabuse people's minds of the idea that there is one measure of justice for the rich and another for the poor.

It is naturally with great reluctance that one ventures to criticise any decision of a Bench which has so distinguished a lawyer as Sir Edward Fry for its Chairman. Yet it is difficult to avoid the conclusion that a serious injustice was done in a licensing case which came before the Long Ashton Bench on Friday, when Sir Edward presided. The police objected to the renewal of a licence to Walter Stanley Rogers, an innkeeper at Nailsea, on the ground of his (alleged) misconduct with a domestic servant in his employ. Rogers denied the charge, and so did the girl; and the latter, in fact, applied at the time for an affiliation order against another man who had since absconded. On the other hand, no evidence whatever was produced by the police in support of their allegation. All that they were really able to say against Rogers was that he had kept the girl at his house after her child was born, and his explanation was that she was an excellent servant, and that he had a difficulty in replacing her, but that on hearing of the objection raised by the police, he had discharged her. On the strength of this objection by the police, and in spite of the superintendent's admission that, "with this one exception," Rogers had conducted his house satisfactorily for eleven years, the Bench refused to renew his licence. I see Sir Edward Fry announced this as the decision of "a majority of the Bench." Of whom the majority was composed was not, of course, revealed; but I should be indeed astonished if Sir Edward Fry was not in the minority. It seems incredible that he can have sided with the majority, for—unless the facts have been grossly misreported—the refusal of the licence was a most harsh and unjustifiable proceeding.

An extraordinary manifestation of landlordism was brought to light at Llanwrtyd Police-court the other day when a man and woman named Morris were summoned for obstructing a roadway by the erection of a fruit-stall. The prosecution was instituted by one Roderick, a factotum of the local territorial magnate, Mr. R. Campbell Davys. Under cross-examination Roderick seemed perplexed as to whether he had taken out the summonses as a member of the public, or merely as a servant, acting on the instructions of Mr. Davys; and he also declined to definitely say whether he regarded the roadway as public or private property. He admitted, however, that he had spoken of it to the defendants as Mr. Campbell Davys' land, and that by direction of Mr. Davys he had told them that they would be allowed to place the fruit stall there if they paid that gentleman a small sum per week as rent. Mr. Campbell Davys himself was afterwards examined, and in answer to the solicitor for the defence he surprised everybody who had followed the history of the dispute by at once acknowledging that the ground in question was not his private property but a public road. It is thus established that this landlord, through his agent, has been endeavouring to exact a rent for the use of what is, on his own showing, a public road!

As there had undoubtedly been an obstruction of the road, the Llanwrtyd Bench imposed a small fine on the Morrises. It further appeared, however, that before proceeding against the defendants by summons the witness Roderick, and a gamekeeper, had forcibly attempted to remove the stall, this being done, the gamekeeper said, by Mr. Davys' orders. The two men were accordingly charged with malicious damage to the stall and fruit, and the Bench mulcted them in penalties amounting to £2. 16s., at the same time pointing out that those who complained of the obstruction "ought not to have taken the law into their own hands." So far as can be gathered from the evidence, Mr. Davys was the only person who really "complained," and the fact that he is himself a magistrate—he is in the commission of the peace for three counties—makes the course which he adopted all the more amazing and reprehensible. I trust, however, that the check he has now received will teach this Welsh landowner to be in future a little more careful in his methods of asserting his rights or alleged rights.

Buildings, Carteret-st. Queen Anne's-gate, S.W.

I erred the other day in suggesting that the "Spanish prisoner" entertains an exceptionally low opinion of the intelligence of the natives of Britain. A letter since received from Paris reminds me that the trick is continually being tried in France, and, presumably, with a certain proportion of success; and before now instances have been given in TRUTH of the appearance of the "prisoner" in most quarters of the habitable globe.

For all this, the "prisoner's" appearance continues to be hailed in many quarters as a novel, if not inexplicable, phenomenon. A few weeks back the Pioneer of Allahabad discovered him. "It would be interesting to know," writes that journal, "whether more than one of our readers have lately received a begging-letter of a somewhat out-of-the-way character;" and it then proceeds to describe the venerable stock-in-trade and properties of the Spanish prisoner, and to gravely speculate upon the probabilities of its being a fraud. Sagacious Pioneer! Well may Anglo-Indians rejoice at the way they are served by their well-informed and up-to-date Press!

"Professional gentlemen" seem to have an unfortunate weakness for begging-letter writing. A hardened offender is a Mr. John Holroyd, whose address is Cold Wells Hill, Staniland, Halifax. This individual writes in one of his latest epistles that he is a Licentiate in Theology of the University of Durham, and has passed the theological portion of his examination for B.A., but, owing to a harrowing series of domestic afflictions, he has somehow been "painfully and grievously hindered" from passing the rest of his examination, and he now requires a little cash to assist him in the object of his desire. "Candidly speaking," he says, "I am entirely dependent upon the charitably disposed to help me." In this instance his candour seems to be perfectly truthful, for Mr. Holroyd has been writing begging letters for at least three years past. When, however, he goes on to assert that he has been promised ordination, in the event of his obtaining his degree, by no less than six Bishops, he is probably romancing, for he is a man forty-five years of age; and it is extremely doubtful whether his age, to say nothing more, would not be a bar to his ordination. It seems that he has been successful in getting money out of at least one noble lord, and that he has had a promise of financial assistance from the Dean of Edinburgh; and to this he appeals as evidence of his bona fides—a further proof, if any were needed, of the mischief which people of benevolent impulses do by bestowing their charity haphazard upon claimants of this description.

From the following advertisement which appeared last week in the Scotsman, it seems that Mr. James MacVeigh, of Dumfries, has discovered a new sphere of activity. Judging by MacVeigh's wholesale appropriations of other people's property in the literary line, and his attempts to dispose of such property by false pretences, I should certainly advise no one to pay him £5 for any £1 share on his representation that it is worth £20:—

> SOUND INVESTMENT.—A Gentleman, having a large interest in a first-class African and Australian Syndicate, would like to dispose of such interest, represented as it does in Deferred shares. Dividend just paid 25 per cent. for the half-year, with a large reserve carried forward. Price, £5 per share; worth £20. Apply to James MacVeigh, land agent, 25, Queen-street, Dumfries.

Somebody has sent me an extract from the British Medical Journal, in which it is reported that sixteen medical men at Weston-super-Mare have agreed to decline to meet in consultation, assist in operations, or administration of anæsthetics, or have any professional intercourse with "any medical man connected with medical aid and similar associations." It is added that "in the interests of humanity," the sixteen doctors will not refuse their advice to members of the association or other patients of the association medical officer "on the condition that he previously retires from the case." I presume there must be some exceptional local circumstances to account for the institution of this boycott against a member or members of the profession at Weston; but what those circumstances are does not appear in the resolution passed by the sixteen boycotters. Perhaps some of the medicos concerned will explain how it is that this much-discussed question of the relation of the profession to such associations has suddenly become so acute at Weston.

With reference to the martial exploits of Mr. Cecil Rhodes, the following passage published by an Australian paper from a correspondent at Bulawayo is instructive:—

> One of our local editors appears to be under the impression that the Managing Director employs himself as a trooper, stands to arms at 4 a.m., and shoots at Kaffirs with the rest. But this is not so. The only shooting Mr. Rhodes indulges in is at the guinea-fowl, which on the Umguza are plentiful as Matabele, and more easily stalked. With a nice light spring waggon, good horses, a bucksail, which nightly is converted into a comfortable tent, a good cook, and rations which are not confined to a limited quantity of fifth-rate Boer meal and a piece of tough beef, Mr. Rhodes can to a certain extent be excused for preferring life in the veldt to living in Bulawayo.

So far from condemning Mr. Rhodes' sporting exploits, I should rather hear of his shooting guinea-fowl than shooting Matabele. But the question remains why he should be engaged on a sort of shooting picnic at the present time.

A further instance of the manipulation of South African news in the Rhodes interest was furnished by the accounts of the election of Mr. R. Solomons as member for Kimberley. This event was represented in a Central News telegram as conveying to the world "that Kimberley is anxious for Rhodes's reinstatement." Everybody who knows anything of South African politics will at once recognise this as an impudent perversion of the truth. At the last General Election in South Africa Mr. Solomons stood as an anti-Rhodes candidate; and his unopposed return now to the seat lately filled by Dr. Rutherfoord Harris has precisely the opposite significance to that assigned to it by the Central News correspondent.

Every requirement for Furnishing tastefully at least expense is amply illustrated in the Galleries and Catalogues of HAMPTON & SONS, Furnishers & Decorators, Pall Mall East, S.W.

LIVERPOOL—SEPTEMBER 24.

The warrior worn by many a fight had to his home retired,
There, 'mongst his household gods, to seek the rest he so desired;
There, 'mongst his books and friends, to pass the evening of his days,
Far from the strain and stress of strife and clash of party frays.

He from his bowed and weary frame his armour had removed,
Had laid the trusty sword aside that he so oft had proved;
And so had sat, his soul serene, to wait for life's slow ebb,
Whilst cross the vizor of his helm the spider spun its web.

But hark! what means that piercing shriek of danger and despair?
What is that piteous call for help that fills the Eastern air?
See! the old warrior hears the sound, he flushes at the cry,
And leaping to his feet again, wrath flashes from his eye.

His armour round his aged limbs with ardent haste he clasps,
His oft-proved sword, Excalibur, once more he sternly grasps.
"'Tis not," he cries, "for pelf or power, 'tis not for party gain;
A helpless people pleads for help—it must not plead in vain!"

And so he hastens to its aid, his soul within him stirred,
And trumpet-like, e'en as of old, his noble voice is heard;
Nay, 'tis with all the strength of yore he marches forth to fight—
"Justice!" his trenchant battle-cry; his watch-words "Truth and right!"

* * * * *

And who shall his brave course condemn? Who, in his inmost heart,
Does not applaud the strenuous way in which he's played his part?
Call him Quixotic if you will—Utopian if you can;
But don't deny that he is still a Great and Grand Old Man!

The following further letter comes from the correspondent at Constantinople whose letter on the late massacres I published a fortnight back. The writer is a very well-informed gentleman, and his statements respecting the attitude of the religious authorities are decidedly interesting at the present juncture:—

One of the notable instances out of many of a like nature in connection with the Constantinople massacres was the conduct of Khosrev Pasha, a General in the Army. His private residence is situated at Defterdar, on the Stamboul side of the Golden Horn, outside the walls. It is due to his prompt and plucky action that the Armenians round about his quarter were not pillaged and massacred. He held no military authority in the district in question, but on the mob gathering together he sallied out at once and ordered them to disperse; as they took no notice of his orders he promptly shot two of the rioters down, with the wholesome effect of dispersing the remainder. The police were then admonished by him, with the result that not a single Armenian was molested in that district.

Khosrev Pasha has since been denounced to the Palace as a partisan of the Armenians, and been placed under arrest, "pour encourager les autres."

In a former letter I mentioned that the Softas had condemned the massacres, as against the precepts of the Koran. The Ulemas (Doctors of Religious Law) are about to circulate a pamphlet containing sixteen Fetvas on the present condition of the Government and the conduct of the Sultan. The Fetvas, as is the custom, are put in the form of question and answer, and form as a whole a very strong indictment against the Sultan and his advisers. Questions and answers are given in Turkish, and each answer is followed by a quotation in original Arabic from the Koran, being the authority for the answer. The pamphlet begins by saying that, the contents being extracts from the holy book, they are sacred, and it therefore cannot be contended that any one in possession of the same can be guilty of a crime.

The strongest feature in it is the declaration if the Commander of the Faithful has been guilty of abuses and deemed unfit to reign, and the Faithful are powerless to remove him, then they may call in extraneous aid for that purpose, and that this act is perfectly correct and orthodox according to the quotation cited. This, no doubt, is meant to prepare the way in the minds of the Mussulman populace for the removal of the Sultan by foreign aid.

SCRUTATOR.

A FREE HAND FOR RUSSIA.

THAT Mr. Gladstone's attitude on the Eastern Question is both sound in itself and the only one consistent with our national interests and honour, I have always maintained. His re-appearance, therefore, on a public platform, not as the exponent of any sectional view, but as the spokesman of feelings now shared by men of all parties, is both a vindication of his own life-long policy, and a welcome sign that we are, as a nation, arriving at saner views of our position in relation to the Turkish Empire. As to the immediate mode of procedure there may be differences of opinion; but that the time has come for formally washing our hands of the present Turkish Government, all are now agreed.

Our position in respect to Turkey and Russia is this: We are one of the Great Powers, and the Great Powers claim a general right to interfere for the better government of Turkey whenever they can secure unanimity amongst themselves. The Great Powers have established the following rule in regard to the Dardanelles: No ship of war can pass through it. To this rule Russia has perforce assented. The Dardanelles form the only outlet to the open sea from the Black Sea, which waters the southern provinces of Russia. Her aim has therefore always been, and always will be, to convert the Black Sea into a Russian lake, open to the commerce and to the warships of all Powers in time of peace, but into which war vessels of any Power at war with her could only enter by forcing their way through the Dardanelles, whilst Russian war vessels might pass through. There is consequently a clear divergency of aim in regard to the relations of the Great Powers towards Turkey between Russia and us. We would have Turkey a barrier against Russia, and Russia would have her a barrier against us. Our traditional policy has been to maintain Turkish rule; the traditional policy of Russia has been to become the paramount partner in an alliance with Turkey which would bring her within the sphere of Russian influence, and place her in somewhat the same relation towards the paramount partner as Afghanistan is to us. In order to attain her object Russia has always sided with the Turkish Christians against their Mahommedan rulers, whilst we have always sided with the Mahommedans against the Christians in order to attain ours.

Buildings, Carteret-st. Queen Anne's-gate, S.W.

The Armenian massacres, which are the direct result of our insisting upon modifications in the Treaty of San Stefano, have awakened the English public conscience to the iniquity involved in our traditional policy. But this indignation will lead to nothing unless we are prepared to withdraw once and for all from that policy. We must let Russia have her way politically if the Turkish Christians are not to be permanently oppressed and occasionally massacred; and, for the life of me, I have never understood how we should be injured were Russia paramount in European Turkey and in Asia Minor. Is it likely that Russia will ever consent to anything which would permanently cabin, crib, and confine her power in the Black Sea, or to the establishment of any strong Government at Constantinople which would in case of war place the entrance to the Black Sea in the hands of a strong State that might side against her? Let us be fair. Should we do this were we in the place of Russia? Our action in regard to the Mediterranean shows that we should not. We are not a Mediterranean Power. Our only interest in that sea is that it forms the shortest roadway to our Eastern possessions. We have, therefore, solidly established ourselves on the western and eastern outlet. The Black Sea is not an international roadway leading from one part of the world to another. It leads to Russia alone, with the exception of the Danubian Principalities—a small and comparatively unimportant country without a navy. The grounds for Russia seeking to acquire a commanding position on the Dardanelles are far stronger, consequently, than those for our occupying Aden and Gibraltar and squatting in Egypt and on the Suez Canal. The former has always seemed to me to be nothing more than the reasonable wish of a man to have the key of his own house in his own possession, rather than entrust it to persons who might be inclined either to turn it on him or to use it in order to allow an enemy to get inside his house. I wonder what we should say to a European mandate forbidding our ships of war on our eastern and western coasts passing through the Channel. Yet this is tantamount to what Europe, instigated by us, has imposed on Russia. She may have ships of war in the Black Sea, but if she wishes to send a ship of war into the Mediterranean it has to come from the Baltic. Was there ever so preposterous a rule imposed on a Great Empire? And more preposterous than the rule is it for us to suppose that Russia will not endeavour to free herself from it.

Let us suppose that Russia were paramount at Constantinople, and were to replace there the European Concert which has proved to be no concert. Clearly in times of peace, the Black Sea would be as open to the commerce of the world as is the Baltic, and ships of war might enter then as they now enter the Gulf of Bothnia. In case of war between Russia and us our ships of war would not be able to enter the Black Sea, because the Dardanelles would be strongly fortified. But provided that we had in the Levant such a naval force as would justify us under present circumstances in entering the Black Sea, it is evident that this force would enable us to blockade the exit from the Dardanelles, and thus prevent any Russian fleet from emerging from the narrow strait. The sole difference strategically would be that the Russian towns and the Russian shipping in the Black Sea would be rendered less vulnerable to attack.

Russia has shown by the creation of a free Bulgaria that she has no desire to incorporate Turkish territory within her dominions. She has again shown it by the fact that she has not occupied Armenia in order to maintain order there, although no Great Power would have hindered her. Were she left to deal as she would with Turkey she would in all probability carve other Bulgarias out of European Turkey; leave Constantinople and Asia Minor to the Sultan, but insist upon the Armenians being fairly treated, and, so far as possible, upon reforms in the Provinces almost exclusively inhabited by Mahommedans; and buy off any opposition from Austria by giving her some increase of territory in Western Turkey, as, after the late Russo-Turkish war, she gave her Bosnia. Far from seeing harm in this, I see nothing but good.

Our course is therefore plain, if we are in earnest in our outburst of indignation against the Turk. We ought to break off diplomatic relations with Turkey, as I have repeatedly urged, and as Mr. Gladstone advised at Liverpool. We ought, further, to send a dispatch to all the Great Powers announcing that, as they have declined to join us in any force against Turkey, and as they object to our using force without them, we withdraw from the European Concert, and we leave it to the Continental Powers to act as they may deem best in securing to the Turkish Christians proper government. Practically this would give to Russia a free hand. Asia Minor and European Turkey would then form a federation of states, which would be politically bound to Russia; and if it be really our sole aim to ensure to the Turkish Christians a reasonable government, that aim would be attained.

As things now are, Turkey falls back on Russia when we seek to use pressure on her, and on us when Russia presses her. When Russia was freeing the Bulgarians, we constituted ourselves the guardians of Turkey: now that we would act against the Turk, Russia steps in as the friend of the Turk. Fuad Pasha, one of the ablest of the Grand Viziers, once explained to me this policy: "Turkey," he said, "is a chariot to which each Great Power has attached a horse. When one seeks to pull the chariot one way, we whip up another of the horses, which pulls the other way. Thus the equilibrium is maintained, and the chariot is not overturned."

No one has denounced more strongly and persistently than I have the very existence of the Turkish Empire. Our traditional policy in respect to that Empire has always been to me an abomination. In season and out of season I have protested against it. If I thought that we could turn the Turk out of every province in his present dominions inhabited by Christians, I should be for turning him out, bag and baggage. I have no special partiality for Russia; rather, indeed, the reverse. I should prefer to see on the Bosphorus a strong Power independent of all other Powers. But I believe this to be impossible, whilst I do believe it to be not only possible, but certain, that if we only will frankly and fairly leave the solution of the question to Russia, the present state of things will be replaced by a far better state. In considering what territorial alteration can be made in Europe, we must never lose sight of geography, and of the aspirations of the State close to that in which the change is to be made.

Even if Europe were with us, and some sort of reforms in Turkey were decreed by a European Concert, these would be only paper reforms. The Turkish Army is recruited entirely from Mahommedans. A Mahommedan is the ruler of the country. His Ministers and their subordinates are Mahommedans. In their eyes the Christians of Turkey are mere pariahs, and pariahs who would be glad to overturn the rule of their Mahommedan masters. Europe is not at one in regard to the reforms that are needed. When all the Powers agree upon a reform, each separate Power is inclined to get on better terms with the Sultan than the others by secretly abetting him in rendering the reform illusory. Power, therefore, remains to the man who has the armed force and the administration in his hands. We complain of Russian intrigues: Russia complains of our intrigues. In the meantime, whilst the Great Powers intrigue and jealously watch each other, the Christians suffer, and in the very nature of things will suffer. I do urge upon all to look facts clearly in the face. Rightly or wrongly Continental Europe would give Russia a free hand; we alone with our traditional policy block the way, and this is as foolish as it is wicked, for our traditional policy is nothing but an endeavour to withstand what, sooner or later, must come, but which, thanks to us, will only be brought about after some great war.

The home of our traditional policy is the Foreign Office. Men may come and men may go; nations may rise and nations may fall; the relations between States and everything in connection with States may change; yet fixed and eternal, as though of divine origin, are the thoughts and the ways of that Office. No man who becomes its head can resist the genius loci. He succumbs to it. He is fossilised, like a branch exposed to the dripping of some fossilising stream. And, what is still more serious, the faith of the Foreign Office becomes the creed of the newspapers. Thus English public opinion and English administrative tradition react on each other. We are a powerful Empire, able and ready to defend ourselves against all attacks. But we are not the arbiters of the world. Europe has become a huge armed camp. We cannot impose our views upon foreign nations. On the sea we are strong; as a land Power we are weak, if called upon to send an expedition against any except savages armed with flint-guns and spears. This mastery on the sea leads to a general feeling of jealousy against us. We must accept it. But we must also bring home to ourselves the limitations that there are to our power. So vast are the armies of the Continent that, were we to send such an army as we could muster on a Continental expedition, it would be swallowed up, brave as the men composing it might be. Under these circumstances we should do well to keep clear of all such expeditions, instead of vapouring, as we are too much inclined to do about sending them. The Russians had to bring above 300,000 men into line to overcome Turkish resistance in Bulgaria, and even then the issue was long doubtful. How possibly can we seriously propose to send an army to vanquish Turkey, when that army would at most consist of 50,000 or 60,000 men? Still more absurd is it to suppose that with such an army we could vanquish not only the Turks, but the forces of one or other of the Great Powers acting with the Turks. These may be unpalatable truths, but none the less are they truths. The Athenians occupied in the then known world much the same position as we occupy in the world of to-day; they had a powerful fleet, and they were the masters of the sea. In an evil hour for them they took it into their heads that they could settle matters to their own satisfaction in Sicily, and their Jingoes, with Alcibiades at their head, induced them to send an army there. The wise counsels of Nicias and other men of sense were disregarded. What happened? The Spartans sent another army, and Spartans and Sicilians inflicted such a blow on Athens, that she never recovered it. History has a habit of repeating itself, when it does not serve as a lesson in the avoidance of error.

THE 4TH HUSSARS: A WAR OFFICE WHITE-WASHING.

The promised "personal inquiry" by the Commander-in-Chief and the Adjutant-General into the allegations respecting the treatment of subalterns in the 4th Hussars has now been completed, so far as Mr. Bruce's case is concerned, and the result is very much what has been already forecasted in these columns, and what was to be expected from the shape which the "inquiry" has taken. A letter has been addressed from the War Office to Mr. Bruce's father informing him that his son was required to leave the 4th Hussars "in consequence of his own misconduct and manifest unfitness for his position." As proofs, apparently, of this assertion, it is recited that Mr. Bruce was on one occasion censured for using abusive and improper language to a non-commissioned officer of another regiment; and that "upon another occasion he went into the Sergeants' Mess and drank with them after two of the senior sergeants had expostulated with him, and had endeavoured to dissuade him." Beyond these facts—that he once lost his temper at Bisley with a man of another regiment whom he considered addressed him improperly, and that he went (under circumstances of which he himself gives a different account) to spend half-an-hour in the Sergeants' Mess on Boxing Night—no evidence whatever is offered as to Mr. Bruce's "misconduct and manifest unfitness for his position." These two indiscretions are, therefore, solemnly offered by the Commander-in-Chief as reasons for depriving a youngster of his commission within about ten months of his having gained it—and this in the face of the allegations of the grossest misconduct which have been made against other officers of this regiment, and which remain to the present moment unrefuted and practically unchallenged.

Buildings, Carteret-st. Queen Anne's-gate, S.W.

The War Office letter next refers to the fact that "Mr. Bruce was, no doubt, unpopular with his brother officers;" but draws a distinction between this unpopularity and "the circumstances which led to his retirement," and asserts that "he had the fullest support from Regimental Authorities so far as he had a right to expect it." In my very first reference to the matter in TRUTH it was clearly said that Mr. Bruce, unlike his predecessor, Mr. Hodge, held his own pretty successfully against the boycott to which he was subjected. Nothing, therefore, turns upon this point; but whether this now admitted "unpopularity" had no connection with the summary process of chucking him out of the regiment on the trumpery grounds put forward by the War Office, must remain a matter of opinion, and one which will certainly not be disposed of by the official assertion that the two things were unconnected.

Next we come to the incident of the dinner at the Nimrod Club, on which the opinions of the War Office are so amazing that they call for reproduction:—

> It appears that some of the subalterns of the regiment invited your son to dinner when he joined, and advised him to join another regiment upon the ground that his means were insufficient.

This is a most loose and inaccurate account of what took place. Mr. Bruce was invited to dine at the Nimrod Club as soon as he had been gazetted and before he had joined. He was there informed that he was not wanted in the regiment; warned that his hosts had got rid of Mr. Hodge and would get rid of him; and told that if he did not make a graceful exit at once he would make a disgraceful one later on. The question of his income was raised, but it was not made the sole ground for the objection to him. The subalterns who made this objection had previously received some sort of official reprimand for their treatment of Mr. Hodge. They showed their appreciation of this by at once organising a formal demonstration of their intention to pursue a similar course towards the gentleman appointed by the War Office in Mr. Hodge's place. A more grossly insubordinate act it would be difficult to imagine. What has the Commander-in-Chief to say to it? Listen:—

> Such action on the part of Mr. Bruce's brother officers was certainly reprehensible, but it seems to have been really occasioned by a prejudice against him arising from reports which had reached the regiment as to his previous career, the alleged insufficiency of his means being put forward merely as a pretext.

Note the "but" in this monumental passage. The proceeding was reprehensible, "but" as the reason given was not the real reason, the War Office do not apparently consider that it calls for further notice. The wording of the passage obviously invests it with the character of an apology for this otherwise "reprehensible" conduct. As to the "reports which had reached the regiment," it will be noted that the War Office take care not to suggest that there was anything in these reports; they would stultify themselves if they did, for all necessary particulars about Mr. Bruce's previous career were in the possession of the War Office when he received his commission. And how had such reports reached the regiment? Apparently through the amiable young officer who took a leading part in the Nimrod Club function, and whose bearing throughout the proceedings is described by Mr. Bruce as most offensive and insulting. The simple truth of the matter is that this young gentleman and Mr. Bruce had been at Sandhurst together, where no great love had been lost between them. In this way "reports" had reached the regiment, and this was the kind of schoolboy tittle-tattle which was made the ground for organising the Nimrod Club demonstration. Such is the stuff which in the name of the Commander-in-Chief and the Adjutant-General is now put forward officially in extenuation, if not justification, of the conduct of the subalterns of the regiment in formally placing their veto upon a War Office appointment. A pretty exhibition, is it not? The rest of the letter is in the same strain:—

> The pressure of these young officers did not prevail, for Mr. Bruce did join, and would be in the regiment now were it not for his own misconduct. More than one of his brother officers are living comfortably in the regiment whose means are believed to be less than his were.

The drift of this is not very obvious. If the proceedings of the subalterns were wrong and insubordinate, or even "reprehensible," the fact that the man against whom they were directed declined to be intimidated does not alter their character, and the suggestion that it does, only accentuates the apologetic character of the document, as well as its argumentative weakness. The reference to the means of the other officers is of the same character. It carries on the same assumption that if Mr. Bruce's income was not the real objection, the objection and the manner of formulating it were excusable; and it is obviously a feeble attempt to rebut the prevailing opinion that, in palliating a proceeding of this kind, the War Office are pandering to the organised extravagance among officers which does so much mischief in cavalry regiments. We are to understand, in conclusion, that "under all the circumstances of the case, the Secretary of State for War is of opinion that no further action is required;" and that is all. Had the Secretary of State said in so many words that in his opinion it is a right and proper thing for every appointment to a regiment to be revised and passed or rejected by a meeting of the subalterns, and that any personal views on which the decision of the subalterns may be based will be complaisantly accepted at headquarters, he would hardly have expressed the state of the case more unmistakably.

To call the process by which this impotent result has been arrived at "an inquiry," is an abuse of language. When the cases of Mr. Hodge and Mr. Bruce were brought up in Parliament, certain counter-statements were made in regard to the second case. There was a direct conflict of facts upon certain points, and under these circumstances, a personal inquiry by the Commander-in-Chief and the Adjutant-General was promised to the House of Commons, and further discussion of the incidents in the 4th Hussars, which had assumed an awkward character for the War Office, shelved. If an inquiry under such circumstances means anything, it means that the evidence on both sides will be heard, and that the truth, where there is a conflict of evidence, will be sifted so far as possible by the usual methods of examination and cross-examination. What attempt has been made to do this? Absolutely none. Mr. Bruce has not been heard (true, he was out of the country at the time, but he is even now on his way back), and the request of his father that he might be allowed to appear and cross-examine the hostile witnesses by counsel was not even deemed worthy of an answer. The "inquiry," therefore, resolves itself into this: that the Commander-in-Chief and the Adjutant-General have simply looked over the War Office version of the facts again, and possibly taken counsel with Colonel Brabazon and the other accusing parties, and have then furbished up the original decision into the document described above, and put it forth as the result of their personal investigation of the facts. Such a proceeding is a farce in itself, and, under the circumstances which led to it, an insult to the House of Commons. It leaves everything which was in dispute before in dispute still. It leaves the public to choose between the word of Mr. Bruce and the word of the non-commissioned officers on whose evidence he has been convicted, as to the true facts of the incident on Boxing-Night which led to the officer's arrest and resignation; and it deprives the reiterated references of the Secretary of State to the "misconduct" which alone led to Mr. Bruce's removal from the Army of all weight and credibility. There remains behind the still more important question of the result of the simultaneous inquiry into Mr. Hodge's case—by far the worse case of the two, and one which gives its whole colour and significance to the Bruce affair. At the moment of going to press I have received a copy of the War Office decision on this affair also. It appears to be, if possible, a more amazing and discreditable production than the other, but as it is too important to be dealt with off-hand, I defer any remarks upon it till my next issue.

THE SORROWS OF EASTBOURNE.

I regret to find that, notwithstanding my repeated protestations to the contrary, a good many people at Eastbourne still seem to think that, in commenting on the shortcomings of their water-supply, I have been actuated by some spirit of hostility towards the town. The Eastbourne Gazette, in its last week's issue, gave publicity to some communications which have passed between its Editor and myself on this subject, and I should wish to add a few words to what my Eastbourne contemporary has said, in the hope of avoiding any further misconception on the subject. By a curious coincidence, it happens that two members of the editorial staff of Truth have known Eastbourne from its earliest infancy, and, indeed, from their own infancy also, and the attractions of this most delightful of English watering-places have nowhere been more frequently celebrated than in the columns of Truth. Nothing that has appeared in these columns on the subject of the Eastbourne water supply has been prompted by anything but a desire that the best should be done in the interests of the town; although, as Truth has a circulation and interests in a large section of the globe outside Eastbourne, it is also necessary for me to have regard to the interests of the public at large, as well as of this particular watering-place.

What has happened at Eastbourne is this. More than a year ago complaints were made by visitors to the town that the water had for some reason become so much impregnated with salt as to be at times absolutely undrinkable. Shortsighted natives of the place might think that it was to their advantage to hush up this unpleasant fact and pretend that there was nothing the matter, but all experience shows that such hushing-up attempts are in the long run futile, and that the only effectual way of dealing with a difficulty of this kind is to face it energetically, and remove it at any cost. Out of tenderness to the town I refrained from saying anything on the subject until the Eastbourne season of 1895 was on the wane. By the time that I did make any remarks on the subject, the facts were public property, and it was inevitable that the matter should be referred in the London Press. Under these circumstances I sounded a note of warning to the Eastbourne people, and recommended them to remove the cause of complaint without delay, and to remember the terrible calamity which only a year or two previously had overtaken another Sussex watering place, Worthing. That the majority of the inhabitants, many of whom must have been far more inconvenienced by the state of the water than casual visitors, saw the necessity for plain speaking, I have not the slightest reason to doubt. But a certain section adopted the foolish policy of denying that there was anything wrong, even pretending that the defects of the water rendered it wholesome and palatable, and accusing me of going out of my way to injure the town. This may have caused me to retort with some acerbity; but in the end the Town Council took up the matter with commendable vigour, and resolved to promote a Bill for the establishment of a municipal water supply; and as it seemed to me that the local authorities were fully alive to the gravity of the situation, and were doing all that could be done, I let the matter drop.

It turned out, however, as it too often does in such cases, that the momentary scare produced only a transitory impression. The original intention of the Town Council was revoked—I understand at the dictation of a foolish and short-sighted majority of the ratepayers—and the worst results have followed. The Water Company were allowed to tinker up their defective wells in the cheapest and most inefficient manner, and to give out that the evil had been remedied. The evil was not remedied, the water remained as obnoxious as before, and naturally, when the summer came round and the town filled up with visitors, complaints on the subject became loud and deep. In such a state of things no personal tenderness for the place ought to prevent any journalist from doing his duty to the public by noticing the facts and censuring those who are responsible for them. If the town has suffered in consequence, the fault lies not with the journalist who does his duty, but with that section of the inhabitants whose misguided action has led to the nuisance remaining unremedied for something over twelve months. In regard to the facts of the case, I do not believe there has ever been the slightest room for doubt. A salt spring has made its way into one of the chief wells or reservoirs of the Eastbourne Waterworks Company, and the water has been at times so strongly impregnated with salt as to be in the highest degree unpalatable, and to many useless for drinking purposes. The proportion of salt may vary from time to time; its effect may not be injurious to health; there may even be some who find the taste of it rather agreeable than otherwise; but to the majority of people it is in the highest degree distasteful, and a large number of residents, as well as visitors, have for months past been buying distilled water at considerable cost for drinking and culinary purposes, while in the hotels aërated waters have been supplied free of cost for the use of those visitors who found the ordinary water undrinkable. The mere fact of private housekeepers and hotel-keepers incurring such an expense while paying water rates to the company is conclusive proof of the reality of the evil. On the other hand, it is equally certain that had the Waterworks Company faced the situation resolutely in the first instance, without regard to their dividends, the evil could have been remedied long ago. From the first it has been known that the supply of water derived from one spring at Holywell was perfectly pure and free from taint. This supply has within the last month or two been rendered accessible to a certain portion of the town, by the simple process of erecting stand-pipes along the main leading from this spring. I am further told by the Editor of the Eastbourne Gazette, that about five miles of new mains have been laid, which I understand are for the purpose of enlarging the area of this supply. But at any rate until quite recently the inhabitants could only avail themselves of this particular supply by fetching the water from the stand-pipes, which would in many cases be a distance of a mile or two. This particular remedy can, therefore, only be regarded as partial and inadequate. The Water Company, after their kind, proclaimed with a flourish of trumpets that in placing this supply at the disposal of a small section of the town they had done everything necessary, and had insured to all an adequate supply of pure water. But the truth is that they have merely shown that they had at their command the means of meeting the evil, at any rate to some extent, and that for a whole year they have absolutely neglected to utilise this means, until driven to it by an irresistible outcry. The whole business is a deplorable exhibition of that same indifference of a private water company to its duties to the public, when weighed against the interests of its shareholders, of which we have lately had so cogent a demonstration in the East End of London; and the moral of it is that the town, which is at present in the hands of these privileged monopolists, should deliver itself from their clutches by compulsorily expropriating them.

Water Supply to Country Houses.—Read "Water Supply to Mansions." The Times says, "a practical pamphlet." Post free.—Merryweathers, 63, Long-acre, London, W.C., & Greenwich, S.E.

Buildings, Carteret-st. Queen Anne's-gate, S.W.

It would be highly interesting to know who constitute this offending Water Company. Being a private concern, incorporated by Act of Parliament, no return of its shareholders is furnished to Somerset House, and so utterly in the dark are the inhabitants of Eastbourne as to the identity of their oppressors, that I understand that even the Corporation officials cannot ascertain who the directors are. There is no doubt that his Grace the Duke of Devonshire is the chairman and presiding genius of the undertaking; and, in default of anybody else, the Duke is the individual who may be most fairly called to account for the present state of things. The Duke of Devonshire derives a princely revenue from his Eastbourne ground rents—a revenue derived neither from toiling nor spinning, nor even from his own prudent investment, but from the energy and foresight of his immediate predecessor in the title. Such a position confers its duties as well as its rights, and it is the obvious duty of the Duke, who to all appearance holds this Water Company in his pocket, to co-operate with the Corporation in whatever steps they may think necessary for improving the condition of the water supply.

For the present I have been asked to give publicity to the fact that, by reason of the arrangements above referred to, Eastbourne now has a sufficient supply of the finest and most palatable water available for the use of all visitors and residents. This supply is said to be equivalent to ten gallons per head per diem, and is apparently inexhaustible. I am very glad to make this fact known, and I trust that it will be duly noted by any who may have been scared away from the town by the defects of the ordinary water supply. At the same time, looking at the nature of the arrangements for bringing this water into use, it is impossible to consider that it affords a final solution of the difficulty; and it seems to be recognised in the town that some further supply will have to be introduced. After what has happened, I should think there can be no doubt about this. The proper course is for the Corporation to take the best advice as to where and how a sufficient new supply of satisfactory quality can be obtained, to obtain from Parliament without delay the necessary powers for the purpose, and to make an end once and for all of the company which has so conclusively demonstrated its incompetence, and its indifference to the welfare of the town.

"CYMBELINE" AT THE LYCEUM.

To prove how little the play of "Cymbeline" is read, one has only to listen to the remarks of Lyceum playgoers when they take up the playbill in the now bright, well-lighted, and redecorated theatre. "Dear me, what a pity," observed a young lady close to me, "Ellen Terry does not play 'Cymbeline' after all. They have put her down for Imogen." "Who is Imogen?" In spite of Shakespeare readings, high art academies and board schools, the vast majority does not apparently know that Cymbeline was a King of Great Britain, when these estimable islands were in a very primitive state, and that this attractive sounding name should not be applied to one of Shakespeare's heroines. From the mere sound, I grant that Cymbeline ought to be a woman. But it is not the case. He happens to be a very burly, beefy man in the person of Mr. Macklin; and according to Mr. Alma Tadema, R.A., whose knowledge of history and archæology we are bound to respect, the early Britons of the first century were quite as civilised as the Romans who conquered them. The gifted Alma Tadema has dispelled all the false notions that we entertained about our "woad-painted" ancestors, who dwelt in caves and in a state of semi-savagery. King Cymbeline wears robes that would have been considered smart in the middle ages. His Queen is decked out in stuffs that might have been worn at the coronation of a French King at Rheims, and as to Imogen, her coloured patchwork garment is suggestive of extremely modern "Liberty." But it must all be right, because it is Shakespeare who has said it, and who, by the way, in chronology was often fatally wrong. He was a poet, and had a poet's supreme disdain for dates and historical accuracy. He borrowed an old tale from Boccaccio, and tumbled it into any mythical period that suggested itself.

I do not think that Cymbeline is much better or worse than the majority of plays by William Shakespeare. It is not so bad, at any rate, as to deserve the cheap and schoolboy criticism of a distinguished writer, who has been reported and applauded as a wit of the first order because he dubbed "Cymbeline" as "Haddon Chambers at his worst." Wit—so-called wit of this kind—is as intolerable as the forced humour of Sir Benjamin Backbite in "The School for Scandal." False and feeble epigrams are detestable, and if "Cymbeline" cannot be better described than that, they had better leave poor "Cymbeline" alone, for it is really a very good acting play; and Shakespeare wrote for actors and actresses.

Henry Irving probably selected the play for three very good reasons. First, he wanted to give Ellen Terry a kind of Rosalind part, she never having played Rosalind; next, he wanted to give himself a kind of Iago part, he having already succeeded as Iago. Last of all, he desired to employ the talent of Alma Tadema in suggesting what Italy and Britain were like in the first century. The box, or trunk, trick is a good melodramatic effect; the Fidele scenes were made for an actress of the temperament of Ellen Terry, and the Lyceum manager, who is great at surprises, and brilliant in everything, was able to "go as you please" with Iachimo, who might be made a champion villain, or a figure of infinite pathos and contrition. It all turned out well, as it ever does with the great diplomatist who rules the destinies of the Lyceum. The new Imogen was pronounced delightful, as she is. The new Iachimo was a curious tour de force and interesting at every point and in every sense. The new Alma Tadema scenic versions of the first century were spared, because Shakespeare started the inaccuracies that no student dared correct—notably the novel reading in bed by Miss Imogen, which is about as true to the Britain of the first century as the electric light. In fact, the whole thing was an emphatic success, and the crowning triumph came when the Bismarck of Wellington-street was able to mildly chaff the "unnecessary twaddle" talked by those who happen to know something of the genesis of "Madame Sans-Gêne," and also artfully again to postpone the Lyceum production of that excellent and interesting compound of Sardou and his predecessors. Many years ago there appeared under the Lyceum management of Fechter a standing advertisement which was unmercifully chaffed. It ran something like this: "Mr. Phelps and Mr. Walter Montgomery have been engaged and will shortly appear." Substitute Madame Sans-Gêne for Phelps and Walter Montgomery and we shall have history repeating itself indeed. But no one seemed to care very much for the "twaddle" that consists of the obvious fact that the first act of "Madame Sans-Gêne" is a word-for-word adaptation of an old one-act French play, "L'Ange du Cinquième Étage," well known on the English stage as "The Angel of the Attic." The twaddle went in at one ear and out at the other, and the sarcastic allusion to it fell dead flat when the popular Henry Irving announced that "Madame Sans-Gêne" would have to go back to her attic again, or possibly one floor higher, out on the roof, in favour of a grand revival of "Richard III.," which every one desires to see again. The opening scenes of "Richard" are among the very best things that Henry Irving has ever done. In fact, it was a magnificent performance all round when first presented, and age will have mellowed it. So, vastly interesting as Irving's Napoleon and Ellen Terry's Sans-Gêne would have been, we can wait for both with complacency until Richard III. and Lady Anne have once more passed before our delighted eyes. The appreciation of the public at the announcement of "Richard" was testified by round after round of genuine applause.

A GOOD MELODRAMA.

Pierre Decourcelle, Arthur Shirley, and George R. Sims at their very best—and there you find "Les Deux Gosses," otherwise the "Two Little Vagabonds." This admirable, human, and interesting play produced for the first time in England last Wednesday with such enormous success by Mr. Albert Gilmer owes its origin to the brilliant pen of M. Pierre Decourcelle, who is a nephew of D'Ennery, one of the greatest French dramatists of our time. In the able hands of Mr. George R. Sims and Mr. Arthur Shirley the French play has been most skilfully and carefully treated. The involved intrigue so dearly beloved by France's great nation is now less intricate, and the story is simplified, the plot is not so complicated, and the drama is thoroughly Anglicised. Directly the curtain rises we are thick in the plot at once. We do not want the hospital scene over here, with all its suffering inmates wailing over their numerous ailments, but in Paris it is quite another matter, life with them is so bright, so gay, that a little depression is an absolute necessity; it is the reverse over here, unhappily, as Messrs. Sims and Shirley have not been slow to discover. A jealous husband admirably played by Ernest Leicester, is suddenly confronted with the supposed treachery of his wife, Geraldine Oliffe, and in a fit of mad rage and fury, the wild Leicester tosses the baby boy he believes is "none of his" into the arms of a convenient gentleman, alias burglar, who comes in at the drawing-room window for the purpose of "going through" the house. Mamma Oliffe is naturally upset when she discovers her infant has gone heaven knows where, and declares until the boy is found she and Papa Leicester will never be friends again. Now, Mamma Oliffe's supposed treachery is caused by her having tried to shield Papa Leicester's sister, who is a highly respectable married lady, but who, alas! has had a past. Scene No. 2 discovers the "Two Little Vagabonds" hobnobbing over a wood fire and discussing cod-liver oil. No. 1, Kate Tyndall Vagabond, is a hale and hearty young fellow, with great aspirations to become a carpenter. No. 2, Sydney Fairbrother Vagabond, a pale consumptive lad, treats the carpentering idea with scorn, and declares a preference for the "smithy and the forge." One of these two pathetic boys is, of course, the missing kiddie belonging to Mamma Oliffe, and he has been reared as a thief and a regular "bad 'un." Enter wicked sister with a history; she is now a widow and on the eve of marrying the gentleman who endowed her with her past. She has no knowledge of the suffering her "naughtiness" has caused, as she has been apparently at some unheard-of spot for years, where no communication of any description ever existed. She is startled at the appearance of Mamma Oliffe, dressed all in black, who makes it a rule to come and pray once a year, on the anniversary of her wedding day, at the little church over the left where she was married. By the strange force of stage circumstances, Papa Leicester now appears, recognises the convenient burglar who comes in from the O.P. side, to whom he has confided his tender offspring, and offers him gold untold for the restoration of his son. He says he will return in half an hour with the money, and so he does, only to find Vagabond Kate Tyndall, his real child, has "hooked it," and, as business has not been up to much lately with the burglar man, he palms off Vagabond Sydney Fairbrother on to the easily gulled Papa Leicester. Of course, it all comes right in the end, Mamma Oliffe discovers her son in the charming little person of Vagabond Kate Tyndall, who comes to see his beloved pal Vagabond Sydney Fairbrother, who eventually dies, and leaves everything plain and straightforward, and everybody bathed in a sea of tears, and buried amid handkerchiefs white, handkerchiefs red, handkerchiefs of every colour and description. A more tenderly pathetic play it would be impossible to see, and it will appeal to the hearts of young and old alike. Its success was instantaneous, and never for an instant was there a doubt about it. The acting of Miss Kate Tyndall and Miss Sydney Fairbrother will be a welcome surprise to all. Never were two characters more charmingly or delightfully played—the one all fire, fervour, health, energy, and go; the other a broken-down, sick, and dying child. What a beautiful contrast, what a lovely, pathetic picture! The husband of Mr. Ernest Leicester was another careful study of human nature, and the wife of Miss Geraldine Oliffe was also charming. All the minor characters, notably Mr. Lyston Lyle, Miss Le Bert, and Mr. Edward Coleman, were well played, and helped not a little towards the success of the play.

Buildings, Carteret-st. Queen Anne's-gate, S.W.

Sagacious critics want to know what plays suit the people, and insist that the drama is dead, if not buried. Nonsense! The drama is alive and kicking, when it is attacked by healthy, human dramatists. The right way to success on the stage of every country is—the human heart. Theories and fads are all very well: practice and the study of human nature are better.

NOTES FROM PARIS.

THE CZAR'S FRENCH LODGINGS.

THE Czar will be hard to suggestionise if he does not leave France with his head full of French Charmers. It appears that there will be a Beauty Show at the Français and Opera the evening he and the Czarina go there. Invitations will be issued by the President, and he will take care to give the prestige of rank, fashion, wealth, and feminine loveliness to the soirées there. There is to be another Beauty Show, but of a more select character, at Versailles. The President at Rambouillet has got in with the territorial aristocracy of the county. It includes not a few young, pretty, and lively Duchesses, Marquises, and other ladies of quality. Old-fashioned French dances will enter into the after-dinner divertissement in the Galerie des Batailles, so called after all the big paintings of scenes of military carnage by Horace Vernet, Delacroix, Gérard, Ary Scheffer (of all others!), Schetz and Heim, two quite forgotten artists. The pavane and minuet will admit only of subtle coquetry and adroit challenges. Last week it was arranged to use the Petits Appartements of Marie Antoinette as a resting-place where the Czar and Czarina could shut themselves in for some hours. But there were too many sinister recollections connected with these rooms. It was feared they might throw the Czarina into a gloomy frame of mind and strike the public as of evil augury. So the Faure Family, we hear, are to repose in Marie Antoinette's apartments and their Imperial Majesties in those of Louis XV. This Czarsruhe is the product of a galante epoch. Of the ten or eleven smallish rooms it contains, seven were built, decorated, and fitted up under the auspices of Madame de Pompadour. In Louis XIV.'s time Madame de Montespan had her Bower (two poky rooms) in this part of the palace. She ascended and descended by the grand stairs known as l'escalier des Ambassadeurs, with which her lodgings communicated. What is now the King's Bedroom was, in her time, the billiard room of Louis XIV. There was a particular etiquette for billiard playing, which enabled him to call on her without the Court at once knowing all about it. In Louis XV.'s time the Favourite complained of the publicity of the Ambassadors' stairs, which, in consequence, disappeared. A private stair-way, a couple of little rooms, and a corridor replaced them. The King lodged the Favourite overhead, and the new stairs communicated with her lodging, which was also poky, and had low ceilings. Her power was made manifest in her châteaux, in the King's inner abode, and in the impetus she gave to Art. Evidences abound in the Louis XV. apartments of the glorification of gallantry in his reign, and of l'esprit aimable with which it became permeated. I use the word aimable as it is used here in speaking of Pompadourism, as a desirable ferment in a despotic monarchy.

The ONLY PALATABLE NATURAL APERIENT to take is "Franz Josef" Water, generally admitted to be the best Ten gold medals at World's Exhibitions. No household should be without it.

That spirit hid chains in roses, and brought rustic subjects into harmony with le style noble of the Court. Its omnipotence was asserted in the deep carvings of the wainscotings in those Louis XV. rooms. They are an exquisite adaptation of the Grinling Gibbons' style. Even yet they are permeated with the life and gracefulness—and corruption—of French art in the eighteenth century. It seems a pity that those garlands and ornamental motifs, carved in high relief in the block, should have been painted. The white paint and touches of gilding make them less salient than if the wood were the natural colour. But everything was painted then. Cornice carvings of the Cabinet des Chasses represents Loves hunting somebody. The King is implied but not expressed. Respect for his regal character forbade him being represented, though Amoretti were the pursuers. This cabinet or room opens on a balcony looking on an inner courtyard. The monarch, his family, and courtiers used to go on this balcony to look by torch-light at trophies of the King's skill and daring as a hunter. The game was laid out in tableaux or still-life compositions. When stags had been hunted down and killed there was a curée froide. The curée chaude was reserved for Fontainebleau and Compiègne, where packs of hounds were let loose on live deer chained to stakes. A gilt door in the Cabinet des Chasses opens on another gilt balcony, ending in another door, which communicated with a smaller stair-way than that which led to De Pompadour's rooms. The latter even was thought too public. Louis XV. did not like to be shadowed by policiers acting as guardian angels, and so had a private-private stair-way made.

The Royal hunts helped to throw the King under the domination of reines de la main gauche. He came home tired, hungry, and often drenched, after chasing a stag. Wine was drunk as a pick-me-up. Madame de Pompadour got English Prime Ministers to send her butts of port and sherry. Courtiers were encouraged by that wicked old Marshal de Richelieu to help the effect of wine by lively talk. The hunting Loves on the cornice were no idle symbol. The captivated monarch showed his devotion for the Favourite by preparing tit-bits for her. A tiny range was set up for him, where he tossed pancakes, baked flaky vol-au-vents, became an adept in the art of making toothsome hasty dishes that met the caprices of her palate. There were œufs brouillés, with other dainties; beignets made with pineapples sent by the Duke of Newcastle from his hot-houses at Clermont; quails en grillade, stuffed à la diable with capsicums, and woodcock's trail; teal sauté in olive oil with olives was a Lenten delicacy. While the King became materialised, the mistress rose to goddess-ship. The greatest artists, as the Louis XV. rooms show, crowded ex-voto offerings on her altar. Art ran into innumerable channels. The more it utilised itself, the more it charmed. Chairs, tables, door-handles, fire-shovels, tongs, teacups, toilet vessels, stuffs for upholstery, for dresses, became exquisite masterpieces. The Czar and Czarina in their Versailles Rest will be surrounded with evidences of this diffusion of art. The artisan was elevated by the Beauty on the second floor of the palace into the transcendent artist. But the poor Queen? She was like a constitutional king—a figure-head. Her one duty to the nation was to give an heir to the throne. Poor thing! her life was too flat and formal for her to give a personal impetus of any sort.

The spirit of the eighteenth century seems yet to haunt the Czarsruhe at Versailles. One might fancy it still vitalising decorations, furniture, and portraits. What more alive, and yet more free from accentuation of liveliness, than Du Barry's bust? The neck is the poetry of matter. Strange that the two most exquisite necks of the last century should be doomed to the guillotine. Nattier and La Tour, portraitists of the Pompadour period, threw into the Princesses who will look down on Czar and Czarina in their Rest the spirit of their time. They seem only to need the opportunity to captivate Kings. One sees more than French vivacity in them. Their mother was a Pole. Mesdames l'Infante (the Duchess of Parma) and Adelaide are hung in the King's Saloon. They said of the former that she did not disdain to dally with Cardinal de Bernis, the Secretary for Foreign Affairs. Worse things circulated at Court about her and Adelaide. Michelet did not fear to set them down in black and white.

This too suggestive Czarsruhe was assigned to Grévy as a residence when he was President of the National Assembly and to his successors in that function. It is also the lodging of the Presidents of the two Chambers whenever they meet in Congress. Grévy, though not a superstitious man, fancied it haunted by naughty demons. He called it "une ermitage de St. Antoine." Curious that a Cythera created by Louis XV. should be the starting-point of Presidential reigns! No sooner is a President of the Republic elected than, setting out from La Galerie des Batailles, he proceeds to the Louis XV. in what state the Protocol allows. He is there received, congratulated and harangued by the Presidents of Congress who then and there subside into Presidents of the Senate. Grévy, Carnot, Casimir-Perier, and Faure observed this ceremonial. The excellent Félix Faure is said to imagine that he, through this consecration, succeeded to the Kings of France.

Does it seem to you the right thing for our bourgeois rulers to show off before the Czar and Czarina in the Palace of Versailles? If they meant treason to the Republic, I could imagine them properly doing so, or if their guest were, say, the President of the United States. To take him to feast there would be like taking him to picnic on a field of battle where his side had been victorious. Versailles is to republican Paris what York Town is to patriotic Americans. Its creator felt the spirit of Paris was uneasy, and entrenched himself at Versailles—the strongest military situation that there is relatively to the capital. Yet the spirit of Paris—expressing itself through a draggled, weather-stained, and starved crowd—was too much for the power that had its centre at Versailles. It is now to the Third Republic the electoral city, as Frankfort was that of the old German Empire. Taking the Czar there is really to parler de la corde dans la maison d'un pendu. I do not like the idea of the pensive lily-like Czarina, the daughter of the Princess Alice, being the tenant of such a Circe's den as les Petits Appartements de Louis Quinze.

Buildings, Carteret-st. Queen Anne's-gate, S.W.

Guizot was not a gossiping writer, but he liked to gossip in conversation. The Queen's sixtieth anniversary reminds me of a chat I had with him when she was going through France on her first visit to Baden-Baden. Guizot knew very well the Queen, Prince Consort, and most of their Coburg and Guelph relatives. He said on the occasion I recall that she was a delicate girl and of a pale complexion. Nobody could have thought she had a long life before her. King Leopold thought her chances of a long reign precarious. The person who had the strongest opinion on this subject was her uncle Ernest, who was always expecting to hear of her being struck down with a fatal illness. The wish was known to be father to the thought. After he became King of Hanover he wished with more ardour than ever. The first King of the Belgians told Guizot that until the Queen had several children he never felt easy in his mind about her, and thought that Bean was set on by some Hanoverian agent to give the Queen a mortal start, but not to shoot her. A son of the Queen of Hanover by her first husband kept Leopold informed of all the cabals at Hanover. He wanted to marry her, but his step-father was determined that she should not, because he wished her to die childless. How different her career from what her uncle presaged!

LETTER FROM THE LINKMAN.

QUEEN VICTORIA, dear Lady Betty, is the greatest of England's daughters. Called upon to reign at the most difficult period in history—during the Great Reconstruction—by the exercise of sound sense, by strict adherence to constitutional principles, by her dignified conduct as a Sovereign, and her admirable behaviour as a woman, Queen Victoria has enabled the vast Empire over which she has ruled so long to become larger, stronger, and more prosperous than it ever was before, and the people who inhabit it more contented than they have been in the entire history of our nation. That is a glorious achievement!

Attention has been directed by the newspapers this week to the many marvels which must make the present reign memorable, but one circumstance, and that the most remarkable, no writer has mentioned. Queen Victoria is the only Sovereign that has ruled over Great Britain who has attained and retained the respect of all her subjects. Even more curious is it that, however much the various nations may detest England, every Court and every people entertain the greatest respect for Queen Victoria. Year after year we have much reason to be kindly disposed towards the French, because of the especially gracious reception which they accord to our Sovereign when she visits their country. To have ruled long is considerably a matter of accident; to have ruled long and well is particularly remarkable; but to have ruled long and well and to be respected by all classes of the community, and also by all the neighbouring communities, is an achievement which no Sovereign probably has ever before accomplished.

. . . . .

It may be interesting at this moment to recall the great actors who have occupied the stage of life in England during this phenomenally long reign.

In literature there have flourished Southey, Campbell, Sydney Smith, Hood, Maria Edgworth, Joanna Baillie, Moore, Rogers, Charlotte Brontë, Hallam, Leigh Hunt, Macaulay, Archbishop Whately, Thackeray, Landor, Dickens, Grote, Lytton, Mill, Kingsley, "George Eliot," Disraeli, Lever, Matthew Arnold, Tennyson, Trollope, Browning, Froude, Ruskin, and Herbert Spencer. It is difficult to trace the cause or causes, but it is an unquestionable fact that since the seventies scarcely a great name has been added to the literary roll.

As regards music, the present reign is singularly poor. Whilst our neighbours were honouring masters like Mendelssohn, Chopin, Schumann, Rossini, Berlioz, Auber, Wagner, Verdi, Gounod, and Rubinstein, Balfe and Sir Arthur Sullivan are, perhaps, the most eminent composers we have had.

In art, there have been Wilkie, Etty, Turner, Martin, Mulready, Maclise, Landseer, Ward, Frith, Millais, Leighton, and Long.

Amongst the sculptors are Chantrey, Gibson, Foley, Stevens, Noble, Woolner, Boehm, the Thornycrofts, and Gibson.

Science has secured six great men—Faraday, Tyndall, Darwin, Huxley, Herschell the younger, and Lord Kelvin.

. . . . .

There have been seven attempts made upon the life of the Queen.

* * * * *

It is curious that the traditional dislike the French have for England has increased since the Franco-Prussian war of 1870-1. Few seem to remember that in 1874 four ornamental volumes containing addresses and thanks from the principal towns of France for the relief given by England to the French after that disastrous campaign were presented to the Queen. These volumes contain 12,000,000 signatures, and inscribed upon the covers is the sentence "Britanniæ Grata Gallia." This gratitude appears to have been short-lived.

. . . . .

As next week the Parisians are going to give an enthusiastic reception to the Emperor of Russia, the French nation may be opportunely reminded of the following coalitions which have been formed against France, in all of which Russia took a part:—

June, 1799. Great Britain, Germany, Russia, Naples, Portugal, and Turkey.

August, 1805. Great Britain, Russia, Austria, and Naples.

October, 1806. Great Britain, Russia, Prussia, and Saxony.

March, 1813. Russia and Prussia.

. . . . .

As regards the present unreasonable war-scare, it may also be well to remember that both in 1877 and in 1885 the Reserves were called out in consequence of the prospect of an immediate war with Russia. We did not, however, come to blows, nor shall we now.—Believe me to be, very truly yours, MARMADUKE.

PRINCE OF WALES HOTEL, HARROGATE.—Finest position, facing the Stray. Redecorated and sumptuously refurnished. New management. Excellent stabling. Electric light throughout.

SPORTING NOTES.

A PROMINENT owner of racehorses, who is also a most successful breeder, has privately expressed his regret that the Princess of Wales' Stakes and the Jockey Club Stakes for 1899 should have filled, although, by the way, he has himself patronised both events. It is perfectly certain that a £10,000 stake for three-year-olds is quite out of place in July, and it is a pity that owners should be tempted to over-race their horses, but they are evidently unable to resist such baits. In 1893 Isinglass won the Two Thousand, the Newmarket Stakes, and the Derby, and then was given a rest until the St. Leger, and after Doncaster he ran only once more as a three-year-old, for the then existing Lancashire Plate of £8,000 at Manchester, when he was beaten by Raeburn, to whom he was giving 10 lb. This was the single blunder in the management of Isinglass during his racing career, for he ought not to have started at Manchester. However, this horse was not over-raced as a three-year-old, the result being that he won all the £10,000 stakes as a four-year-old. It is a flagrant fact that a Derby or Leger winner in training and in form as a five-year-old is now as rare a phenomenon on the turf as a phœnix or a unicorn. The career of Ladas was similar to that of Isinglass until after the Derby, when the fatal mistake was committed of training him for the Princess of Wales Stakes and for the Eclipse Stakes, instead of reserving him for the Leger, and the issue of this severe work was that Ladas never won another race, and, as a matter of fact, he was probably "settled" decisively when he ran third to Isinglass and Bullingdon at Newmarket. This year St. Frusquin has followed in the steps of Ladas, except that he won both his summer races, and that they brought his turf career to a sudden close. However, the practical lesson is the same, which is that horses cannot be treated as if they were made of iron, and that the result of the summer £10,000 races has been distinctly mischievous. If there could be a big stake for four-year-olds and upwards it would be a good thing indeed, but a subscription race of this kind would never fill. The Ascot authorities might, however, do something if they would convert the Hardwicke Stakes into a race of £5,000. Owners of good horses have really little temptation to keep them on the turf, as five-year-olds are carefully excluded from all the £10,000 races, and the only rich events open to them are the Ascot Cup (and how few horses can stay the course!) and the Hardwicke Stakes, of which the net value is not much over £2,000. One crack-brained scribe seems to have been thrown into paroxysms of delight at the success of the Newmarket events, and twaddles about the exciting and brilliant races in which they have resulted. As a matter-of-fact, since these events were started they have been failures as races to all intents and purposes, except on two occasions, when Isinglass defeated Bullingdon and Ladas in 1894, and last July, when St. Frusquin beat Persimmon and Regret. Last year only a mooncalf could pretend to regard with satisfaction the victories of such animals as Le Var and Laveno, who won simply because they had a great advantage in the weights. It seems to me that the Stewards might devote the money wasted on these races to a better purpose. Last year they cost the Fund £2,939, and the loss on this season's Princess of Wales' Stakes was nearly £2,000.

There are 217 entries for the Princess of Wales' Stakes, and 221 for the Jockey Club Stakes. The Duke of Westminster and Sir Tatton Sykes are the largest subscribers to both races, each having ten entries. Sir Tatton has engaged two of the yearlings which failed to sell at Doncaster, and eight foals now at Sledmere, which will be offered for sale next September. They include colts by Fernandez (brother to Isonomy) out of Wedlock (dam of Best Man), by St. Simon out of Mimi, by St. Simon out of Plaisanterie (this is an own brother to Childwick and Raconteur), by Royal Hampton out of Claribelle, by Marcion out of Marchioness, and by Orme out of Sibyl; and a filly by Bend Or out of Chrysalis (dam of Laodamia). It is odd, by the way that this mare has not been sent again to Kendal, the sire of the Cesarwitch favourite. The Prince of Wales has entered his foal Sandringham (brother to Persimmon) in both races. Mr. Cooper has a foal that is own brother to Floret, and I hope its turf career may be more prolonged and successful than was that of its sister. Mr. Fulton enters a foal by Kendal and Comedy, who won the Cambridgeshire in 1891. It is funny to find Lord Harewood entering a couple of foals in one of these races after the opinions on the subject which he publicly expressed on a recent occasion. Sir F. Johnstone has a foal by Royal Hampton and Thistle, dam of Common and Throstle. Sir J. B. Maple has nine entries, one of which is a filly foal by Orme out of Corrie Roy. Mr. J. C. Platt has entered six of the foals at Bruntwood, including an own brother to Saintly, a colt by Kendal out of Maid Marion, and a filly by Kendal out of the famous St. Marguerite, dam of Sea Breeze. The mare is now in foal to Isinglass. All the Duke of Westminster's four foals are by Orme, the dams being Ruth, Quetta, Vampire, and Jersey Lily.

Mr. Calvert has been exceedingly ill-advised in writing a very silly letter to the papers, in which he states that Chit Chat will not run for the Cesarewitch unless he can obtain a good jockey, and he writes to caution the public, "as support may be given to Chit Chat on the strength of rumours that have got about that N. Robinson or Fearis has been engaged to ride." Mr. Calvert must be a person of truly infantile ingenuousness if he really supposes that such "rumours" would lead any sane people to put money on his horse for this race. People have backed Chit Chat because they fancy his chance after his running in the Great Yorkshire Handicap at Doncaster, and Mr. Calvert desired to have the market to himself (and it has been openly stated that he complains of having been forestalled). His policy in letting the horse run a public trial at Doncaster was asinine and anserous, for it was inevitable that the public would at once jump in. One thing is certain, which is, that Chit Chat has a better chance in the two Newmarket handicaps than is likely to be given him again after his Doncaster performance, and I hear that Lord Durham scratched Drip because he felt convinced that she could not beat Mr. Calvert's gelding. I have no fancy myself for Chit Chat, being doubtful whether any boy whatever can do justice to the animal, as he wants a lot of riding, and I do not believe he has any chance of defeating Laodamia, Arlequin, or St. Bris.

The course at Manchester last week was like a swamp, and several horses which had been sent to the meeting returned home without fulfilling their engagements, in consequence of the utterly rotten state of the ground. Worse going never was seen, and the running should be entirely ignored. What with the killing of Troon and the accident to T. Loates, this fixture is likely to be long remembered, and unless the managers of the meeting can make better arrangements in several important respects, the majority of owners will be disposed to withdraw their patronage from Manchester.

I expressed the opinion last week that Prince Soltykoff's Filliford would win the Autumn Breeders' Foal Plate on Friday, and the colt was backed down to 11 to 8 in a field of ten, but he could not move in the mud, and was out of it before fifty yards had been traversed. Wreath Or (who had been well galloped at Newmarket) won very easily indeed, having started at the satisfactory price of 100 to 12. Filliford will probably compensate Prince Soltykoff for his Manchester collapse by winning the Boscawen Post Stakes of £600 at Newmarket if he can beat the Duke of Portland's candidate.

Some of the Duke of Westminster's two-year-olds were tried at Kingsclere on Friday, and Brooch, by Blue Green out of Ornament, did best in the gallop, but probably Blue Water (second) was giving her weight. Simoon, by St. Simon out of Shotover, was among the beaten lot, but I hear that this filly is to run for the Bretby Park Stakes at Newmarket on the day after the Cesarewitch.

It is incomprehensible why Count Schomberg has been backed so persistently for the Cesarewitch. M. Lebaudy's horse did not appear to have improved in any way when he was seen out in the summer, and, most assuredly, his public form does not justify the belief that he will win this handicap with 8 st. 4 lb. on his back. Count Schomberg's four defeats appear to have been forgotten by his infatuated friends, who would do well to study the horse's running, taken in connection with the form of the various animals which finished in front of him in those races. I hear that they are depending on a trial with Quilon, which will probably turn out to be utterly misleading. I am told that Mr. Fulton has £1,000 on Laodamia, and whatever beats her will win, if she comes to the post fit and well. Thais will not run, being in reserve for the Cambridgeshire, but she is more likely to win the Derby Cup. Portmarnock has been going much better since rain has fallen so copiously, and he will be well suited by the heavy ground. Arlequin is one of the very few animals in the race that can be thoroughly trusted to stay the course. Of course, his recent defeat in France is unworthy of notice, as he was similarly beaten last summer just before he came over to England, and he then cantered away with the Ascot Stakes. There can be no mistake as to the opinion which is entertained respecting Arlequin's Cesarewich chance by those who know most about the horse, as he has been very heavily-backed for good money, and is positively a much better favourite than he was before his defeat in France. St. Bris is very much fancied by clever people, and he has been backed by men who are always cautious in their transactions. The Cesarewitch betting, however, will not be on an extensive scale during the next few days, as people are waiting to see the result of the race for the Prix du Conseil Municipal on Sunday next. If Victor Wild should win this £4,000 stake, defeating the best of the French horses, he will, of course, become first favourite for the Cesarewitch, in which handicap his weight is 8 st. 13 lb. If, however, Champaubert is a real flyer, he ought to win the Prix du Conseil Municipal, and a victory in that race will make him a tremendous favourite for the Cambridgeshire. This short handicap will be, therefore, considerably affected by the running at Longchamps. Quarrel is now favourite for the Cambridgeshire, but this horse will probably run at Kempton Park next week, Lord Rosebery being represented at Newmarket by Sir Visto or Avilion. I stated last week that Knight of the Thistle will be the best of the Bedford Cottage lot, and the horse has since supplanted Snowy Corrie in the betting, having been backed down to 100 to 8, in anticipation of his defeating Persimmon to-morrow. All the papers plump in large letters for the Prince of Wales's colt for the Jockey Club Stakes, but I shall not be in the least surprised to see him beaten by both the Duke of Westminster's candidate and Knight of the Thistle.

Buildings, Carteret-st. Queen Anne's-gate, S.W.

I have received an interesting letter concerning the Doncaster sales from a correspondent who is a competent authority on the subject. I will deal with the matter later on, when the time comes to review the sales of the season.

Mr. Brassey was at Newmarket last week, and on Thursday he saw Pardalo win a trial over the R.M. distance, Bay Ronald being among the beaten lot. The horse is still backward, but he will win a race at one of the back end meetings if he goes on all right. Another trial over five furlongs ended in the easy victory of St. Agnese, who ought to win the next race for which she starts.

Red Heart has no chance for the Cambridgeshire, and if 25 to 1 has really been taken about the horse (as stated), the backers must either be idiots, or else their fancy for him must be founded in complete ignorance of his present condition. Red Heart went in a very stilted style in a gallop last week, and his fore legs were heavily bandaged. The chances are that he will not stand another preparation. Mr. Rucker, however, certainly ought to win a good handicap with King Hampton, and it is by no means unlikely that he will carry off the Duke of York Handicap.

I see it asserted that the withdrawal of St. Frusquin from the turf will leave the £10,000 stakes of next season "at the mercy of Persimmon." In any case, such a fanfaronnade would be decidedly premature, for there will be the three-year-olds to be reckoned with; but, as a matter of fact, Persimmon does not happen to have been entered for either of the Newmarket £10,000 races of 1897, his only engagements being the Hardwicke Stakes at Ascot, the Eclipse Stakes at Sandown Park, and the Champion Stakes at Newmarket. Velasquez is also in the Eclipse Stakes, and so are Galeazzo and Goletta.

Next week there will be racing at Nottingham, Leicester, and Kempton Park, and at the last of these meetings there ought to be some excellent, and most interesting and important, sport.

The Imperial Produce Stakes of £3,000 was a great race last year, when Teufel beat St. Frusquin, also in 1894, when Sir Visto won, after a splendid finish with Float, and in 1893, when Matchbox just managed to defeat Son o' Mine, who has never since run within measurable distance of the form which he then showed. The prospect for next week, however, is not so promising, as the race seems to be at the mercy of Lord Rosebery, who has both Velasquez (10 lb. extra) and Chelandry (5 lb. extra) engaged. The filly has really earned the extreme penalty, but she has the advantage of a 5 lb. breeding allowance. This pair hold all the public lot quite safe, Lord Cadogan's filly, Lowly, and Cyrenian being, apparently, the best of them. As to the dark contingent, Mr. Houldsworth may run Rapallo, own brother to Laveno and Orvieto, and Lord Alington's Vesuvian, by Royal Hampton out of Fuse, has been much talked about. I shall be vastly surprised, however, if Lord Rosebery fails to secure the stake.

The Duke of York Handicap cannot be dealt with until next week, especially as not a single bet has yet been laid on it. A dangerous candidate has been removed by the disappearance of Troon, who had been going remarkably well in his gallops, and he is a great loss to the Duke of Portland's stud. It is probable that the policy of several owners whose animals are engaged both at Kempton Park and in the Cambridgeshire will be considerably influenced by the running at Newmarket and at Longchamps. Quarrel will be favourite if he starts (as is most probable), and Rampion must have a good chance. The handicap, however, is a "flattering" one all round, and would have done credit to the ingenuity of the late Mr. Frail. Bellevin is out of it with a penalty of 14 lb. for his victory at Manchester, which makes his weight 7 st. 10 lb.

An old cricketer wishes to bring two suggestions forward before the football season attracts all attention. One of his ideas deserves consideration, the other is utterly impracticable. He suggests that in the scores of cricket matches the position of the player who made the catch should be indicated. Thus s.s. Lohmann would mean caught by that player at short slip. The idea is a good one, as the reader could tell by the score alone a great deal about the facts of the game. I hope my correspondent will present this idea to certain enterprising daily papers whose object is to condense news, and then one may be pretty sure other journals will soon follow suit. At the same time he might urge secretaries on county grounds to hoist the number of the player making a catch on the scoring board, in addition to the numbers of the bowlers and batsmen, as is the case at present. The other idea is that the follow-on should be decided relatively, instead of absolutely, as at present. The state of the wicket is to decide the follow, the number of runs to be fixed by a committee of three from each team. Well, the wicket has enough to answer for already, and it is much better to let the rules, rather than the weather or the groundman, regulate the follow-on.

In more respects than one the great meeting of the Ravensbourne Swimming Club was decidedly interesting. It is impossible to have anything but admiration for a club that has done so much to promote sport among City trading houses, and which has, therefore, induced a number of young men to take part in healthy exercise instead of squandering and frittering their time away. The members of clubs like these are the proletariat of amateur sport. The members of this very club have forced themselves into a high position among the legislative section of swimmers. Those members were particularly active in promoting the meeting, out of which the club was not going to make a penny. I see no reason to believe that it did make a farthing. On the contrary, it must have been very much out of pocket. But then it is very wealthy, and got a good advertisement, which will, no doubt, recoup the club indirectly. Too much importance need not be attached to its virtuous conduct in this respect. There was a huge handicap that secured 170 entrants. This success was achieved by giving a prize to every heat-winner and to each man swimming in the final, and fast-time prizes for English, Scotch, Irish, and Welsh swimmers. Owing to a protest, Derbyshire, the scratch man, started in the final. If the protest is upheld he will get a prize for fastest time, another for being in the final, and another for winning his heat. Any scheme more conducive to pot-hunting it would be impossible to conceive. Any club with a big-enough pocket could do the same, and such prize orgies are obviously the worst possible thing for sport. A staple feature at most of these races is the prize for the fastest loser, or if two good men are swimming, then two pots are given. These prizes are clearly given as a solatium to the champions, who are lucky young men to be able to travel all over the country as they do. They are journeymen amateurs, and considering how pure amateur swimming is said to be, one can only regret that such a prominent club as the Ravensbourne, with officials occupying so prominent a position in the Amateur Swimming Association, should organise an event of the character that has been described.

The swimming, however, was very good. In the team race for City houses the Connaught were just first, while the finish for the club race was very close—all the men being close up, and Hodgson just winning. The international polo between England and Scotland was, as an exhibition of foul play, decidedly interesting. At Birmingham, the Manchester Osborne again won the Polo championship. Leicester, in the absence of Tyers from the opposing team were expected to have a good chance, but their play was not up to the mark. The Otters should have a most interesting meeting on October 6 and their recent veterans' race produced some good swimming, Blew-Jones, an old champion, doing remarkably well, and Brett just winning. At the Orion meeting Ealing won the team race. Craig, in attempting a high dive, struck the bottom and was fetched up insensible. These exhibitions are very senseless, and clubs should never sanction them under any pretext whatever. The Kent team were easily beaten by Surrey in water polo, and the Polytechnic Harriers wound up a soaking athletic meeting with a swimming handicap at Wembley, Allen just getting home first.

It will be necessary for Rugby footballers to bear in mind that at the recent meeting of the Union all case law was abolished, and that, therefore, all decisions on the rules which were not altered are no longer binding. This seems very ridiculous, but the point was expressly raised by a member, and it was decided as I have stated. The case raised was, I believe, on the decision that when a three-quarter impedes or obstructs another the scrimmage will be where the foul takes place and not where the scrimmage is being played as hereto predecided. It seems a great pity that with all the tinkering it goes in for, the Union still needs a satisfactory and grammatical set of rules. The case I have indicated will clearly work great hardship. Assume a scrimmage in front of goal. A defending wing three-quarter goes up to obstruct his opponent, and he gets a scrum near the touch line, which is just what his side would prefer.

Rugby football opened in London with a tough game between the Harlequins and Old Merchant Taylors. There were rumours of a split in the ranks of the former club, but so far as I can gather they are absolutely without foundation. They started the season with a win. The Old Boys show promise, and they are trying hard to work up the new and younger players, the old hands most chivalrously going to play for the second team, and in many respects setting an example which other clubs would do well to follow.

A correspondent from a German University, Marburg, emphatically repudiates all connection with the German Association football team that recently visited us. He says the South German and Berlin players knew nothing about it, and that they could give the team that came over here a good beating if it did not play professionals. The Berliners will not play with "pros." I did not know that football had so far progressed in Germany that professionalism had become an institution? I advise the Berlin men to play and beat the paid players.

What a topsy-turvy list is the first division of the League. Sunderland are firmly fixed at the bottom, and after their defeat by Burton are likely to remain there for a time. Everton visited the Villa, and reversed the former League verdict, while Derby County look as though they had quite returned to their old form, and Liverpool are still in the running for a good place. Woolwich Arsenal started off in a very half-hearted way against Notts County, and, although they warmed up at the finish, they had to put up with their first defeat this season.

Despite the weather the sport at the concluding meeting of the L.A.C. was remarkably good. Munro in the two miles won from scratch in excellent time, having been on the shelf practically all through the summer. In the half, Crowhurst, with eight yards, won in very good style, and Butler, at scratch, moved remarkably well. Of course the best event was the mile walk between Sturgess and Fenton, which the former just won in record time. Both men are to be congratulated on their brilliant display. It is with great regret that we have heard of the sudden death of Percy McDonnell, the Australian cricketer. How many yearned for such a dashing bat in the visitors team this summer. He could hit, and on bad wickets, too. Was it not in a test match at Manchester that he scored 82 out of 86 runs on a queer wicket? Only this summer at the Oval, a well-known cricketer said, "If McDonnell had been playing." That meant a lot when Hearne and Peel were making the ball do as they liked.

MAMMON.

From MOSES MOSS to BENJAMIN BOSS.

Sunday.

MY DEAR BEN,—I said last week that a further rise in the Bank rate was not improbable, as the Directors of the Bank of England did not make the 2½ per cent. basis effective, and, under all the circumstances, the advance to 3 per cent. has been received with very general satisfaction, as protecting the stock of gold here and assuring some kind of finality. I also stated last week that an all-round rally was due, as the ursine party had committed themselves very far in various directions.

When will the "Bears" be Squeezed?

The action of the Bank of England on Thursday was greeted by the Consol market with an advance, but the "Bears" have since been assiduously depressing Consols, and may be said to have temporarily regained control of the markets. In this they were assisted in the first instance by the execrable weather, the steady downpour having a depressing effect upon the minds of operators, and a direct weakening influence upon Home Rails. It is quite useless to attempt to prophesy on the weather in this country, but it is safe to predict that a few days of sunshine would furnish a great deal of support to Home Rails, in which the relapse has reached altogether unjustifiable proportions. Granting even that a good deal of stock held on borrowed money had to be sold, there was no reason for the heavy decline in the more speculative or higher yielding descriptions, such as Brighton "A," Dover "A," and the Scotch Deferred stocks, and I am still of opinion that a sharp recovery in these must come about sooner or later. Consols touched 109¾ on the advance in the Bank rate, but have since eased off to 109¼, strong efforts being made by the "Bears" to depress quotations, recovering, however, to 109½. In the absence of unfavourable political news and with the Consol settlement approaching, at which it is expected that a backwardation will be exacted from the ursine party, a sharp rally is quite on the cards. The political outlook has distinctly improved. Not only has the shrieking fraternity pretty well worn out its efforts at the various indignation meetings, but the view is spreading very generally that it is quite out of the question for England to intervene single-handed in Turkey; while, on the other hand, Lord Salisbury's interview with the Czar is not unlikely to lead to a more amicable understanding between this country and Russia. At all events, the fears of a European conflagration, upon which large sales were made on the Stock Exchange, may be dismissed as unfounded. There remains the monetary situation. It is not improbable that further amounts of gold will be shipped to the States, but there is nothing to indicate the withdrawal of any large sums for this destination; and the inquiry for gold for the Continent has subsided. For a month or two, therefore, the three per cent. Bank rate should suffice to protect the Bank reserve, and there is absolutely no reason why such a rate should militate against legitimate speculation. I again say that gilt-edged securities, which have been pushed up to an exaggerated level, such as British Corporation stocks, Colonial bonds, prior charges of Home Railways, and a number of industrial debentures, are likely to suffer further. But I can see no reason why the mining markets should be interfered with, and I still say that an all-round rally is due in these. The settlement has commenced most satisfactorily. Rates in Home Rails were light and in the South African and West Australian markets they were no higher than last time, while in several instances stocks were carried over at even, and backwardations exacted, thus showing not only that the account is greatly reduced, but that the "Bears" have committed themselves to a great extent. The position, in fact, has become much clearer, and, barring accidents, it is evident that the big financiers by a concerted movement could easily, in the near future, bring about a "Bear" skedaddle. In a time of nervousness all manner of unfounded rumours are set about, and during the past week the syndicate of liars has been particularly busy, one of its most astounding performances being a report that Sir Philip Currie had been assassinated by the Turks; but the power of the "Bears" for mischief vanishes with the calmer state of the public mind, and I should think, therefore, that such lies would not in future gain credence. American Rails have experienced a further important advance, and thus fully confirm the correctness of the view which I took about a month ago that a marked recovery would take place. Just as the weakness of the Yankee market has for a long time been a serious drawback, so the marked improvement in these stocks should act as an impulse and support for the other departments, and it is in my opinion only a question of time as to when the "Bear" squeeze will come about.

Buildings, Carteret-st. Queen Anne's-gate, S.W.

Home Rails.

Further realisations have been forced during the past week in the Home Railway market, and fresh declines have been brought about. I have already explained that, so far as the Heavies are concerned, I am not very hopeful of a marked recovery in these, as their yield is comparatively low, so that it is only in the fitness of things that prices should be affected by the rise in the Bank rate. Yet the further fall which has taken place does not exceed two points, and a firmer tone is again making itself felt. The more speculative stocks, and those yielding higher returns, should certainly recover their excessive relapse. I place in the first rank amongst these Brighton "A" and Dover "A." Deliveries of stock have depressed the former to 178, but when it is considered that at this price they yield approximatively 4 per cent. to the investor it will be seen that a recovery might easily take place. There is, of course, to be considered the effect of the execrable weather upon traffics, but so far returns have not suffered to any extent, and a change in the atmospheric conditions would doubtless make good the small decreases which have occurred lately. This also applies to the South-Eastern, which has a large traffic increase of £10,700 for the twelve weeks of the current half-year, and which is known to have greatly reduced its expenditure. As a most progressive stock, therefore, Dover "A" at the present quotation must still be considered a good purchase. Why the Scotch stocks should keep at so low a level it is difficult to understand. Traffics are keeping on about the same scale as last year, when the Companies were doing a very large business, and for the eight weeks of the current financial half-year the Caledonian has an increase of £13,092, the North British one of £16,119. Trade in Scotland is satisfactory, and the Caledonian is reaping considerable benefit from the Glasgow Central Extension. Caledonian Deferred Ordinary (Coras) at present price yield nearly 4 per cent. per annum, and the progress which is being made by the North British is such that a satisfactory dividend may also be looked for in the current half-year, so that North British Deferred will doubtless improve as soon as the surroundings become a little brighter. The most active market has been that of Districts, which have been taken up by several strong groups, and which at one time touched 33, reacting to 31½, and recovering to 33¼. It is no secret that several strong groups are now taking an interest in this line, and that the price would already have advanced to a much higher level were it not for the efforts which are being made to keep the quotation down by one of these groups in order to get hold of more stock. Directly this purpose has been accomplished, or perhaps sooner, we shall see an important advance, as there is not the slightest doubt that the deep-level express scheme will be carried out. Holders of Districts will, therefore, do well to stick tight to their stock. From reliable information I am able to state that, notwithstanding the further banging of the market by some of the professional operators, something like a quarter of a million stock is being taken up this or next account, good provincial brokers, as well as shopkeepers all over South Kensington now being buyers for investment. Small delays may occur in the carrying-out of the scheme; but the importance of the connection by express trains between the East and West is so great, that all possible despatch may be depended upon. I have on former occasions had to criticise certain actions of the somewhat old-fashioned District Board, but I am agreeably surprised at the alacrity and enterprise with which they have taken up this latest project.

The Yankee Market Buoyant.

There is no doubt that the financial position in the United States has greatly improved. In the first instance, the large gold shipments from Europe have strengthened the banks and the Treasury, and the gold movement is all the more satisfactory as it is not artificial, but based upon the large exports of produce from the States. In August last the exports of merchandise from the United States were 12,600,000 dols. larger than for the corresponding month of 1895, and there is, at the same time, shown a decrease in the imports of 21,650,000 dols. Thus the balance of trade is gradually working in favour of the United States, and to this must be added the cessation of indiscriminate sales of American securities by European holders. On the contrary, increased attention has been given by the public to the Yankee market here, and investors have been picking up small and large blocks to be locked up until after the Presidential election. The prospects of Mr. Bryan are distinctly growing worse, and it is dawning even upon many of his supporters that his preaching of silverism as a cure for every financial and industrial ill is delusive. McKinley's chances of a good majority are undoubtedly increasing. This may also be gathered from the deep impression which the Republican victory in Vermont has made. Some of my American contemporaries are quoting an old saying, that "as goes Vermont so goes the United States." Looking at it from an unbiased point of view there is good cause and reason for the enthusiasm and rejoicing manifested, as the voting in Vermont clearly indicates that the free silver heresy has not taken hold in the east to the extent generally supposed or claimed by the Bryan shouters. The State of Vermont—always Republican—generally casts about 56,000 votes, and elected its Governor in 1894 by a majority of about 27,000 votes. This year out of the same total number of votes it elected its Governor by a majority of 39,000 votes, thus clearly showing that at least 12,000 Democrats voted the Republican ticket. This is significant as indicating the trend of public opinion, and as such goes far towards reassuring the friends of and believers in the gold standard. In this market the advance has been general during the last few days, Milwaukee leading the way, as will be gathered from the following comparative list:—

Champagne.—Périnet & Fils' Cuvée Réservée. Vintages 1884, 1887, and 1889, are of unrivalled quality and highly recommended for present consumption. Of all Wine Merchants.

—	Price Jan. 2, 1896.	High'st in 1896.	Low'st in 1896.	Sept. 18.	Sept. 28.
Atchison	14½	18 3/16	9	12	13½
Do. Five per Cent. Prefs.	22	23⅞	14⅜	17⅞	20¼
Atlantic Firsts	22	26 9/16	20	24¼	24¼
Canadian Pacifics	51¾	65⅛	51	59⅝	60¼
Central Pacific	15½	17½	13	14	14⅞
Denver	12⅜	14 11/16	10	11¼	12
Do. Pref.	42¾	51⅞	37¼	42¾	44¾
Erie	14⅛	16⅛	11¼	13⅛	14⅝
Lake Shore	144	155	138	148	151
Louisville	44⅝	56¾	38⅞	42	43⅝
Milwaukee	69⅛	81⅝	61¾	72⅝	75⅝
Mis., Kan., and Texas	11¼	13 13/16	8⅞	10⅜	11½
Norfolk Pref.	8	14⅛	10⅛	13⅜	15
Nor. Pacific Pref.	12½	21⅛	14	20	22⅛
New York Central	98	101⅞	90¼	95	96
Ontario	13¼	16½	11¼	13	14¼
Reading	2	8 3/16	3⅛	8¼	9⅜
Southern Ordy.	8¾	11⅛	6⅝	7⅜	8¾
Do. Pref.	26½	34⅜	18½	21¾	25⅛
Union Pacific	4⅛	9¾	3⅛	5⅞	7¼
Wabash Pref.	15¾	20 3/16	12	14¼	15½

The rise in Milwaukee extends to three dollars, and the price is now thirteen dollars above the lowest this year. A strong "Bull" combination appears to have been formed, and the "Bears" are being badly squeezed. Louisville have also displayed greater strength, although curiously enough the tap always seems to be turned on here whenever the price touches 43½. Atchison Five per Cent. Prefs. have been particularly strong, and an improvement in Reading securities was one of the features. Messrs. Morgan are also apparently giving the stocks of the Southern Railway some support. I mentioned some time ago how capitalists were picking up blocks of low-priced stocks, in order to lock them up until after the elections. The course of Readings, Union Pacifics, Ontario, Atchison, and Erie during the past few months appears to fully justify the view then taken, as a general recovery has already taken place. Far be it from me to now preach a policy of daring and indiscriminate speculation. The result of the Presidential election after all cannot be altogether relied upon, and there must necessarily be temporary reactions. Those who wish to take a hand in Yankee Rails before November should avail themselves of such reactions to purchase, while selling again on an advance. This advice I repeatedly gave my readers of late, and those who have followed it intelligently have made money. Canadian Pacifics have derived some support from the improvement in the Yankee market, and Grand Trunks appear at last to be falling into line.

Notice to Connoisseurs of Fine Dry Champagne.—Périnet & Fils' Cuvée Réservée, Extra Sec, is in magnificent condition, at Hotel Cecil, Hotel Savoy, Midland Grand Hotel, Spiers & Pond's Hotels and Buffets, and most leading Hotels & Restaurants.

Foreigners and South Americans.

The feature in the Foreign market has been the withdrawal of the Spanish Quicksilver Loan by Messrs. Rothschild, their action causing a sharp fall in Spanish. It appears that the terms of the loan were not palatable to the underwriters, and the New Court firm therefore decided to postpone the issue. In this they doubtless acted wisely, as the surrounding circumstances were exceptionally unfavourable. It is reported that the Loan will be issued in October, and I have no doubt that on certain terms this will be possible, although it is only staving off the final collapse which must come in Spanish finance. Italians have been steady, and Turks are rather firmer, which is the best indication that matters in Constantinople are no worse. Argentine Government stocks are easier. There seems to be a hitch as regards the carrying-out of the unification scheme of the Argentine Debt. The 1886 and Funding Loans, for instance, which are specially secured on the Customs receipts, have a priority which entitles them to preferential treatment. The Buenos Ayres Water and Drainage bonds have also a special security, and it appears that so far no negotiations have been set going with the financial houses here to obtain the assent of the bondholders to the unification. The bondholders obviously would expect a higher ratio of conversion to induce them to accept Four per Cent. Unified bonds instead. I see that the South American Journal suggests, on the authority of Mr. C. H. Sanford, that the above-mentioned loans should for a time remain in the same condition in which they now stand, and that the unification of the other national and provincial debts should be proceeded with. It is suggested that such a step would probably raise at once the market value of the junior securities and of the new Unified bonds, when Mr. Sanford believes that it would be possible to make better terms with the holders of the Preferred Loans. I must confess that I greatly doubt the efficacy of such an arrangement, as the new Unified bonds having the priority of the other loans before them would not stand in a satisfactory position, and the new security might thus be discredited to such an extent that the holders of the Preferred bonds would be all the more reluctant to convert. An absurd cable report has been published to the effect that the Argentine Government propose to buy up all the Argentine Railways. It will be interesting to know where the Argentine Government expects to get the money from to carry out such an operation. That Argentina will borrow again sooner or later I quite expect, and already the first indication of this is furnished by the proposed issue of new National Cedulas, a very unwise step from the point of view of Argentine credit. The various Argentine Railways are doing well, more especially the unguaranteed lines, the stocks of which have been in good request for investment. As regards the Debenture stocks of the guaranteed lines, I consider that the quotations have been carried high enough for the present. My readers are, of course, aware of the great disappointment which the traffic returns of the Western Railway of Santa Fé caused last year. Having made some inquiries into the present position I find that the aggregate receipts for thirty-eight weeks to September 19 of this year, in gold, amount to £83,080, while the aggregate receipts for thirty-eight weeks to September 21, 1895, amounted to £79,262. 17s. This year, therefore, shows an increase over last. I also learn that traffics have lately improved very much. Uruguay bonds have been dull in sympathy with Argentines, but the position in Uruguay appears to be quite satisfactory at present. Brazilians have also been dull, while Peruvian Corporation stocks have been steady, and Mexican Sixes continue to maintain a firm front. Venezuela have improved ½ to 40½, but there is no change in any of the rubbish stocks, with the exception of Honduras, which have declined to 5.

When will the Kaffir Circus Revive?

The South African market has continued during the past week in a state of suspended animation, and further reactions were brought about by the activity of the ursine party, which was supplemented by small realisations on the part of holders who have been frightened out by the continued slump. They were wrong in thus being induced at the eleventh hour to part with their stocks at a sacrifice, for all the rumours which had been current of serious difficulties in the market appear to have come to naught, and the circumstances surrounding the South African Mining industry, on the contrary, are becoming brighter. Why in all conscience a 3 per cent. bank rate should be looked upon as a menace to the Kaffir Circus I cannot understand. I have explained ad nauseam that this advance in the bank rate only affects high-class securities which had been rigged to excessive prices, and I ventured to predict that contangoes at the settlement would be very little changed; and so it has happened. At the carry over, rates were no heavier than last settlement, viz., from 5 to 9 per cent., and a number of shares were finally arranged at even or at a slight back, thus showing that the account had been greatly reduced, and that a considerable amount of "Bear" selling had been indulged in. It is easy to argue from such an abnormal state of things, and from such a low level of prices, that unless any unforeseen event occurs, a strong upward movement is only a question of time, especially as the mining industry on the Witwatersrand and in the Transvaal generally is making satisfactory progress. The Volksraad, it is true, is engaged in not altogether satisfactory legislation, such as a stringent Press law, and measures against any further upheaval by Uitlanders; but as regards the mining industry, everything is being done to promote its progress. The Volksraad will adjourn for a month on Wednesday next, and it may be anticipated that the Sunday Labour Prohibition Bill will not be passed. On the same day the reduction of the wages of the natives engaged in the mines will take place, and thus the mining industry will obtain the benefit of large savings in expenses. Another circumstance which has an indirect bearing on the Transvaal mines is the surrender of the native Chiefs in Rhodesia. There is no doubt that the backbone of the rebellion is broken, and that there will soon be a return to the normal state of things in Matabeleland. This will be a relief to the people who did not heed my warning against Chartered shares, and are holders of these at from £8 downwards. I am not an admirer of Chartered, but I should not be at all surprised to see them rise to a higher level, as so many powerful interests are connected with them that it will be easy to put them up to 4, in order perhaps then to unload. I am more than ever disposed, now that the soundness of the market position is shown, to anticipate a strong recovery in sound Transvaal gold and land shares. The past account has been a disastrous one, heavy differences having to be paid; but there is very little stock about, and already a moderate improvement on the carry-over prices has been established. Provided no further political or monetary surprises come upon us, there should be a substantial improvement the moment the big financiers interested in South Africa give the signal; and I should think that, in view of the different big schemes which they have on the tapis, they would not be slow to read the signs of the times and give the "Bears" a lesson. I regret that Mr. B. I. Barnato has not yet given any indication of calling a public meeting in order to give some information regarding his visit to South Africa. In the depressing circumstances of late even the most favourable statements would probably not have had any effect, and it would doubtless be preferable for him to face shareholders now that the worst seems to be over and a solid basis exists for an all-round improvement. I persist in strongly advising my readers not to throw away their holdings of Johannesburg Consolidated Investment, Barnato Banks, and other shares of this group. I also consider Randfontein as most promising in view of the important developments I mentioned last week, and amongst other shares of the Robinson group I am in favour of Langlaagte Estate, Porges Randfontein, Block "A," Randfontein Mynpacht, Langlaagte Estate and Building Corporation, and Langlaagte Star. A sharp recovery should also come about in Knights, which have been unduly depressed. Whenever crushing commences with the new battery, a smart advance is expected. Other shares which could be picked up with advantage are Modderfontein Extension ("B"), Woodstock (Transvaal), Waterfall Estates, and Transvaal Exploring; while the whole list of sound Witwatersrand outcrop mines, such as City and Suburban, New Crœsus, Durban Roodepoort, Ferreira, Geldenhuis, Glencairn, Meyer and Charlton, New Primrose, Robinson, Simmer and Jack, Wemmer, Wolhuter, &c., are a good purchase. The increase of capital of the New Primrose of 20,000 shares, which are offered to the shareholders pro rata at £5, can be explained only on the supposition that the Directors will now carry out their intention of increasing the number of stamps from 160 to 200. That would be a very satisfactory development. That such dangerous gambling counters as Consolidated Goldfields, East Rands and Rand Mines, Limited, should have suffered in the recent depression is natural enough; and these are now but slowly recovering from the heavy fall. With reference to my remarks on the "Annuaire Français des Mines d'Or," Mr. H. Durrant writes that this is not the first mining manual published in the French language; but that the "Annuaire des Mines d'Or," of which the "Annuaire de la Finance" are the publishers, had preceded it. This I have herewith much pleasure in recording. The more vade-mecums of mines our French neighbours have, the better it will be for them, if they use these manuals intelligently. Diamond shares have also participated in the general weakness, but there has since been a moderate recovery. De Beers are quoted 29⅜, New Jagersfontein 9½.

Golden West Australia.

The absurdity of the scare which visited the West Australian market during the past week was sufficiently shown by the fact that there was no difficulty in connection with the carry-over, and that contangoes were no higher than at the previous settlement, viz., from 8 to 10 per cent.; while in some cases the existence of a large "Bear" account was shown by the disappearance of the rate, a backwardation being actually exacted in the case of Hampton Plains. According to a cablegram just received, one of the reefs recently discovered in "Block 48" of that Company has now been proved for a length of 2,000 ft., showing visible gold. A further reef (20 ft. in width) has been discovered on the same block. On "Block 59" yet another reef has been struck. On "Block 53" one of the reefs has been proved to a depth of 30 ft. by means of a shaft, the reef showing visible gold, and a drive is now being made through good ore. This latest information goes to prove that the property of the Hampton Plains Estates Company is highly auriferous, and presents great possibilities. Hampton Plains, with Lady Lochs and a few other mines, had chiefly served the "Bears" for raiding the market generally, the True Blue disappointment being also used as a handle. I have already stated that I have never held a favourable opinion of the True Blue, but as a solitary instance it ought not to be used for the purpose of depreciating the West Australian Goldfields as a whole. Plenty of large crushings are testifying to the value of the leading mines, and the news of further discoveries is most satisfactory. What may be the actual position at the Lady Loch Mine I do not know, but the manager, Mr. McCracken, who is now in this country, should know all about this, and the fact that the shares remain in the neighbourhood of 2 does not in any way confirm the rumours which have been so persistently set about by the "Bears" that the reef had pinched out. A very welcome feature, and one which will tend to steady the whole of the West Australian market, has been a sharp recovery in West Australian Exploring and Finance and London and Globe Finance shares. I stated a fortnight ago that, owing to the very satisfactory position of these two Companies, an important advance might be looked for. Unfortunately, the unfavourable surroundings of the markets prevented this anticipation from being at once fulfilled, and the "Bears" began to take liberties with the shares, with the result that there was a material decline, which was, however, recovered in one day, the shares now standing at $4\frac{7}{16}$ to $4\frac{1}{2}$. I again repeat that both these Companies have made huge profits, running into several millions. In reply to a number of inquiries I may also state that meetings of the two Companies will be held in December to confirm their amalgamation. The reports which will be issued before these meetings will contain the announcement of large dividends, and I again say that, disregarding temporary fluctuations, these shares are one of the best purchases in the market for an important advance. Both Corporations stand on the same basis, and the shares are intrinsically of the same value, although a difference is made in the market price, which should, however, gradually adjust itself. The consulting engineer of these Companies, Mr. Charles Kaufman, who is also, it will be remembered, engineer to the Lake View Consols, will shortly be able to personally confirm the views which he recently expressed in a cablegram concerning the Lake View Consols and the other mines of this group. Mr. Kaufman sailed from Western Australia last Saturday on a visit to England. His journey is of a purely private character, and for the purpose of an operation which he prefers to have performed here rather than in the Australian colonies. During his temporary absence arrangements have been made for the prosecution of the work in the various mines with which he is associated, and all of which are now sufficiently advanced and developed to allow of a short absence of the consulting engineer. This unlooked-for opportunity of meeting Mr. Kaufman will, on the other hand, be most welcome to the shareholders in the various Companies. As regards the Lake View Consols all reports both by mail and cable confirm the most favourable statements which have appeared. It is evidently a wonderful mine, which will become one of the largest gold producers in the world, and the shares should rise considerably above the present quotation of $7\frac{7}{8}$. I understand that the application to the Stock Exchange for a special settlement in Lake View Consols is being opposed in certain quarters, but it appears to me that there is no reason for delaying the date of the settling day as the share certificates are quite ready, and it would be in the interests of all parties were the Committee of the Stock Exchange to accede to the application at once. By the way, advices from the Hannan's Golden Treasure and Golden Group continue most satisfactory, and on the slight reaction which has taken place a purchase would be very advantageous. In the depression which has been created by the recent "Bear" attacks prices have given way in many instances. In no case was the fall less justified than that in Hampton Plains, and the purely artificial nature of the decline is shown by the back, which was exacted at the carry-over. Should the general tone of the West Australian market become more favourable, I shall look for a very sharp advance in Hampton Plains after next Wednesday's meeting of shareholders. West Australian Joint Stock Trust shares have faced the depression very well, and are quoted $3\frac{3}{4}$ premium, and I have no doubt that they will promptly recover the reaction. West Australian Goldfields shares are still dull at $7\frac{1}{2}$. With reference to the West Australian Venture group I look for a distinct improvement in the near future, as very satisfactory advices have been received from its various properties. West Australian Gold District Trading Corporation Ordinary shares (in which a special settlement has now been granted) have reacted to $1\frac{1}{8}$, but the Founders' shares have advanced to 95, and there seems to be a corner in the latter shares which may put the price still much higher. King of the West shares have also maintained a firm front at $2\frac{1}{4}$, and although Burbanks have eased off, the news remains satisfactory. Hannan's King (Brownhill) at $1\frac{1}{2}$ have displayed great strength. Concerning the Gladiators Mine a very favourable cablegram has been received from Professor Nicholas to the effect that he has discovered a new reef in No. 5 shaft, 4 ft. wide, and valued at from $\frac{1}{2}$ oz. to 1 oz. per ton. The original reef is also reported as well defined in No. 5 shaft., which is now down 42 ft. This is a very promising mine, the shares in which should experience a considerable rise. The Coolgardie Mint and Iron King has crushed 30 tons for 115 oz., and the tailings are estimated at 15 dwt. per ton. At Tuesday's meeting of the Rome Consolidated the chairman was able to make some satisfactory statements, according to which Professor Nicholas (who had originally reported on the mine) had sent further information fully confirming the views he expressed at the outset. Great objections are being raised both on this side and on the Goldfields to a proposal of the West Australian Government to make the railway to Menzies branch off from Southern Cross instead of Coolgardie or Kalgoorlie, and it is to be hoped that the project will be abandoned in favour of the continuation of the line from Coolgardie. According to cable advices, reports are current in Perth that the Great Fingall Reefs have again struck the reef, going $1\frac{1}{2}$ oz. to the ton. This would be very good news for the unfortunate shareholders, who have of late been in the dumps through the pinching-out of the veins. The West Australian Government is forthwith proceeding to carry out the water scheme and other public works, and according to a cablegram which has just come to hand, an additional loan of £3,500,000 is to be raised for the purpose, and there is little doubt that this would be very successfully floated. Mail advices from Western Australia are satisfactory in every respect, and rich discoveries in various directions are reported, notably at Dundas, where the Government engineer (Mr. P. C. Riches) reports having found a formation 600 ft. wide on the hill of the Empire claim, the property being described as showing fine gold all over. The West Australian papers are again full of favourable information with reference to the Lake View Consols. Mr. Faithfull Begg, M.P., had arrived in Perth, and after a short stay there proceeded to Coolgardie. The staff of the Hon. E. H. Wittenoom, Minister of Mines, is at present engaged on the annual reports of his three departments, viz., Mines, Posts and Telegraphs, and Education, a work which must tax the energies of the Minister and staff to the utmost. Certain properties at Mount Sir Samuel, consisting of eight leases, amongst which are the Good Enough Lease, the Pick Me Up Lease, and the Van Guard Lease, are turning out very satisfactory, and a good deal of ore estimated at 2 oz. per ton is already at grass. Progress is also being made in the political situation in Western Australia. The second reading of the Amended Constitution Act, increasing the Legislative Council from 21 to 24, and the Legislative Assembly from 33 to 44, so as to give the Goldfields a larger representation, has been carried. As regards the mining industry it can be said that it is still growing, and there are now actually thirteen different goldfields in Western Australia. The first crushing of the Hit or Miss has just come to hand, and the yield of 240 tons crushed 403 oz.; while the tailings contain 324 oz., a total of 727 oz., or 3 oz. 10 dwt. per ton. I do not see how the "Bears" can make any capital out of such a result as this, and I quite expect that, notwithstanding their efforts to depress the market, they will eventually have to buy back the shares at a much higher price.

Indian, New Zealand, and Other Mines.

In the midst of the general depression it was impossible for the Indian section to altogether resist the decline; but Nundydroog and Mysore actually marked a small improvement. On the other hand, Ooregum, Goldfields of Mysore, Champion Reefs, Coromandel, and Mysore West are all lower. In Australian shares, other than West Australian, Aladdin's Lamp are again lower, for no other reason than that the "Bears" have attacked them. Amongst Charters Towers shares, Day Dawn Block and Day Dawn P.C. are lower, but Mount Morgan and Brilliant and St. George United are firmer. An attempt is being made to rig Crown Point, but this is not likely to succeed for the present. Croydon mines have been firm; Croydon Consols standing at 8s., while North Croydon Consols (concerning which I had some favourable statements to make last week) have advanced to 3s. 6d., and look like going higher. A general fall is marked in New Zealand mines. Waihi, Consolidated Goldfields of New Zealand, Woodstock, Waitekauri, and Waitekauri Extended are all lower. A New Zealand Company which is likely to create a good deal of stir is the Moanataiari Gold Mining Company, Limited, which has acquired a mine covering an area of about 95 acres, in addition to about 15 acres of foreshore for tailings. This mine is described in the experts' reports as not dependent on the permanency and payable character of only one or two reefs, for it contains no less than thirteen reefs. The engineers who have reported on the property on behalf of the United New Zealand Exploration, Limited, are of the highest standing — Mr. H. A. Gordon, A.M.I.C.E., F.G.S., having been for many years Inspecting Engineer to the Mines Department of the New Zealand Government; while Mr. James Park, F.G.S., was Director of the Thames (N.Z.) School of Mines. Instead of the present battery of forty stamps, which is antiquated, a powerful new 60-stamp battery is about to be erected; and, as this is a proved mine, very satisfactory results are anticipated. The capital consists of £200,000, in shares of £1 each, out of which £45,000 has been reserved for working capital. The £1 shares are still obtainable in the market at a small premium. In the general Foreign section, there have been improvements in Golden Feather, Pestarena, and Frontino and Bolivia. On the other hand, De Lamar, Burma Ruby, and Lucky Guss are all down. Grand Central (of Mexico) have also been quiet in sympathy with the general dulness, closing at $2\frac{9}{16}$. British Columbia is undoubtedly coming to the front, and from a report recently made by the Government Mineralogist for the Province, there is little doubt about the permanent character of the ore bodies in the Kootenay district and elsewhere. Amongst British Columbian Mines one of the most promising Companies is the Golden River Quesnelle, Limited, to which I have referred on a previous occasion. It will be remembered that this Company acquired the exclusive right to extract the gold and precious metals in the entire length of the South Fork of Quesnelle River and a portion of the main Quesnelle River, about nine miles and a half, in the district of Cariboo, British Columbia. Latest advices from the property are most satisfactory, and it is likely that the shares will rise to a considerable premium in the near future.

Brandauer's Circular-Pointed Pens. Neither scratch nor spurt. Glide over the roughest paper with the ease of a soft lead pencil. Assorted sample box, 7 stamps, from the Works, Birmingham.

New Issues and Enterprises.

The prospectuses of the following new Companies and issues have been placed before the public during the week:—

The Champion Extended and Home Rule Gold Mines, Limited.—This Company is formed to acquire and work six gold mining leases in the Nannine District, Murchison, Western Australia. The capital is fixed at £150,000 in shares of £1 each, of which £50,000 will be reserved for working capital.

The property acquired by this Company is situated in a well-known auriferous district, and comprises the Champion Extended, Marlow, Champion Extended West, North No. 1, North No. 2, and Home Rule, in all about 90 acres. Development work already done has proved that there is a large quantity of rich quartz on the property, and several well-known experts have reported most favourably on the prospects of the mines, while the assays are also very promising. This venture, I think, has a future before it.

George and John Nickson & Company, Limited.—With a capital of £120,000, in 12,000 Five per Cent. Cumulative Preference shares of £5 each, and 12,000 Ordinary shares of £5 each, this Company has been formed to acquire, carry on, and extend the well-known and old-established business of George and John Nickson & Co., of Liverpool, London, and Manchester, general produce, American and Colonial provision merchants, &c. The 12,000 Five per Cent. Preference shares, of which the vendors are prepared to subscribe one-third, are offered for subscription at par.

The Malay Peninsula Coffee Company, Limited.—This Company is formed for the purpose of acquiring, as going concerns, certain coffee estates, situated in the protected States of the Malay Peninsula, and comprising about 10,000 acres of land, held on leases for 999 years. The capital is £100,000, divided into 50,000 Six per Cent. Cumulative Preference shares of £1 each, and 50,000 Ordinary shares of £1 each. Subscriptions are invited for the Cumulative Preference shares, and for 30,000 of the Ordinary shares.

The Wilsons and Furness-Leyland Line, Limited.—This Company has been formed by the co-operation of Messrs. Thomas Wilson, Sons, & Co., Limited; Frederick Leyland & Co., Limited; and Furness, Withy, & Co., Limited; for the purpose of establishing a first-class line of modern steamers, to form a regular service for the carriage of passengers and cargo between London and New York, and also to acquire the Furness-Leyland Line between London and Boston. The total capital is £550,000, divided into £200,000 of Four and a Half per Cent. First Mortgage Debenture stock; 15,000 Five and a Half per Cent. Cumulative Preference shares of £10 each; and 20,000 Ordinary shares of £10 each. The Four and a Half per Cent. First Mortgage Debenture stock and the Preference shares are offered for subscription.

Bullock, Lade, & Co., Limited. — This Company has been formed to acquire the business of Bullock, Lade, & Co., merchants, distillers, and commission agents, of Glasgow, London, and elsewhere. The capital is £450,000, divided into Cumulative, Preference, and Ordinary shares.

This is a venture that may be termed "purely Scotch," and I think it had better be left to our friends over the border to supply the capital asked for.

Chandler's Wiltshire Brewery, Limited.—This Company has been formed to acquire and carry on Chandler's Wiltshire Brewery, Johannesburg, South African Republic. The share capital is £55,000, in addition to which there is to be £20,000 Debenture capital.

I cannot, in the face of the unsettled state of affairs in South Africa, advise my readers to place any money in this venture, notwithstanding the unusual recommendation given by a firm of Johannesburg accountants. Africanders may possibly see their way clear to take the whole of the issue. It is not much of a brewery.

The Reservoir Hub and Compounds Company, Limited.—This Company has been formed to acquire the invention, together with the British and foreign patents, for improvements in ball-bearing velocipedes and other vehicles, and a reservoir oil-retaining and dust-proof hub. The capital is fixed at £100,000 in £1 shares, £30,000 being reserved as working capital.

This is an untried invention, and the mere expectation of experts that the Hub will be largely used is no guarantee that the business anticipated in them will actually take place. It will be as well to await the course of events. The capital also appears to be excessive.

My Letter Box.

The following are replies to inquiries from various correspondents:—

Government, &c., Bonds.

P. N.—Argentine Government stocks are a fair investment; but it might be advisable to wait for the measures which are about to be taken to bring about the unification scheme. Until that has been well engineered I do not anticipate any further material rise. Olive.—There is no objection to the Transvaal Five per Cent. Loan as an investment, and it might be advisable to make the exchange. J. E.—Amongst Mexican Government stocks the Six per Cent. Loan is, of course, the best, and amongst Chilians the 1886 Loan. Hanno.—High-class Home securities are still high, and I should advise you to wait. 2. Ditto. 3. An investment of the further sum of money in the new Uruguay Loan would doubtless be promising. A. R. and Hornsey Rise.—There is no reason for selling Guatemala bonds now, as under the new arrangement there is every prospect of the interest being duly paid.

Banks, Trusts, and Financial.

Stocks.—A bad system; have nothing to do with it. Koma.—I advise you to have nothing to do with this outside concern; I do not like their system. J. C.—Hitherto, I have always understood that the outside firm in question fulfilled its engagements pretty punctually; and I should say that if your solicitor presses at once, you will get your money. You cannot be a regular reader of TRUTH or else you would remember that I always advise dealing through a member of the Stock Exchange. Clumber.—The address of the Newfoundland Colonisation and Mining Company is 97, Dashwood House, New Broad-street, London, E.C. Please say which Credit Company you mean. W.B.J.—I do not approve of the methods of this outside concern, and do not consider them reliable. Have nothing to do with them.

To Overcome Weakness.—Pepper's Quinine and Iron Tonic gives New Life, Appetite, Health, Strength, Energy. Cures Neuralgia, Indigestion, Pepper's Nerve Tonic. Debility. Kept everywhere.

Home Rails.

R. T. A.—The fall in the Southern Passenger stocks is altogether exaggerated; and I should consider Dover "A," as well as the Deferred stocks of the Caledonian and North British lines, an excellent speculative purchase. D.S.—It is a moot question whether the Heavies are not as high as they ought to be; but the Southern Passenger and Scotch stocks are undoubtedly a good purchase at the present level, and a few days of sunshine would certainly put up the price of Dover "A."

American and Foreign Rails.

A. J. B.—A. It is an extraordinary circumstance that this Argentine line is not making the same progress as the other railways in that country; but I think that its time will come. B. The present quotation is 40. S. W. F.—Speaking broadly, I do not like Spanish Railways. The country is not progressive, and under these circumstances you should take an opportunity of getting out. E. D.—Nothing is known with reference to the resumption of payment of interest on this Brazilian railway. But this is not so bad as the haven of liquidation into which the mining companies in question have disappeared. New York.—The American Railroad bonds Nos. 1 to 3 are good investments, and at present prices a purchase is promising. F. B.—If you wish to buy Nitrate Railway shares, you should purchase the Unconverted Ordinary shares, in which there is the freest market. E. B. M.—I do not advise investment in this stock. I do not suppose that you mean the bonds, which would be a good investment. Sussex.—1. Nothing has happened to depress Alabama Midland Five per Cent. bonds, except the political situation in the United States, and this is now improving. You should certainly hold your bonds, as a recovery is most probable. 2. I have not received any information lately concerning this.

Mining Shares.

C. F. F.—1. I do not like this concern. 2. Very doubtful. Pizzicato.—The London and Globe Finance Company is a very good undertaking, and has made large profits. I must leave it to you whether you will take your handsome profit in the shares mentioned next; why not buy North Croydon Consols instead? N. W.—I cannot tell you the date of the meeting. Ajax, Bridgwater.—A fair mining risk. Nag.—In the course of the next month or two it will be possible to form a more reliable opinion. Perranzabuloe.—You cannot expect a dividend on Randfontein yet. The Porges Randfontein bonus declared on these shares is payable next week. Hyoscium.—I do not care for the Arrow Brownhill. Holcomb Valley Prefs. should be held, C. P.—Yes, West Australian Joint Stock Trust shares are promising, and so are Croydon Consols and Hannan's King (Brownhill). Markato.—Yes, a fair West Australian investment company; but not one of the best. 2. No; you should now hold African Estates, and buy more to average. J. C.—I note what you say with reference to Abercorn Reefs; but it is for the shareholders now to take steps in the matter and form a committee. I have done my best. J. S., Northampton.—The West Australian Trading Corporation is doing well; and if the new gold extracting process turns up trumps there will be an important advance in the shares. I will do my best to give reliable information as soon as it is available. Friday.—Particulars of the report of the Hampton Plains were already given in last week's issue. As soon as ever the market generally improves, these shares should advance. The Menzies Golden Rhine is a promising company, and the shares should eventually come into demand. E. R.—The statements are absurd; you should hold your shares and not allow yourself to be frightened out of them. Dowie.—Nos. 1 and 2 are suitable purchases; but instead of No. 3 you might buy North Croydon Consols. I do not care so much for Nos. 4 to 6 now, and you had better make your selection from my letter. T. T.—1. Third-class. 2. Very doubtful. 3. Impossible to tell. 4. Yes. Indiana.—1. No; there is no reason for the fall in Hannan's Proprietary. 2. Hold for a good rise. Pilgrimite.—Nothing is yet known with reference to the first-named Company, neither do I know anything of the Anglian Mining and Finance Company. The other two shares are no catch. St. George.—The only shares amongst those mentioned by you which are worth buying, are Mainland Consols. Why do you not make your selection from my remarks under "Golden West Australia?" D. W.—Hold for an improvement. N. D.—No option but to hold Holcomb Valley Prefs. for the present. 2. Why do you act against my advice in buying Chartered shares at a high price; sell on a recovery. 3. No; have nothing to do with them. Rio.—I do not consider that your views are justified; but you must follow your own information. Pagoda.—No; the Goldfields of Mysore is not likely to pay a dividend in the near future, unless they sell a further block of their large property. R. B.—There is no difficulty in dealing in Gladiators. Your broker has evidently some reason why he does not want to make the purchase. Insku.—A. It appears to me that you are not entitled to the dividend. I cannot tell you anything about the man in question. R. M.—The Abercorn Reefs is registered on this side. If you wish to see your rights safeguarded you ought to put your shoulder to the wheel yourself. S. P. W.—1. I do not agree with your remarks concerning Mainland Consols. The two other shares should be held for the present. Silk.—These attacks are intended to frighten people out. Hold. Perplexed.—You had better accept the offer of the West Australian Gold Concessions. John Barnes.—Yes, I think you ought to agree to the amalgamation. Sherwood.—An irresponsible sheet, to which you should attach no importance. Hold your various shares for a recovery. I cannot tell you when the other Companies will pay dividends. Warrant Officer.—1. The price charged to you for Elmslie, Limited, was far too high. The price made in the market was $\frac{5}{8}$ to $\frac{7}{8}$, and you ought not to have paid more than the higher price, while you might perhaps have got in at $\frac{3}{4}$, the middle price. 2. There is no other method. 3. I do not think you would gain. 4. Have nothing to do with this firm. Androhan.—1. No market for these shares. 2. I should prefer Hannan's Golden Treasure. 3. Hannan's King (Brownhill) are quoted $1\frac{5}{8}$. 4. I do not like them. 5. Sell on any recovery. E. W., London, S.W.—No option but to hold; there is no special reason for the fall. Evertonian.—No; the dividend is not due to you. Z. Y. X.—1. No option but to hold your mining shares A to F for an improvement, which is probable. 2. The bonus should already have reached you. 3. The bonus of Porges Randfontein shares for the Randfontein shareholders is expected this week. 4 and 5. Yes, hold. W. O.—No option but to hold. I mentioned these shares only the other day as promising. You do not appear to read my letter regularly. Two Seas.—No; these shares should be held. 2. The agents of the Company will doubtless give you every information. 3. No. Prudent.—No option but to hold these shares; the Company is in good hands. Cestrian.—No option but to hold these shares for a recovery, which is probable. L. M., Northwich.—Hannan's King (Brownhill) are a fair purchase. You must be aware that I always advise my readers to deal through members of the Stock Exchange only, and not to have anything to do with outsiders. This also holds good in this instance; be careful. I cannot reply by letter. Phœnix.—All your mining shares Nos. 1 to 8 should be held; this is not the time to sell. Irishman.—I can only repeat what I have already expressed, viz., that this is only a temporary slump which should pass away, and that prices will go better again. Hold. Unicorn.—I do not approve of the Broad Arrow Mine, and was always against it. Mr. Kaufman in his interview referred to the Broad Arrow district, which is quite another thing. Walter.—No option but to hold Nos. 1 and 2, and there is every prospect of a recovery. I do not think much of No. 3, and do not care for No. 4 at all. Memphis, Bristol.—I still think that Holcomb Valley Prefs. will recover again; but what can you expect in the present state of the Mining market? This also applies to the other shares mentioned by you. Springfield.—I do not care for the Copper Company in question, and the shares are quite high enough. Ignoramus, Teddington.—1. This mine is not likely to crush for some time yet, and you will have to lock up these low-priced shares for a while. 2. I do not like the Great Coolgardie Mine at all, and have always said so. Reuben.—1. This is a matter for your solicitor to advise you upon. It is, of course, a great pity that you lost the cheque. 2. Certainly hold Randfontein for an improvement. Novice B.—The shares in question are a fair mining risk; but you did not buy them on my advice, and they are, of course, subject to the various accidents which may arise in the case of mines. So far, the information is not unfavourable. The low-priced South African shares should be held for a recovery. Gerald.—I do not recommend the purchase of the two shares mentioned by you. Keble.—1. Hold, and average when an opportunity offers to get in cheap. 2. Hold, but do not buy any more just yet. 3. No option but to hold; I do not think much of them. 4. Certainly not; leave these alone. Croydon.—1. I do not like Easter Gift, and am not surprised that they have declined. 2. I have never recommended North Boulder, and think they are too high. 3. Prospects appear to be fair; but the mine has still to make its reputation. 4. You certainly ought to be satisfied with what you have done in Croydon Consols; but do not forget to take your profit. 5. A fair mining risk at present price. Investor, Halifax.—I have never been in favour of Cassidy Hill; but Preece's Point should be held. Bann.—Hold by all means. There is every prospect of a recovery. Mops.—1. No option but to hold until the present slump in South Africans is over. 2. I have not changed my opinion. W. J. N.—These shares should certainly not be sold, as it is a promising mine. Fin.—This mine is doing fairly well, and there is no reason for selling out in a hurry. Perplexity.—1. Yes, the Ordinary shares of the West Australian Gold District Trading Corporation are very cheap, and should be bought at present price, which is fully justified, altogether apart from the new ore reduction process. 2. No reason to sell. Lady Shenton.—1. I have never advocated the purchase of Lady Shenton at the high prices you have paid for them, and I must leave you to take your own course in the matter, as you are obtaining information direct from the men connected with the mine. 2. Certainly hold Randfontein. This is a most promising mine, and when the slump in the South African market passes away, there will doubtless be a sharp recovery. Wyndham.—This New Zealand concern is very speculative, but has great possibilities. E.H.D.—You might sell these and buy Hannan's Treasure and North Croydons as you propose. J.G.L.—No option but to hold Nos. 1 to 9; but amongst these I do not care much for Nos. 6 and 9. Cornwall.—In the present condition of the Mining market it is useless for you to think of selling any of your shares Nos. 1 to 16. Most of these are well selected; but I do not approve of Nos. 6, 7, 8, and 14. Still for the present you should hold all for a recovery. Selurian.—No; I do not advise purchase of the shares Nos 1 to 7 mentioned by you. You can do better by making your selection from my letter under "Golden West Australia." Dongola.—1. Hold Randfontein and Porges Randfontein. Also keep West Australian Exploring and Finance, and see remarks under "Golden West Australia." 3. You did not buy New Orions on my advice; hold for the present. 4. Yes. No option but to hold Nos. 5 and 6, although I never recommended the latter. W. C. V.—The best thing you can do is to communicate with your brother-shareholders, so as to take concerted action in the matter. Redcar.—1. You can only cancel an application for shares if you do so before receiving notice of allotment. In your case you have not apparently done this, which is much to be regretted, as the Company is not at all a desirable one. 2. Even if you forfeit the shares you would still be liable for the calls, unless you can prove misrepresentation, which means law proceedings. 3. You would have to consult a solicitor, and obtain the co-operation of other shareholders. Lynn.—No option but to hold. Do not, however, buy any more. Victoria.—I have no recent advices concerning this Company. J. F.—You will have been able to buy Hampton Plains since at your price, and it is not therefore worth while to enter into the dispute. I do not, as a matter of principle, recommend individual stockbrokers. I cannot reply by letter. Ad Quod Damnum.—You must have had good opportunities of realising profits in many of the shares Nos. 1-14. At present it is not the time to sell. You should await an improvement in the market. Take a fair profit on Nos. 10 and 16. Firby.—No reason to sell Transvaal Gold Exploration. Alpha.—No option but to hold No. 1-4 for an improvement. A. E. H.—It is a bad time to make sales, so that you had better put off the exchange. Lake View Consols are certainly very promising. Rusty.—The large majority of the shares, Nos. 1-22, mentioned by you are the reverse of promising, and I should advise you to have nothing to do with them. You should make your selection from the mines mentioned in my letter. Domino.—1. There has been a general decline. Hold for a recovery. 2. I know nothing against this mine. Constant Reader, Independent.—Certainly hold the mining shares. As regards the investment in safe securities, you had better wait, as the rise in the Money Market is likely to reduce the price of such securities. L. C.—No option but to hold No. 1-4 for a recovery. This is not the time to sell. North Croydon Consols at 2s. 9d. should suit you. Q. C.—1. A fair mining risk; I have heard no late news. 2. No particular catch. Irishman.—I can but again tell you to hold these shares. E. L.—Large new batteries have been erected, and a greatly increased output will be obtained presently. T. W. P.—No option but to hold all your shares, Nos. 1-12, for an improvement. Ostend.—1. Not yet. 2. Write to the Secretary, who will give you every information. Greencliff.—1. A good mining risk. Hold. 2. Do not sell now. 3. Yes. J. S.—I shall do my best to support the shareholders. Persandum.—I. Hold Hannan's Golden Treasure for an important advance. II. Ditto. III. Offer the property in the Northern Territory to one of the West Australian Exploring Companies. S. A. P.—I do not like the Faith Gold Mine. D. H.—Not dealt in on this side. H. B.—I do not hold a favourable opinion of this Exploring Company. F. W., Leicester.—Why do you deal with such Syndicate touts against all my warnings? You well deserve what you get. Macbeth.—No option but to hold these mining shares at the present time for a recovery.

Maignen's Filter is the only one adopted after public competition by the City of Paris (10th July, 1896) see Bulletin Municipal Officiel, 30th July, 1896.—Full particulars from Maignen's Filtre Rapide & Anti-Calcaire Co., Ltd., 255, Regent-street, London, W.

Industrial Shares.

G., Wakefield.—A local concern, about which it is impossible to form a conclusive opinion here. Zil.—I do not like New Seddon Tyre shares, and have repeatedly said so. Protection.—There is absolutely no market here for the shares in sailing ships. It is purely a local market, as, indeed, you ought to know. Mur.—This is really quite an interesting legal point, and I should not care to decide whether you are liable or not. Vinegar Hill.—You cannot help paying up the calls in this motor-car Company, as you have been duly allotted the shares, unless you can prove misrepresentation in the prospectus. I do not like the concern, however. R. J. W., St James's.—I cannot reply by letter. 1. I do not care much for this concern. 2. I do not know anything of the man in question. J. F. Y.—I have always held an unfavourable opinion of Salt Union shares, and do so still. You can obtain a book containing the highest and lowest quotations, and other information, from Messrs. Mathieson, Copthall-avenue, E.C. W. C. W.—I have but a poor opinion of the Liverpool Warehouse Company. Tighnaleigh. The Brewery in question is only a second-rate one; but the adverse criticism does not appear well-founded, and the publication in question is quite unreliable. Indigo.—The Company appears to be in liquidation, and you should apply to the liquidator for information. Bet.—Yes. Scottie.—1. I do not approve of Beeston Tyre shares, and if you were a regular reader of TRUTH you would know it. 2. Neither do I approve of Puncture-Proof Tyre shares, and should not advise you to buy more to average; if you had read TRUTH regularly you would not have paid 35s. for them. 3. Altogether unreliable.

CYCLING SUITS are a speciality at Ulster House, Conduit-street, London, W., where Ulsters, Overcoats, and Capes are kept ready for immediate use

Mixed Investments.

H. W. B.—You had better hold all your shares Nos. 1 to 6; although some of these were not bought on my recommendation, neither are they tempting. But this is not the time to sell such shares. Hermes.—I do not think much of your investments A and B, although the debentures C should be safe enough. Allsopps have fallen on the rise in the Money Market, and prices are, as you must be aware, very high at present. Tony Lumpkins.—1. No; I should not advise you to deal with this outside concern. 2. I do not recommend the investment. 3. I gave particulars of the present position of this Company in last week's issue under "Golden West Australia." Scarborough.—1. Certainly hold Barnato Banks for a recovery. 2. There is no inducement in doing so, unless the market goes up again. Hold Nos. 3 and 4 (Hannan's Napier) for a recovery. Woodstock, Transvaal (5), and Transvaal Exploring (6) are a good purchase. I do not like No. 7. Bothwell.—Nos. 1 to 3 should be sold on a moderate advance. Bay Leaves.—No reason to sell the Argentine Provincial Government bonds in question, and the Rails should also be held for an improvement. Celt, Stirling.—Nos. 1 and 2 should be held; but I do not think much of the Tea shares (Nos. 3 and 4). Larry.—All your mining shares, Nos. 1 to 3, are promising, and there is no reason to sell No. 4. Marine.—1. Yes, the South American Government bonds mentioned by you are suitable for permanent investment. 2. Yes; no reason to sell. 3. It would be preferable to await the further course of the Money Market. 4. Yes. W. D.—1. After the heavy rise in Rio Tinto I should not advise a purchase. 2. A fair mining risk; but crushing is not yet in sight. 3. Sell Milwaukee on a further advance. J. W., Upper Tooting.—I do not like any of the stocks mentioned by you for the purposes of investment. Hew.—1. A doubtful concern; no fresh news. I do not care much for Nos. 2 and 3, and No. 4 is over-capitalised; but Nos. 5 and 6 should be held for a rise. Duffer.—Under present circumstances I advise the holding of all your investments, Nos. 1 to 12. A. P. H.—Another transfer is required. Apollo.—This is not the time to sell mining shares such as your holdings B to M; keep these for an improvement, which will doubtless come about. No option but to hold A and N, which are apparently doing pretty well. O is very doubtful. Efferent.—1. High-class investments are gradually declining, and I should advise you to wait a little longer. 2. The Central Argentine Railway has just announced an interim dividend for the half-year at the rate of 3 per cent. per annum. 3. Fair investments; but not particularly tempting just now, and hardly safe enough for you. E. E. L.—No option but to keep the first-named stock. I do not consider Atlantic First Leased Lines Rental Trust particularly tempting, and you can do better in other gilt-edged American Railroad bonds. There is no option but to keep London Bank of Australia shares until banking matters in the Australian Colonies improve. Taffy.—1. Hold the shares; but do not average yet. 2. Certainly hold London and Globe Finance, as this Company is doing exceedingly well. Fibald.—Your investments, Nos. 1 to 16, are well selected, and I see no reason for parting with any of them at present. Queen.—Certainly hold the mining shares Nos. 1 to 3. I have always expressed an adverse opinion of No. 4; but Nos. 5 to 8 should certainly be held, and Cycle Tubes (9) are very promising. No. 10 is no catch. White Feather.—1. Yes, you might as well take your profit of £100 on these, and reinvest in the new Uruguay Loan and in the American Railroad bonds mentioned by you. No. 5 would be preferable. Hawthorn.—Amongst the shares mentioned by you there is no reason for selling Nos. 1 and 2. Hampton Plains (3) and Hit or Miss (4) should be held for an important recovery. Bayley's Reward (5) is a dark horse, and Elkhorns (6) I do not like. E. T.—1. Yes, Randfontein are a first-class speculation at present price. 2. The bonds, not the stock. 3. The new Uruguay loan should suit you, as it yields upwards of 7 per cent. per annum. Faith. 1. A fair mining risk. 2. No particular catch; you can do better in the shares mensioned in my letter under "Golden West Australia." I should tell the Turkish bonds.

Various Investments.

I should like to add to my remarks with reference to Consols at the commencement of my letter that the position is altogether anomalous. Intrinsically they stand too high, but the supply in the market is so small, and speculators in other markets have taken such liberties with them, that we may look for some very sensational movements in the near future. It does not require much calculation to come to the conclusion that if the Government continues the purchases for the Savings Bank and the Sinking Fund, as it is bound to do, and speculators sell them short, there must be a rise. I think it is a most foolish proceeding for an operator in Home Rails or South Africans to rush into the Consol Market to sell a block directly some political news comes to hand, as one class of stock nowadays does not govern the other, and he may be caught both ways. Silver is slightly firmer at $30\frac{5}{16}$, but Rupee Paper is lower at $62\frac{1}{2}$, this being one of the stocks affected by the rise in the Bank rate. In the Cycle share market, Dunlop Deferred have given way to $1\frac{1}{2}$, the Preferred to $\frac{7}{8}$. Beestons, too, are lower at $3\frac{1}{8}$, and Grapplers have eased off to $1\frac{1}{16}$, Cycle Tubes to $\frac{7}{8}$. Mexican Rails show indications of a revival, the First Prefs. being firmer at $74\frac{1}{2}$. Allsopps have continued their downward course, being quoted only $167\frac{1}{2}$, this being one of the stocks which had reached an unduly high level. I have received an illustrated prospectus of the Glenshannon Distillery Syndicate, Limited, which is being sent out privately. It is headed with the glowing announcement, "An immediate profit of 100 per cent. with return of capital." The distillery is described as situated near Parsenstown, King's Co., Ireland; but no figures as regards previous profits are supplied. The rest of the prospectus consists of irrelevant statements, and quotations of shares of other whisky Companies. The shareholders will be entitled to receive for each £25-share held by them the sum of £25 in cash (being the return of their subscription) and a bonus of £25 in cash or shares in the Company now in course of formation. The only name which appears in the prospectus, and in the touting circular sent out at the same time, is that of H. Oxley (Secretary), apart from the name of a vendor, C. W. Frout, with whom Mr. Oxley has made a contract. If Mr. Oxley is associated with other respectable men in this matter, he might as well have mentioned them, and he ought to know that even fools would not risk their money in the hope of getting 100 per cent., unless they could make sure, by the examination of the figures relating to profits in previous years, that there is a chance of the proposed Company floating. Mr. John Lornie, of Kirkcaldy, N.B., is to the front with a new batch of circulars headed "Safe Home Investments," in which he booms a Company "largely engaged in the manufacture of cycles, arms, and ammunition," a somewhat curious combination. Who is J. Dobson, who sends out circulars for the proprietors of the "Retailers' Exchange," 7 and 8, Southampton-buildings, London, W.C.? Mr. Dobson has conceived the bright idea of uniting a thousand grocers into a Company, all of whom are to purchase one Founders' share of £1 each, "and a new and original method of capitalistic co-operation is to be inaugurated which is to beat the wholesale London tea firms out of the field." I am afraid that Mr. Dobson will not find sufficient esprit de corps amongst grocers to unite a thousand of them in support of his Company. "Another magnificent profit. Our system vindicated. Our critics convinced. Our clients' satisfaction acknowledged." This is the heading of the latest circular sent out by Frank Tarrant & Company, 70 and 71, Bishopsgate-street, London, E.C. Frank Tarrant & Company have evidently surpassed themselves in their latest effort, as they boast of having closed their Metropolitan District "deal" at a profit of $587\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. within sixteen days. This is evidently a firm of philanthropists, as not only do they throw these splendid profits into the lap of the general public, but actually undertake to guarantee subscribers against any loss to their subscriptions on their first transaction with them. The latter part of this sentence is in very small type, so one may suppose that on the second or third transaction a loss is not improbable. In the meantime I have not yet heard from any one who has made these stupendous profits through Frank Tarrant & Co., but I should very much like to meet some of these individuals in the flesh. (By the way, this circular was sent to my private house and thus got at once to the right address.)—Your affectionate Uncle, MOSES.

HOT WATER instantly, night or day. EWART'S "LIGHTNING" GEYSER. Illustrated Price Lists, with particulars of patterns adapted for every purpose, on application to B Department, EWART & SON, 346, Euston-road, London, N.W.

China and Glass. — Messrs. Goode, Artists and Designers, solicit an inspection of their collection in their recently-extended South Audley-street premises, now by far the largest and most important in Europe. Messrs. Goode guarantee the excellence of all their productions, and invite a comparison of their prices with those of any co-operative stores.

All Rights Reserved.]

QUEER STORY;

BELLAMY'S BIKE.

I RAN down one Saturday afternoon to see my friend Bellamy at Hampstead. Bellamy and I are both solicitors. We are fellow-clerks in a large City business. He has charge of the common law, and I of the conveyancing. But Bellamy is a luckier mortal than your humble servant; for, whereas I have little beyond my salary, Bellamy has a nice private fortune of some £12,000, inherited from his godmother. On the strength of this he has set up a neat little cottage at Hampstead, where he lives sumptuously en garçon, and often entertains his friends. Apparently he is a confirmed bachelor, and, from remarks which he occasionally let fall, I should imagine, also, a rather bitter misogynist. I guessed that he had had a disappointment. But he was a reserved sort of chap, and never talked about himself. So we, his friends, knew nothing for certain. However, on that afternoon, when I happened to be his only guest, certain circumstances induced him to unbosom himself.

It was fine August weather, and Bellamy suggested a walk. We strolled for an hour or so about the Heath; then, finding the heat rather oppressive, seated ourselves in the shade by the side of one of the roads which lead on to those suburban Alps from the south side. Lighting our cigars, we settled ourselves to contemplate nature and humanity—the latter distinctly predominating at Hampstead on that fine Saturday afternoon.

Throngs of people were passing along the road in front of us, some in vehicles, many on foot, most on bicyles. I didn't bike myself, and, like a superior person who had resisted a foolish craze, regarded all cyclists with sublime contempt. On this particular afternoon my contempt was mingled with a certain amount of pity as I saw so many of them laboriously toiling up the hill under an August sun; bent over their handle-bars like monkeys on sticks, their eyes set in a fierce and agonised stare, the sweat dripping copiously from their dust-begrimed faces. They all looked ridiculous. But by and by there came along a couple who, in this respect, beat the others hollow. They were a man and a woman, riding a tandem. The man was a thin, spare, slip of humanity, with a haggard face, now looking white from exhaustion, who was straining every muscle to force the machine up the hill. The woman was neither thin nor spare. On the contrary, she was as obese a specimen of womanhood as you would be likely to meet in a day's march. Her proportions were strongly emphasised by her dress—a tight suit of green rationals, which seemed to fit her like a glove and made her look unspeakably swollen and immense. For all the work she was doing, she might just as well have remained in petticoats, as though her feet were moving with the pedals, I could see that she was not exerting herself a bit, and was simply leaving her unfortunate partner to tug her up the hill. Poor beggar! How crushed he seemed, and how painfully "cooked!" And how his strained, agonised expression and clammy face contrasted with the air of easy enjoyment which sat upon the face of his fat and idle co-cyclist! I turned to nudge Bellamy, in order to call his attention to this grotesque pair. But I saw that he was already contemplating them.

"Pretty spectacle that!" he remarked to me, as soon as they had passed, flicking the ash off his cigar with his little finger.

"Very pretty!" I answered. "And very pleasant, I dare say—for the woman! As for the unfortunate man——"

"He deserves his fate," interposed Bellamy, quietly,

"Now, how do you know that, Bellamy?" I demanded of him.

"Oh, I know his history very well. I knew him once, and her, too," replied my friend, looking straight in front of him.

"You did? Is the lady his wife?"

"His mother-in-law."

"Poor devil!"

"Poor devil, indeed! Do you know, Mason, that I was nearly becoming that poor devil—once?"

"You? What do you mean?"

"What I say. I was within an ace of qualifying for the front saddle of that infernal tandem!"

"Still I don't quite understand."

"Well—to be quite explicit—that fat woman in the rationals was once on the point of becoming my mother-in-law."

"Good gracious! You were engaged to her daughter?"

"I was."

"And you broke it off!"

"She broke it off."

"It was a merciful escape!" I said, smiling, as my thoughts dwelt upon the fagged, perspiring victim on the front saddle of that heavy tandem, grinding laboriously up the dusty hill.

"It was!" assented Bellamy, with a fervent sigh.

He was silent for a minute or two after that, puffing vigorously at his cigar. Then he turned to me and said, half abruptly:

"It is rather a curious story. The whole thing arose out of a bike. Perhaps you would like to hear about it?"

"I should very much."

"All right: you shall. Here" (handing me his case), "take another weed. I shall tax your patience as a listener, I dare say. But I believe the story has its good points, and does not altogether lack interest. This must be my excuse for a rather lengthy narrative:—

"What I am going to tell you happened nearly two years ago. I was then just out of my articles, and had a berth with Skimples, in Old Jewry. I had not set up my little show at Hampstead then. In fact, my dear old godmother was still alive. And I occupied diggings in Camden Town, together with a fellow-clerk at Skimples' named Tom Wernham. Tom and I were good friends, and we got on together very well. He was a few years older than I was, and was several steps above me in the office; indeed, Skimples thought a good deal of him and paid him rather a high screw, which I believe he thoroughly earned, for he was very industrious and extremely capable and 'cute. There wasn't much fear of Tom bungling any matter that was placed in his charge. And we had matters at Skimples' which needed clever handling, too. We did a lot of company work there, and at one time or another were brought into contact with half the knaves in the City. But Tom Wernham was not often overreached. It wanted a very astute gentleman to get on the blind side of Tom. He was always asking for rises of salary, and always getting them. Skimples knew what he was worth, and would not have dreamed of losing him for a matter of £20 or £30 a-year.

"I rather envied Tom at that time. He had £9 a week, while I was only getting £4, and I wanted more screw then rather badly. The fact was, I was engaged to be married to an awfully pretty girl, and I was longing to set up in the wedded line—a step impracticable upon £200 a year. If you had seen Jessie Cufton, as she then was, you would not have been surprised at my wanting to hurry on our marriage. She was a most fascinating creature—melting blue eyes, golden hair, spotless complexion, button mouth, and all the rest of it" (Bellamy here gave a half-sarcastic, self-contemning sort of laugh); "and I was confoundedly afraid that she might perhaps be induced to throw me over for somebody else. I knew, you see, that her mother was hardly satisfied with my financial position and my prospects. And, of course, in these affairs mothers have to be reckoned with. Then Jessie, being so awfully pretty, was bound to attract attention from men; and—and—altogether I felt I should not feel quite sure of her until our marriage was an accomplished fact.

"I did everything I could to ingratiate myself with her mother, never losing a chance of doing the civil to the old lady. I was always asking her (and Jessie too, of course) to tea at our digs., taking them for picnics up the river; getting them tickets for the theatres, &c., and on these occasions I was most careful to make myself agreeable to Jessie's mother. Tom Wernham often accompanied us on our various expeditions, and I earnestly impressed on him to do the same. He was an obliging fellow and complied with my request in the most friendly manner. Indeed, he did me many a good turn by taking the old lady off my hands for a spell now and then, so that Jessie and I could enjoy our little snatches of love-making undisturbed.

"It was just then that I first took up biking: and I grew so awfully keen on the pastime that I used to go out riding nearly every Sunday, when the weather was fine. There was no outhouse, at our digs., in which I could keep my machine. I therefore had to billet him out at a neighbour's in an adjoining street, at the weekly cost of eighteenpence.

"Well, one Sunday—a day very memorable to me—I dressed myself in cycling costume and strolled round to the place where my bike was kept. I rang the bell of the street door. But, to my surprise, nobody came to answer it. I rang again. Still nobody came. I rang several times with no better result. Then I naturally became impatient, and seizing the bell-handle, made it peal time after time in succession. This at last produced some effect. An upstairs window was opened, and a red-faced man, in a nightshirt, thrust his head out.

"'What the divil are you afther?' he demanded, in a rich Irish brogue. 'Are ye troyin' to ring dhown the house?'

"'I've come for my bicycle,' I told him.

"'Your phwawt?' he asked, eyeing me suspiciously.

"'My bicycle!'

"'Divil a word have i heard about any bicycle!'

"'I keep mine here, I tell you. Isn't Mr. Nobes at home?' I inquired, naming the owner of the house.

"'Shure an he's nawt. He's out o'thown for the day; so's his woife and childer, and I'm left in charge.'

"'Well then, perhaps you'll come down and open the door, so that I can get out my bicycle!"

"'Misther Nobes made no mintion of a bicycle,' said the Irishman, without moving, 'and he gave me parthicular directions to let nobody in.'

"'But it's here, I tell you, and I must have it,' I persisted, beginning to grow annoyed with the fellow.

"'I'm thinking you'd better wait till Misther Nobes returns,' he said.

"'But you told me he was out for the day.'

"'Shure, and so he is.'

"'Well, I want my bicycle now—at once. Do you hear?'

"The obstinate ass only grinned at me provokingly, but neither answered nor moved.

"'Look here, you idiot,' I said, at length, losing my temper. 'Just come down and open the door.'

"When I addressed him thus, the expression of the Irishman's face instantly changed. Till then he had simply regarded me with an air of bland suspiciousness. But now the blandness vanished very suddenly indeed from his visage, and was succeeded by a glare of insulted and ferocious wrath.

"'Ijiot was ye afther calling me, ye spindle-shanked spalpane. Ijiot? Ye dirty bicycle thief. By the soul of my blessed mother, I'll not open the dhoor to ye this dhay; and if ye'r afther disthurbing me again, I'll call the p'leece to ye. Be off, ye nasthy snake.'

"With that he banged down the window and retired. To a disinterested onlooker the situation might have appeared rather amusing. I scarcely found it so. I wanted my bicycle very badly; and I did not at all relish being thwarted in my purpose by the idiocy of this Hibernian caretaker. Of course, I wasn't going to give in. I knocked and kicked at the door; I made the bell peal loud enough to rouse half the street, thereby gathering round me quite a crowd of spectators. But the Irishman was not to be drawn. At last, my patience becoming quite exhausted, I picked up a stone in the road and hurled it through the Irishman's bedroom window, shivering a pane of glass to atoms. This did rouse him.

He came to the window and damned me furiously in the vernacular, while I damned him back as furiously, but more refinedly, in the Queen's English. We each shouted louder than the other. It was a tremendous battle of epithets—a sort of wordy Donnybrook. I don't know how it may have been with the Irishman. But certainly I had never damned a man so completely and comprehensively before. There was some little satisfaction in this—the only satisfaction in that whole day's work.

"By-and-by a policeman appeared upon the scene.

"'What's all this about?' he demanded of me, as he forced his way through the ring of amused spectators, who were thoroughly enjoying our verbal prize-fight.

"'Take him in charge, constable, take him in charge!' shrieked my antagonist from the window. 'I give him into custhody. Take him away to the station.'

"'Never mind that fool,' I said to the officer in a low voice. And I hastened to explain the situation to him as briefly as possible, the Irishman, meantime keeping up a continuous yell of 'Take him in charge! He's a bicycle thief! Don't listen to him! It's all lies! I charge him with brawling and breaking me window, and desecrating the howly Sabbath,' and I don't know what else to the same effect.

"When I had finished my explanation, the constable scratched his head rather perplexedly.

"'The gentleman says you have his bicycle upon your premises,' he said to the man at the window.

"'Och! Divil a bit! It's all lies!'

"'You had better let him have it. The gentleman has a right to his bicycle,' said the constable, persuasively.

"'Shure and ye'll be saying next that he has a roight to throw stones through me window,' retorted the other, sarcastically.

"'Come! Come! You had better let the gentleman have his bicycle.'

"But it was no use. The pig-headed Hibernian wouldn't listen to the suggestion. He simply shrieked back orders to the constable to take me in charge, threatening 'by the soul of his blessed mother' to report him at head-quarters unless he did so. In the end, however, finding his words of no avail, he shut down his window with a savage bang, and withdrew from sight.

"'Can't we break open the door?' I said to the policeman.

"'Out of the question,' he answered, shaking his head.

"'Then what's to be done? Is that infernal mule inside to succeed in keeping me from getting out my machine?'

"'I'm very sorry, sir. I don't see what's to be done.'

"The constable, of course, was right. There was nothing to be done. And it resulted in my returning to my digs., defeated and raging.

"I poured the story of my wrongs into Tom Wernham's ear. Tom was awfully nice about it. He said he didn't see why I should be done out of my ride, simply because an addle-headed caretaker had been left in charge. He suggested that perhaps our landlady—who was well known in the neighbourhood—might be able to help us. Probably the Irishman was acquainted with her, and if she went round with me he might yield to her persuasions. So we summoned the landlady and invited her assistance. She came up in her kitchen dress, hot, breathless, and rather sooty. 'She was afride,' she said, when matters had been explained to her, 'that she couldn't possibly come with me herself. She was just cooking the dinner for four sets of lodgers. But' (a happy inspiration striking her) 'There was her daughter, Polly, now. The Irishman, unlesss he was much mistook, was Mrs. Nobes' brother, Patrick O'Scowle, and he would recognise Polly quite as easily as her. Polly was going out bicycling herself, but she believed that she hadn't yet started, and no doubt she would willingly run round with me. Would that do?'

"I thanked her, and said it would do very well. And the landlady went off to interview Polly. In a few minutes she returned with the intelligence that Polly was ready to start, and was, in fact, waiting for me at the front door. I went down and found the young lady outside with her machine. Her appearance rather startled me. Polly was a tall, handsome, red-cheeked wench, of the strapping order, who, under any circumstances, had the knack of looking somewhat fast and loud. But to-day she excelled herself. I saw, to my horror, that she was rigged out in bright blue rationals, and wore an enormous flowered and feathered hat which would have excited remark in the Old Kent-road. The idea of walking with her through our quiet suburban streets on Sunday was undeniably appalling; especially as my own cycling rig might lead to our being classed together as prospective partners in a biking excursion. However, having sought her assistance, I couldn't well refuse to avail myself of it; and we started off together, Polly wheeling her machine at my side.

"'I was goin' yer wy, so brought my jigger along with me to sive goin' back,' explained Miss Polly, affably. 'Chollie—e's my young man, yer know—lives just beyond where yer keeps yer jigger; and I'm a goin' on stright to join him. We've planned to ride out to 'Arrow to-day.'

"I said I hoped that they would have a pleasant ride, and talked as civilly as I could to the young woman. But the more I looked at her, the more her appearance appalled me. No girl ever needed petticoats more than Polly to keep her from looking repulsively vulgar—nay, absolutely indecent. I felt I should be truly thankful when our little business was over and she had gone on to join Chollie, in the ride to 'Arrow.

"Well, we soon reached our destination. The little crowd which had gathered to hear my altercation with the caretaker had by this time melted away. I was thankful for this. Heaven knows to what remarks my companion might otherwise have been subjected. She would have deserved them, too, right enough. Only I didn't wish that sort of thing to happen when she was associated with me. And I went up and rang the bell rather gingerly; not wishing, this time, to arouse the street. Nothing came of my ring, though I repeated it several times. I looked hopelessly at the rationalised Polly; and the rationalised Polly looked impatiently at me.

"'I sy,' she exclaimed. 'This is a bit too thin, yn't it? I carn't wite here till Doomsday. Let me call Mr. O'Scowle. He'll know my voice. Which is his winder? That one with the 'ole in the pine? Not mike too much noise. Well, yer carn't quite 'spect me to wike him up from here, by wisperin', can yer naow? . . . . Mr. O'Scowle! Mr. O'Scowle! Mi-i-ster O'Sc-Sc-owle!'

"But there was no answer nor sign on the part of the chuckle-headed idiot within.

"'Mr. O'Scowle! It's only me—Polly Jorkins. Kim and open the door to me, there's a dear.'

"Still no movement nor response.

"'Naow do—do come down and give the gentleman his bike. It his 'is. I can arnser for 'is bony-fidys. Kim along—kim along now—there's a disy. Daown't be a juggins. I carnt wite 'ere horl dy! I'm engiged to go out biking with my young man, and——'

"'Be good enough to let us pass, sir.'

"These words were spoken just behind me, in a very familiar voice, but with a cutting, withering intonation that positively sickened me with dismay. I started round, red-faced and flabbergasted, to find myself confronted by Jessie Cufton and her mother.

"'Allow me to pass, sir,' repeated the elder lady, icily.

"Her face was a thermometrical study. It must have registered at least 50 degs. below zero. Jessie's expression, if less frosty, was quite sufficiently so to numb me with a horrible coldness of dismay. In spite of my complete innocence, I fervently wished the pavement to open and swallow me.

"'Pray let me explain,' I began, quickly.

"'Don't insult us, sir, by speaking to us,' interrupted Mrs. Cufton, in an awful voice. 'Never speak to me or mine again, sir. Come along, Jessie!'

"With that, mother and daughter swept past me. I was too much paralysed to follow them—to attempt any further explanation just then. I was only conscious of one sensation—one intense, murderous wish that Polly Jorkins with her bike and her rationals, were at the bottom of the South Pacific.

"'Lawk naow!' tittered that young person, with the vulgarest of sniggers, 'blimed if I doawn't believe the lidies thought I was your mash.'

"I didn't answer her. In my then condition, I was unable to cope with her vulgarity. I simply stared, in moody silence, at the pavement.

"'Well, yer needn't tike on, so,' persisted Polly. 'Yer can mike it O.K. with 'em, carn't ye, by just explinin' matters? Not but wot,' she added, with another horrible snigger, 'there's them as would give a good deal to 'ave me tiken for their mash—and so I tell yer.'

"'Then, I think, my dear Polly,' I told her, as politely as I could, 'that you had better betake yourself with the least possible delay, to the society of those misguided persons.'

"This was the only reproof that Polly heard from my lips. I think the circumstance, in itself, speaks volumes for my Christian charity and self-control.

"I went back in a fearful state of mind, and poured my trouble into Tom's sympathetic ear. He was awfully concerned about it; actually offered to go as an ambassador to Jessie and her mother. I gladly embraced his offer; and he went. But he came back gloomy and crestfallen. It was no use at present, he said; the ladies were too much incensed to listen to reason. I should be wiser to wait a little before holding further parley with them.

"Next day, Jessie sent me back all my letters and presents, with a brief note terminating our engagement. I rushed wildly off to her; I was refused admission. I wrote pages of entreaty and explanation; my letters came back unopened. Thus our engagement was broken off. This may be called the end of Act I."

"And Act II.?" I ventured to hint, after he had sat silent for about a minute, watching the smoke of his cigar curling up into the still summer air.

"Act II.," he replied, "is a brief bye-act, dealing only with subordinate characters. A short time afterwards Polly and Chollie married upon a small business; and Mr. Nobes started a pony-trap. This circumstance is interesting because neither of the aforesaid parties had been supposed to possess a penny of capital."

"Do you mean to say——" I began.

"Act III.," he went on, not waiting for me to finish my query, "is also short and sweet. Skimples had no fault to find with me, but they suggested that I should look out for another berth. Thus Tom and I had to part company.

"Act IV.—even shorter and sweeter. Merely a matrimonial announcement in the Morning Post. Wernham-Cufton, &c."

"And Act V.?"

"You have yourself just witnessed it. Tom is the villain of the piece, and it is only in accordance with dramatic canons that Nemesis should overtake him in the last act. The lex talionis was never better illustrated. By bike he sinned; by bike his punishment has come."

MUSIC.

THE ARDITI REMINISCENCES.

THE veteran conductor, Signor Arditi, would have made his reminiscences more interesting if he had cut his anecdotes a little shorter, and spared his readers certain trivial details, which, as somebody has suggested, would not be of the slightest interest unless they were set to music. As it stands, however, the book contains an abundance of entertaining matter, and reflects much credit upon the literary ability of the lady who has edited it, Baroness von Zedlitz. For the omission of some of the best stories concerning himself, Signor Arditi is, of course, responsible. There is no reference, for instance, to that delightful little trip which Arditi took with Faccio, Mme. Valleria, and her husband through the Shakespeare country. They had driven Arditi to Warwick Castle and to Kenilworth, and along the valley of the Avon, and it was nearly six o'clock when they reached Stratford and took the weary old musician into the church to see the Shakespeare Monument. He did not appear to recollect the name, and Mr. Hutchinson volunteered to explain "Shakespeare, Romeo e Giulietta, Macbeth, Amletto, Falstaff." "Ah," exclaimed the conductor, a light evidently dawning upon him, "I understand. Ze librettist!" Some of the Rossini stories are the best. When Rossini was first introduced to Mme. Arditi, he exclaimed, "Now I know why Arditi composed 'Il Bacio' (the kiss)." Had he chosen to do so, Arditi might have furnished us with a good many interesting details concerning the later operatic days of Lumley and the earlier operatic career of Mapleson. He has a brief but capital account of the production of "Faust" in London, more particularly concerning the abbreviation of the final duet in the last act, to which Gounod at first would not consent. It seems also that the orchestra of Her Majesty's had the smallest possible opinion of the merits of "Faust," a fact which again shows what poor judges of music members of the band usually are. Arditi himself does not venture upon many opinions, but when he does he shows himself the very old stager. The statement, for example, "I have always declared that unless a musical work bears a cachet of excellence from abroad, it will probably be received in this country with reserve and even coldness at the outset," may have been correct thirty years ago, but it shows pretty plainly that the veteran has a wholly false idea of the present state of music in this country.

Now that Prince's Hall has been turned into a restaurant, a hall for smaller recitals and concerts is much needed. The upper Queen's Hall is extensively patronised for this class of entertainment, although to ladies and others it is a terrible pull up that apparently interminable flight of stairs. The public will, therefore, be glad to learn that Steinway Hall, which last year was in a rather shabby condition, has been renovated during the holidays. The artists' room has been almost rebuilt, and the hall generally, I am told, now looks very attractive. A new manager has likewise been appointed, in the person of Mr. J. R. Mackey.

Signor Mancinelli's "Hero and Leander" will be the principal novelty at the Norwich Festival next week. The vocal score has just been issued. I cannot now give a detailed account of it, but I may say that in the last act the partiality for extremely long solos shown in Mancinelli's "Isaiah" is again exemplified. Hero, sitting in the Maiden's Tower watching Leander swim across the Hellespont, has a soprano solo which occupies four and twenty pages of vocal score, and this is immediately followed by a duet for soprano and tenor occupying no fewer than thirty-four pages of score. This sort of thing at eleven o'clock at night is, no doubt, considered glorious from the pen of a Wagner, and I hope it will be deemed equally inspiring from that of a Mancinelli. The Maiden's Tower, by the way, is still in existence, but the Turks (another atrocity) have converted the ancient structure into a highly serviceable lighthouse.

The classical story of Hero and Leander has been slightly altered by Boito, and a new denouement has been provided. Considering, however, that the work is to be produced upon the stage at Covent Garden next season, the plot is a trifle thin. The High Priest of the Temple is in love with Hero, who refuses him. Accordingly he compels her to take the vows of virginity, and waits until he discovers Leander in the lady's room. Leander then jumps from the window and is drowned in the midst of a thunderstorm; whereupon, Hero falls down dead, and the wicked High Priest is really very sorry.

In reference to the Canterbury musical degrees, I can supplement my remarks last week by stating that the particular reasons for the granting of the degree are now invariably inserted in the document. Also, I learn that the Archbishop of Canterbury does not receive a penny of the sixty guinea fee in which the candidate is mulcted. As I mentioned last week, the Government themselves take more than half and the rest goes in fees to officials.

The death of the distinguished Wagnerian prima donna, Frau Klafsky, came as a surprise. The lady was only forty-one, and she had been engaged not only for the Abbey troupe in the United States, but also for a subsequent season of German opera in New York under Mr. Damresch. She underwent some slight operation, but she really died of congestion of the lungs. She had a rather romantic life. She was the daughter of a poor Hungarian shoemaker, and was found by Herr Hellmesberger in the chorus in Vienna. Thanks to him, she was educated and brought up as a prima donna. Then, however, she married a rich Leipzig merchant and left the stage. A short time later she was a widow, and returned to the opera, where she successively married Greve, the baritone, and, after his death, Herr Lohse, the Drury Lane conductor. She was one of the greatest exponents of Fidelio since the death of Titiens, and she was also a gifted Wagnerian artist.

The veteran tenor Duprez, who died in his 90th year in Paris last week, has not been heard in England for upwards of half a century, when Bunn gave him the then extravagant salary of £80 per night to sing Arnold in "William Tell" at Drury Lane. Duprez was the original Edgardo in "Lucia" at Naples in 1835, but he retired from the operatic stage forty years ago and became a celebrated teacher. Among his most famous pupils were Madame Miolan-Carvalho, Madame Albani, the Sisters Devries, and Mdlle. Marie Marimon.

The beautiful fable that the ghost of Sir Augustus Harris has been seen at Drury Lane directing imaginary pantomime rehearsals from the proscenium box at the witching hour is a variation of a similar story told with better reason at Covent Garden after the death of Frederic Gye. The fireman was going his rounds at about one o'clock in the morning when he was amazed to see his old master, looking ghastly white in the half darkness, and standing at the head of the grand staircase where he had so often received noble guests. It was, of course, the Gye statue, which now stands on its pedestal on the half-landing at the Royal Italian Opera, but which, unknown to the fireman, had been brought in during the day. The fright of the man who so readily recognised the likeness of the great impresario was, at any rate, a compliment to the sculptor.

GIRLS' GOSSIP.

DEAREST AMY,—I promised to tell you about the new autumn fashions this week, and I find that, though this is supposed to be a time of deadly dulness in Chiffonland, there are plenty of novelties. The short, fluted basques are to give way to plain ones, only very slightly fulled, at least double their length. All open-fronted coats are to be worn with warm vests, often of fur. Double-breasted jackets are made either with straight or tight-fitting fronts, and the revers are cut so high as to afford ample protection to the throat and chest. I have seen several vests made of fine white cloth, sewed firmly down in fine pleats at the waist, and for some inches above it, but spreading out in most becoming fulness at the chest. These are made with collars of the cloth, so plain as to suggest that they are intended to be supplemented by bright-coloured ribbons. Double-breasted waistcoats are prepared for many of them, but there is nothing new about them.

The recent rain and wind have brought the picture hat into some disfavour. The frantic struggles we have witnessed on the part of girls who will wear big hats in a gale have been really laughable, and the strength of the language we have occasionally heard when a sudden gust has almost torn the straw or felt from its anchorage in the hair has been nothing short of surprising. Those who judiciously don neat cloth toques—and very becoming they are—have had very much the advantage.

The weather, in fact, has been inimical to dress of all kinds, and we have almost been brought to the point of envying birds their garb of feathers. And yet I should hate to have my toilette confined to a process of preening and pluming such as one sees a canary performing after its morning plunge in a saucer of water. But as to the difficulty of keeping dry and clean during the recent visitation of heavy floods and stormy winds, it is almost insuperable, even for men. What must it then be for the petticoated sex? Richard says he is sick and tired of changing his dripping garments and damp boots. As to us, we are for ever sending down consignments of coats, skirts, and boots to be dried by the kitchen fire. Poor Abigail is tired of brushing the mud off cycling skirts, the chosen garb of the girls and myself in our walks abroad. The royalties wear very high boots in muddy weather. I think we shall all have to follow their example. But they are rather expensive, I find.

We went all the way to Queen Victoria-street on Tuesday to the sale at the London Shoe Company, having read that satin evening shoes in all colours, perfectly fresh and unsoiled, would be sold at 1s. the pair. This was too good a chance to miss, so we defied the weather and set forth. Bee bought five pair, Clare seven pair, and I half a dozen, the greatest bargain we have ever achieved. We met several acquaintances there, bent on the same errand, among them that bright-faced, happy-hearted Peggy whom you liked so much when you met her in town last year. She had secured thirteen pair of satin shoes, pale green, pink, red, yellow, mauve, and so on, and was delighted with her purchase.

For evening dress, by the way, long sleeves of lace or chiffon, or other light, transparent material, made to fit closely to the arm and very fully gathered, are to be the fashionable wear. For dances, of course, there are short ones; but for dinner dress, except on occasions of immense ceremony, square bodices and long sleeves are correct. I saw one pair made of the finest and thinnest silk muslin, gathered closely and sewn over with a network of small pearls. This would be very becoming to a pretty white arm, I should fancy.

I see that a City dame has ordered for her own wear as a winter coat, a paletot of green cloth lined with pink brocade, and made with collar, cuffs, and revers of chinchilla, the last named reaching to the waist. Sounds lovely, does it not? Another of her garments is a black serge skirt with a double-breasted Eton jacket of caracul and sleeves of Russian sable. I wonder if I quite like that mixture?

Black satin is the favourite material for elaborate visiting costumes, weddings, and so on, as I fancy I told you before. I saw a sweet one on a girl last Sunday, when we were calling on some friends. The skirt was very full, but quite free from stiffening of any sort. The bodice was plain at the back except for a red velvet bow at the neck. In front it had three tiers down each side of the satin lined with scarlet velvet, and each caught back at the corner with a fine enamel button. This trimming was repeated on the sleeve, and, with a lining of red satin, gave it the look of having been slashed. It was simply sweet, that sleeve!

With this pretty frock was worn a hat of black velvet and lace with a black feather and a tall aigrette of scarlet flowers at one side, a blossom or two falling over the hair at the back.

Please note that there was not a waistband of scarlet velvet, an arrangement that is very rarely becoming, but a rather deep belt of plain black satin fastened with an enamel clasp that matched the lovely little buttons.

Cut velvets are to be in fashion again this season. Some of the colours and designs are very handsome. Imagine a green poplin ground with a raised design in blue velvet forming a check. One can imagine all sorts of combinations of green and blue for the bodice. For instance, the back might be of the same rich fabric as the skirt, and the front made with green velvet revers, a blue chiffon vest, and a deep belt of shot green and blue chené ribbon. Another lovely material has a design of dark mauve velvet

"Busvine's Cycling Skirt is the cleverest, smartest little garment that could possibly have been devised."—World. "Nothing looks neater than Busvine's Cycling Skirt."—Sketch. —J. Busvine & Co., Ladies' Tailors, 4, Brook-street, W.

Fashions up to Date.—An elegant and svelte figure is produced by the easy and perfect-fitting anatomical corset shaped by the experts, Mesdames Sykes, Josephine, & Co., Anatomical Corsetières, 280, Regent-street, Oxford-circus, London, W.

flowers upon a light mauve cloth ground, with a little amber-silk worked in with the cloth in a series of square dots. This makes a very handsome dress material. We saw a skirt and cape of it in one shop, and for bodice a plain mauve silk, covered with black and écru lace, the sleeves being plain dark mauve cloth, with epaulettes of the dress stuff.

I am so glad linen collars and cuffs are in again. They are far more becoming than fal-lals of ribbon and lace, or cornery bits of embroidery turned down over a straight band of anything on earth. And then the double-barrelled kind that is now worn is so very easy to fix. One has only to pin the centre of the collar to the back of one's dress band and then fasten the little stud in front. The cuffs are equally readily arranged, and they look so neat and are so becoming to the hand. Shall I send you down a supply?

Did I mention that on Sunday, when we called on some friends, they gave us tea à la Russe? I suppose it was intended as a compliment to the Czar and Czarina on their visit to England. The samovar was of the true Russian shape and the tea itself was delicious—for a change! Long habit has, however, endeared to us our British tea, with its lump of sparkling sugar and spoonful of thick cream.

I have discovered that a lace fichu fills in to perfection the décolletée of an evening dress, and makes it just right for wearing at the theatre, provided that the sleeves are long enough to reach to the elbows. We are going to do some theatres this autumn, for fear the girls should get moped after their enjoyable wanderings in France, and in this unbikable weather. Besides, we might get moped ourselves. How tragic that would be! Town is dull. Hundreds of houses have their shutters up. And the liquid weather is sadly depressing.

We have already done one play, "A Blind Marriage," at the Criterion, and enjoyed a whole series of good laughs at the twins. The scene of the first part is laid at Monte Carlo, and Miss Kate Rorke wears a lovely evening gown, suitable to that picturesque and fashionable region. The skirt is white satin, painted round the front breadth with roses of every shade. The bodice was kilted white chiffon over rose-pink silk, with sleeves to match. Diamond buttons fastened it down the front.

There is a legend that His Satanic Majesty made three leaps from the Isle of Wight to the Devil's Dike at Brighton on the occasion of his first visit to England. The first of his jumps was on to the top of one of the range of the Southdown Hills immediately behind the beautiful valley of Ringley. Bowhill is the name of his momentary resting-place. The shock of the "thud" he made was distinctly felt at Selsey. So Kitty was told, on her recent visit to the quiet little place from whence come the lobsters for many a mayonnaise. Kitty brought home three or four crates of them, and sent us one, preceding it by half-an-hour to tell us all about the little fishing village at which she has been recruiting. It is not far from that dreary waste, Hayling Island, and has Portsmouth and the Isle of Wight to the west. Plenty of shipping of all kinds passes it. A mound near the old church celebrates an incident of the time of the Spanish Armada. But what interested Kitty far more than any historical associations was the apiary, with its hundreds of bee-hives. She has a weakness for honey, you know, and has brought home a large supply, a bottle of which she carried over to us. The bees feed principally on white clover, which gives the honey its peculiarly delicious taste. The proprietor is as great an authority on bees as Sir John Lubbock is on ants and spiders, and can tell how far they have travelled by the height from which they drop on the return home, laden with material. There is soon to be a branch railway from Chichester, eight miles away, and after that the little fishing village will be quite spoiled, and turned into the ordinary, every-day "seaside resort."

Bee is at the piano. She is singing a pretty song called "'Mid Fairest Flowers," by Charles Deacon. It is a rhapsodical description of a good and lovely maiden, written by Brice Fennell, and set to charming music. Cotsford Dick has never been happier in his choice of melody and skilful modulation of key than in his setting of "O Love of Mine." It is so delightfully singable. "God thought it Best," by Clement Scott and Lawrence Kellie, is of a more ambitious order and needs some skill in singing. It contains a charming phrase, the words to which it is set being—

"For me a very brief to-morrow."

An Organ Part accompanies this song.

I think Florence Marion Turner's "Time and I" a beautiful song. It is one of two that are published together. It is andante, and is full of feeling, suiting the harmonious words by Olive Molesworth. The second is "A Song of Spring," bright and merry, with the flutter of birds' wings and almond blossoms in it.

You can guess what sort of song "The Slump" is by its name. It is comically descriptive of the woes of a couple whose business half lost all his money on the Stock Exchange. The tune makes a good Barn dance.

"Souvenir d'un Bal" is a curious composition by Gounod, a setting of Theo Marzials' words done into French. Not a single rest or interval for the voice occurs during the first verse or the third. This makes it difficult and even a little monotonous, with all due respect to the genius of Gounod.

All these are published by Metzler & Co., Great Marlborough-street.

What do you think of the many memorials of the Queen's record reign that are now being offered to the public? The one that I like best is the portrait of her Majesty issued by the Gentlewoman. The picture is reproduced on satin from a well-known photograph by Walery, and will doubtless be highly appreciated by her Majesty's faithful subjects.

Clare sends me the following from Dublin:—

Dearest Madge,—There are points about having a cold at this time of year—not too bad a one, be it well understood. Then it may be classed with the luxuries of the season, with the difference that, unlike the others, it lies within easy reach of every one. Just a feeling of gentle languor without positive malaise; enough of a chill to entitle us, with a clear conscience, to the enjoyment of a day in bed; above all, enough appetite for the dainty delicacies of the invalid tray. In the calm warmth and comfort of our blankets, how superior we feel to the hustling, struggling world without. Like a sovereign enthroned above its petty cares, worries, and general solicitousness about everything. We have only one care, a delicious one—ourselves, our own personal comfort and well being. We are not well, and all the duties of life are merged in the duty of making ourselves so, of tenderly coaxing ourselves back to the normal condition. How delightful the rest from every one and everything; but most delightful of all, the way in which, having royally motioned the every-day working world aside, we may plunge into the ideal. In exchange for the one that we have shut out many world's lie before us, wherein to choose our wanderings. For the worlds of books are infinite. And what is there in Heaven or earth that the philosophy of authors has not dreamt and written of? The books to be read in bed are of the class "to be swallowed;" and how we swallow an interesting book, and how much easier it seems to find an interesting book under the circumstances! We don't want analysis or problems, or, least of all, pessimism. Our tastes grow simpler and more rudimentary. We want a good story—well told. The more story the better, and the less telling perhaps the better, too. Because we are so much at rest personally, it may be, exciting plots and adventures, romantic, mysterious, or blood-curdling, only pleasantly titillate us. What books for a day in bed are "Treasure Island" and "The Master of Ballantrae" and many of Stanley Weyman's. Of the older ones, what can beat the "Woman in White?" and are we not always ready to be thrilled again and again by the wonderful deeds of Athos, Porthos, and Co.? And what a climax to our content when the rain drives against the window-panes and the storm rages without! Our pleasures are not "weather permitting;"

Madame Oliver Holmes has just returned from Paris with all the newest fashions in Day and Evening Dresses, Mantles, Lingerie, and Millinery, which she will show on Monday, October 5th, and following days.—61, New Bond-street, W.

Now Ready.—Costumes for all kinds of Sports and Pastimes. Redfern makes a special feature of Costumes for all out-door pursuits, and is constantly introducing novelties. Everything practical, correct, up-to-date, and smart.—26, Conduit-st., London.

in our security from disturbance we may pass by Nature's disturbance with a superior smile.

In Ireland of late, Nature—as, indeed, in most other places—has been doing so much that she has had the doing all to herself. The sudden onslaught of winter, when one is still actively engaged in outdoor pursuits of a summery kind, and still clad in a like class of clothing, is most disconcerting. Though garden parties seemed somewhat unseasonable last week, Lord Plunket, Archbishop of Dublin, gave one at Old Connaught, his house near Bray, in honour of his visitor, the Archbishop of Canterbury, and several bishops who have also been in Dublin lately. Neither the house nor demesne of Old Connaught is picturesque, but the surrounding scenery is. A crowd of the elect of society and a strong clerical element were present. Dr. Benson is taking advantage of his visit to Ireland to do some touring, and while at Old Connaught made excursions to the picturesque spots of Wicklow. Dublin is still deserted, and will remain so until the end of next month, unless continued bad weather drives people from the seaside and country resorts. Lord and Lady Roberts and their daughters have been at Killarney and other places of beauty in the South of Ireland, Lord Roberts combining the business of military inspection, with the amusement of visiting the tourist resorts of his native land. The tourists have had a bad time lately, except those who enjoy Nature's boisterous moods. One hopes the hotels were satisfactory for those who have had to see so much of them. One hears that most of them now are, and many quite charming. The Duke and Duchess of Devonshire, on the way from their short visit to Lismore Castle, stayed at the Viceregal Lodge, which Lord Cadogan had placed at their disposal. The Phœnix Park is old ground to the Duke, who, as Lord Hartington, was Irish Chief Secretary for some time. The place has since had tragic associations for the family. The spot on which Lord Frederick Cavendish was murdered is straight opposite the drawing-room windows of the Viceregal Lodge, but at a considerable distance.

How silly the papers are over the visit of the Emperor and Empress of Russia to the Queen! They seem to riot in gush and servility. Just as bad in their foolish extreme as the French paper which calls the Russian Royalties "M. Nicholas Romanoff et sa femme." Don't you think the Wise man would be obliged, if he visited the world again, to leave the dictum unaltered, "The number of fools is infinite?"—Yours ever, CLARE.

I have a rather long recipe for you this week. It deals with calves' feet:—

Soak and wash a couple of calves' feet that have been scalded. Split them very carefully, and put them into a stewpan with a glass of sherry, a pint and a half of stock, an onion, a carrot, a bouquet of herbs, 4 oz. of parboiled streaky bacon, cut in slices, 6 peppercorns, a blade of mace, 2 cloves; cover with a buttered paper, bring to the boil, and remove to the oven to simmer for five hours. Then drain from the liquor and take out all the bones. Pound 6 oz. of scraped white veal, add 2 oz. of scraped fat bacon, 2 oz. of butter, and 2 oz. of panada, which is made by stewing about 2 tablespoonfuls of fresh breadcrumbs in some nicely-flavoured stock until it is a stiff paste. When the ingredients are thoroughly blended, add the yolks of 2 eggs, season with salt and pepper, and rub all through a wire sieve. Divide the forcemeat between the two feet, putting it well in the centre, and folding them over into a nice shape. Dip the feet first in beaten egg, then into breadcrumbs, place them in an omelette pan, and pour over about 2 oz. of dissolved butter; bake a golden colour in a moderate oven, basting frequently. Place the feet on a hot dish, and pour the following sauce round:—

Sweat 2 minced shalots, an ounce of minced lean ham, a minced gherkin, a sprig of thyme, and a little parsley in a stewpan with an ounce of butter until a delicate brown colour; mix in a tablespoonful of flour and half a pint of the stock the feet were stewed in, from which the fat has been removed. Allow the sauce to simmer half an hour, squeeze through the tammy, and return to the stewpan, adding a tablespoonful of tomato purée, a small piece of glaze, the juice of half a small lemon, a wineglassful of cooking sherry and a tablespoonful of chopped parsley.

Your loving cousin, MADGE.

With the Japanese Troops.

JAMES CREELMAN, the American War Correspondent, in his dispatch to New York, dated PORT ARTHUR, Nov. 24, 1894, writes:—

In the camp, on the march, under the trying conditions of active warfare, Mariani Wine enabled me to resist fatigue & defy exhaustion.

Mariani Wine fortifies, nourishes, and stimulates the Body and Brain. It restores Health, Strength, Energy, and Vitality: notably after INFLUENZA. Bottles, 4s.; dozen, 45s., of Chemists and Stores, or carriage paid from Wilcox & Co., 83, Mortimer Street, Great Portland Street, W.

WHY DRINK INFERIOR TEA?
UNITED KINGDOM TEA COMPANY'S TEAS
DIRECT FROM THE GROWERS.
1/-, 1/3, 1/4, 1/6, 1/7, 1/9, & 2/- per lb., DELIVERED CARRIAGE PAID.
Write for Samples sent free, taste them, and judge for yourselves. Amazing superiority in Quality! Great Economy in prices.
Offices: 21, MINCING LANE, LONDON, E.C.

THE NEW CROWN VIOLET.

AN EXQUISITE PERFUME. In Crown Stoppered Bottles only.

"The Delicious Essence of the Violet itself, distilled from the fragrant Violet Gardens of the sunny Riviera."

SOLD EVERYWHERE.
The Crown Perfumery Co.,
177, NEW BOND STREET, W.

ACCIDENTS OF TRAVEL.
ACCIDENTS RIDING, DRIVING, SHOOTING, CYCLING, FISHING, SKATING, &c.
ACCIDENTS OF ALL KINDS.
INSURED AGAINST BY THE
RAILWAY PASSENGERS' ASSURANCE CO.
64, CORNHILL, LONDON. A. VIAN, Secretary.

"TRUTH"
THE GALIGNANI LIBRARY,
224, RUE DE RIVOLI, PARIS.

NATIONAL PROVIDENT INSTITUTION.
For Mutual Life Assurance.
Financial Year ends 20th Nov., 1896
Accumulated Fund ... £4,800,000
Profits already divided £4,600,000
Established 1835.

Profits.—At the last (1892) Division, £651,000 Cash Profit was apportioned amongst the members, being more than 37 per cent. of the amount paid in premiums during the previous five years. There were then nearly 800 Policies, in respect of which not only were the premiums entirely extinguished, but also annuities were granted, or Cash Bonuses paid, whilst in the case of many policies the original sums assured are now more than doubled by the Bonus additions.

All persons now Assuring will receive an additional Share of Profit over later Entrants, at the next division, in 1897.

Endowment-Assurance Policies are issued combining Life Assurance at Minimum Cost, with Provision for Old Age.

48, Gracechurch Street, London, E.C. Applications for Agencies invited.

GAIETY RESTAURANT, STRAND.

LUNCHEONS (HOT and COLD)—At Popular Prices, in BUFFET and RESTAURANT (on 1st floor). Also Chops, Steaks, Joints, Entrées, etc., in the GRILL ROOM.

AFTERNOON TEA—Consisting of Tea or Coffee, Cut Bread and Butter, Jam, Cake, Pastry, ad lib., at 1/- per head; served from 4 till 6 in RESTAURANT (1st floor).

DINNERS IN RESTAURANT—From 5.30 till 9 at Fixed Prices (3/6 and 5/-) and à la Carte. In this room the Viennese Band performs from 6 till 8. Smoking after 7.45.

American Bar. The GRILL ROOM is open till 12.30.

Private Dining Room for Large and Small Parties.
SPIERS & POND, Ltd. Proprietors.

DOES NOT SHRINK!!

THE HIGH-CLASS MATERIAL

Marked

"VIYELLA"

Regd.

For LADIES' NIGHTDRESSES, KNICKERBOCKERS, CHILDREN'S FROCKS, TENNIS SUITS, CYCLING SUITS, BOATING COSTUMES, &c. &c.

"VIYELLA" may be obtained from leading drapers, or name of nearest will be sent on application to

'Viyella,' (T.) 20, Cheapside, London, E.C.

DAY and NIGHT WEAR.

See the label "VIYELLA," every five yards, on the selvedge.

Invaluable for Cyclists.

MELLIN'S FOOD

For INFANTS and INVALIDS.

MELLIN'S FOOD

is similar to Breast Milk chemically and as beneficial physiologically.

Samples post free from

Mellin's Food Works, Peckham, S.E.

Established 1670.

GOLDSMITHS.
DIAMOND MOUNTERS

Streeter & Co. Limited.

18, NEW BOND STREET, LONDON, W.

Established 1670.

JEWELLERS.
LAPIDARIES.

BULL TERRIER HEAD BROOCH, £30.

CAT AND MOUSE BROOCH, from £20.

HANSOM CAB BROOCH, in Diamonds and Enamel, £12.

PHEASANT BROOCH, in Diamonds, £17.

LUCKY OWL BROOCH from £15.

SNIPE BROOCH, in Diamonds, £15.

TIE PINS in great variety, from £5.

DIAMOND SWAN BROOCH, from £35.

PEARL AND DIAMOND PINS, from £5.

CHATTO & WINDUS'S NEW BOOKS

Sir WALTER BESANT'S New Novel, THE CITY OF REFUGE, is now ready, in 3 vols., 15s. net, and at every Library.

Mrs. LYNN LINTON'S New Novel, DULCIE EVERTON, is now ready, in 2 vols., 10s. net; and at every Library.

"A strong and impressive story, skilfully worked up to a thrilling dénouement."—Daily Telegraph.

JERRY THE DREAMER. By Will Payne. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

"One is bound to be grateful for its humour, its frank intelligence, and the rollicking ease of its narrative. Jerry, the judge, and the judge's daughter that Jerry eloped with, are not easily to be forgotten by the most careless reader."—Morning Leader.

SONGS OF TRAVEL. By Robert Louis Stevenson. Crown 8vo, buckram, 5s.

"Except his 'Songs for Children,' I know of no work of Stevenson's that more endears him to his readers than this delightful volume."—James Payn in Illustrated London News.

DR. RUMSEY'S PATIENT. By L. T. Meade and Clifford Halifax, M.D. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

"An eminently readable story. . . . . Those who like an exciting story of incident and mystery will find one in this volume."—Speaker.

DEVIL'S FORD—A MILLIONAIRE OF ROUGH-AND-READY—SNOWBOUND AT EAGLE'S. By Bret Harte. With Frontispiece by W. H. Overend. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

"'Devil's Ford' is as conscientious and vigorous a piece of writing as the seeker for bold and bright fiction is likely to come upon."—Literary World.

THE PROFESSOR'S EXPERIMENT. By Mrs. Hungerford, Author of "The Three Graces." Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

"Beyond all doubt or question one of the most mirthful and most wholesome books of the year."—Daily Telegraph.

YOUNG LOCHINVAR. By J. E. Muddock, Author of "Basile the Jester," &c. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

SONS OF BELIAL. By William Westall. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

"Refreshing plenitude of human interests. . . . . A story well-considered and admirably realised."—Black and White.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 110 & 111, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

SENSATION AMONG THE CRITICS!

CHRYSTAL:

The Newest of Women.

BY AN EXPONENT.

Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

SECOND EDITION.

The Scotsman calls the author "A humourist in disguise."

The Birmingham Gazette is glad that the author "has sufficient sense of shame to conceal identity.'

The Yorkshire Post thinks that the author must be "trying how much the public will stand."

The Glasgow Daily Mail says the author "is preaching a sermon."

The Western Mail says: "The author has a firm grip of character, and is excellent at 'a situation.' The narrative develops a strength that is absolutely thrilling."

The Birmingham Gazette says: "From a literary point of view it is decidedly strong."

The Glasgow Daily Mail says: "The book is written with skill."

The Daily Chronicle says: "'Chrystal' is an amusing and an original child.

The Weekly Times and Echo says: "It is unconventional in the extreme, and yet in no sense objectionable."

Who is the exponent? A hearty friend—or a powerful satirist—of the New Womanhood? Read and decide for yourselves.

DIGBY, LONG, & CO., 18, Bouverie-street, London, E.C.

MRS. HUMPHRY WARD'S NEW NOVEL.

At all Booksellers' and Newsagents, crown 8vo, 6s.

SIR GEORGE TRESSADY

By Mrs. HUMPHRY WARD,

Author of "Robert Elsmere," "The History of David Grieve," "Marcella," &c.

From the Times:—"In every sense this is a remarkable novel. . . . The writer takes an even wider range than before, and deals with contemporary politics and the burning questions of the morrow with the verve and no little of the knowledge of a Disraeli. . . . The charm of the novel is the actuality of the personages. Mrs. Ward has been living with them, so they live and breathe."

From the Daily Mail:—"Every page of the book is full of actuality, every character is a palpitating human figure taken out of the life that we know. . . . Never has Mrs. Humphry Ward shown her power so unmistakably as in this book."

London: SMITH, ELDER, & CO., 15, Waterloo-place.

Ready to-morrow. In 2 vols., with 2 Portraits and 2 Maps, demy 8vo, 28s.

THE MEMOIRS OF BARON THIÉBAULT.

(LATE LIEUTENANT-GENERAL IN THE FRENCH ARMY.)

With Recollections of the Republic, the Consulate, and the Empire.

Translated and Condensed by A. J. BUTLER, M.A., Translator of the "Memoirs of Marbot."

London: SMITH, ELDER, & CO., 15, Waterloo-place.

NEW NOVELS AT ALL LIBRARIES

And BOOKSELLERS.

NOW READY.

ANTHONY BLAKE'S EXPERIMENT. In 2 vols., crown 8vo, 12s.

NOW READY.

